Community Sounds off On School Discipline

County collects feedback on students' rights and responsibilities.

BY ALEX McVEIGH
THE CONNECTION

Dozens of administrators, teachers, parents and community members gathered at McLean High School Thursday, Feb. 7, to share their feedback on the Fairfax County Public Schools Students Rights and Responsibilities manual. The county is in the process of trying to simplify the document's language, "substantially" reduce its size and match policies more closely with the community's wishes.

"We want to know: what are the good points, what are the bad points with the FCPS process? What's working well? What needs to be improved upon?" said Steve Stuban, chairman of the committee.

Stuban lost his son Nick to suicide in the aftermath of the disciplinary process several years ago, an event which spurred the county to start thinking about re-imagining the process.

A 40-member committee was approved in June of last year by the school board, which holds weekly meetings to examine about 75 issues they came up with in the school system's policy.

It consists of representatives from schools around the county, and it meets weekly to work on the process. They have come up with several working points for the community to address, which is what the McLean High School meeting addressed.

THE MCLEAN HIGH MEETING was one of several around the community to gather stakeholders together to break down issues piece by piece, all while giving the county feedback on the policies.

"We like to break people down in working groups, and it's a productive process," Stuban said. "We've seen that people come into these meetings with their own thoughts about what things should look like, but by the end of the night, they've heard from others and gained insight to other points of view."

The tone of the document, which many thought was too harsh, was a big sticking point of the community.

"I think it comes across as very negative, like it's a big list of warnings and threats," said Kathleen Murphy, a community member who attended the meeting. "I'd like to make it more than just a list of transgressions and penalties."

The document lays out the punishment for possession of alcohol, a minimum of five-day suspension, and marijuana, which is a 10-day suspension and recommendation for expulsion.

Several people in the group felt that the penalties were outdated.

"I'd like to see alcohol and marijuana possession treated a little bit more progressively in the school system. To someone in our schools, they're both illegal, so maybe the penalty for a first time violation should be the same, and then get more progressively severe for repeat offenses," said Matthew Ragone, principal of Langley High School. "I think many of the penalties we have are very well thought out, but these two substances seem to be more static compared with the way things are now."

Westfield High School Principal Tim Thomas said he would like to see a more thorough records review for offenders.

"I'd like to see us differentiate more between a first time offender and someone for whom this is a habitual behavior," he said.

Thomas also said he would like to see the document itself be a little less cumbersome.

"I'd like to see it condensed so it can be more easily digested and gone over with students," he said. "The easier something like this is to comprehend, the better."

PARENTS WERE CONCERNED about the notification process when something happens, while principals mentioned a need to speak to students immediately in some cases, such as when a weapon might be present or there are large numbers of students involved.

"I understand where the principals are coming from when they might need to find out who has a weapon right away, or if there was a fight involving students and it's hard to get a hold of 20 sets of parents before interviewing them," said Jan Smith, parent of a high schooler in the county. "But speaking personally as someone that knows my son, it makes me feel a little uncomfortable that he could be caught up in something and then questioned in a way that could have major consequences without me or my husband being present."

More information on the committee can be found at <http://www.fcps.edu/dss/ips/srr/committee/index.shtml> and comments about the Rights and Responsibilities document can be submitted to community\_dialogues@fcps.edu.

Pat Russell was a handsome young Navy reservist and a student at the University of Minnesota when he met 17-year-old Adele Marie Bissonnette at a friend's house in Minneapolis in 1939. Bissonnette had just graduated from Washburn High School and would attend the College of Saint Catherine in St. Paul, Minn., the next year. She was a little shy, but she laughed at his jokes. She had big brown eyes and curly black hair that hung just to her shoulders. Just like Russell, Bissonnette danced

Unfortunately, for the next three years, the two rarely saw each other. They attended different colleges. Russell took naval flight training in Corpus Christi, and when WWII started, the Navy assigned him to fly seaplanes off the cruiser USS Detroit in the Pacific. Bissonnette

A Positive Reflection

Joan Brady gives foster children needed exposure.

BY VICTORIA ROSS
THE CONNECTION

The last in a series.

On Monday, Sept. 10, 2001, Joan Brady of Great Falls had just started a three-month sabbatical from her job with an Internet company. Newly-married, Brady, who was 36 years old at the time, was exhausted from 80-hour work weeks in a rigid corporate environment. She wanted time that fall to contemplate what to do next with her life.

The next day provided answers and a sense of urgency. It was Tuesday, Sept. 11, 2001.

The terrorist attacks, and the moving stories of heroism and tragedy on 9/11, indelibly left their mark. Brady, like many Americans, was inspired to do something new, to take more chances, to change direction.

"After that tragic day, it was hard to imagine going back to a job that had seemed critically important, but now felt largely meaningless," she said.

She thought she might become a social worker or a teacher, a job where she could make a difference in other people's lives. She decided to volunteer as a homework tutor at a group home for foster children.

As she struggled to find a way to motivate her students, she began "bribing" them with her photography. "Some teachers gave kids candy in exchange for completing homework assignments. I thought I'd try taking their photos and giving them copies," Brady said.

Their reaction to having their photos taken surprised her. "It made me realize that they didn't have pictures of themselves, other than the one snapshot for their official file," Brady said. "I came to understand the connection between their having their picture taken and self-esteem."

According to child development experts, photos say "I'm important in this family." They show a child he or she is meaningfully connected to others, and provide a visual symbol of nurturing, love and caring. Foster children, who are frequently shuffled from one home to the next, rarely have family photos.

"In those days, I actually wasn't a professional photographer, just a gal with a point and shoot digital camera, trying to get through a three-month commitment I had made," Brady said. "I took pictures of the kids in the group home, mugging for the camera, playing basketball, bike riding, playing on the playground and occasionally holding up a good report from school."

She gave her students little $1 photo albums she purchased at Michaels so they would have a place to store their photos.

She realized just how important the photos were to her students when she showed up at school one day and learned the photo albums had caused some trouble.

"It turned out that the kids weren't allowed to take anything to bed with them and several had been caught taking their little photo albums that we were filling with pictures to bed with them," she said. "It was in that moment that I realized I was doing something more than getting through the three-month commitment that I had made to be a homework tutor. I stayed on well beyond my three-month commitment."

By 2004, she combined her love of photography with her ability to connect with children and started Joan Brady Photography. She also began photographing foster children featured on Wednesday's Child. During a shoot in 2005, she met Beverly Howard, the director of a small Fairfax County foster-mentoring program called Fairfax Families4Kids.

In Fairfax County, about 400 children are in foster care, and about 20 children, most of whom are 14 and older, are in the Fairfax Families4Kids program. According to Howard, these children are considered more difficult to place in adoptive homes because they are typically teens who have a range of special needs. Mentors provide one-on-one support and participate in monthly group activities.

"I got involved with the program when I met Beverly Howard, the director. She is a force of nature, a person no one can say no to. I have learned so much from her and have been so inspired by both her wisdom and her spirit," Brady said.

She became the group's volunteer photographer, shooting the children during their outings with mentors. Many of the children, especially the girls, didn't like to

Consider Mentoring

Fairfax Families4Kids is actively seeking mentors to connect with older children in foster care, those most at-risk for homelessness. be photographed. They thought they were ugly, unworthy of a photographer's time.

Brady often carries photographs of the program's children with her. In one photo, Kenny, a 14-year-old from Reston who was recently adopted, is high in the air, all legs and arms, about to make a powerful slam dunk. In another photo, Serena, 17, flashes a warm smile, her face framed in a cascade of long brown curls.

"Serena is a really interesting story. She's a tough girl whose initial reaction of 'don't take my picture!' evolved into 'take a picture of me!' and 'How come there aren't more pictures of me in the book!' She is such a sweet and thoughtful girl," Brady said.

Howard said Brady's photos capture the children's creativity and give them a positive reflection, something most of them have never had. She said the children are empowered by getting their photos taken.

"Joan sees well beyond the labels that so many of our youth have gathered along their journey in foster care," Howard said. "She can see the gifted artists, the aspiring scientists, the comedians, the athletes, and the beautiful children waiting for an opportunity to bloom."

Becoming an Advocate

Brady doesn't look like a fighter. She is petite, quick to laugh, and looks younger than her 48 years. But spend five minutes with her, and one quickly finds out how passionate and relentless she is about Fairfax Families4Kids.

"Actually, [fighting for children] started when I became a court appointed special advocate for a 9-year-old boy in foster care from DC in 2002. And yeah, I was surprised ... surprised that doing what was right by children was something that most often required a fight," she said during a recent breakfast.

"This is not just mentoring.

Chesterbrook Elementary School celebrated the international heritage of its students and families last Friday at its third annual International Night.

The festival featured activities, food and costumes of 20 countries such as India, Japan, the Czech Republic, and Azerbaijan. The Chesterbrook cafeteria was packed, shoulder-to-shoulder at times, with children bearing plates of exotic foods. Many of the students were wearing the traditional outfits of their ancestral homes.

"Because we're new to the country, we came here in July, we're really glad to have the opportunity to show a small part of our country," said Ainur Yertlessova, mother of third grader, Adilzhan and his younger sister, Aria. They hosted a table from their home country, Kazakhstan. "We're really open to everything new. And we're happy that people are interested," she added.

That sentiment was echoed throughout the night. The school's cafeteria was decorated with colorful representations of each country's flags, maps, and customs. Many had traditional games and crafts to share. Fifth graders Emma PTA President Beth Mahood said, "It's the kind of event you love to see. Everybody who has a table has a sense of ownership and everybody loves it. It's about learning; and the kids are learning and experiencing different countries."

On Transportation

Compromise, in the works, should include indexing the gas tax to inflation.

Virginia needs more options, not fewer, in developing revenue to pay for roads and transportation. Compromise on a plan to increase transportation revenue should not include making Virginia the only state in the nation without a gas tax. The current, ridiculously low gas tax should be indexed to inflation. The last thing the commonwealth needs is to do away with an existing, major source of money for roads.

Sen. Dick Saslaw proposed raising the tax, now 17.5 cents a gallon, by five cents each of the next two years and then indexing it to inflation. At the least, the tax should be indexed to rise with inflation from its current level.

Possible proposals to cut the tax in half along with increases in the sales tax miss the point, but are still far preferable to eliminating it.

The gas tax is a user fee. It raises money for roads from people and businesses who are using the roads, including drivers who pass through Virginia from out of state.

We agree with Del. Scott Surovell, who says: "Funding roads exclusively with sales taxes disproportionately burdens the elderly who drive less than others and people who do not own cars."

Medicaid Expansion Progresses

The Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce said it well when it issued a statement in favor of the commonwealth embracing $10 billion in federal money to expand the number of people eligible for health insurance under Medicaid:

"Northern Virginia businesses and taxpayers are already paying for health reform through new taxes levied by the Affordable Care Act. If we do not take advantage of Medicaid reform [and expansion], roughly $10 billion in Virginia taxpayer dollars will go to the federal government to fund coverage extension in other states. If the General Assembly approves the reform and extension plan, nearly all those taxpayer dollars will remain in-state where they can be put to good use for the benefit of the commonwealth, its businesses and its citizens."

Sex Trafficking in Our Backyard

Northern Virginia is seeing increasing numbers of reported cases of sexual trafficking.

BY TIMOTHY D. HUGO
STATE DELEGATE (R-40)

A couple of years ago, I became aware that sex trafficking of children was not solely an international issue, but one that was happening in our own backyard. Unfortunately, the truth is that it is one of the fastest growing criminal industries in the world, in the United States and, yes, here in Virginia. In 2011, I began working with Shared Hope International. This organization strives to prevent sex slavery, restore victims of sex trafficking, bring justice to vulnerable women and children, and strengthen Virginia's laws.

Since that time, the fight against human trafficking has become a top priority of mine. I am committed to fight against those who would do harm to our young people by enacting harsher penalties to those convicted of these horrendous crimes and by increasing public awareness.

According to the Polaris Project, a leading organization in the global fight against human trafficking, over 100,000 children alone are victims of the sex trade in the United States each year. It ranks Virginia seventh in the nation in the percentage of calls received reporting human trafficking. This is not a top ten category that any state seeks. Northern Virginia itself is seeing increasing numbers of reported cases of sexual trafficking occurring in massage parlors, online escort services, and gang-related activities among other avenues. Just last year, members of a Fairfax-based gang were arrested for soliciting Fairfax County high school girls for sex trafficking.

Virginia lawmakers have responded and enacted several pieces of legislation including my HB 1898, which raised the penalty for abducting any individual for the purposes of prostitution or abducting a minor for child pornography. In addition, the General Assembly currently has before it my HB 1606, which would stiffen the penalty for soliciting a minor for prostitution. I will continue to look for ways to make Virginia one of the least desirable states for those who seek to harm our young people.

I am not alone in combating this evil. I will continue to work closely with Governor McDonnell, Attorney General Cuccinelli, my colleagues in the General Assembly, Shared Hope International, the Polaris Project, the Richmond Justice Initiative, law enforcement agencies and others to increase awareness of this issue and to institute harsher punishments for those who seek to harm young people for financial gain.

Corporations are also participating in efforts to battle human trafficking. Just last year, AT&T granted the Richmond Justice Initiative $25,000 to develop educational programs to help prevent human trafficking in the Richmond area.

I believe there is no worse crime than one committed against a child. I am dedicated to ensuring child sex traffickers remain behind bars longer for such horrific behavior, so that no child falls prey to those who seek them harm.

One child taken from his/her home, one young person falling prey to this evil, is one too many.

Celebrating Anniversary

dropped a small gray air delivery message sack into the street near the Red Cross station. The sack's marker, a 3-foot-long red ribbon, trailed in the wind behind it. The sack contained Russell's note on a telegram form that read, "Adele, go to my mother's and bring the church papers."

Russell hoped someone at the station would see the sack and send the message on to his fiancée. But when he looked behind his plane, he saw that the snow in the street was 4 feet deep. Would the Red Cross even find the sack?

The Red Cross did find it. They telephoned Bissonnette and read Russell's message to her. When Russell next saw his brown-eyed girl, she was at his mother's home in Spokane, Wash. The couple wed at Spokane's Our Lady of Lourdes Cathedral on Feb. 24, 1943.

They toured the world on Russell's many Navy assignments, finally settling in McLean to raise their six children. Carol, Pat, Michele, Tom, Mary and Steve all graduated from McLean High. Today, most of the Russell children, 18 grandchildren, and 16 great-grandchildren live within minutes of them and visit them often. Birthday and holiday dinner tables are usually set for 30 or more.

Adele Russell still keeps house, cooks nightly dinners, babysits and pays bills. Pat is active in a military history club and plays golf twice a week when the weather is nice. Almost every weekend they drive to see their grandchildren's basketball, lacrosse, or baseball games.

The couple plans to celebrate their 70th anniversary on Sunday, Feb. 24.

Home Remodeling Projects Continue to Rise

Updating kitchens and bathrooms are homeowners' priorities.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

Home remodeling projects continue to rebound, and kitchens and bathrooms are at the top of the project list, according to a new report for the National Association of the Remodeling Industry.

"I was personally surprised [by] the number of really high-end projects, like those over $150,000," said Nikki Golden, NARI spokeswoman.

When the owners of a Fairfax Station home decided to turn their outdated master bathroom into a modern spa retreat, they added a black granite vanity, matching shower bench and custom glass shower doors. "This master bathroom has been completely transformed into an oasis," said Fairfax-based contractor Robert Kalmin of RJK Construction. "Immediately as you walk in, you are greeted by a large double vanity. The cabinetry door style is Centennial from Bertch Bath. Two mirrors with matching trim are hung above each sink and add continuity."

Kalmin, who is also a board member of the Washington-region's National Association of the Remodeling Industry chapter, said that a creative use of lighting helped set a relaxing, spa-like tone. "Three sconce lights add direct lighting and flare to this bathroom," he said. "The Key West soaking tub ... would make anyone jealous. A unique feature in this bathroom is the extra cabinet that is adjacent to the bathtub. It adds extra storage space and creates more countertop space for decorative items like candles."

WHEN IT COMES TO kitchens, NARI says homeowners are expressing a desire to expand. For example, when the owners of a Reston home decided to remodel their kitchen, they removed a wall that separated the kitchen from the living area and created a open, free-flowing space that allowed for casual entertaining.

"Removing a partition wall allowed us to bring out a peninsula into the living area, expanding the kitchen and providing the opportunity for additional cabinetry, countertop space and a bar top," said Suzanne Kalmin of RJK Construction. "The [cabinetry] creates a contrast in the kitchen. The door style is a full overlay, called Pembroke and the finish is 'Raven' on cherry wood."

The homeowners wanted a durable counter surface so they chose quartz. In addition, "a section of butcher block next to the cook-top serves as a convenient prep space for cutting vegetables or bread," Suzanne Kalmin added. "This kitchen is packed with professional grade appliances, [including] a Viking professional cooktop and oven-microwave combination."

The homeowners chose stainless steel appliances to strike an earthy but luxurious tone, she continued. "[They] are complemented by the stainless steel backsplash ... behind the range and between the countertop and bar of the peninsula. A staggered glass natural stone combination tile is featured in the backsplash. The front of the bar is covered with a staggered natural stacked stone."

To complete the project, the wood flooring the adjacent living room was refinished to match the flooring in the remodeled kitchen to create a seamless finish.

Last Minute Valentine's Day Ideas

Subtle accents for the most romantic holiday of the year.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

Still looking for Valentine's Day home accents? Local design experts say it is not too late to add touches of romance in time for Cupid's big day.

Laura Smith of the Dandelion Patch in Vienna and Reston suggests chocolate-scented candles, soaps and shea butter. “They are very pretty and you could put them in a guest bathroom and the candles in the living room,” she said. “They smell delicious — almost edible.”

Next on her list is a napkin box with cupcake napkins and paperweights. “They are perfect for entertaining, but also beautiful enough to leave out all year round,” said Smith. “Napkins and weights can be changed out to make this perfect for any event or time of year.”

Judy Philactos of Periwinkle Gifts recommends miniature glass hearts displayed on a tiny serving tray. “Feather heart wreaths also make nice displays,” she said.

When it comes to Valentine's Day bouquets and centerpieces, floral designer Evelyn Kinville of Behnkes Florist in Potomac, Md., says there are plenty of options. “While Valentine's Day is almost exclusively rose-based, it doesn't have to be,” she said. “There are French tulips, which are larger and longer-stemmed than traditional tulips. You can use hyacinths, fragrant hybrid lilies and freesia.”

The youngsters from the Alternative House program are getting their musical tips from none other than the McLean Orchestra Music Director and Conductor Maestra Miriam Burns during the pre-show Musical Petting Zoo Hour.

Wesley Nichols, principal oboe with the McLean Orchestra, and Elise Favia, principal oboe with the McLean Youth Orchestra, do a little personal sound checking as they prepare to play in the special side-by-side McLean Orchestra concert.

Magical Musical Memories

BY ANDREA WORKER
THE CONNECTION

For the first time in its more than 40 year history, the McLean Orchestra presented a “side-by-side” free concert on Sunday, Feb. 3, seamlessly pairing the professional musicians of the orchestra with their young counterparts from Principal Conductor Paul Kim’s McLean Youth Orchestra. Under the baton of McLean Orchestra Music Director and Conductor Miriam Burns, the combined musical entities performed a program titled “Musical Fairy Tales,” an abbreviated version of the previous evening’s concert. Grammy-nominated violinist Jenny Oaks Baker was the guest soloist, and led the way, playing a series of well-known Disney tunes from Mary Poppins, Pinocchio and The Lion King, to name just a few.

In keeping with the youthful atmosphere the orchestra partnered with Alternative House, a local non-profit organization that provides an array of services to homeless and at-risk youth; it was obvious by the head-bobbing, foot-tapping, and even a bit of singing, that the event’s special guests recognized and appreciated many of the selections. Several dozen children from Alternative House programs arrived at the concert via transportation generously donated by Reston Limousine.

What did attendee Simon Ghirmay think was the best part of the afternoon adventure? “The Petting Zoo!” he exclaimed. No. They did not have a single llama, or goat or a flock of chickens on display in the lobby of the Oakcrest School in McLean where the orchestra performs. This was a “musical petting zoo.” Before the concert got underway, Dalton Potter and wife Ally of The Potter Violin Company in Bethesda set up a musical menagerie with a variety of stringed instruments that the children—and even a few adults—were delighted to handle and give a try. Members of the orchestra joined Potter in offering a few tips to the “petters” and before long the lobby was filled with the sounds of music, mixed with a lot of excited chatter.

McLean Orchestra President Aileen Pisciotta expressed her delight at being able to offer this special performance to the youngsters from Alternative House. “Today is extra special,” said Pisciotta. “One of our missions is community involvement. It’s a privilege to have these children here today and give them a chance to experience orchestral music up close and personal.” Pisciotta involved her young guests right from the beginning of the concert with her opening remarks. She got a lot of raised hands when she asked if there were some potential future orchestra recruits in the seats.

Executive Director John Huling seconded Pisciotta’s sentiments. “And,” he added, “at the same time, we are giving our young orchestra members an amazing educational experience, playing

McLean Gymnastics Repeats As Region Runner-Up

Washington-Lee captures second consecutive team title.

BY JON ROETMAN
THE CONNECTION

After the Washington-Lee gymnastics team finished its bar routines during the third rotation of the Northern Region meet, Generals coaches stood in a small group and watched their primary competitor, McLean, go through its beam routines with a region champion yet to be determined.

W-L moved to beam for the fourth and final rotation. After watching Maia Mandel and Mary Lynn Clark deliver stellar performances, head coach Joe D'Emidio had no doubt the Generals were back on top of the region.

Mandel posted a 9.6 on beam, Clark followed with a 9.65 and Washington-Lee repeated as Northern Region gymnastics champion with a score of 147.15 on Feb. 6 at Lake Braddock Secondary School. McLean finished runner up for the second consecutive season.

D'Emidio said he already knew the Generals had wrapped up the title after their performance on beam.

He wasn't the only one feeling good about W-L's chances.

"I felt we were in pretty good shape because everyone had such solid routines," Mandel said. "Everyone was really confident."

Last year, the Generals became the first W-L sports team to win a region championship in more than three decades. This year, they were even better.

"It was a team effort," said D'Emidio, who called the experience of repeating as region champion "exhilarating."

The top-eight finishers in each event, the top-four all-around competitors and the top-two teams qualify for states.

One year after edging McLean by less than four-tenths of a point for the 2012 Northern Region crown, W-L widened its margin of victory over the Highlanders. McLean placed second with a score of 143, earning a state berth.

"They did good," McLean coach Courtney Lesson said about the Highlanders. "They fought for everything."

McLean's Jackie Green finished eighth in the all-around with a 37.425. She took fourth on floor (9.475) and sixth on beam (9.55). Lizzy Brown-Kaiser tied for third on vault (9.6) and placed eighth on bars (9.15).

Delaney Gallagher and Madi Schuman also competed for the Highlanders.

Woodson senior and Patriot District all-around champion Simone Freidman won the Northern Region all-around title with a score of 38.35.

"It's unbelievable," Freidman said. "I really wanted this. I really wanted to be able to say I have the district title, I have the regional title ... [and] it means a lot as a senior [to be] leaving and making my mark with the title."

Centreville's Ciara Hoernke and Hayfield's Molly Overstreet tied for second at 38.05, and Marshall's Morgan Stahl placed fourth (37.575).

Hoernke won bars with a 9.9, the highest score by any gymnast in any event. Freidman finished first on beam (9.85), and Stahl won floor (9.725) and vault (9.7).

The VHSL state meet will be held this weekend at Centreville High School. Team competition will begin at 3:30 p.m. on Friday, Feb. 15, and individual competition will start at 12:20 p.m. on Saturday, Feb. 16.

Langley Hockey Remains Undefeated

Saxons clinch the NVSHL Adams Division.

The Langley Saxons hockey club completed its most successful weekend of the 2012-13 campaign with a pair of strong wins against 4-3-2 Potomac Falls and 6-1-1 Briar Woods to reach the 9-0 mark this season.

These wins allowed Langley to clinch the NVSHL Adams Division and give the Saxons a chance for the first time in many years to finish the regular season undefeated at 10-0. Both games were taut contests, with Langley coming from behind to seal each victory.

In the Potomac Falls game, Langley scored the final four goals to win 5-3, after being down 3-1 in the middle of the second period. It was a tough, gritty win with the Saxons, wearing down Potomac Falls in the second half, despite a brilliant game by their goalie Franky Daniels, with a barrage of 45 shots. Goals were scored by senior captain Evan Sterling (2), sophomore Sam LaFuria, senior Derick Paxton and junior Jeremy Kim with assists by senior Zach Shames (2), senior assistant captain Logan Pontell, senior assistant captain Kevin Diner and Evan Sterling.

But, Langley proved its mettle even more in the effort later in the weekend against Briar Woods, which was ranked No. 7 in the Washington Post hockey rankings. The entire team stepped up its game against a very dangerous team, and held on for a 2-1 win. The first goal was scored by Evan Sterling, with assists by Kevin Diner and senior Peter Nam, but the highlight of the game had to be the hustle of the third line and sophomore Colin Dibble's dramatic game-winning goal in the second period, assisted by sophomore Chris Name and freshman Jason Guidi. Junior goalie Ryan Framinan had another great game and kept the Briar Woods team at bay with some strong goaltending for the entire three periods despite some great attempts.

Langley will finish its NVSHL regular season against Osbourn Park this Friday night, and then awaits the playoffs, which begin the week of Feb. 25. The Saxons are ranked No. 10 in the Washington Post hockey rankings.

Mentors Seen as 'Family'

Beverly has created a family, a family where one would not otherwise exist. It's a family where kids are loved unconditionally, which, in my experience, is very rare for children in foster care who are most often judged by their worst behaviors with a blind eye turned toward their attributes."

Sully District Supervisor Michael Frey, a champion of the program, was quick to praise Brady's role in the program.

"While the mentors and volunteers are definitely the heart of FF4Kids, Joan Brady is definitely its soul," Frey said. "I can't imagine where the program would be without her."

Neither can anyone else connected to the program.

In 2009, when the program was in danger of being eliminated because of across-the-board cuts in the county budget, Brady marshaled an army of supporters, launched a "save the program" blog, and cajoled, begged and nagged officials to keep the program. (In 2010, the program, fueled primarily by the work of the mentors and volunteers, cost about $133,000 in a social services budget of more than $200 million.)

Brady appeared before the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors during the budget hearings. Her plan was to let the program's youth speak directly to the supervisors.

County officials said no. That answer was not acceptable to Brady.

"That's when we began fighting. I may have led the effort, but it was very much of a group commitment," Brady said. "We knew that these kids were virtually invisible to the community. We knew that they could not stand up for themselves. We wrote letters and emails and met individually with members of the Board of Supervisors. We went directly to the Human Services Council, writing to them as well."

Supporters scheduled their testimony so that they had a block of time, and they coordinated their speeches so that each of them covered a different aspect of the program.

And Brady made sure supervisors heard from the children, by having supporters read comments from their audio testimony.

Molly Pell of Fairfax spoke about adopting one of the children in the program, and included the comments of a youth she mentored

"None of us in this room can fully understand what Families4Kids means to the youth involved, but I believe one of our youth stated it best, when she told us:

"[If I didn't have FF4Kids], I would lose my mind ... I would lose my sanity. I wouldn't be able to function much. Cause even now I don't have very much. I get teased on at school. I get teased at the place where I'm supposed to call home. If I lost here ... it would be like there was no reason to do anything anymore."

In their short lives, so much has been taken from these youth. Please don't take away Fairfax Families4Kids," Pell said during the hearings.

"We stood together as unified members of the community," Brady said. "We achieved a stay of execution during those budget hearings in 2010."

Being Part of the "Family"

Brady is an award-winning photographer whose images have appeared in many publications, including "The Washington Post," "NYTimes.com," "Washingtonian" magazine, "Children's Voice" (the magazine of the Welfare League of America) and "O Magazine."

She is justifiably proud of her work, and will talk about it when prompted.

But she quickly steers the conversation back to the children, and how much difference mentors make in the lives of foster children. What she is not always quick to talk about is that the children in the program consider her an important part of their "family," too.

During a celebration for mentors last month, Jorge, 17, stood up to address the group: "I don't have a mentor, but Joan is always there for me ... I check in with her and she checks in with me, nagging me about school and work," he said. "I know she cares."

"Honestly, I probably am in touch with him every week-and-a-half, and I think he usually checks in and when I respond, I do totally nag," she said, laughing. "Ok, I do follow the kids on Facebook, so occasionally I check in to admonish, but it's not much."

"But see. Just that tiny bit of interaction he has with me—something that I hadn't even noted—makes a big difference for him. It just takes a tiny bit of attention to make a difference," Brady said. "That's why I want the story to be about what's really important: the children, definitely not me ..."

Warranty Warranted?

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

For life, absolutely! As to what happens to my mattress in 10 years or my television in five years – as but a few examples, pales in comparison to what I worry (you'll note I didn't say anticipate) will have happened to me in five or 10 years. Nevertheless, I'd definitely pay extra for that warranty. However, there are no warranties for life, extended or otherwise – and no guarantees either, as I discovered in late February, 2009, when I was diagnosed with stage IV lung cancer (or as those of us in the know "acronym it": NSCLC). "Death and taxes," as the old joke says, are the only guarantees. The rest are "hope-to-bees" and "wanna-bees."

A cancer diagnosis (and terminal prognosis – for yours truly, anyway) has a way of sharpening your focus and narrowing your perspective. Initially, after meeting with my oncologist, and for a while thereafter, quite frankly, the three most important people in my life were me, myself and I. For many months post-diagnosis, the three of us didn't care or consider – too much, about what might happen down the road, a road never before traveled. Life's discussions – and decisions – were all about the here and now, not the there and later. What might have been was replaced with what it is and what are you going to do about it.

However, as life – and I, have continued, so too has my understanding and appreciation of my amazing good fortune. To have survived for as long as I have is a blessing and somewhat perplexing to my oncologist. And in that continuing survival and evolution, opportunities have regularly presented themselves that have forced me to consider my past, present and future ("what there is of it"). As much as I don't want to – and quite frankly, prefer not to, have every day-type decisions impacted by my cancer diagnosis, they are. If I didn't/don't consider the context of every decision I make, I would be short-changing myself and forfeiting the future for the present. And even though I had my guarantee pulled in 2009, I'm still trying to live as if any thing's possible.

Certainly there are exceptions to every rule, statistical anomalies in every manner of study and research. Life is not a straight line. Sure death is inevitable, but there shouldn't be any hurry to get there. It will happen soon enough (too soon for some), whether you like it or not. Now whether I outlive my mattress or my television or my car is unknown, but as a cancer patient, I sort of think about whether I will or not. This thought process is a problem – for me. It may be a problem of my own making but as far as problems go, it's a Hall-of-Famer. And by that I mean, it dominates.

Garden variety-type decisions become landscape design-type problems. Previously inconsequential, mundane-type presumptive choices become minefields of negative possibilities/regrets. The short version being: do I really need to do that/buy that/warranty that, if I'm not going to be the true beneficiary – meaning/accepting that some of these rather ordinary decisions might not be about me. And for a terminal cancer patient who has often heard "It's all about you, Kenny," on more than one occasion – from more than one person, assimilating an unanticipated future into an apparently productive present where others matter as much if not more than you do, is almost counter-intuitive. Nevertheless, life certainly appears to be worth living; I'm just not sure how much of it I should pay for in advance.

Kenny Lourie is an Advertising Representative for The Potomac Almanac & The Connection Newspapers.
