Langley High Community Comes Together in Wake of Tragedy

Residents, teachers and students join together in the days following the deaths of two Langley seniors.

THE CONNECTION

Fairfax County came together to support Langley High students and their families following the deaths of two 17-year old Langley seniors on Feb. 3 and 4.

Compassionate messages arrived from Fairfax County school administrators, churches, and fellow students at other schools in the days following the discoveries of both students' bodies. Both deaths were suspected to be suicides.

Langley High School Principal Matt Ragone issued a statement in a letter to Langley families. "Thank you to everyone who has expressed their genuine concern and for your support of Langley High School," said Ragone in a letter. "I realize that at times like this, answers are in short supply. However, it is important that we continue to be there for one another during this difficult time."

Peers placed items commemorating the lives of both students on a memorial in front of the school. The memorial grew day by day, and fellow Saxons gathered there to pay their respects.

The community assembled at Langley High School on the evening of Friday, Feb. 7, in a candlelight vigil. "I really hope that their parents show up so we can pay our respects to them," said one Langley junior. Another student estimated that about 600 people attended the evening ceremony.

Area churches and other Fairfax County schools such as Oakton, Chantilly, and James Madison high schools showed their support via social media, sharing the #SaxonStrong hashtag and telling classmates to wear black that Friday. McLean Bible Church and Saint Luke Catholic Church both offered services dedicated to the students on Wednesday, Feb. 5.

School Board Representative Janie Strauss (Dranesville) said that tragic events like this remind students and their families to show compassion and understanding toward one another. "Those little civilities with strangers and people you know may be that one piece of sunshine that person needed that day," said Strauss. "We have an emphasis with children in our schools to support and help each other always, whether it's character education or positive behavior support programs."

Fairfax County Public Schools crisis intervention teams arrived at Langley High School shortly after. Dr. Kim Dockery, assistant superintendent for FCPS Special Services, said that the team consists of social workers, psychologists, and counselors from schools all over the county who are there to talk with any students and staff who seek their help. Dockery said that the teams remain there "for as long as the school needs them."

Strauss said that in the coming weeks, the county will continue to encircle students with support from counselors and social services resources. "These times are all about remembering that all people need help, love and support. It's hard to know sometimes when people are in crisis," said Strauss.

What To Do?

If someone you know exhibits warning signs of suicide:

- ❖ Be direct. Talk openly and matter-of-factly about suicide.
- ❖ Be willing to listen. Allow expressions of feelings. Accept the feelings.

Fairfax County Community Services Boards

Mental Health Crisis

Fewer people are receiving community services across Northern Virginia.

BY MICHAEL LEE POPE
THE CONNECTION

Virginia is in the midst of a mental health crisis.

Even as lawmakers in Richmond debate the best way to deal with a crumbling system of public services for some of its most vulnerable residents, community services boards across Northern Virginia are offering services to fewer and fewer residents. Since the global economic crisis began gripping local governments in 2009, the number of people receiving services from community services boards has dropped. Nowhere is the decline more jarring than Fairfax County, the largest jurisdiction in Virginia.

The statistics, outlined in the county’s most recent comprehensive annual financial report, are dramatic. Since 2009, the number of people receiving mental health services in Fairfax County has declined by 39 percent. Alcohol and drug service have dropped 43 percent. Services for those with intellectual disability have declined 39 percent. Arlington and Alexandria have managed to keep their numbers steady, which makes Fairfax an outlier in the region.

“We’ve had to become a very lean machine,” said Jane Woods, vice chairwoman of the Fairfax County Community Services Boards. “Things had to be done more creatively, and services have been somewhat cut for those who have another funding source even though it might not be quite as robust as what the county would have done in prior years when money was much more available.”

The number of people who receive mental health services has also gone down in Arlington, although not nearly as dramatically. According to county statistics, the number of people who receive mental health services has declined by 6 percent. The number of people who receive substance abuse services has decreased by 13 percent, although the number of people who receive services for intellectual disabilities has increased 17 percent.

“People with severe mental illness are the least able to afford services, and they are in most need of them,” said Ann Wroth, a member of the Arlington Community Services Board. “But there isn’t as much money coming from any place for people to receive mental health services.”

Alexandria is the only local government that has actually increased services offered through its community services board since the Great Recession. According to statistics provided by city officials, the number of people who receive mental health services actually increased 7 percent since 2009, and the number of people with intellectual disabilities has increased 6 percent in that time. And even though the number of people who receive drug and alcohol services has declined by 38 percent, city officials say the decline represents a change to how the numbers are reported. Since 2010, they say, the number no longer includes individuals who receive “limited” services, which are now considered outside the program area.

“The state of Virginia never funded very well to begin with, which is why we rank 47th,” said Mary Anne Weber, former chairwoman of the Alexandria Community Services Board. “And the local governments have to make up the difference.”

FAIRFAX COUNTY officials say a number of factors have contributed to the steep decline in recent years. One is methodological. Fairfax County leaders say people who receive emergency mental health services are no longer counted in the statistics, which may explain some of the decline in the count of those who receive mental health services.

“We have reorganized,” said Laura Yager, director of the partnerships and resources development. “We are trying to make our data more accurate.”

A more immediate explanation for the decline is financial. As state leaders struggled to balance the books during a time of declining revenues, funding for community services boards across Virginia were some of the first to take a hit. People who are the most vulnerable and least able to help themselves are facing the new economic reality with fewer services, especially in places like Fairfax County. Unlike Arlington and Alexandria, Fairfax land values are less recession proof.

“The impact of the recession was felt for a shorter period of time, particularly in the commercial sector, in those two jurisdictions than in Fairfax,” said Woods. “And that shows.”

Shortly after the Virginia Tech massacre in 2007, a commission recommended that more than $40 million in additional spending be added to the mental-health budget every year. Legislators took a first step by adding about $30 million to the annual budget the first year, but then the economic downturn tight-

Representing Students on School Board

Harris LaTeef named student representative to Fairfax County School Board.

Harris LaTeef, a junior at Langley High School, has been elected by the countywide Student Advisory Council (SAC) to serve a one-year term as student representative to the Fairfax County School Board, beginning July 1. LaTeef will participate in School Board meetings as a nonvoting member, filling the position currently held by Will Ashe, a senior at Thomas Jefferson High School for Science and Technology. LaTeef will be the 44th student representative to the School Board.

LaTeef said he sought the job as student representative because, as a young FCPS student, he saw “firsthand what one student can accomplish” when he takes the initiative. When he was a third grade student at Colvin Run Elementary School, he started a petition to nominate his bus driver, Nancy Gunderman, as Fairfax County Public Schools (FCPS) Support Employee of the Year. Gunderman’s knack of making the rides to and from school “an exciting learning experience through her use of games, prizes, and even the occasional in-bus movie” made her the ideal candidate for the award. When she was named a finalist, then-principal Sandra Furick was asked to speak about Gunderman to the FCPS Leadership Team, but Furick asked LaTeef to speak instead. Gunderman was named the 2006 Support Employee of the Year, the first bus driver to receive the award. LaTeef accompanied her to a School Board meeting, where she received her award, and was able to meet Board members and then-Superintendent Jack D. Dale.

LaTeef cited three issues as being critical for FCPS students: reducing any negative effects of budget cuts on students; amending high school start times; and ensuring that any changes to the district’s disciplinary policy is “just, yet firm when addressing serious infractions.”

At Langley, LaTeef is co-chairman of the Relay for Life fundraiser for the American Cancer Society, which has a personal connection for him. He manages and organizes meetings for the 40-member committee, helps publicize events, and incorporates student suggestions into the program. LaTeef also serves as director of public relations for The Saxon Scope, Langley High’s newsmagazine and website; is on the student advisory team of the Newseum; and volunteers at the Reston Hospital Center maternity and surgical waiting wing. He has taken honors and Advanced Placement (AP) courses and is currently enrolled in AP Microeconomics and AP Macroeconomics, AP U.S. History, A.P. # Petition Halts Senior Housing Development at Cornwell Farm

More than 700 people signed an online petition to stop plans to build senior housing on the historic property.

BY ETHAN MCLEOD
THE CONNECTION

An outpouring of opposition from the Great Falls community quickly halted a developer's application to purchase and re-zone the historic Cornwell Farm Property on Monday, Feb. 3.

Clark Realty had proposed building 39 senior living residences on 20 acres of land on and around the property. But in a matter of days, over 700 community residents signed an online petition, titled "Oppose Zoning and Cluster Development of historic Cornwell Farm Property," and the developer withdrew its application the following week.

"It's really heartening to see how much passion there is from people who have lived in Great Falls from all over the world," said Dr. Jonathon Merrill, president of the Cornwell Farm Homeowners Association.

Petitioners blocked a developer's plan to re-zone and build higher-density senior housing on the historic Cornwell Farm property.

The homeowners association represents the interests of Great Falls residents whose homes border Cornwell Farm, a 13.1-acre property listed on the National Registry of Historic Places since 1977.

Chief among petitioners' reasons for opposing the development proposal were the contrary notion of higher-density housing for the largely rural community, potential congestion on nearby Georgetown Pike, and detrimental environment effects to Potomac Watershed areas. In addition to Georgetown Pike's designated status as a historic byway, meaning it cannot be widened, Great Falls relies on well water as a community. Petitioners said that their land and water supplies would be put at risk by this type of higher-density development.

When Clark Realty submitted their application for development of the property to Fairfax County, Supervisor John Foust (D-Dranesville) replied that it would be a very controversial plan to run by community residents. "Our approach is that when someone comes in with an application like this, we send them out to the surrounding community to get feedback," said Foust.

Shortly after Clark Realty began seeking community feedback, Foust said he received a number of emails from concerned residents and saw the petition signatures grow by the hundreds over several days. The supervisor's office received an email a few days later from a Clark Realty attorney saying that they decided to withdraw and discontinue their application in favor of exploring alternate sites.

Despite the withdrawal of its development application, Clark Realty is still looking for potential locations to build housing for seniors in Great Falls.

Robert Lundegard, a Great Falls

resident and alternative housing proponent, said that there is an unmet need for alternate housing for the community's senior population. "The problem is the absence of solid documentation on the need," said Lundegard. "Neighbors and homeowners will always resist higher density construction next door. In the absence of democratic procedures or solid professional surveys of the 5000 homes in Great Falls we do not know what the larger community wants."

The Great Falls Senior Center, established in 2012, could serve as a voice for advocates of alternate housing for seniors in Great Falls, according to Lundegard.

While support for alternative housing options remains unaccounted for, Clark Realty will continue to explore other locations for its development plans. Cornwell Farm, however, has been ruled out of the equation.

"People want to enjoy horse riding land, arts, and nature. That type of development would have been a fundamental change in the character of the community," said Merrill.

ened spending. Funding levels fell down to where they were before the massacre. In the last two years, some funding has been added back. But the commission's financial recommendation remains unfulfilled.

"What we have to do is to make sure that we are providing as comprehensive a set of services as we can to help people with mental illness stabilize themselves," said state Sen. George Barker (D-39). "We need to help them get on the road to recovery so they can manage their situation as best as they can and hopefully never get to that crisis."

Now the issue has taken a new sense of immediacy. Late last year, state Sen. Creigh Deeds (D-25) was stabbed in the face by his son, who later committed suicide. Although the senator was able to get an emergency custody order for his son, it expired before a psychiatric bed could be located the rural western part of the state. That tragedy has prompted a new discussion about mental health in Virginia, one that will culminate at the end of the General Assembly session when lawmakers put the final touches on the budget.

"I certainly can't believe that the need is less," said Weber. "Not when we see the statistics about suicides in the military for example."

On Mental Health

Why are localities providing so much less for people who need mental health services?

While the General Assembly is making progress in fixing some of the egregious shortcomings of the way Virginia provides emergency services to people in mental health crisis, many fewer people are receiving mental health services in Northern Virginia.

State Sen. Creigh Deeds' son died of suicide late last year after the limitations in both the law and local communication resulted in him being released while still in the midst of crisis.

Deeds reports the progress on the bill that has passed the State Senate: "The omnibus bill will require subjects be held up to 24 hours under an emergency custody order, create a database of available psychiatric beds, and ensure people in need of hospitalization cannot be 'streeted' by establishing state hospitals as providers of last resort."

These are important steps.

Services to people with mental illness are provided on the local level by community services boards, and in Fairfax County in particular, those services have been dramatically cut back.

Reporter Michael Pope reports this week that since 2009, the number of people receiving mental health services in Fairfax County has declined by 39 percent. Alcohol and drug service have dropped 43 percent. Services for those with intellectual disability have declined 39 percent.

Officials quoted cite the recession and declining property tax revenues in explaining the reductions, along with some changes in the way services are counted.

EDITORIAL

No matter how services are counted, there is no question that they have been reduced significantly during a recession, a time when research shows the need for mental health services and alcohol and drug services actually increases.

In Arlington, the number of people who receive mental health services has declined by 6 percent. The number of people who receive substance abuse services has decreased by 13 percent.

"Stresses associated with rising unemployment, poverty and social insecurity will lead to upward trends in many national suicide rates, as well as to less readily charted increases in the prevalence of psychiatric illness, alcohol-related disorders and illicit drug use," according to a 2011 overview study on economic recession and mental health cited by the National Institutes of Health. "At the same time, mental health services are being cut back as part of government austerity programs. Budget cuts will thus affect psychiatric services adversely just when economic stressors are raising the levels of need and demand in affected populations."

As for blaming the budget, it's hard to see from raw numbers why the most vulnerable should be suffering.

In 2009, before the effects of the recession, Fairfax County's budget expenditures were $5.36 billion.

The adopted 2014 budget calls for expenditures of $6.75 billion.

"Proactive fiscal and social policies could, however, help to mitigate the health consequences of recession," the overview study reports. "Economic mental health care could best be achieved, not by decimating services but by planning and deploying these to meet the needs of defined area populations."

Elected officials and others in county government who have signed off on a set of priorities that punishes the most vulnerable populations have some moral accounting to do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

It Takes a Village

To the Editor:

The article in the Great Falls Connection ["Going Dark?" January 22-28, 2014] hit home with me. I remember the 1984 Great Falls Volunteer Fire Department Fourth of July Fireworks on the field behind the Great Falls Post Office — the last fireworks held in the Great Falls town centre. The neighboring Hickory Vale farm was being developed with new homes, and it was no longer safe to shoot off the fireworks display there. The skies remained dark on the Fourth of July in Great Falls until 1996, when I was a member of the "Save the Farm" organization at the Turner farm. I thought it would be nice to bring back the Great Falls Fourth of July Fireworks and light up the skies again. So for the next couple years, I personally paid for the fireworks. I asked many of my friends to help work the gates, be the security, prepare the parking, and bring the music and rides. We had a great time, and many Great Falls residents enjoyed those evenings.

I like fireworks, but even more I like small town America. Small town makes me feel good. I like knowing my neighbors and waving at people as I drive down the road. I love the feeling of our community. We have a very special place here. But, I am getting a little worried about our community. I don't see the next generation of community volunteers stepping up to keep the "Great" in Great Falls. When I was in my 20s, 30s, 40s and even now as I am well into my 50s, I have given countless hours of volunteering to many different organizations to help keep our "community" feeling. Many others have done the same for years. But we long-time volunteers are aging, and I see many of our established Great Falls civic organizations struggling to find new volunteers. We need help, we need to begin passing the torch. The question is to whom? Who will be the next stewards of our community? Who will make sure that the special feeling that we know and love will be there for the next generation? Or will the flame of the torch go out?

There is a real question as to whether the Fourth of July fireworks will continue, given the lack of volunteers to carry the event forward, but to me the even bigger question is, who will watch over this community so we don't turn into just another town? Who will run the community events? Great Falls has no paid employees;

Great Falls is run by volunteers — people who care! We receive no financial support from Fairfax County, we work on donations. We need your help.

How can you make a difference? Join a community organization and volunteer.

All of the Great Falls' organizations need help. You can try Celebrate Great Falls, Great Falls Citizens Association, Great Falls Optimists, Great Falls Rotary, Great Falls Historical Society, Great Falls Friends and Newcomers, Friends of Riverbend, Friends of Colvin Run Mill, Great Falls Garden Club, Friends of the Great Falls Library, the Annalemma Society and Great Falls Trail Blazers, to name just a few.

I'm getting tired now. Please don't let the torch go out!

More on 'Wrong Direction'

To the Editor:

I enjoyed both recent letters written to the Connection re "Development Taking Wrong Direction." I have lived in Great Falls since 1974, 40 years this coming November. I have watched this small rural community change in many ways that are not all for the better - sidewalks being the most recent.

When I moved to Great Falls in 1974 there were no shopping centers, restaurants and sidewalks like McLean, Reston and Vienna. Great Falls had "Bucks Feed Store" and it was the only shopping. If one wanted shopping, restaurants and/or a library one drove all of 4 miles to Reston. However, as people moved out of Reston, Vienna and McLean for the rural life the first thing they wanted to do is make Great Falls like the place they were moving away from. Sidewalks are just the next step in that change towards Reston or McLean.

Next people will want Fairfax county water and sewer, which the developers will love as it will allow for high-density development with apartments, condos, and townhouses. No one should be surprised with the sidewalks as just another step to a Reston - I am not surprised.

THE CONNECTION

Langley High School theater students' months of hard work paid off on Saturday, Feb. 8, when they placed third in the 2014 VHSL 6A North Region One Act Play Festival at Lake Braddock Secondary School. Langley won the Conference 6 championship on Jan. 25, securing the school's first ever appearance in the regional competition, along with runner-up Washington-Lee High School from Arlington.

The 16-person cast performed "Fearful Symmetry," a one-act play written by Alan Haehnel about a young girl named Mary who is presented with a box that will allow her to escape poverty, but will kill a stranger somewhere around the world if she presses the button. The play takes place in four different countries, with four different Marys all struggling with the opportunity for wealth in exchange for taking a stranger's life.

Seniors Madeleine Chalk, Rachel Mayman, Kathleen Welch and freshman Jamie Goodson played the lead roles of Mary, directed by senior Jamie Joeyen-Waldorf. All five members received honorable mentions from the judges in the regional competition, with Welch also receiving a nomination for Outstanding Female Performance.

"This year's theater department had a lot of strong females, and the play lent itself to star female characters," said Joeyen-Waldorf. "I just knew that our department would do very well with it. It's a unique piece that's not done very often at competitions."

Returning champion West Springfield High School placed first and Chantilly High School took second in the regional competition. Top honors for Outstanding Male Performance and Outstanding Female Performance went to Austin Morrison (West Springfield High School) and Brooke Johnson (Chantilly High School). Eight schools competed, with five of them performing plays directed by students. Saxon Stage parent Susan Mayman noted that was an unusually high number — showing the strength of the theater talent in Northern Virginia high schools.

At the end of the competition, judges provided detailed feedback to all eight of the schools, praising them for their strengths and suggesting areas of improvement.

They praised Saxon Stage for their "wonderful ensemble work" and "fantastic use of silhouettes, miming and symmetry."

"It's great to see that high school theater is alive and well in Northern Virginia," said judge Carolyn Agan.

"All of the shows were amazing. It's such a large spectrum of talent, but really it's about all of us coming from different schools and being together for theater," said senior Rachel Mayman, who played the Russian version of Mary.

"I'm very excited they got recognized for their hard work," said Langley Theater department director Valerie Karasek. "When you have kids with this caliber of talent all you've got to do is bring your passion, provide opportunities, give a little bit of guidance and leadership, and the rest takes care of itself."

Home Design: What the Pros Know

A look inside the homes of some of the area's top builders.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

Remodeling industry professionals spend their days helping clients create dream homes, adding quartzite counter tops and outdoor, stacked stone fireplaces, turning ideas and photos into functional, chic living spaces.

But what about their homes? What materials do they choose for themselves? How do they make the most of their living spaces? Three local professionals from BOWA Builders, Inc. opened their doors and shared the secrets of their renovations.

When principal and owner George Hodges-Fulton and his wife, Alexandra, decided to remodel the galley kitchen in their Reston home, they decided to expand and change the flow of traffic, keeping the safety of their 6- and 10-year-old daughters in mind.

"We wanted to open the house up more," said George. "We took out a wall between kitchen and the dining room."

Alexandra, a serious cook, added, "The sink and the stove were across from each other. Now the sink and the stove are next to each other, so I don't have to walk across the kitchen carrying hot pasta."

Plus, the new farmhouse sink is custom-made from honed granite. "I originally wanted soapstone, but over time that can scratch," Alexandra said.

The new kitchen also includes additional counter space. "I have more prep space," she said. "And everything I need is within arm's reach."

When it came to choosing finishes, "everything came from wanting to work with the [existing maple] floor," said George. "We wanted to choose classic colors that weren't going to go out of style."

"I spent a huge amount of time looking at pictures of kitchens," said Alexandra. "We added white Carrara marble countertops. ... We added a marble backsplash in a black, white and grey circular mosaic. That's the thing that everybody comments on when they come into the kitchen."

The project took a mere five weeks to complete. "Everything happened perfectly," added George. "Having on-site supervision and knowing the end goal helped."

George says that having undergone his own renovation project, he now has additional insight when advising clients. "It makes a significant difference," he said. "We can say 'In my house I did this.' or 'I did this wrong in my house, so you might consider this.'"

When principal and owner Steve Kirstein first moved into his Potomac, Md., home with his wife and three children, he spotted several missed design opportunities. "We needed some of the spaces to do different things," said Kirstein. "We wanted a family gathering space and a display space upstairs."

The home had a two-story foyer, which Kirstein saw as the perfect location for a second floor family room. He added "flooring, sheetrock walls, built-in bookcases and display cases. Now it's a gathering space for the family upstairs and we still have a dramatic foyer downstairs."

Next, Kirstein turned what he called, "a big wasted space" adjacent to the garage into a mudroom. "We put a cubby and drawer for each child and a bench for taking off shoes. We added a half wall across from the cubbies so you can't see all of the cleats and lacrosse sticks all over the floor. We also added a powder room."

Kirstein also transformed his backyard into an oasis. "We added a pool and entertaining area," he said. "We redid every finish in the house. I liked those small touches because they were simple and easy and changed the way the house looked."

Founder, cochairman and owner Josh Baker grew up in Great Falls and when it came time to raise his family, he remained there. He even built a custom home where

Make A Difference in Your Community!

Run for a seat on the McLean Community Center Governing Board

PUBLIC NOTICE OF ELECTIONS

McLEAN COMMUNITY CENTER GOVERNING BOARD SMALL DISTRICT 1A OF THE DRANESVILLE DISTRICT FAIRFAX COUNTY, VIRGINIA

This NOTICE of elections to select members of the 2014-2015 Governing Board of the McLean Community Center (MCC) is officially given to residents of Small District 1A of the Dranesville District, Fairfax County, Virginia (referred to as "Small District 1A"). The McLean Community Center operates as a Special District Agency of the Fairfax County Government through a Memorandum of Understanding between the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors and MCC. On February 8, 1984, the Board of Supervisors approved the Memorandum of Understanding, which authorizes the elections. The MCC is funded by residents of Greater McLean for their use through a real estate tax surcharge, the result of a 1970 Small District 1A bond referendum.

Elections are held on McLean Day at Lewinsville Park, 1659 Chain Bridge Road, McLean, Virginia. This year, McLean Day is on Saturday, May 17, 2014.

Voting on McLean Day takes place from 10:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Only Small District 1A residents are eligible to run for seats on the 11-member Governing Board and to vote in the election. Residents are not required to be property owners in Small District 1A in order to run for the Governing Board or to vote in the election.

Candidate Qualifications: Each resident who lives within Small District 1A is eligible to run for a seat on the Governing Board within the appropriate category. (If you need help determining whether you reside in Small District 1A, please contact the Center at 703-744-9348 or elections@mcleancenter.org.)

The Governing Board seats to be filled through the election are:

Three (3) Adult Governing Board Seats: Adult candidates must be residents of Small District 1A and must be at least eighteen (18) years of age on McLean Day. The candidates who receive the three (3) highest numbers of votes will serve three-year terms on the Governing Board.

Two (2) Youth Governing Board Seats:

One (1) Governing Board youth seat for teens living within the McLean High School boundary area

One (1) Governing Board youth seat for teens living within the Langley High School boundary area

Teen candidates must live in Small District 1A and must be between fifteen (15) and seventeen (17) years of age on McLean Day. One candidate from each high school boundary area receiving the highest number of votes will serve a one-year term on the Governing Board. High school boundaries are set by the Fairfax County Public Schools. You can find your high school boundary area by entering your home address in the Fairfax County Public Schools' boundary tool at <http://boundary.fcps.edu/boundary>.

NOTICE TO TEENS: You must live within Small District 1A. However, you do not have to attend either McLean or Langley high schools. You may attend another school, including one that is outside of Small District 1A, or you may be home schooled.

In some cases, you may live within the boundary of one of the two high schools, but attend school in the other high school boundary. For example, you could attend McLean High School, but live in the Langley High School boundary, or vice versa.

You must run for the youth board seat for the high school boundary area where you live.

Remember: No matter where you attend school, you must still live within Small District 1A and run for election in the correct high school boundary area. (If you need help, please contact the McLean Community Center at 703-744-9348 or elections@mcleancenter.org.)

Candidate Petitions: Nominating Petitions may be obtained at the McLean Community Center, 1234 Ingleside Avenue, McLean, Virginia, 22101, beginning at 9 a.m. on Tuesday, February 18, 2014.

Adults seeking to become candidates for a seat on the Governing Board must get the signatures of ten (10) residents of Small District 1A who are 18 years old or older (on McLean Day). Teens seeking to become candidates for a youth seat on the Governing Board must get the signatures of ten (10) residents of Small District 1A who are between 15 to 17 years old (on McLean Day), and who live within the same high school boundary area as the candidate lives.

DEADLINE: Each resident seeking election to the Governing Board shall file a completed petition with the MCC at the address shown below by 5 p.m. on Friday, March 28, 2014:

McLean Community Center, 1234 Ingleside Avenue, McLean, VA 22101

All petitions will be certified by Friday, March 28, 2014; candidates will be notified whether their petitions have been certified by that date. The names of certified candidates will be published in newspapers having general circulation in the Dranesville District.

Voter Qualifications: Each resident who lives within Small District 1A is eligible to vote in the Governing Board elections (within the adult or youth categories, as appropriate).

When voting in the elections, the qualifications are:

Adults: Any Small District 1A resident who is eighteen (18) years of age or older on McLean Day is eligible to vote in the elections. Adults may vote for up to three (3) adult candidates.

Teens: Any resident who is fifteen (15) through seventeen (17) years of age on McLean Day is eligible to vote in the elections. Teens may vote for one youth candidate from each high school boundary area (but not for two candidates in the same high school boundary area).

High school students who turn 18 on or before McLean Day must vote as adults and may not vote for youth candidates.

Verification of age and residence shall be determined from a driver's license, student identification card, birth certificate, or other satisfactory evidence. A verification process also is required for residents choosing to apply for absentee voting.

Absentee Voting: Residents may vote by absentee ballot. Applications for Absentee Ballot packages will be available at the McLean Community Center, 1234 Ingleside Avenue, McLean, Virginia, 22101 beginning on Monday, April 14, 2014 at 9 a.m. Applications for Absentee Ballot packages may be requested in-person, by email at elections@mcleancenter.org, and by telephone at 703-744-9348. Please also refer to the Center's Website for updated information regarding the absentee voting process (www.mcleancenter.org). The DEADLINE for returning a completed and signed Application for Absentee Ballot and the Absentee Ballot to the MCC is Wednesday, May 14, 2014, at 5 p.m.

Election Results: Election results will be posted on the door of the McLean Community Center on the evening of the elections. The McLean Community Center's Elections & Nominations Committee will report the results of the elections to Dranesville Supervisor John W. Foust, who will present the successful candidates to the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors at its next regular meeting following the elections. At that meeting, the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors, after determining that it is in the public interest to do so, shall appoint to the McLean Community Center Governing Board:

The three (3) adult candidates who received the top three (3) highest number of votes

Two (2) youth candidates – the candidate who received the highest number of votes in each of the two (2) high school boundary areas

The appointment of new Board Members shall be effective upon action by the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors. Newly appointed Board Members will take office when they attend their first meeting of the 2014-2015 Governing Board. The 2014-2015 Governing Board's term runs from May 2014 through May 2015.

An Inspired Production

'Souvenir: A Fantasia on the Life of Florence Foster Jenkins' at 1st Stage.

BY DAVID SIEGEL
THE CONNECTION

With a masterful performance by Lee Mikeska Gardner, an eccentric woman is made thoroughly sympathetic, even noble in an exceptional production of "Souvenir: A Fantasia on the Life of Florence Foster Jenkins" at 1st Stage in Tysons.

What could have been a cruel, campy dig at a now long-gone, off-key, real life heiress becomes a lovely, off-center, treasure under the direction of Jay D. Brock. The two-actor play and incidental music were written by Stephen Temperley.

"Souvenir" is seen through the eyes of Cosme McMoon, the musical accompanist of Mrs. Jenkins. The story line is about Jenkins, who "fancied herself a coloratura soprano but was in fact incapable of producing two consecutive notes in tune" as 1st Stage described her. Her actual concerts with pianist McMoon in the 1930s and '40s included a legendary appearance at Carnegie Hall in 1944. Over the dozen years that two were together, they became the talk of New York City. In their own way they became cult figures. They even cut records.

Gardner's performance as Florence Foster Jenkins has a golden sweetness to it. For some the fictional television character Edith Bunker may come to immediate memory. Gardner's work includes a manufactured, cringe worthy, screech of a singing voice. This is no easy feat. She acts totally unaware of her horrendous singing, no matter what the reaction of her on-stage partner or the real audience.

As played by Brian Keith MacDonald, McMoon is an understated chivalric, protector. He knows how badly Jenkins sings but comes to admire her drive to perform. He becomes smitten and loyal.

The jazz tune "Crazy Rhythm" is used often as a lovely framing device as McMoon tells the story of his musical partnership with Jenkins. "Souvenir" has a minimalist set design by Mark Krikstan, with a grand piano at center stage. Costumes by Yvette M. Ryan are a feast for the eyes. The sheer number and quality of Gardner's outfits are a joy.

What Jenkins heard inside her own head, we will never know. But "Souvenir" is a mellow production, even with its comical portrait of a tone-deaf singer with lived her mantra "what matters most is the music you hear in your head."

Playwright Temperley wrote, "the play explores the difference between the way we see ourselves and the way the rest of the world sees us." Yes, a diamond to see.

Oakton Gymnastics Team Qualifies For Regional Meet

Herndon freshman Bradley advances in all-around competition.

BY JON ROETMAN
THE CONNECTION

The Oakton gymnastics team entered the Conference 5 meet with the smallest roster of the six competing schools. The Cougars performed well in multiple events, but failed to have an individual advance to regionals in the all-around.

None of it stopped Oakton from reaching regionals.

The Cougars finished runner-up at the conference meet on Feb. 6 at Centreville High School, securing one of two team region berths. Oakton had the top score on bars and had the second-best score on beam.

"We feel that's where we differ from a lot of teams, especially being the smallest squad in our conference," Oakton coach Frankie Orbacz wrote in an email. "Everyone has a ton of talent and everyone contributed equally to our fantastic team score. Most other teams have a few standouts that lead the team and sweep the medals, but we really have so much talent in every girl. We are very well-rounded. Standings-wise, four of our eight girls medaled and placed, which means half of our team would have advanced to regions if we hadn't made it as a team. We were so impressed! That's a pretty fantastic showing."

SOPHOMORE NATALIE WEAVER was Oakton's top individual performer. She placed fifth in the all-around with a score of 34.475, including a second-place tie on beam (9), a fourth-place finish on bars (8.55) and an eight-place tie on floor (8.375).

"Natalie, as always, pulled off a near-flawless night," Orbacz wrote. "We felt she was underscored on floor but regardless of that, she was still successful. She was one rank away from placing in all-around. With the talent that was there, that is a huge accomplishment. Our conference is very close and has many great high-level gymnasts, and we feel that Natalie is right up in the mix with them, despite placing fifth."

Oakton sophomore Amanda Gore tied for fifth on vault (8.7) and freshman Stephanie Weir finished fifth on bars (8.5). Junior Nathalia Rojas tied for fifth on beam (8.8).

Robinson won the team championship with a score of 135.4. Oakton finished second with a score of 132.575, followed by Westfield (130.575), Chantilly (129.65), Herndon (122.45) and Centreville (105.375).

"They definitely performed very well today," Robinson head coach Charlotte Edwards said. "They were more consistent than they normally are. ... We're definitely peaking at the right time."

It was Robinson's second conference/district title in the last three years (2012).

IN THE ALL-AROUND COMPETITION, the final results surprised

Herndon's Alexa Bradley. She had a strong effort on bars and gave an adequate performance on floor, but from an all-around standpoint, the freshman gymnast knew she could have done better.

While she had reason to doubt, Bradley's performance proved strong enough to earn her an all-around berth in the regional meet.

Bradley tied for third in the all-around, totaling a score of 34.5. The top four all-around competitors advance to regionals, along with any other gymnast who produces a score of 35 or better.

Bradley placed second on vault (9.05) and bars (8.825), fifth on floor (8.575) and 15th on beam (8.05). The top eight in each event secure a regional berth, along with any other gymnast who scores a 9 or better.

the all-around," Bradley said. ... "I knew I was going to make it to some events, but top four for all-around is really surprising because I didn't do my best."

Herndon sophomore Shannon Kelly will join Bradley at the 6A North region meet on Feb. 12 at Lake Braddock. Kelly qualified on floor with a fourth-place finish (8.725), and on vault, tying for fifth (8.7).

Westfield senior Katie Freix won the all-around with a score of 36.925. She placed first on floor (9.525), vault (9.5) and bars (9.1), and finished in a fifth-place tie on beam (8.8).

"I had probably close to my best performance," Freix said, "except for beam."

Robinson freshman Caroline Burda finished second in the all-around (34.9) and Rams senior Sarah Gross tied for third (34.5).

Colvin Run ES Students Head Drive to 'Stop Hunger Now'

Langley pyramid community came together to package 87,696 meals for the hungry.

PHOTOS BY DONNA MANZ/THE CONNECTION

The Langley pyramid community came together on Feb. 8 at Colvin Run Elementary School to "stop hunger now." Students and families from throughout the Langley pyramid, with cooperation of Vienna-area students, packaged 87,696 meals during the 7-1/2 hour volunteer day. "Stop Hunger Now" representatives supervised the production and boarded the boxed meal-packs into the nonprofit's trucks. "Stop Hunger Now" is an international humanitarian nonprofit engaged in global hunger relief programs and crisis response.

This is the third year that Colvin Run ES headed the assembly-line packing project.

Six-year-old Kevin Martell understood completely why he was there with his family volunteering. "To help feed people who aren't fortunate-enough to have food," he said.

Colvin Run ES students raised $1,386 themselves by doing chores at home, an "earn and learn" program. The children made and sold handcrafted aprons and ceramic bowls that netted $600. The school had raised more than $20,000 as of Saturday morning.

The project host raises the funds needed to pay for the ingredients that "Stop Hunger Now" supplies. The nonprofit uses an assembly-line production in which each volunteer has an ingredient task. Uniform scooping of each ingredient assures nutritional composition, and every package is weighed for consistency of product.

The assembly process combines rice, soy, dehydrated vegetables and a flavoring mix that includes 21 essential vitamins and minerals into individual meal packages that will feed four. The meal packages are shipped around the world to support school feeding programs and crisis relief. The meal units have a shelf-life of two years.

Schools, faith communities and civic clubs pack thousands of the meals every year.

An Unexpected Present

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Not that I minded it in the least (in fact, I appreciated it in the most), but I received my first senior discount the other day. I was fast-forwarding at my local Roy Rogers restaurant when the unexpected kindness occurred. Considering that I'm not at the age yet when such discounts are typically available, I certainly did not (do not) presume that my appearance somehow reflects an age which I am not. In truth, I don't believe it does. So even though I didn't ask for the age-related discount, I was offered/given it nonetheless. As the cashier tallied my bill, she then spoke the price and adjusted it downward 10 percent for my surprise "senior" discount. On hearing the lower price and the reason for it, I immediately responded: "Oh, you're giving senior discounts to people over 40?" To which she replied, while looking me directly in the eye: "No. Over 30." Laughing at her quick-thinking quip, I thanked her again for the discount and commended her on her excellent answer/customer service.

Without making this too much a cancer column, a terminal diagnosis at age 54 and a half sort of means that certain realities, benefits and inevitabilities (if you live long enough, which after receiving my diagnosis/prognosis seemed unlikely) are off the table; heck they're likely on the floor waiting to be swept up and placed in the trash bin (been and gone, you might say). I refer generally to the kinds of things associated with turning 65: retirement, Social Security, Medicare, and of course, "senior discounts." After hearing what I heard, reaching age 55 seemed challenging enough.

To be honest though, and you regular readers know I'm honest, maybe painfully so; after receiving the incredibly discouraging and grim news concerning my diagnosis from my oncologist five years ago, I didn't really think about the parts of my life that I would be missing since my future was, at that point, seriously in doubt. If I recall, my mindset back then wasn't on the future I was losing because of my disease, it was more about the present that I was living and being as proactive as possible to try and live as long as I could. Moreover, given the rather morbid tone I was hearing from my oncologist, it sounded as if I'd be lucky to have a present, let alone a future. A "13-month to two-year prognosis" (out of the blue no less; I was asymptomatic and a life-long non-smoker) followed by an admission from my doctor that he can't "cure me, but he can treat me;" and a further reply to my wife Dina's query as to why there aren't any parades for lung cancer survivors, as there seem to be for breast cancer survivors: "Because there aren't any" (survivors that is) hardly reinforce a lung cancer patient's future prospects.

Yet here I write, nearly five years post-diagnosis, receiving the previously (given my life expectancy) unimaginable senior discount. And though there are likely fewer guarantees now and even less certainty for a stage IV, non-small cell lung cancer survivor five years out and still living, I don't discount the significance of any discounts. At this juncture, I deserve any I can get. Besides, I think I've earned them.

Pros Share Secrets of Their Homes' Design

he plans to live long-term. "A lot of planning went into the future," said Baker. "The concept behind it was we would create a fun space for our children that their children could eventually enjoy."

He advises his clients to similarly plan ahead and think about how their needs might evolve. "To make it a long-term home is to not think about just what you need now, but what you might need in the future," he said. "We designed a guest suite on the first floor with the idea that my wife and I could live on one floor once we're empty nesters." There is enough space for friends and extended family.

Baker said each time he and his wife updated the house, they did so judiciously. "We made smart decisions about small things that make a big difference. For example, we changed tiles to make it up-to-date without a huge remodel," he said.

Baker's experience as a builder helped him decide on the room sizes and layout of the house. "In terms of design, a lot of our house has a focus on lines of sight, informality and lots of light. ... On our first floor, there are no partition walls in the common area."

The rooms in the house are generous and comfortable and space was used wisely, Baker explained. "We focused on the feeling and functionality of the room rather than the size of the room," he said. "None of the rooms are oversized, but they are functional."

Wise use of space is another lesson he shares with clients. "At one time, bedrooms with sitting rooms were very popular," said Baker. "But ... a lot of our clients don't use them so we're repurposing those spaces. In our master bedroom, for example, we focused on walk-in closets. Even our master bathroom is spacious, but it is not vast."

The Bakers designed their outdoor landscape to accommodate their penchant for relaxed entertaining. "We're informal folks," said Baker. "We like to entertain, so we developed our landscaping to include an expansive entertaining area and a swimming pool. We have a lot of outdoor parties. We can accommodate a large group in our yard as well."
