Fee Could Make Impact

Should Fairfax County create new transportation impact fee?

By Michael Lee Pope

The Gazette

Nowhere is the idea of a transportation impact fee more popular than the clogged Route 1 corridor, where the Wal-Mart at Kings Crossing has added to the gridlock that has long plagued the region. Because the developer did not ask for increased density or other variances, no rezoning was needed. And because the project was developed “by-right,” county officials were not able to use the proffer system to ask developer J.B.G. Rosenfeld for the money needed to extend the turn lane into the popular retail mega-store.

Enter the impact fee. If Fairfax County created a new transportation impact fee, county officials could charge the developer for the cost of the turn lane — regardless of whether a rezoning was needed or not. It’s an idea that’s gaining popularity in Mount Vernon, where the gridlock at Kings Crossing has created a lingering distaste for the shortcomings of the proffer system.

“I think it’s a fair way of dealing with by-right development, and I certainly don’t think that it would keep a project from being developed,” said Jim Davis, co-chairman of the Mount Vernon Council of Citizens Associations. “It is imperative that we do have a more balanced system to spur growth and have a way to mitigate things that can degrade the quality of life here.”

The idea has yet to receive formal consideration, although people have been talking about it informally since last spring. The Southeast Fairfax Development Corporation has not yet formally considered the idea, and so the organization does not have a position. But president David Versel says the idea is likely to generate a variety of responses.

“If you are talking to somebody who owns a property who wants to do something by-right, then I would have to believe they would not support paying an impact fee they currently don’t have to pay,” said Versel. “But maybe there’s another business that wants to see traffic improved, and they would support it.

SINCE 1989 the county has had the authority to levy impact fees. But the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors never took advantage of this.

Final dress rehearsals are underway for this weekend’s performances of “The Nutcracker.” West Potomac Academy and Alexandria Community Dance are teaming up to present their fourth annual joint performance of “The Nutcracker,” the traditional holiday story with a modern twist, on Nov. 29, 30, and Dec. 1, at West Potomac High School.

Four shows will be performed: Thursday, Nov. 29, at 5 p.m.; Friday, Nov. 30, at 6:30 p.m.; and Saturday, Dec. 1, at 2:30 and 6:30 p.m.

West Potomac Academy’s Dance students will participate in the entire production, both on stage and behind the scenes, and Advanced Dance students will have featured performances. The performance will include ballet, pointe, tap, jazz, lyrical, modern, and hip-hop dance and gymnastics.

More than 100 dancers from the Alexandria area of Fairfax County auditioned for the performance. Students from the following Fairfax County public schools are represented in the production: Belle View, Fort Hunt, Hollin Meadows, Stratford Landing, Washington Mill, and Waynewood elementary schools; Sandburg Middle School, and West Potomac High School. Performers range in age from four years old to adult.

Alexandria Community Dance has a business partnership with West Potomac Academy.

Groups are welcome to attend the performances. For the first time, residents from Paul Spring Retirement Community will attend a performance, followed by a meet-and-greet with the performers.

Tickets are $10 for students and $12 for adults in advance, or $12 for students and $15 for adults at the door. For more information and tickets, visit www.alexandriadance.com.

Kiwanis Holds Annual Holiday Tree Sale

The trucks pulled into the parking lot at the Belle View Shopping center early Saturday morning, Nov. 24, laden with Fraser firs, wreaths and garlands. Mount Vernon Kiwanis members spent the morning sorting trees by size and setting up for the annual tree sale. All proceeds of the sales support local charities and schools in the Mount Vernon area.

of that power. When board members considered whether or not to adopt such a system several years ago, the elected officials determined that they wanted to stay with the current proffer system rather than trying to create a hybrid system with both.

“I think if we tried to do both, we would end up with a classic battle with our development community,” said Mount Vernon District Supervisor Gerry Hyland in an interview last year. “We came to the conclusion many years ago that we would get more out of a proffer system, which is why we decided to go that route.

Now the gridlock created at Kings Crossing has reopened the Board of Supervisors’ long-standing decision against seeking impact fees. Last year, the Mount Vernon Council of Citizens Associations passed a resolution urging the Board of Supervisors to impose impact fees on any development needing a building permit. Once a fee system has been created, the resolution suggested, county officials could use the revenue to pay for “building reasonable transportation infrastructure to benefit the development.”

Hyland’s office responded with a memorandum outlining concerns about redeveloping the Route 1 corridor. “Staff is concerned that an impact fee program would apply to all redevelopment in the corridor,” the memo reported. “Impact fees may discourage redevelopment in this area and undermine the county’s goal to foster redevelopment in this designated commercial revitalization area.”

MANY MOUNT VERNON residents say the impact fee is a desperately needed tool that should be used when developers do not need to rezone. Without it, they say, residents are stuck with gridlock and taxpayers are eventually handed a bill to fix the problem. Those who are pushing for the creation of an impact fee say concerns about redevelopment should take a backseat to concerns about quality of life.

“By-right development does not improve transportation infrastructure, it should not be built,” wrote Mount Vernon Council of Citizens Association Transportation Committee Chairwoman Catherine Voorhees.
Focus on Immigration

Schools Using Diversity for Student Benefits

Immersion, ESOL programs aim to take advantage of area cultures.

The program at Colin Powell was designed to take advantage of the area's large Korean population. The Korean students who are in the program all could speak a little English. "The program is a niche that fits very well in our community. For the native English speakers, it helps them understand more about the culture of the people they share the community with every day. It gives everyone more understanding of the people that walk through our doors every day," said Principal Linda Clifford. "Walking into a classroom the other day, I was amazed at how many non-Korean students were able to understand Korean very well."

Clifford said she hopes in future years that the school can expand the program beyond kindergarten, eventually to every grade at the school. The school also offers an after school program to all students who are interested in learning Korean, and they even have a pre-school program to teach immigrant families about school programs and other information they might not otherwise be familiar with before their children start school.

Students in the program at Bailey's Elementary take health, math and science in their native language. As a magnet school, students from across the county can apply, which the school uses mainly to fill its English-speaking requirement.

"The native Spanish speakers come to Bailey's with a wide range of English skills, depending on where they come from," said Assistant Principal Rachel Charlton. "Some come from very rural areas where they have little to no schooling. There's always a silent period in the beginning, but periods like lunch and recess allow the Spanish speakers to talk among themselves, which helps open them up. Children learn most of their language from each other, so having native speakers of both languages helps both groups immensely. Each group of native speakers gets to be the language role model for half a day, with the others learning from them. It really boosts their confidence."

County Schools also feature immersion programs in Japanese, German and French at elementary and middle schools. Another area of growth has been the county's English for Speakers program for students (44 percent) who speak a language other than English at home.

"We highly value the diversity of our population, because it's advantageous for our students to grow up here, as global citizens." — Teddi Predaris, director of the county's Office of Language Acquisition. of Other Languages program, which started 35 years ago with 300 students. Since then it has seen a steady increase, with 15,000 in fiscal year 2001 and 31,000 this year.

Janet Funk, principal of Gunston Elementary School in Lorton, where approximately 300 students come from a home where another language is spoken, says everyday interaction with new cultures is an important part of early education.

“Interesting conversations can be heard in the lunchroom, especially when students from other countries bring their food from home. Children are very interested in bringing their favorite foods, which naturally flows to a discussion of traditions and celebrations,” she said. “With these informal discussions, the students learn the importance of accepting classmates for who they are. This supports our goal of cultural acceptance and an collaborative interaction among our school community.”

But with such diversity comes challenges, especially when it comes to Standards of Learning tests.

“Classroom teachers and ESOL teachers work diligently to help the students learn the English language. Many of our students from other countries are still learning English and are reading below grade level expectations,” Funk said. “These students receive reading instruction in the classroom setting and the ESOL classroom. They are receiving a ‘double’ dose of reading on a regularly scheduled basis. However, when it comes time to take the SOL tests, they are required to take the test on grade level in a language in which they are not proficient.”

In Virginia, SOL tests must be taken in English, but in Texas, for example, standardized tests can be taken in Spanish.

CHANGES to the state’s licensure requirements this year have also caused some difficulties. This year, the state required teachers in elementary school programs to not only be licensed in their language, but also for elementary education.

“We’ve struggled this year due to the new requirement,” Charlton said. “We’ve had to use some long-term subs until as recently as two or three weeks ago before we had enough full-time teachers that met qualifications. Now I think the universities are aware of the change, so it might be better in future years, but it can definitely make it difficult to find people.”

Marshall High Is the Face of Fairfax County

Ninety-plus countries represented by student population.

By Donna Manz / The Gazette

The schools that feed into George C. Marshall High School are the academic home to children from all over the world. It’s not surprising, then, that Marshall is an international community, a Tysons Corner United Nations, so to speak. Many of the students come for the prestigious I.B. (International Baccalaureate), but most are in the Marshall district, which embraces students from Tysons to the far reaches of Vienna. From Italian to Swahili, there is a myriad of languages native to Marshall’s students, who represent more than 90 nations.

“Marshall has an international student body from all walks of life, from the four corners of the world,” said principal Jay Pearson. “Our kids cross so many boundaries. We don’t refer to it as ‘diversity,’” Pearson said. “For our students, this is the norm. These kids are very accustomed to moving between groups of students from everywhere, so, there aren’t ‘cliques.’

“We are the face of what Fairfax County is in 2012.”

FIVE INVITED STUDENTS gathered in a roundtable discussion at Marshall recently. What they agreed on is that American schools are less intense academically, less-academically pressuring than schools outside the U.S. In other countries, it is academics-only that define your future, a selected group of students said in the recent discussion with Pearson and an interviewer. In the U.S., the students said, you have extracurricular programs that enhance the total person. What the U.S. does not have, however, that international schools stress, is an emphasis on foreign language fluency.

English is a compulsory curriculum in many school systems worldwide. Some students, such as Kasthury Paramiswaran, a Marshall senior from Malaysia, speak multiple languages, fluent in each. Kasthury’s family moved around the world as part of her father’s job, and Kasthury mastered four languages in her journeys. She said she still works very hard in her I.B. subjects, getting “A’s in every one of her classes. She is applying to colleges in the United Kingdom and the Netherlands.

Jia Loh, a Malaysian native who has been in the U.S. for two years, said the transition to schools here was “hard,” even though the academic environment is less intense than in Malaysia.

“I had to adjust to different cultures. It was hard to find friends who share my culture.”

Dalilla Ferrara’s family moved around Italy; her father is in the military there. In the early 1990s, he was assigned to a U.S. base in Texas and his experience there was not a good one. “He warned me not to tell people I’m Italian,” Dalilla said. “He told me not to be proud.”

What was your biggest concern or fear when moving to U.S. schools?

—DONNA MANZ

Kasthury Paramiswaran, senior, Malaysia

“I had a close group of friends there and I didn’t know anybody here,” on leaving Malaysia when she had made friends in her native high school. “I still work very hard in my I.B. classes.”

Dalilla Ferrara, junior, Italy

“Actually, I was really happy to move here. My only fear was that I wouldn’t be accepted. That didn’t happen. My biggest dream is to get an MBA from Harvard.”

Millan Mbise, senior, Tanzania

“The cultural aspect. For example, in Tanzania there is little interaction with teachers. The teachers are strict, classes are very intense. It’s not like that here. I played varsity soccer last year and that helped me a lot with the transition to Marshall.

“I figured out what I wanted to do with my life when I moved here. I want to be a pharmacist.”

Jia Loh, senior, Malaysia

“My biggest fear was finding friends. Still find it hard to join cliques. Most of my friends are international students. I’m still working on that part of the transition. My dream is to find a high-paying job I like, accounting or law.”

Amber Holder, senior, Panama

“My biggest fear was that I wouldn’t have the same friends throughout my academic career. My dream is to establish a music education system that would produce more diverse, well-rounded musicians, not just musicians who are skilled in just one instrument.”

“Marshall has an international student body from all walks of life, from the four corners of the world … We are the face of what Fairfax County is in 2012.”

— George C. Marshall High School Principal Jay Pearson
Learning in a Global Community

Students in Fairfax County speak 160 languages.

This week our ongoing series about immigration in Fairfax County takes a look at county schools and some of the joys and challenges of having a diverse student body that speaks as many as 160 different languages at home.

For the director of language acquisition in Fairfax County Public Schools, the 44 percent of students who speak an foreign language at home present an opportunity to create language immersion classes where more than half of their students are not proficient in English, the need to have students in half a kindergarten is learning Spanish or Korean while the other half is learning English.

For principals of some elementary schools where more than half of their students are not proficient in English, the need to have students meet benchmarks in a variety of subjects is a relentless process. In addition to limited English, immigrant students come from varied backgrounds, some with good basics in their own languages and some with limited previ- education in any language. The parents of these students are similarly varied. Meanwhile, representation of Latino and African American students in Fairfax County’s top instructional centers for gifted students lags dramatically.

FCPS is conducting two critical sets of public meetings this week and next. The call for public input is not specifically about growing diversity in the schools, but related challenges make both the possible expansion of centers for the county’s most talented students and the selection of a new superintendent of schools that much more important.

A fast moving proposal to expand the number of centers to provide “advanced academic” services is the topic of meetings this week. The meetings will run from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 27, in the Westfield High School cafeteria; Wednesday, Nov. 28, in the Lee High School cafeteria; Thursday, Nov. 29, in the Kilmer Middle School cafeteria.

Fairfax County Public Schools Superintendent Jack Dale will be retiring in June of 2013. The School Board has hired a search firm, Hazard, Young, Attea and Associates, which will be gathering community input. Many of the challenges facing the new superintendent will revolve around growing diversity, and a track record of open communication and achievement in this will be key to success.

Stop Hunger Now
On Sunday Nov. 4, Messiah Lutheran Church hosted a “Stop Hunger Now” food packing event. More than 50 volunteers helped create 10,000 dehydrated packaged meals. In assembly line style, they packaged the ingredients, weighed the meals, sealed them, counted them for boxing and sealed the boxes which were then put in the truck to await delivery to hungry people around the world. Members of Messiah church, its pastor, Robert Lewis, and members of the community participated in this event as well as contributing donations.

She Remembers the Splendor
She remembers the splendor, when we reminisce
Of moments so tender and innocent trysts
And when she, relenting, permitted a kiss
But nothing more intimate rendered than this

The other contenders she gently dismissed
The endless temptations she learned to resist
’Til sprays of carnations affixed to her wrist
Conveyed approbation of imminent bliss

The clergyman’s sermon on love in our midst
Her splendid attendants and friends she would miss
Her twittering sisters all fit to assist
Should anything, Heaven forbid, go amiss

The ways that we’ve wended, each bend and each twist
And blessings unending too many to list

The Long & Foster "Giving Tree" program began 22 years ago by the Agents of the Alexandria Old Town office. This program is one way of giving back to the Alexandria Community. Each year the Alexandria Board of Realtors is requested to identify a non-profit organization that is a must here in a need and a Holiday. For this year, they have identified two non-profit organizations that will benefit from this campaign. The Children's Trust Fund and the Alexandria Rescue Mission.

Your donation is tax deductible and will be greatly appreciated. These children and their families, a large portion of whom are single mothers, will benefit from your donation.

Please make your checks payable to: The Long & Foster Giving Tree.

Kwanzaa Celebration

The Alexandria Black History Museum and Culture Kingdom Kids will host a Kwanzaa Celebration program on Saturday, Dec. 8, 2012, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Museum. The cost of admission for this event is $5.

The museum’s annual program explores the history and significance of Kwanzaa. Learn about the principles of Kwanzaa, a seven-day cultural celebration that begins Dec. 26 and ends Jan. 1, and find out how to incorporate it into your holiday season. The program will be produced by Culture Kingdom Kids. Jessica Smith, Director of Culture Kingdom Kids and a Kwanzaa expert, will lead participants in learning fun ways to celebrate the seven days of Kwanzaa through a variety of creative games, interactive songs, dances and hands-on crafts.

Culture Kingdom Kids is an educational arts company that produces children’s programs celebrating African-American cultures. Since 2010, Culture Kingdom Kids has promoted cultural pride and heritage awareness through fun and interactive performances and workshops at schools, festivals, community centers and museums. In 2011, Culture Kingdom Kids founder and owner Jessica Smith received the Africa Showcase Award for Excellence in Children’s Cultural Programs. In 2012, Smith was recognized as one of the Forty UNDER 40 by the Prince George’s County Social Innovation Fund for her exceptional contributions in education through Culture Kingdom Kids. Teachers discuss challenges of teaching English as a Second Language.

By Michelle Kain
THE GAZETTE

Garfield Elementary School in Springfield, like all of Fairfax County, has a population that reflects a wide range of backgrounds. With 33 languages spoken, the school’s ESOL (English for Speakers of Other Languages) program has had to expand. The school has a first grade class of 60 students, 58 of whom are ESOL students ranging from levels one through four.

Jane Cofie-Raczko, who has been a teacher for the past 13 years, teaches one of three first grade classes in which all 20 of the students have English as a second language.

The majority of these students are from Hispanic or Middle Eastern backgrounds and common languages include Spanish, Arabic, Urdu, Farsi, Korean, Chinese and Vietnamese. The challenges involved with teaching these students depend on their proficiency with the English language.

“For students who speak almost no English, it can be difficult to communicate to the students that you want them to succeed and that you are there to help them. It can also be difficult to get the students to ask for help, mostly due to their lack of confidence in their speaking ability. For students with a better knowledge of the social language, it can be tough to give them a similarly strong academic language. Add the already difficult material to learning English for the first time and it can be very challenging,” said Cofie-Raczko.

“The success of the students with the curriculum and their preparedness for middle and high school depends on the schooling they received in their home country as well as when they enrolled at Garfield,” said Rozi Khakpour, an ESOL teacher at Garfield Elementary.

Students who have attended Garfield from the start get the opportunity to develop oral language at an early age through programs such as Lunch and Bunch in which kindergartners with English as a second language meet twice a week to have lunch and practice this important skill.

The program, along with others, have proven to be successful as “students who have been at Garfield since kindergarten often exceed in high school and earn positions on the honor roll,” Khakpour said.

“Another thing that has proven to be helpful,” said Kirsten Howard, another first grade teacher, “is Garfield’s social curriculum.” This social curriculum, which concentrates on teaching students cooperation, assertion, responsibility, empathy, and self-control, has given students a greater awareness outside themselves and has helped them in middle in high school as demonstrated by their willingness to take on leadership positions.

Second-year Mount Vernon head boys’ basketball coach John Wiley stood outside the visiting locker room at West Potomac High School on Tuesday night and said it takes three years to build a successful program.

Last season, Wiley’s first with Mount Vernon after coaching at Bowie High School in Maryland, the Majors lost nearly twice as many games as they won.

“I’m in my second year. This year is going to be better than last year,” Wiley said. “By my third year, I want to contend with the top teams in the area.”

Whether Mount Vernon once again becomes one of the top teams in Northern Virginia will be determined in time. Meanwhile, Wiley’s quest for improvement took a step in the right direction.

Mount Vernon defeated West Potomac, 63-59, in both teams’ season opener on Nov. 27, giving the Majors their first win against the Wolverines since 2009. West Potomac point guard Brandon Pressley buried a runner with 3.1 seconds remaining, cutting Mount Vernon’s lead to 61-59, but the Majors were able to run out the clock and junior forward Shawny Lovitt put the finishing touch on the victory with a layup at the buzzer.

“It feels great,” Mount Vernon senior Robert Decardi-Nelson said after the win. “Finally beat West Potomac.”

Mount Vernon trailed, 20-9, at the end of the first quarter, but battled back to tie the halftime score at 28-28. West Potomac held a 44-43 lead late in the third quarter when Mount Vernon junior guard Kwadwuo Diawuo came up with a steal, drove to the basket and scored on a tough layup, giving the Majors a 45-44 lead they would not relinquish.

A bucket by senior forward Don Smith gave Mount Vernon its largest lead of the night at 53-45 with less than four minutes remaining in the fourth quarter. West Potomac pulled to within one when Caleb Williams’ three-point play cut the Majors’ lead to 57-56 with 1:29 remaining, but the Wolverines couldn’t complete the comeback.

Decardi-Nelson, a 6-foot post player, scored nine points and grabbed 10 rebounds for the Majors.

“[I] work hard in the paint,” Decardi-Nelson said. “I treat it like it’s my house; I just protect it.”

Diawuo scored eight points and played energized defense for the Majors.

Mount Vernon senior Robert Decardi-Nelson (5) scored nine points and grabbed 10 rebounds on Nov. 27.

“Those are my two captains: Robert Decardi-Nelson and Kwadwuo,” Wiley said. “[They have] a lot of heart, a lot of hustle [and] a lot of passion.”

Bryce Washington led Mount Vernon with 13 points off the bench. The junior forward knocked down a pair of 3-pointers, the second giving the Majors a 48-44 lead early in the fourth quarter.

“It takes courage and knowing you can shoot the shot,” Washington said about hitting perimeter shots in a low-scoring game. “I just have to knock it down.”

Lovitt scored 10 points for Mount Vernon. Lucas and senior guard Patrick Bender each added nine. Bender knocked down a trio of 3-pointers.

Williams, a senior, led West Potomac with 17 points in his first varsity game. Pressley scored 16 points for the Wolverines and Kwame Camon added 11.

Six-foot-2 senior post Javon Trice scored 10 points and grabbed 11 rebounds for the Wolverines.

“I thought he played tremendous,” West Potomac head coach David Houston III said about Trice. “[It was the] best I’ve seen him ever play.”

West Potomac was without junior guard Demornay Pierson-El, who was injured. Houston III said he expects Pierson-El to return soon.

Mount Vernon will host Oakton at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Dec. 4. West Potomac will travel to face Herndon at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 30.
Mount Vernon Girls’ Basketball Smothers West Po in Opener

Six Majors score in double figures.

After Tuesday’s season-opener, West Potomac girls’ basketball coach David Sawczuk made an effort to track down Mount Vernon head coach Courtney Coffer. Sawczuk thanked Coffer for Mount Vernon’s intense effort and hoped the experience would help West Potomac down the road.

One of the teams in the Route 1 rivalry will be competing for a Northern Region championship this year. The other is looking to build on last year’s two-win season. It wasn’t hard to figure out which was which.

The Mount Vernon Majors defeated the West Potomac Wolverines, 82-39, on Nov. 27 at West Potomac High School. Mount Vernon, which fell one win shy of the state tournament last season, used full-court pressure early to build a commanding lead before cruising to victory. The Majors forced 40 turnovers and had had six players score in double figures.

“Most importantly, the team defense was the thing I was proud of the most,” Coffer said. “They’re playing good basketball right now. Hopefully, we can continue to get better and better.”

Senior guard Kelly Loftus led the Majors with 17 points. Senior guard Taylor Dunham and junior guard Chanel Shannon each had 14, and senior guard Tiffany Webster, junior forward Samantha Porter and freshman guard Erin Irving each had 10. Shannon knocked down a trio of 3-pointers.

“Chanel Shannon was incredible tonight,” Coffer said. “She’s the X-factor for us. When she has it going, this basketball team has a whole extra dimension that makes us that much better.”

Mount Vernon built a 29-5 first-quarter lead by forcing 16 turnovers in the opening eight minutes. West Potomac struggled against the Majors’ full-court press and didn’t reach double digits on the scoreboard until a free throw by Tayla Dawson made the score 32-10 with 6:04 remaining in the second quarter. The Majors held a 50-14 halftime advantage and led by as many as 53 points in the second half, when a free throw by junior forward Erica Irving made the score 79-26.

Mount Vernon finished with 30 steals, including 10 by Loftus. “It gives us confidence,” Loftus said of the team’s pressure defense. “Turnover after turnover, we get layups off of it.”

Irving grabbed 10 rebounds for Mount Vernon and Porter finished with six.

West Potomac sophomore forward Maddy Zdebski scored a team-high 13 points and grabbed seven rebounds. Senior forward Blossom Pierre scored 11 points and senior guard Asia Mills-Burch added eight.

Sawczuk returns for his second season as head coach. Last year, he was the Wolverines’ third head coach in as many seasons.

Sawczuk is trying to institute “a lot more accountability and responsibility for [the players],” he said. “Until now, they’ve never been held accountable because it’s been a different coach every year. So now it’s accountable for being on time, working every day, showing up and doing what you’re asked to do — the basics. But also for us, it’s accelerating the pace of the game.”

Mount Vernon will travel to face Oakton at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Dec. 4. Oakton was the only team to defeat the Majors last season, beating Mount Vernon twice.

West Potomac will face Falls Church in a tournament at Stuart at 5:45 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 29.
Nancy Dunning was my friend. Thirty years ago, she envisioned Del Ray as a community full of active citizens, thriving businesses and excellent schools. Not only did she work tirelessly over the years to help create this community, but she inspired many of us to join in her effort. For those of you who did not know Nancy, read this beautiful tribute written by her daughter, Elizabeth. For those of you who did, join me in remembering her contribution to Del Ray and Alexandria.

The Best Mom In The World
A Eulogy for Nancy Dunning written and read by her daughter, Liz

A lot of people, I think, have moments when they imagine that they have the best mom in the world. I was lucky enough, however, to be absolutely certain – for a long time – that I actually did. My mom was my best friend. We talked just about every day. And, anyone who knows her, knows a couple of things about my mom, one of which was that she was more or less always right. When I was a teenager, that pissed me off sometimes. I mean, seriously, when you’re sixteen and supposed to be going through that phase where you know everything, it puts a crimp in it to live with someone who actually does.

But, another thing that you must know if you met my mom was that she wasn’t smug about her omnipotence. Like any good superhero, my mom used her powers for good, not evil. To make other people – not just herself – feel good and be better. She taught my brother and I how to do that, too. I hope we were paying attention. I’m pretty sure we were.

My mom also taught me just about everything I know about optimism and joy. Those were things at which she excelled. It started, when my brother and I were kids, with crazy names for things. I bet that you thought that playground on Old Dominion was just the Beverly Hills Co-op. Nope. It was the Super Deluxe Playground. And, back when the Mt. Vernon school playground was that log-thing which is probably now illegal in most states, a trip to the Super Deluxe Playground was an adventure indeed. Every day was an adventure. Whether we were sneaking food into movies when I was younger, or she was singing hilariously bad opera while she made breakfast, my mom made clear that every day had something good in it, something to be happy about. Even if it was just that they’d just started selling Christmas Blend at Starbucks. These small events and details weren’t small – they were big. They warranted a phone call.

So did a great song on the radio. So did anything that made her smile. These were great calls to receive. Random, sometimes, but great. I mean, who doesn’t want to know that she busted the person next to her at the last traffic light picking their nose in the car? Who didn’t want to hear her joyful voice, her laugh? She loved to laugh and there isn’t a better feeling than making my mom laugh. Because, if you really got her going – and there are lots of ways to do this – she’d just get to that level where she’s crying because she’s laughing so hard. That’s when you know that you’ve really won. Bonus points are given if you do that while one of you is driving.

Her gift with joy, with optimism, gave her part of her gift with people. She had, what I jokingly called, her secret decoder ring. That was our short-hand – and there is always short-hand – for her ability to listen, really listen, to people when they talk. And, more than that, to understand what they’re really saying and, who they are and where they’re coming from. That’s why she wasn’t just people’s neighbor, or real estate agent, or neighborhood activist, or columnist, she was their friend. It didn’t take much to be my mom’s friend. She didn’t make you jump a lot of hoops. Or wear overalls and a baseball cap with the same aplomb that she did. (And thank god, because really? Who can pull off overalls and a baseball cap like my Mom? Nobody.) She wanted to learn more about people and know more people. So she lit people up when she talked to them.

And, as a consequence, people mostly did what my Mom wanted them to do, or what she asked of them. Because her ideas were smart. They were filled with the energy and the joy that she carried with her all the time. And they reflected an understanding and awareness of the thoughts and values of everyone involved. So, if you did what she wanted you to do, you were also doing the right thing.

But, mostly, she wasn’t a superhero – complete with secret decoder ring – to me. She was my Mom. She was better at that than anything else. She told my brother, and me, and my Dad that she loved us at the end of every phone conversation. That’s what our family does. And so, individually, knowing that the last words we said to each other were, “I love you,” helps.

There wasn’t a day of my life – and there won’t be one – when I wasn’t sure that my mom loved me, that she believed in me, that she was proud of me. And with or without a secret decoder ring, a cape, or a phone booth to change in, it truly takes a superhero to, in this crazy messed up world, love people so well and so much. So perfectly. It takes all that to be what I have – the best mom in the world.
