Battleground Northern Virginia

BY MICHAEL LEE POPE
THE CONNECTION

For many years, Northern Virginia has been written off by both parties as a Democratic stronghold — a place where Republicans simply try to cut their losses while they focus on the rest of the commonwealth. But this election cycle may be different. All three of the gubernatorial candidates are from Fairfax County. And recent statewide candidates have not been able to win without picking off selected jurisdictions in Northern Virginia.

“As you look at Northern Virginia that’s further from Washington, you see a more Republican area — Prince William, western Fairfax, Fauquier,” said Stephen Farnsworth, professor at University of Mary Washington. “That’s where the real action is in Northern Virginia politics.”

As Election Day draws closer and television becomes a virtual battlefield for attention, a real battle is brewing on the ground here in Northern Virginia. Candidates and their advisors are looking at the path to victory back in 2009 for Republican Bob McDonnell, who won Prince William County, Fairfax County and Fauquier County. Although this race is likely to be closer than 2009, the importance of Northern Virginia is looming larger than ever.

“I don’t expect Ken Cuccinelli to actually win Fairfax County, which Bob McDonnell actually managed to do in 2009,” said Geoff Skelley, analyst with the University of Virginia Center for Politics. “Cuccinelli will do very poorly in Reston or Annandale, so just because he’s from Fairfax doesn’t mean he has appeal throughout the county.”

ONE OF THE QUIRKS of Virginia politics is that the gubernatorial elections follow presidential elections, a phenomenon that has frequently seen voters reject the party that won the White House the previous year. But a look at the numbers tells a different story. Although 3.7 million voters cast a ballot in 2008, fewer than 2 million votes participated the next year. That means that election officials are expecting about half of last year’s turnout, which included a record-breaking 3.8 million votes.

“For [Democrat Terry] McAuliffe, the goal is to get as many voters out as possible,” said Skelley. “For Cuccinelli, the goal is to hold down the margins.”

According to Census data, Northern Virginia expanded its population about 24 percent in the last decade — growing from 2.6 million from 2.1 million. Northern Virginia is the most populous region of the commonwealth and the Washington Metropolitan Area. And the rate of growth here far outpaces other urban areas in Virginia, including Richmond and Hampton Roads. That means rural and outlying areas are experiencing an erosion of influence, particularly in western parts of the state and Southside.

“The big problem for Republicans statewide is how they do in the more rapidly suburbanizing areas,” said Farnsworth. “This is true in Northern Virginia and in the Richmond area.”

DURING THE GUBERNATORIAL debate last week, Republican Ken Cuccinelli was trying to establish himself as the choice for Northern Virginia. He mentioned the region five times, and he tried to use his experience representing Fairfax County in the General Assembly to his advantage. When the issue of the government shutdown was raised, Cuccinelli responded with a direct appeal to residents of the region who have strong economic ties to the federal government.

“I’m a Northern Virginian. I’ve lived up here my whole life,” said Cuccinelli. “We’re already seeing in the Virginia economy the problems associated with the uncertainty of federal budgeting as it is, both in Northern Virginia and in Southeastern Virginia in the Hampton Roads area.”

Despite the fact that the debate took place in Tysons Corner, the McAuliffe did not point out that he has lived in Fairfax County for more than 20 years. Instead, the Democrat attempted to portray himself as the best candidate for the interests of Northern Virginia voters. At one point, he pointed out Fairfax Chamber of Commerce president and CEO Jim Corcoran in the front row and mentioned he agreed with the chamber’s position on Medicaid expansion. Later in the debate, he argued that Cuccinelli’s tax proposal would hurt Northern Virginia.

“What it would mean to Fairfax County

What role will the region play in the election?

to be losing this revenue,” said McAuliffe. “What it would mean to Sharon Bulova and Fairfax County and the loss of teachers at a time we should be investing in our teachers, investing in those STEM courses, science, technology, engineering and math,” said McAuliffe. “His plan literally would force us to lay off thousands of teachers.”

THE TENSION within the region was evident in recent weeks as business leaders across Northern Virginia began issuing their endorsements. The first was from the political arm of the Northern Virginia Technology Council, which endorsed Cuccinelli last month. But that announcement was delayed after some internal dissension within the organization, which led to a series of accusations and counter-accusations. The drama surrounding the delay of the endorsement became a talking point for Republicans eager to portray McAuliffe as a Washington insider.

“I am appalled that Terry McAuliffe and other prominent Democrats would threaten to hold the legislative agenda of Northern Virginia business leaders hostage to their political agenda,” said Republican House of Delegates Speaker Bill Howell in a written statement. “That might work in Washington, but it is unacceptable here in Virginia.”

Hours after Cuccinelli and McAuliffe debated each other at the Fairfax Chamber of Commerce’s forum, the organization issued its own endorsement for the Democrat. In a statement explaining the endorsement, the business group praised McAuliffe for opposing mandatory project labor agreements and supporting Virginia’s longstanding right-to-work law. The chamber also mentioned his support for accepting federal funds for Medicaid expansion and his support of the transportation funding package that passed the General Assembly earlier this year — both of which were opposed by the Republican candidate.

“In terms of the priorities of the Northern Virginia business community,” said Corcoran in a written statement, “Mr. McAuliffe’s policy positions and proposals closely align with the Fairfax Chamber’s legislative agenda.”

SALT forum gives candidates a chance to tell voters where they stand on social justice issues.

As the countdown to election day begins, most candidates are laser-focused on promoting themselves as the one who really does put jobs and the economy first.

But one group also thinks voters should know where candidates stand on social justice issues when they go to the polls Nov. 5.

"Our elected officials have a great deal of influence on the common good, so it's reasonable that we find out where candidates stand on these issues," said John Horejsi, founder of SALT (Social Action Linking Together), a non-partisan, faith-based advocacy group started in 1983.

"We're here to see where candidates stand today," said Horejsi at SALT's annual candidates' forum held at the Vienna American Legion Post 180 on Saturday, Sept. 28. A slate of candidates, both incumbents and challengers vying for seats in Virginia's General Assembly, attended the forum. They included incumbent delegates Ken Plum (D-36); Mark Keam (D-35); Vivian Watts (D-39); Jim LeMunyon (R-67); and Mark Sickles (D-43). Challengers included Patrice Winter, the Republican who is challenging David Bulova (D-37); Democrat Jerrold Foltz, who is challenging Republican Tim Hugo (D-40); Democrat Ed Deitsch, who is challenging Republican incumbent Dave Albo (R-42); Democrat Hung Nguyen, who is challenging LeMunyon; and Democrat Jennifer Boysko, who is challenging Tom Rust (R-86). Democrat Marcus Simon (D) also attended the forum. He is facing Brad Tidwell (R) in the 53rd district, an open seat to replace the previous incumbent, Jim Scott, who is retiring.

STEPHEN CLERMONT, research director of Every Child Matters Education Fund, started the event as the keynote speaker, reciting some sobering statistics about Virginia's children:

*More than 280,000 children in Virginia live in poverty;

*More than 18,000 children are homeless;

*One in every six children doesn't have enough to eat, and 148,000 have no health insurance.

"Children need you to make their voices heard," Clermont said. "What are you going to tell children about the schools you closed, or a child not able to see a doctor?"

Clermont said ECM believes that a top priority for government "must be helping children survive and thrive."

"Failing our children today is not just morally wrong; it's counterproductive, ultimately leaving us less competitive in the global society," Horejsi said.

After Clermont's keynote address, Horejsi invited each candidate to give a one-minute "elevator speech" about their issues, and then opened the floor to the audience, who submitted written questions for candidates. The questions touched on a wide variety of topics, ranging from prison reform, transportation, immigration reform, Medicaid expansion, uranium mining and corporate tax breaks.

Del. Vivian Watts (D-39) was emphatic when she answered a question about the cost of the federal food stamp cuts being passed down to states:

"Let's be clear: this is no small thing for the state," Watts said. "This is people's food. This is people's lives. This is the difference between families being able to feed their children or paying the rent."

Residential Studios Put on Hold

Supervisors establish committee, plan additional public outreach.

At the recommendation of Chairman Sharon Bulova (D-At-Large) and Supervisor Michael Frey (R-Sully), the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors on Tuesday deferred its Nov. 20 public hearing on a proposed residential studios (RSUs) amendment to conduct additional community outreach.

The board also established a Planning Commission Residential Studios Committee.

"It is important that the County hear from the various stakeholders affected by the proposed residential studios amendment," Bulova said.

"The Planning Commission's Residential Studios Committee will provide an engagement process with the goals of addressing and resolving questions and concerns associated with the RSU amendment. I encourage residents to participate in the process," Bulova added.

ON JULY 30 – in a move designed to increase affordable housing options for working-class individuals - the board unanimously voted to authorize a public hearing on a proposed zoning ordinance amendment regarding residential studio units (RSUs) that would permit RSU use in various residential, commercial and industrial districts by special exception or in all planned development districts.

"There is a tremendous need for housing at all income levels in Fairfax County," Chairman Sharon Bulova said after the July 30 vote. "Permitting residential studios is an excellent way to accommodate lower income rental units and provide more housing choices for our residents. RSUs can be a great tool for providing efficiency apartments for our younger entry level workers, for seniors and others who may not need or want a lot of space."

In the past 40 years, Fairfax County has become one of the wealthiest counties in the nation. As land prices soared, the creation of low to moderate priced housing plummeted.

For several years, county officials have grappled with housing options that will aid efforts to end homelessness, accommodate the area's aging single population, and increase affordable housing for a workforce earning less than 60 percent of the area median income (AMI).

Donna Pesto, the county's senior assistant to the zoning administrator, said the proposal would not change the building codes, and would apply to rental units only.

Under the proposal, Pesto said there could be no more than 75 residential studio units in a building and a minimum of 80 percent of units have to be affordable to low-income earners, those making about $45,000 per year or less. The maximum square footage for the units would be 500 square feet, plus a bathroom and kitchen.

BUT PUBLIC REACTION to the proposal has been less than enthusiastic. Despite assurances from county planners that RSUs would not be developed in ways that would dampen property values, many residents and homeowners groups voiced opposition to the proposal.

In order to address community concerns members of the Planning Commission have suggested a process for encouraging engagement in changes to the advertised ordinance.

The Committee will provide opportunities for detailed consideration of the Zoning Ordinance Amendment by Planning Commissioners, citizens, and other stakeholders through five scheduled Committee meetings. All meetings will be open to the public and will allow opportunities for discussion.

The Planning Commission will continue to conduct Work Sessions scheduled for Sept. 25 and Oct. 2 at the Fairfax County Government Center.

Following the Work Sessions, the Residential Studios Committee will convene in late October with further meetings in November, December, and January, and a public hearing in late February. The public hearing currently slated for Nov. 19, 2013 will be rescheduled.

McLean's Shiloh Baptist Church celebrates 140th anniversary.

BY LORI BAKER
THE CONNECTION

Late in the 19th-century, three figures converged in Northern Virginia, leading to the creation of one of McLean's first African American churches. Cyrus Carter was a local pastor whose goal was to establish four black churches in Northern Virginia. The plan was to organize churches in Chesterbrook, Vienna, Arlington and in west McLean where Shiloh Baptist Church now stands. In 1873, Carter was able to broker a deal with local landowner, Charles Elgin, and Shiloh Baptist Church was born.

"At the time, there were no black churches. Although this is where the majority of African Americans were living in those days, who were free," said Pastor Robert Cheeks. "They migrated to this area as D.C. was beginning to grow. This was a predominantly African American community," he said.

have a place to worship. And after securing the necessary property, which still stands at the intersection of Lewinsville and Spring Hill Roads, Carter and the new congregation needed a place to worship while they raised money to start building a church.

"It was difficult in that time, right after slavery, for people to save their money," said long-time member Archie Borgus. But they were able to raise the capital, and the cornerstone was laid in 1887.

Supreme Court justice discusses new book, current legal issues.

BY ALEX MCVEIGH

Associate Justice of the Supreme Court Antonin Scalia spoke to members of the Northern Virginia Technology Council Wednesday, Sept. 25 at the Ritz Carlton Tysons Corner. Scalia discussed his book "Making Your Case: The Art of Persuading Judges," as well as his thoughts on several recent legal issues.

"It's amazing what an ancient science it is advising people," he said. "Persuading judges is not that different from persuading anyone else, except judges are a bit more uppity. Apart from that it's perhaps one of the oldest advice-giving enterprises, advising people how to persuade somebody else. Those who have given advice on it include Aristotle, Socrates, Demetrius, Cicero and Quintilian."

He advised the audience that, above all, they need to be well versed in whatever subject matter they are presenting.

"You will never persuade someone when you display in your presentation that you don't know anymore about the subject than they do," he said. "The reason judges listen to lawyers in front of us is that they have typically lived the case for months, if not years, and know more about the facts than anyone. But as soon as the person you're talking to realizes that you don't know more than them, you're out."

He cautioned against repeating points though, saying, "if you're going to beat a dead horse, then the dead horse will end up beating you."

He was asked about the recent NSA spying program in the news, and what the Supreme Court's opinion on it might be.

Scalia cited the Fourth Amendment, which says that people have a right to be "secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures," and described his evolving thoughts on the matter.

"The first case I heard involving wiretapping involved a wiretapping by state police, and we held that conversations are not persons, houses, papers and affects, so it's not covered by the Fourth Amendment," he said. "Twenty years later, we did an about face and said that conversations are protected, that besides persons, houses, papers and affects there is a generalized right to privacy that comes from parts of the Fifth Amendment. The consequence of that is that whether NSA can do the stuff it's been doing, which used to be a question for the people or Congress to resolve, it will not be

Virginia's Easy Access to Guns

A parent asks why background checks aren't better.

BY RUTH HOFFMAN

How do you respond to a 7-year-old when she comes home from school and says "we did our bad man drill today Mommy, but don't worry it was just for practice, no one really came into our school to shoot us"?

After the Sandy Hook Elementary school shooting on Dec. 14, 2012, I learned that this was a routine drill she had been doing since she started kindergarten in 2011. It was only after Sandy Hook that I had discovered that fact. So what else did I not know? As it turned out — plenty.

Like so many, I was horrified by what had happened in Newtown and as a mother of a 6-year- and 3-year-old, at the time, I wanted to do what any mother would do and find out what precautions my schools were taking. Certainly our schools in Fairfax were safer from gun violence than, say, the schools where I grew up in rural Brookville, Kansas where guns were prevalent. I embarked on this journey and made some startling discoveries.

First, I attended our PTO meeting in February and listened to our principal explain what they could and could not do — there were limitations and budget constraints, and that our school was at a greater risk of a shooting from a custody dispute or domestic violence than a mass shooting. While I acknowledged his comments, it was unsettling to learn he prepares for risks of gun violence stemming from custody disputes.

Soon after, I discovered that Virginia is among the states that allow open carry. When I was in my grocery store and saw a customer wearing a "I shoot to kill" t-shirt, I asked the manager if weapons were banned from the store. He replied that Virginia was an open carry state but he reassured me that patrons would have to openly display weapons if they carried them.

That led me to my third discovery and that was the facts around concealed weapon permits in Virginia. When I think of someone with a concealed weapon permit I think of someone with extensive training. But the threshold in Virginia was lowered in 2009. Virginia enacted a law allowing an applicant to demonstrate competence with a gun by participating in electronic, video, or online training. Essentially all that is needed is an internet connection, a printer, and small fee. Handling a gun is not a prerequisite.

I discovered these revelations about the time Congress failed to pass a background check, which brought me to my fourth discovery — Virginia does not require universal background checks.

The only thing more startling than learning of the low thresholds and deficiencies in background checks was the revelation that the trajectory over the past 10 years has been to weaken gun laws in Virginia.

I want complete and thorough background checks before someone purchases a gun in Virginia. Why would anyone not want that, especially in light of Virginia's existing laws allowing open carry and granting a low bar for concealed permits? I want to know that if I'm in my local grocery store shopping for milk and eggs that the customer next to me with a concealed weapon purchased the gun through a background check. I want to know that any risk stemming from a custody dispute or domestic violence, which could spill over into my school, has been mitigated by a law that requires a background check. And most importantly, I want to prevent dangerous weapons from falling into the hands of criminals, violent abusers, and the dangerously mentally ill.

I listened to the governor's debate on Sept. 25. In a post-Newtown and Navy Yard context, I welcomed Mr. McAuliffe's strong position for universal background checks. As a mother, my first priority is protecting my children. A candidate seeking the highest elected office in Virginia should have the wellbeing of all of our children among his highest priorities. Gun violence is a growing threat in this society with Virginia Tech, Tuscan, Aura, Newtown and the Navy Yard. For such a serious issue we need serious solutions from serious candidates not what the NRA is serving up which is a campaign of distraction to excuse the violence committed with guns.

As far as seeking the right words to respond to my daughter's declaration about their "bad man drills" — I haven't found the right words, I just hug her and thank God it was just a drill and she made it through the day safely.

Honor Flight Network Brings 90 Veterans to WWII Memorial

VALERIE WADDELOVE

On Saturday, Sept. 20, mostly on the spur of the moment, I drove out to Dulles Airport to join my daughter and four of her children to greet WWII and Korean War veterans flown to Washington by the Honor Flight Network. My daughter had received an email earlier in the week from a home-schooling friend to invite her to the event.

The Honor Flight Network is an organization that flies veterans to the nation's capital to see the WWII Memorial—their memorial. The organization is less than 10 years old, but has already flown nearly 100,000 vets to D.C. for a visit, one they would probably not be able to do on their own, physically or financially. What's remarkable, is that the veterans pay nothing for the trip.

Southwest Airlines, in particular, donates many of the tickets for this trip of a lifetime, and other donations help to pay expenses. Each veteran is accompanied by a "guardian" to ensure their safety and offer whatever assistance is needed to make the trip and to enjoy the visit to the memorial. In 2005 the first official Honor Flight mission began when six private planes flew 12 thrilled veterans free of charge to Manassas Airport from Ohio. The pilots accompanied the veterans via coach to the memorial. An idea which started with two dedicated individuals has been transformed into a nationwide effort that is spurred on by the fact that an estimated 640 WWII veterans die each day.

On this particular flight, many of the men were from Wisconsin, which was a happy coincidence since my father, a deceased WWII veteran, was born there. The Honor Flight Network has regional hubs that accept applications from veterans and then fly them in groups to Washington. Sadly, their website reports, sometimes the veteran has passed away by the time his name comes up for a scheduled departure. Nevertheless, there is a long list of veterans who are eager to make this journey. WWII veterans and those terminally ill are given preference.

One of the Honor Flight coordinators at the airport announced that this was the biggest group that had ever turned out for an arriving flight at Dulles. Besides interested individuals, there were many groups: Girl and Boy Scouts of all ages, American Heritage girls, Oakton cheerleaders, and a number of people in military uniform. Handheld flags waved, handmade posters were held aloft, and patriotic balloons bounced in the air. When the old warriors came into the baggage handling area, people were lined up in two rows so that the veterans entered a walkway between the waiting crowd. They were surprised and amazed by the turnout, some even teary-eyed, as they shook hands with the people, especially children, in the crowd, which was around 200 strong.

resolved by the branch of government that knows the least about the issues involved.”

Scalia was appointed to the Supreme Court in 1986 by Ronald Reagan. He described how the legal system has evolved since then.

“In my early years on the court, it was rare that one lawyer would appear even once a year, every year, much less more than once a year,” he said. “But now the large firms have developed a Supreme Court practice, I’m not sure how much money there is in that, but it’s a prestige thing. Some have a substantial Supreme Court bar of former solicitors general who appear three, four times a year. I think that’s a help to the court, because we’re seeing people who do a better job. In the old days, if a lawyer was lucky enough to get his petition granted, he was going to argue it himself, and very often was not that good at it.”

SPARC Hosts Music Workshop

Local musicians perform, jam with club members.

BY ALEX McVEIGH
THE CONNECTION

Members of the Specially Adapted Resource Club (SPARC), which serves adults with life-long disabilities, have been meeting at the Old Firehouse Teen Center in McLean for almost two years.

"We were meeting one day, and we got to talking about a few bands I've played with in the area, and they asked if they could join a band," said Sunny Trippel, music director at SPARC. "I thought that was a great idea, and started reaching out to musicians I know."

Trippel's efforts resulted in the first ever SPARC music workshop, where musicians from around the area came to show club members what they do.

Singer-songwriters David Kitchen and Todd Wright joined percussionist Katy Gaughan, drummer Brian Takagi, guitarist Matthew Telford and slide guitarist Mike Murphy.

"I reached out to about 25 different musicians, and none of them said no, though many had other commitments," Trippel said. "We have a musical program a few times per month at the various clubs, but this was the first time we did a workshop, where each musician set up a station and explained what they do."

Wright, who has been a member of The Excentrics, The Getaway Car and other bands, said he was excited to return to the Old Firehouse Teen Center.

Kitchen, who is based in Alexandria, has been named Songwriter of the Year and won several other awards from the Washington Area Music Association. He brought in a guitar and bass guitar to the workshop.

He also has a special connection to the club, his son Hank is a member. Kitchen demonstrated how he is able to jam with his son, with Hank using a Korg Kaossilator.

"It's a palm-sized synthesizer that he can touch and create sounds with," David Kitchen said. "I just set it to the key of my guitar, and I can play along with the sounds he's making."

Club members and their caretakers were given a variety of percussion instruments, and the musicians led them in the three songs they've been learning for the club band, Bob Marley's "Three Little Birds," Bobby McFerrin's "Don't Worry, Be Happy" and John Denver's "Take Me Home, Country Roads."

They also led the group in a performance of The Beatles' "I've Just Seen A Face" and Johnny Cash's "Folsom Prison Blues."

"We usually do more of music therapy, which isn't as interactive, so this is a big step forward for the club," said Donna Goldbranson, president and executive director of SPARC. "The smiles and happiness we saw today are a great sign, that's what we're after every day."

More information on SPARC can be found at www.sparcsolutions.org.

Social Justice Discussed

A question about corporate influence and tax breaks kicked off a lively exchange about ALEC, the conservative national consortium of state politicians and corporations vilified as a PAC aimed at increasing corporate profits at the public's expense.

In recent years, Virginia legislators have been criticized for proposing boilerplate ALEC legislation that would, among other things, dilute voting rights legislation, limit corporate liability for harm caused to consumers and give business tax credits to fund private school tuition for needy students.

"As someone who's actually attended an ALEC meeting, I agree with some of the stuff, but not everything," said Del. Jim LeMunyon (R-67), the only Republican incumbent who attended the session. "There are one or two bills that interested me, and some that are just off the wall."

Horejsi sparred politely with LeMunyon over how much corporate tax breaks cost Virginia's taxpayers.

"Seems like corporations get a lot of unfair breaks," Horejsi said.

Hung Nguyen, a small-business owner and political refugee from Vietnam who is trying to unseat LeMunyon, vowed to "close corporate tax holes," and said he would push legislation that stops corporations "who continue to make money on the backs of the poor."

Jennifer Boysko, who is challenging Del. Tom Rust, the Republican incumbent in the 86th district, said she "strongly opposes" much of the ALEC agenda, including the "takeover bill" of schools. A former aide to Fairfax County Supervisor John Foust (D-Dranesville), Boysko said she has "a strong background and commitment to social justice issues."

Del. Mark Keam (D-35) struck a bipartisan note by giving kudos to Governor Bob McDonnell for helping pass the historic transportation bill last session and the governor's efforts on prison reform.

"Today's interchange with candidates was invigorating," Horejsi said of the forum.

THE EVENT was co-sponsored by Virginia Organizing (VO); Virginia Citizens United for Rehabilitation of Errants (CURE); and the Virginia Coalition of Latino American Organizations (VACOLAO).

The Ultimate Guide to MPAartfest

Q&A on MPAartfest, to be held on Sunday, Oct. 6, at the McLean Central Park.

Q: What exactly is MPAartfest?

A: MPAartfest, presented by McLean Project for the Arts, is a great day in the park surrounded by wonderful art for sale, lively music, art activities for all ages, tasty food and a little wine.

Q: What kind of art is for sale?

A: MPA selected 49 artists (see the complete list) out of many who applied. You will find paintings, watercolors, photographs, textiles, jewelry, sculptures and ceramics all in a wide range of prices. McLean Central Park becomes a lively landscape of mini art galleries.

Q: Can I bring the kids?

A: Absolutely! MPAartfest is a community event for the whole family. There will be art activities for all ages at Innovation Station. Your family can stroll through the Children's Art Walk which features art from K-6 grades from schools in the McLean area. You can watch or try your own hand at live figure drawing at Open Studio.

Q: Is there music in the Gazebo?

A: What's an arts festival without lively music! Listen (and dance) to great music from a wide variety of performers. Headlining the music and back for an encore, will be McLean's own Scott Ramminger and the Crawstickers who have a new CD that is getting airplay on Sirius Radio. Also performing are The Exceptions, the winners in last year's MPAartfest Idol Talent Search; and this year's McLean Teen Center Teens Got Talent winner, Alexa Noelle Topetztes.

The line-up:

Ukulele Phil and the Hula Kids: 10-10:30 a.m.

The Indigo Project: 10:45-11:30 a.m.

Scott Ramminger and the Crawstickers: 11:45 a.m.-1:15 p.m.

Madeleine Chalk: 1:30-2 p.m.

The Exceptions: 2-2:50 p.m.

Alexa Noelle Topetztes: 3-3:30 p.m.

Daniel Wrigley: 3:45 to 4:30 p.m.

Q: Will there be food available?

A: There will be delicious offerings from Greenberry's, JGilbert's, Lebanese Taverna, Mama's Donut Bites, Naked Pizza and Nourish Market. You can take a little break from all the art shopping at the MPA Beret Café, back for its second year offering red and white wine.

Q: Will the McLean Project for the Arts galleries be open on MPAartfest?

A: Yes! Make sure you come see the current exhibition while you are at MPAartfest. In the gallery you can register for a free drawing of local restaurant gift cards and music CDs and, if you become a member of MPA the day of MPAartfest, you will get a special MPA tumbler. MPA is located in the McLean Community Center.

Q: Where is parking?

A: Convenient satellite parking will be available at 6862 Elm Street at the Fleetwood Road intersection and at Cardinal Bank located at the intersection of Dolley Madison Boulevard (Rte. 123) and Beverly Road. From there, free and frequent shuttle bus service will ferry passengers to and from MPAartfest. Handicap Access space will be available at Dolley Madison Library.

Q: How much does it cost to attend MPAartfest?

A: MPAartfest is free, but a $5 donation to McLean Project for the Arts is greatly appreciated.

Ukulele Phil and the Hula Kids will perform again this year at MPAartfest.

The Quinn Family and their new art.

What and Where

What: McLean Project for the Arts presents the 7th annual MPAartfest

Where: McLean Central Park at the corner of Rt 123 and Old Dominion Drive

When: Sunday, Oct. 6, 10 a.m.-5 p.m., rain or shine
Info: www.mpaart.org/artfest.php

Q: How can all this fun be free?

A: Without the help of MPAartfest sponsors and donors, MPA could not provide this free event to the community, nor allow the artists to keep 100 percent of their sales. As a 501(c)(3) nonprofit, MPA must look to private sources to raise the majority of the funds needed for its operations, programs, exhibitions and of course, to bring MPAartfest to McLean. Many thanks go to our event partners, McLean Community Center and Fairfax County Park Authority, sponsor Capitol One and the office of Dranesville Supervisor John Foust.

Shiloh Baptist Celebrates Anniversary

ALFRED ODRICK, former slave and local landowner, offered his Odrick's School to the congregation as a temporary solution. Odrick's School stood at the point between Lewinsville Road and Spring Hill Road, and provided a place for the congregants to worship and grow their church membership. The school has long since been torn down, but the area is still referred to and bears a historical marker naming it Odrick's corner.

This month, members of the small historic church have been celebrating their 140th anniversary. The milestone was marked with a series of service ministries and old-fashioned celebrations. Members marked the event with a commemorative walk following their monthly L.O.V.E. (Linking with Others through Volunteerism and Evangelism) ministry of assembling sandwiches for the homeless. "The first Saturday of every month, they bring sandwiches downtown, they minister to them, pray with them, and some of them want to share and talk," said longtime member, Clifford Wiggins. "Sometimes they just want a hug," he added.

Wiggins, who was born in 1961, has been at Shiloh his entire life. "I grew up in this church," he said. He has been in the choir for more than 20 years, ushered, cooked, "worked wherever I was asked," he said. He is proud of the church's ministry.

Shiloh is often known for its community activism, according to 81-year-old Deloris Evans. Evans is also proud of the church's reputation and the 18 ministries that it is currently involved with. "I was baptized here in 1944," she said. "I was 12 years old. My parents had belonged here, and my father's parents had belonged here. They were great workers," she said.

"I was baptized in Scotts Run Creek. We would go in the winter, summer, spring and fall. I was baptized in the winter months. I don't think I got warm ever again," she laughed.

Archie Borgus explained that Shiloh would perform its baptisms at the bottom of Lewinsville Road, where it used to meet Scotts Run creek. The beltway stands there now. "Lewinsville Road used to be much lower than it is today," said Borgus. "Down by the beltway there was a creek there called Scotts Run. That was where the members were baptized. And then they would go up the hill to the home of the late Deacon and Mrs. Andrew Holland and change clothes."

SINCE PASTOR CHEEKS and his wife and Associate Minister Constance Cheeks joined Shiloh about six years ago, the membership has grown. The church currently had to close to 300 people on its rolls. Next month the church will start offering two services to accommodate the growing membership. The membership includes a large contingency of older persons and an increasingly large number of children and youth. "It's a progressive ministry that is very open to God's vision," said Constance Cheeks. "And it's a great bridge of the young and the old. The people here are very loving and very warm," she added. "And that tends to draw others."

THE CONNECTION

One week after the Langley football team lost five fumbles during a loss to T.C. Williams, Saxons running back Tyler West made sure to keep two hands on the ball during Friday's contest against Chantilly.

Even when West was running in the open field, the junior often stressed ball security with a two-handed protective grip that head coach John Howerton would later deem excessive.

"A little bit of an overstress job," Howerton said after the game.

While West might have been overly cautious in his approach, the Langley running back's fear of fumbling didn't prevent him from being overly productive.

West carried 22 times for 259 yards and two touchdowns as the Saxons overcame a seven-point halftime deficit to beat Chantilly 42-21 on Sept. 27 at Langley High School. The Saxons outscored the Chargers 28-0 in the second half to improve their record to 2-2.

"After the halftime talks, everyone got more motivated," West said, "and we just started hitting the holes harder and [the offensive line started] making bigger holes."

What was the deal with the cautious approach?

"I was just trying," West said, "to keep it steady as much as I could."

FRIDAY'S PERFORMANCE was a bounce-back effort for West, who had fumbling problems during the Saxons' 13-7 loss to T.C. Williams.

"Nobody wants to fumble or make mistakes," Howerton said. "He didn't have his best day last week. The pouring-down rain probably didn't help things and it just kind of snowballed on us. ... He's very talented. He's still young and he's still trying to figure out the offense. ... He's got to get his confidence up each week. The talent is there."

Langley quarterback Nick Casso also had a big night on the ground, carrying 19 times for 155 yards and four touchdowns. A lot of Casso's success came from keeping the ball on the read-option.

"It's hours [of work] and hundreds of times of just reps in practice," Casso said of the Saxons' success running the read-option. "... If you do it to muscle memory, that's what practice is for right there and you've got it down."

Casso also completed five of 15 passes for 74 yards. Wide receiver Garrett Collier had three catches for 33 yards.

Langley scored on two of its first three drives and led 14-0 late in the first quarter. After losing a fumble on their first possession, the Saxon offense responded with a nine-play, 90-yard scoring drive that ended with a 19-yard touchdown run by West.

Langley started its third possession at the Chantilly 29 thanks to a 44-yard punt return by Collier. Three plays later, Casso scored from 2 yards to give the Saxons a two-touchdown advantage.

Chantilly, which entered the game averaging 48 points per contest, came to life in the second quarter, when the Chargers outscored the Saxons 21-0. Running back David Kerns scored on runs of 8, 15 and 3 yards to give the Chargers a 21-14 halftime lead.

While the teams traded blows in the first half, Langley dominated the remainder of the contest. Chantilly drove inside the Langley 10 on the opening possession of the second half, but Saxons defensive back Scott Rosener intercepted Chantilly quarterback David Sydnor to end the threat. Three plays later, West scored on a 47-yard run to tie the score at 21-all.

Chantilly's next possession ended when Langley defensive lineman Alex Kolencik took the ball away from a Charger and raced 30 yards down to the 10. Three plays later,

The Hornets will host McLean at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 4.

Casso scored from 2 yards, giving the Saxons a 28-21 lead they would not relinquish.

CASSO ALSO SCORED on runs of 33 and 4 yards in the fourth quarter.

What did the Saxons' performance on the ground say about the team's offensive line?

"It says that we can run over people," Casso said. "We can control the line of scrimmage. When you've got those big guys in the middle and then support on the outside at tackle, we're good to go."

Kolencik (6-1, 235) is the Langley center. Brooks Norris (6-4, 295) and Bennett Molster (6-2, 270) are the guards, and Ben Culmer (6-5, 275) and Connor Halm (6-6, 260) are the tackles.

Rosener finished with two interceptions. Chantilly running back Kerns carried 16 times for 40 yards. Mark Aanstoos had five carries for 60 yards.

Quarterback David Sydnor completed 17 of 35 passes for 253 yards and three interceptions. Raeshawn Smith caught six passes for 78 yards, Eric Tram had six receptions for 86 yards and tight end Javin Re had five receptions for 89 yards.

Chantilly's record dropped to 3-1. The Chargers had scored at least 41 points in victories against Lee (61-22), Madison (41-17) and South County (42-34) prior to Friday's game.

"It's going to be one of the bigger wins Langley's had," Howerton said. "This team is very capable. We have some good players. We've got a couple linemen that other teams don't have, we've got a very good quarterback and a running back [and] we've got ... one of the best wideouts around."

Langley will travel to face Marshall at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 4. Chantilly will host Centreville.

Central Park Plan Changes Unveiled

BY ALEX MCVEIGH
THE CONNECTION

The Fairfax County Park Authority presented updates to the McLean Central Park Master Plan Monday, Sept. 23 at the McLean Community Center. The revised draft plan removed a new entrance to the park, but kept plans for a multi-use amphitheater.

"McLean Central Park is enjoyed by a lot of people of different ages and interests," said Supervisor John Foust (D-Dranesville). "That made it a difficult job for the Park Authority to work through comments, but they worked hard to make changes in response to community suggestions."

The park is 28 acres, and located adjacent to Dolley Madison Library and the McLean Community Center. The master plan revision process kicked off last November.

The biggest addition to the plan was for an amphitheater, which would be located on the south end of the park, near Ingleside Avenue. Park staff said they hope the amphitheater can host live performances, as well as be converted into an ice-skating rink and pop-up fountain.

"Ultimately, we have the amphitheater where it was originally placed. The team did a lot of additional studies, looking at different locations to see what other options there were," said Gayle Hooper, a planner with the Park Authority. "We moved things around to different places in the park, but no matter how we moved it, it would have negative impacts to other park features."

Hooper said that keeping the gazebo as the only spot for a live performance was not in keeping with the authority's plans for the park's future. It is located in a resource-protected area within the park, preventing any expansion or modification.

NEIGHBORS, especially those on Ingleside Avenue and Elm Street, had expressed concerns that having an amphitheater so close to the road would lead to noise disturbances, but Hooper said they would add in a berm (a raised ledge) for sound protection.

"We went out to the park on different occasions and took noise readings at the gazebo and the location of the proposed amphitheater. They're nearly identical, it's not quieter in one spot and louder in another," she said. "So with all things being equal, we can do some berming for sound protection for neighbors and amphitheater guests."

An element added since the last draft plan are bocce courts and game tables in the central area.

"It's a location that has shade and is easily accessible, and could be established without affecting any of the existing trees there," Hooper said.

Several residents were concerned that the plan is too much for the quiet, natural park that they've come to know.

"They keep saying that they've had great interest in having an amphitheater, skate rink fountain facility there, but I've yet to hear a single person, in a public meeting or personal conversation, that thinks those things would improve this park," said Stanley Muir of McLean. "I'm fine with the bocce court and game tables, but everything else just seems to be a corruption of what this park means to its regular users."

Others were concerned about more features in the park without a large parking addition.

"They mentioned that performances could bring a few hundred people into the park, where on earth are that many people going to park, especially if it's during a time when the library is open?" said Sarah Torre of McLean. "Are we going to go from McLean Central Park being a hidden gem to a place with lines to park like Great Falls Park?"

FOUST said that nothing in the plan has been funded, which would likely come from a park bond.

"Park bonds usually go in four-year cycles, and we just had one in 2012," he said.

"Mor-Tality" Or Less

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Meaning, in my head anyway, the future and what there is left of it. More specifically, I mean life expectancy. When you're given a "13-month to two-year" prognosis – at age 54 and a half, by a cancer doctor, your cancer doctor, the timeline between where you are and where you thought you'd be – and when, becomes as clear as mud. Yet not planning for the future, a future that previous to your diagnosis was thought to be guaranteed (based on family/patient history) creates a negative when all health care professionals advise being positive. Anecdotal evidence suggests that acting like you have a future helps in some unexplainable way in you/the patient having one.

Over the last month, I've had some time-sensitive and planning-for-the-future-type decisions/expenditures that on paper at least – given my terminal diagnosis, could be construed as money poorly spent. Nevertheless, since it is my life – and I'm trying to live it, I went ahead and signed up and paid to have these future benefits in place (starting at the present), and I'm not talking funeral arrangements, either. What I'm referring to are everyday/ordinary expenses where your dollars guarantee years ahead rather than years behind: one-year anti-virus coverage for my computer – until September 14, 2014; two-year coverage until September 30, 2015, for my Life & Health Insurance from the Maryland State Insurance Administration (I used to be an active agent in my previous career); and finally, six-years renewal (although one has no choice, really) until September 30, 2019, for my new Maryland Driver's License.

Certainly, in my mind and experience, these renewals are sort of necessary, perhaps more so for the present than the future, but since I can't know for sure, I felt as if hedging my bets was the prudent course of action. And though not renewing these three obligations was not really practical, given the realities of my life and its related responsibilities, the planning-for and purchase-of them did give me pause to consider my future and my expectations for it. Having terminal cancer will do that to you: stop you in your tracks and cause you to measure (almost literally) every step you take. It's not exactly fun, but it is a living, and I'm particularly happy to be the one doing the living.

And during these past few weeks, I did stop, and I hemmed and hawed too and decided to pay it (and my life) forward; to invoke and rework a concept made famous by a movie of the same name starring Haley Joel Osment. So I'm now officially paid up – for a few years. If I think too much about what's happened to me (stage IV non-small cell lung cancer) and why, I fear it will weaken my resolve. A resolve which is short on facts but really long on feelings. Feelings which I've become accustomed to having and believing.

I have to believe in something, and believing I have a future is the best way I know how to turn these feelings into facts.

The Waves Of the World

BY JESSICA SIMONS
STUDENT/NOVA ANNANDALE CAMPUS

Light begins to flash pointing at me with such force causing me to black out unable to see unable to fight with the feeling of the current pulling me in every which way fighting my way out finding no release
My chest begins to concave
From the weight of the world
Pressing on it
Trying to use the voice I know I have
But it vanishes
Just like the appearance I have
On the world
Conforming to the current, finding out who I am
Or more like trying to find out
As there is still no way out
Using my last breath
I fade into abyss
I become ... nothing

Choosing a Home for the Golden Years

Many options for retirement communities in the region.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

Jim Harkin, 81, and his wife, Phyllis, 80, have little free time these days. Jim spends his days protecting and photographing wildlife on the 60-acre campus at The Fairfax, a Sunrise Senior Living Community, in Fort Belvoir. He helped build, refurbish and maintain more than 20 birdhouses on the grounds, including homes for tree swallows and purple martins.

Phyllis Harkin manages a small gift shop and runs marathon bridge games. The couple moved to The Fairfax more than two-and-a-half years ago from their home in Fairfax because they wanted the freedom to pursue their interests and live among people with similar lifestyles without the responsibility of maintaining a household.

"We were getting older and keeping up a house and yard in Fairfax was getting harder," said Jim Harkin, a retired Navy captain. "We also wanted to make our own decisions about where and when we moved and not have that left up to our busy children."

Phyllis Harkin, a former real estate appraiser, said, "We did it in time, but after living at The Fairfax, we wish we'd done it earlier. You have no idea how much fun it is over here."

ing retirement community, in Gainesville, Va., since 2001. She moved there from Burke, she said, for social reasons. "I wanted to move into a community where there were people who had lifestyles that were similar to mine," said Aust, a retired federal employee who has no children. "I like living in a community with people in similar situations. It is very active here. There are indoor and outdoor pools, tennis and golf. There is so much to be done here." Aust volunteers on the Heritage Hunt community task force and with the

THESE TRANSITIONS were smooth and logical for them, based on their own choice.

But the decision to move out of one's home and into a retirement community is often complicated and can be fraught with anxiety. Experts in geriatrics say that reasons to relocate to a retirement community usually boil down to three factors: social connections, physical condition and personal safety.

"It's like a trifecta or a three-legged stool. It is hard to be stable if one leg isn't working" said Andrew Carle, an executive-in-residence at George Mason University's program in senior housing administration in Fairfax. "A person might be physically healthy, but if they are isolated in their home and not driving or have lost touch with friends, they could become depressed."

Carle, who has more than 25 years of

Diverse Needs, Desires Drive Mobility Solutions

Seniors increasingly seek innovative plans that embrace both the present and the future.

BY JOHN BYRD

Russ Glickman was a traditional full-service remodeler until the late 1990s when he abruptly added a host of accessibility certifications to a long list of building industry credentials. The service extension was less about opportunity than a personal call to apply what he'd learned from personal experience in helping his son, Michael, who was born with cerebral palsy.

"As a professional builder and a parent, I was fascinated with the challenges entailed in helping people with mobility issues make use of their homes, and really eager to absorb the evolving strategies and technologies that were then beginning to evolve," Glickman said. "I spent several years acquiring new certifications while continuing to execute full-scale remodeling projects."

Starting initially as a helpful neighbor with sound advice, Glickman, who has operated Glickman Design Build for more than 30 years, eventually recognized that the demand for accessibility solutions was larger than he had thought.

"I was offering feasibility studies in special needs situations mostly on referral, but the inquiries pretty quickly became about half of my work," he said. "It wasn't that there weren't other practitioners in this field. But I soon discovered that the need for original solutions was as pronounced among people with mobility requirements as it is in remodeling — may be more so."

His conclusion: an accessibility solution that's tailored to an individual is always best, especially when designed to accommodate both current and probable future needs.

"The reality is that every disability is also uniquely personal, and every house presents challenges that must be fully understood if a solution is to work well."

On top of this, Glickman said, there are always code and budget issues, emerging technologies and, often, collaborative input from therapists, engineers and other specialists.

"This is an enormous societal issue, with a significant and growing practice literature that must be absorbed," he said. "Having said this, I find that the best solutions arise from effectively collaborating with someone facing challenges who's really passionate about making the most of their situation."

IF THERE'S ONE TREND that's well underway in Northern Virginia, it's that seniors are consistently deciding to age in place — even when a major retrofit is called for.

In McLean, for instance, a retired executive and his wife recently hired Glickman to develop a plan for installing a three-story elevator in their 10,000-plus-square-foot house. "The owners are in their late 60s, and walking without assistance. The stairs have gradually become a chore, however, a situation that was unlikely to improve."

Since elevator access within the home's existing structure wasn't feasible, Glickman's plan calls for a 60-foot tower designed to house an elevator shaft — a substantial modification that will not be visible from the front facade.

Inside, the tower will connect a finished lower level, a study on the main level and a executive-level senior housing and health care experience, adds that if a person has had a stroke or another condition that affects mobility, living alone is challenging. "If you need assistance with dressing and bathing that would make it difficult for you to stay in your home alone," he said.

Safety issues, such as a risk of falling or medication management, are other reasons that one might not be safe living alone, said Carle. "If you fall and hit your head and nobody comes, you could die," he said. "There is also the medication issue. The average 75-year-old is on between seven to 12 medications each day. The number one cause of hospitalization in people over 75 is medication error. The number one cause of death due to injury in seniors is falls."

Linda Guly, Ph.D., a professor of psychology at Marymount University in Arlington, who teaches aging psychology, says that despite the amenities and services that make retirement communities a good fit for many people, a feeling of losing the ability to make decisions about one's life makes many seniors resistant to moving.

"One of the biggest psychological issues faced by the older person is the feeling they are giving up control of their lives in so many ways and that can be depressing," she said. "Engage the older person in the process as much as possible and respect their choices, whether it is how to decorate their place or what to bring."

Andrew Carle said, "The very best strategy for a resistant parent is respite stay, which is essentially a short-term stay. The family goes on vacation and lets the senior stay at a retirement community for a week or two. It gives the senior a chance to meet the people, eat the food and participate in the activities. Usually after about a week or two the senior realizes that living alone in their home and watching television all day isn't all it is cracked up to be."

WHEN ONE DECIDES that living alone is no longer wise, there are plenty of options. Local retirement communities run the gamut from independent living where a person lives among fellow seniors, but does not need special care, to levels of assisted living. Assisted living facilities provide different levels of care for those who need help with small tasks such as medication administration, to those who need help with daily tasks such as getting dressed or taking a bath. Skilled nursing facilities, where residents have greater medical needs, are another option.

Some facilities such as The Fairfax and the Hermitage in Alexandria, are continuing care retirement communities that enable residents to transition in the same facility as conditions change.

"Independent living basically meets a person's social needs," said Carle. "Assisted living is for people who have physical needs or limitations. I don't think of nursing homes as senior housing. It is long-term health care or for someone who is recovering from an injury or who needs physical therapy."

Lynette Mitchell, director of marketing and community outreach at The Hermitage, explains that, "We have everything from people who are totally independent to people who need help bathing and dressing. We can deliver all of those services."

Debra Norberg, associate director of marketing at The Hermitage, said that in addition to amenities including a game and fitness rooms, there is support throughout the facility. "There is a community aspect. If someone doesn't show up for a meal, we notice. We work as a team to make sure we all know the residents, and if they don't show up for something, someone is going to check on them." Activities as simple as a meal in the dining room can become an opportunity for socializing. "This is a new chapter in their lives. We try to pair people up and give them a buddy and we have activities every single day of the week."

SOME RETIREMENT COMMUNITIES, such as Great Falls Assisted Living in Reston, Brightview Senior Living in Great Falls and Sunrise At Fox Hill in Bethesda, Md., also offer memory care services for those with Alzheimer's disease or dementia.

Westminster at Lake Ridge in Occoquan, Va., another continuing care retirement community, offers residents an array of activities that run the gamut from performing arts to gardening. "We have the Westminster Strels, a choir and the Westphalians, a drama group," said Carolyn Crosby, assistant administrator at Westminster. "We also have a resident garden, which the residents tend themselves."

They grow vegetables and leave overflow produce for other residents to take."

"Fox Hill's... amenities, services and fascinating residents all combine to offer a distinctive retirement lifestyle that is both very attractive and very accessible," said Julie Sabag, director of marketing at Fox Hill, in Bethesda, Md.

Peg Bixler, an assisted living resident at The Hermitage, said her doctor advised her that she should not live alone anymore. "And I didn't want to be a burden to my children," Bixler, a retired oncology nurse, added. "I do miss my career and I miss traveling, but I've traveled all over the world."

Bixler says living in an assisted living community allows her to maintain an active lifestyle while still getting the help that she needs. She volunteers in the gift shop of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, and for the USO at Washington Reagan National Airport, greeting veterans and passing out flags.

"I'm busy 24 hours a day. I get out and walk every single day," said Bixler. "I do a lot of reading. You socialize at meals here. I go out when they go on the shopping trips, which gets you out and about." Bixler is still able to live in close proximity to her family, which includes a daughter who lives in Alexandria and a son who lives in Maryland.

Relocating from a different state to be close to family is a common choice. That was the case for 93-year-old Dorothy Lavoie, another resident of The Hermitage. Lavoie, a former nurse, served in World War II and the Korean War. "I was living in California, and my niece who lived here wanted me to live near her."

Another Hermitage resident, John Mutchler, a retired chemist, moved from New Jersey to Alexandria to be closer to his family. "I keep busy here. I am the chairman of the executive committee. I am also a member of the poetry group where we read poetry every week. I am a member of the current events group."

third floor sitting room. The owners are also considering an option to build-out the fourth floor as a guest room suite.

The execution is meant to be architecturally seamless, with the tower clad in brick to match the 25-year-old, original masonry.

Not surprisingly, professionals regarded this as a highly specialized assignment. "There aren't lot of local contractors who could execute a project like this," said Andria Gregory of Area Access, Inc, the firm that will install the elevator in the new shaft.

"The specifications are always exacting, so it's important to us to work with people who have a track record," Gregory said.

MEANWHILE, IN ARLINGTON, a mobility plan with incremental components has been implemented in the two-level ranch Jaime and Janice Marquez have occupied for 24 years.

Jaime, 59, who had polio as a child but walked without assistance for most of his adult life, started intermittently using crutches again about 10 years ago.

"This wasn't a surprise," Janice Marquez said. "The research shows that polio survivors can have increased mobility challenges as they age, so we wanted a wheel-chair friendly plan even though it's not a necessity right now."

The biggest obstacles: a curving, ruggedly-steep front walk that links up with a front stoop; standard-width interior halls and doorways that had proven restrictive; and a back deck inaccessible to Jaime Marquez from the ground.

"It had become difficult for Jaime to negotiate the house on crutches, so we were looking ahead," Janice Marquez said. "Initially, I wasn't sure if we should remain in this house, but I had read about Glickman and decided to get his feedback."

Compounding the "move vs. improve" question was the couple's mutual concern that an accessibility solution might make the house less functional for others, including two daughters away at college who are frequent visitors.

"I've seen accessibility modifications that become obstructive," Janice Marquez said. "I wanted to see if we could make changes that would enhance the property — functionally and aesthetically."

To improve front elevation access, Glickman and team removed the existing front walk, re-graded the front slope so that it rises at the rate of one inch per foot and introduced a "zero step" entry.

To facilitate Jaime Marquez's access between the rear deck and the yard, Glickman designed and constructed a wider, low-rise staircase that accommodates his crutches.

While focused and small-scale, the changes have dramatically improved Jaime Marquez's ability to move freely from driveway to front door and throughout the house. They've also bestowed an unexpected benefit.

"The interior now feels much more spacious," Janice Marquez said, "and the wider doorways allow more natural light."
