‘I Like Gliding Across the Ice’

Vienna teen competing in synchronized ice skating Nationals.

BY BONNIE HOBBS
THE CONNECTION

Vienna’s Ceci Picard isn’t an Olympian, but she is an accomplished ice skater. And on Feb. 27, she and her teammates will compete in the Synchronized Skating National Competition in Colorado Springs.

The Madison High freshman is one of five girls from Fairfax County on the 15-member Team Ashburn. They skate at the Intermediate Level – the U.S. Figure Skating Assn.’s most competitive level. And this is the first time an Intermediate team from the Washington Metropolitan area has made Nationals.

“I am so excited,” said Picard, 15. “We want to go out there and show them what we’ve got. We’ve made a name for ourselves within the skating community, but never had a team that competed well enough to qualify for Nationals until this season.”

AS A SOLO ICE DANCER, she’s made Nationals twice, but synchronized skating is completely different. Skating since age 7, Picard practices with her team eight hours each weekend, and before or after school on weekdays.

“I like gliding across the ice,” she said. “The feeling of the blade on the ice is just so cool. I never wanted to do jumps – they scared me. In synchro, we all have the exact same goal. The other teams in our organization cheer for us in the stands, and we’re like role models for the younger skaters. I also help coach a team for ages 7-9.”

In synchronized skating, team members skate to music in unison while demonstrating their teamwork, speed and ability to perform intricate formations and challenging step sequences. Comprised of girls ages 13-18, this Intermediate-level team is the top group at Ashburn. To compete on it, members typically have more than six years skating experience and have passed various tests set by U.S. Figure Skating.

Picard likes being part of a team because, she explained, “I never liked being out there skating all by myself. There’s a lot of pressure on individuals; if you mess up, it’s all on you. But if something goes wrong in synchro, we can compensate for it because there are 14 other girls skating around you. And it’s like a family – we all support each other and do everything together.”

Regarding Nationals, she said, “I knew that if we ever made it, this would be the year, because this team just works so hard and meshes so well together. We’ve been really dedicated since we got our team choreography in June.”

The season goes from June-February, but competitions began in November. Team Ashburn competed in three Massachusetts venues, but it was a Jan. 31 competition in Hershey, Pa., that sent it to Nationals. “We had to watch 10 other teams skate, and then wait for the results – it was awful,” said Picard. “When we found out we made it, we were all crying, screaming and hugging each other. It was like a weight lifted from us.”

THE TOP FOUR TEAMS from each of the Eastern, Midwest and Pacific sections of the U.S. will vie at Nationals. “We’ll do one routine to a medley from the TV show, ‘So You Think You Can Dance,’” said Picard. “We’ll skate to a swing song, a sway song and Jennifer Lopez’s ‘On the Floor.’”

“I think we can finish in the top of the standings,” she said. “But just getting to Nationals is so good for our organization. It makes even more girls want to join it and advance to the Intermediate team.”

Vienna Seeks Feedback from Town Residents

The town will conduct a survey on its programs and services.

BY BONNIE HOBBS
CENTRE VIEW

The Town of Vienna wants to see how well it’s doing, so it’s going to survey some of its residents to find out. Toward that end, it contracted this month with ETC Institute to do the deed.

“It’ll be the Town’s first statistically valid, community-wide survey,” said Town spokeswoman Kirstyn Barr. “It’s intended to obtain citizens’ satisfaction levels with town services and programs. We’ll also be able to compare ourselves to similar-sized towns.”

She explained the details during the Feb. 3 Vienna Town Council meeting. If town officials know how happy – or not – residents are with the town’s offerings, they can determine whether it’s delivering services in the most effective manner.

Vienna will then be able to use the survey results as a tool during its budgeting and strategic-planning processes. This written survey is to be conducted every other year and will not include commercial businesses and other non-residential institutions. Only people living within the Town limits will be eligible to participate.

ETC will work with Vienna to develop the survey, which will be about four pages long. It will also distribute the survey to a random sampling of Vienna residents, with a guaranteed return of at least 300 completed surveys. The document will be mailed, but will also be available online for those wishing to take the survey that way.

PEOPLE WILL BE ASKED their opinions about Town services such as: street maintenance, water/sewer service, traffic/transportation issues, snow removal, leaf collection, street sweeping, street lighting, cleanliness of streets and buildings, Community Center programs and recreational opportunities.

They may also be asked, for example, about quality of neighborhood life in

Winter Storm Hits Northern Virginia

Fairfax County residents took shelter as over a foot of snow shutdown power, school, and roads.

BY ETHAN MCLEOD
THE CONNECTION

Northern Virginia residents took shelter from a snow storm that began the evening of Wednesday, Feb. 12 and lasted until the Thursday night. Fairfax County felt the lasting effects well into the weekend, with schools unable to clear parking lots and county offices closed through the weekend.

Governor Terry McAuliffe declared a state of emergency Tuesday, Feb. 11, giving state authorities and utility companies time to prepare for the storm.

"Just as state government is preparing for this storm, I urge every Virginian to take proper preparations. Prepare to limit unnecessary travel during the storm, have emergency supplies on hand and be ready in the event that power in your area goes out," said McAuliffe in a statement.

The Virginia Department of Transportation (VDOT) equipped around 4,000 plows to clean up the roads starting around midnight after the storm began. Dominion Power, which serves Virginia and North Carolina, called in 3,450 additional utility personnel from as far as Oklahoma and Louisiana to help restore power to areas affected by the snow. Many of them were sent to areas further south such as South Carolina and Georgia by Thursday afternoon.

"We feel blessed that we have escaped the wrath of this storm," said Chuck Penn, a spokesperson for Dominion Power Resources.

The only major outage reported by Dominion occurred from a Wednesday evening accident at the intersection of Tyndale Street and Great Falls Road that knocked out power to 2,000 customers. Dominion workers restored power after about two hours later that evening.

Area leaders did their best to keep citizens informed of unsafe driving conditions, weather updates and safety tips. In Herndon, Mayor Lisa Merkel provided updates through social media throughout the day on Thursday responding to readers' comments about which neighborhoods and roads remained unplowed. Dranesville Supervisor John Foust also sent out emails with a link to an interactive map tracking plows in neighborhoods, as well as winter weather tips issued by Fairfax County for staying warm and snow removal.

On Wednesday evening before the storm, area residents stocked up on emergency supplies, such as ice melt, batteries, Duraflame logs, shovels, and propane. Cyndee Cannon, an employee at McLean Hardware, said that three trucks of winter weather merchandise had been unloaded and sold to customers on Wednesday.

"In case the power goes out, people are buying a lot of flashlights and batteries to get prepared, as well as water jugs in case they can't get out or get water," said Mike Cannon, store manager of McLean Hardware and Cyndee's husband. Cannon noted that an East Coast-wide ice melt shortage has left many businesses in short supply.

Shoppers on Wednesday also stocked up on sleds for their kids, foreseeing that schools would likely be closed for the rest of the week. "When I'm not working on snow days we do a lot of sledding and fort building," said McLean resident Jack Sava. "During snow days they spend four to six times as much time outdoors as they normally do during the day, which is excellent."

Around Reston, families took to the hills along Wiehle Avenue, such as the field in front of the Children's House Montessori School, to enjoy a sunny day of sledding. With some schools in Fairfax County unable to clear parking lots until Friday morning, students enjoyed two more snow days before having to make up school on President's Day the following Monday.

Fairfax County is still determining which days students will make up in school to account for lost time from snow days, having used six of them already. Virginia law requires that public schools hold instructional time for at least 180 days, or 990 hours. However, exceptions for certain makeup days have been before when the governor declared a state of emergency, as in 2010 following "Snowmageddon."

Tuskegee Airmen Visit Flint Hill School

On Feb. 10, 2014, Flint Hill welcomed four of the original Tuskegee Airmen. Organized by the Flint Hill's Black Student Union, the event featured a collective address to the entire student body. The Tuskegee Airmen representatives, the oldest being 91, told stories of their experiences growing up, what it meant to serve their country, and gave a charge to students to be involved in their community.

After the large assembly, members of the Black Student Union and other students gathered with the Airmen for a time of Q&A. Advice to work hard, to help others, and to lead in civic responsibility were presented to students who soaked up this opportunity to meet and talk with true heroes.

"We were blessed to be in the presence of greatness," said

Headmaster John Thomas. "Clearly to have the Tuskegee Airmen to address our students in such a personal and intimate way was an honor. We owe a huge debt of gratitude to Junior Caira Blackwell and the Black Student Union in bringing them to Flint Hill."

The Tuskegee Airmen were a group of African-Americans trained for combat in World War II. Though all were not airmen, the title represents the aviators, since they were the first African-American pilots trained in the US, at the Tuskegee Army Field.

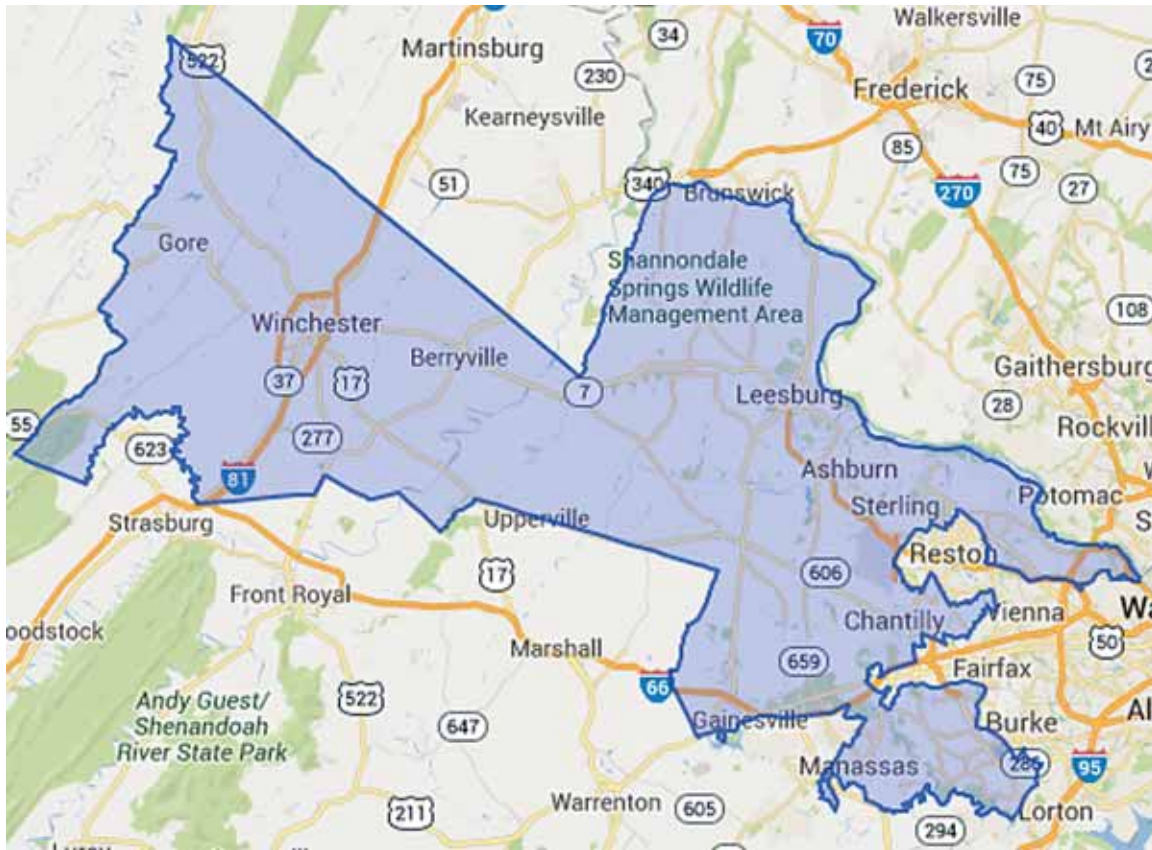

Flint Hill School is an independent school with 1,100 students, transitional kindergarten through Grade 12. Both East and West Campus are closely located to the intersection of Jermantown and Chain Bridge Roads in Oakton.

How Red Is the 10th District?

Wolf's retirement sparks crowded political stage as both parties vie for coveted Congressional seat.

BY VICTORIA ROSS
THE CONNECTION

U.S. Rep. Frank R. Wolf's announcement in December that he would not seek reelection to an 18th term in Congress came as a surprise to both Republicans and Democrats.

Wolf's retirement notice instantly set off a feeding frenzy among politicians maneuvering to gain the Northern Virginia Congressional seat.

The 74-year-old Republican held the seat for more than three decades. But Democrats now see a prize pickup opportunity for this year's midterm elections, and potential candidates have rapidly dropped in and out of the race as political pundits question how red the district will remain.

Democrat John Foust, a Fairfax County Supervisor from McLean, announced he would challenge the incumbent a week before Wolf's retirement news.

Del. Barbara Comstock (R-34), a McLean attorney and Wolf's former senior aide, emerged as the one to watch when she announced her candidacy in January. Like Foust, Comstock is a formidable fundraiser and she quickly received the endorsement of many party officials, including presidential hopeful Mitt Romney, for whom she worked in the 2012 campaign.

DEMOCRATIC STRATEGISTS considered Foust to be one of Wolf's most challenging opponents in years, and Foust quickly racked up a slew of endorsements from more than 50 former and current elected official, including Lt. Gov. Ralph Northam and U.S. Rep. Jim Moran (D-8). Moran later announced he would not seek reelection. Foust's momentum had a rain-making impact on donors. In late January, Foust reported raising more than $217,000, with nearly that amount — $210,000 — reported as cash on hand.

"This is another clear sign that our message of bringing problem solving, bipartisan leadership back to Congress is resonating with Northern Virginia residents," Foust said in a statement about his successful fundraising.

"We had fewer than 20 days to do three months of work, but residents sent a clear message that they're tired of the gridlock and finger-pointing in Washington and are ready for our brand of commonsense leadership."

"My money is on John Foust," said Sharon Bulova, chairman of the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors in an interview Sunday. "His constituent service is second to none and he has really delivered for his Dranesville constituents. Republicans and Democrats alike love him."

In less than a month, three other Democrats currently join Foust in vying for the seat: Fairfax lawyer Richard Bolger, Leesburg architect Sam Kubba and Iraq War veteran David Wroblewski. Several others might still consider a run.

ON THE REPUBLICAN SIDE, speculation about who would enter the race ran the gamut from the obvious to the absurd. Tareq Salah, a write-in candidate for last year's governor's race, remains in the race. A vintner and television personality, Salah gained national attention when he and his ex-wife crashed a White House state dinner in 2009.

When announcing her candidacy, Comstock said: "I have a demonstrated record of winning important legislative victories for Northern Virginians as well as winning hard fought, principled elections."

10th District: Still Solid Red or Swing Seat?

In 2011, after the last round of redistricting, the risk of competitive congressional races diminished for Virginia's three Democratic members of Congress and eight Republican members of Congress. On paper, the 10th district was considered safe Republican territory.

But that was 2011.

"The demographics are shifting as we're talking," state Sen. David Marsden (D-37) said in an interview Sunday. "Foust is the one to beat."

Republican Supervisor John Cook (Braddock) said the seat will remain in Republican hands.

"It is a Republican seat and I think we will have a strong candidate, in which case we will win," Cook said in an interview Sunday night.

In December, Rothenberg Political Report and Roll Call rated the 10th district contest a "Lean Republican" race, based on Bloomberg's number-crunching in the most recent state and national elections.

In last year's presidential race, for example, Mitt Romney won the 10th district, 50-49 percent.

In this year's gubernatorial race, Republican Ken Cuccinelli carried the district over Democrat Terry McAulliffe 48-47 percent. Republican Mark Obenshain and Democrat Mark Herring fought to a standoff in the race for attorney general, with Obenshain winning the 10th district by 72 votes before the recount. The 10th gave Democrat Ralph Northam a more solid victory, with a 52-48 percent win over Republican E.W. Jackson.

The district includes all of Clarke, Frederick, Loudoun, and Warren counties and the independent cities of Manassas, Manassas Park, Winchester, along with portions of Fairfax, Fauquier, Prince William counties. Wolf won the 2012 race with 58 percent of the vote against Democrat Kristin Cabral (39 percent) and Independent J. Kevin Chisholm (3 percent).

WEEK IN VIENNA

Vienna Police Seek Burglar

Vienna police are looking for a man who broke into a home last week in the 500 block of Orchard Street, NW. Police responded to that address, last Tuesday, Feb. 11, around 11 a.m., after receiving a report of a possible stabbing there.

The resident told the officers she'd returned home to find an intruder upstairs in her home. A scuffle ensued between them and the resident was cut. She was taken to the hospital for treatment.

The intruder was described as a black man, age 30-40, approximately 5 feet 10 inches, with a medium-to-heavy build and short dreadlocks. He wore a black, pull-over, hooded sweatshirt (hoodie) and jeans and carried a black backpack.

The Alexandria Police Department's K-9 unit was requested and responded to aid in tracking the suspect. Anyone with information relating to this case is asked to call Det. Elias at 703-255-6395.

Comstock's mainstream GOP platform includes "repealing and replacing Obamacare," as well as promoting policies for a healthier economy and "fighting to protect our national security and dedicated military."

"I will be a tireless advocate for one of the most vibrant and diverse communities in the Commonwealth and I will demand and work hard for common sense results," she said in a news release. "I am running for Congress because I believe my strong record as a common sense conservative leader is what is needed in Congress. I know how to effectively fight for Northern Virginia's hard working taxpayers having first learned from Congressman Wolf, working in his congressional office."

Comstock is currently facing seven declared candidates for her party's nomination, including a challenge from Virginia Del. Bob Marshall, who entered the crowded Republican primary field last week.

In a news release announcing his candidacy, Marshall, who has represented parts of Prince William and Loudoun counties in the General Assembly for more than 20 years, vowed to vote no to any tax increases, and said he would "be on the front lines to defund and dismantle Obamacare."

Marshall also said in his announcement that he would oppose "the creation or maintenance of a police surveillance state to spy on us," and oppose the "executive assault" on congressional powers. He told reporters he believes his candidacy will appeal to the conservative party activists.

Earlier this month another Republican, Rob Wasinger of Fairfax Station, announced his candidacy, citing 20 years of experience of working for prominent conservative lawmakers on Capitol Hill.

Potential candidates have until March 27 to file the necessary paperwork for a run.

Fundamental Freedom To Choose To Marry

Virginia is historically slow in extending rights.

In 1967, Virginia was one of 16 states that banned interracial marriage and had criminal penalties for violators.

Mildred Jeter, an African-American woman, and Richard Loving a white man, married in 1958, were convicted and banished from living in Virginia for 25 years to avoid serving a one-year prison sentence. On June 12, 1967, the U.S. Supreme Court, in Loving v. Virginia, overturned the convictions of Mildred and Richard Loving, declaring the ban on interracial marriage unconstitutional.

Chief Justice Earl Warren wrote the opinion: "Marriage is one of the 'basic civil rights of man,' fundamental to our very existence and survival. ... To deny this fundamental freedom on so unsupportable a basis as the racial classifications embodied in these statutes, classifications so directly subversive of the principle of equality at the heart of the Fourteenth Amendment, is surely to deprive all the State's citizens of liberty without due process of law. The Fourteenth Amendment requires that the freedom of choice to marry not be restricted by invidious racial discriminations. Under our Constitution, the freedom to marry, or not marry, a person of another race resides with the individual, and cannot be infringed by the State."

Less than 50 years ago, it was still illegal in Virginia, punishable by prison time, for a white person to marry someone of another race.

Judge Arenda Wright Allen last week on Valentine's Day, ruled that Virginia's ban on same-sex marriage is unconstitutional. In the opening of her order, Allen quotes Mildred Loving in a statement she made in 2007 on the 40th anniversary of Loving v. Virginia:

EDITORIAL

"We made a commitment to each other in our love and lives, and now had the legal commitment, called marriage, to match. Isn't that what marriage is? ... Today's young people realize that if someone loves someone they have a right to marry. Surrounded as I am now by wonderful children and grandchildren, not a day goes by that I don't think of Richard and our love, our right to marry, and how much it meant to me to have that freedom to marry the person precious to me, even if others thought he was the 'wrong kind of person' for me to marry. I believe all Americans, no matter their race, no matter their sex, no matter their sexual orientation, should have that same freedom to marry. Government has no business imposing some people's religious beliefs over others. ... I support the freedom to marry for all. That's what Loving, and loving, are all about."

Judge Allen's written decision is compelling and well worth reading. You can find a copy of it on the Connection website.

It begins:

"A spirited and controversial debate is underway regarding who may enjoy the right to marry in the United States of America. America has pursued a journey to make and keep our citizens free. This journey has never been easy, and at times has been painful and poignant. The ultimate exercise of our freedom is choice. Our Declaration of Independence recognizes that 'all men' are created equal. Surely this means all of us. While ever-vigilant for the wisdom that can come from the voices of our voting public, our courts have never long tolerated the perpetuation of laws rooted in unlawful prejudice. One of the judiciary's noblest endeavors is to scrutinize laws that emerge from such roots.

"Plaintiffs assert that the restriction on their freedom to choose to marry the person they love infringes on the rights to due process and equal protection guaranteed to them under the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution. These challenges are well-taken....

"The Court is compelled to conclude that Virginia's Marriage Laws unconstitutionally deny Virginia's gay and lesbian citizens the fundamental freedom to choose to marry."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Supporting Mental Health

To the Editor:

The editorial by Mary Kimm ["On Mental Health," Connection, Feb. 12-18, 2014], referencing reporting by Michael Pope, makes an incorrect assertion that our services to people with mental illness in Fairfax County have been "dramatically cut back."

In fact, the Fairfax-Falls Church Community Services Board (CSB) served more individuals in FY2013 than in previous fiscal years, thanks to the generous and consistent support of Fairfax County government and the taxpayers of Fairfax County and the cities of Fairfax and Falls Church. The bulk of our budget comes from local, rather than state, dollars. This enables our CSB to provide services that many other Virginia jurisdictions are not able to have, including a mobile crisis unit, crisis stabilization, and many other services. To suggest that our local government has dramatically cut back mental health services is simply not true and needs to be corrected for the record.

Here are the numbers (total number of individuals served by the CSB, which includes those with mental illness and/or substance use disorders, intellectual disability, and infants and toddlers with developmental delays):

FY 2013:	20,988
FY 2012:	20,446
FY 2011:	20,058

What appeared to the reporter as a dramatic drop in the number of individuals served was the result of a change in the way we define the categories of individuals served. The county's Comprehensive Annual Financial Report (CAFR) he referenced does not include an entire category (that we are now required by the state to count separately) of individuals who receive "Services Outside of Program Area," including emergency services, assessment and monitoring. Prior to FY2012, those individuals were included in either "mental health services," "alcohol and drug services," or "intellectual disability services." The county's CAFR has retained the old categories but has not added this new one. Therefore, there is an appearance that services have been reduced, when in reality we are just more narrowly defining who is categorized as receiving a service defined by a particular disability. The number of individuals served who are not counted in the CAFR is large: in FY2013, there were 13,249 individuals who received CSB services that were not categorized in those three disability area categories.

If you actually compare apples to apples, our numbers have remained consistent, and have even increased slightly, despite the economic difficulties of recent years. For this, we can thank our county leaders and our community who recognize, as you do, the importance of supporting these critical CSB services.

Thank you very much for your support.

Win-win-win Solution for Oakcrest School

To the Editor:

As a member of Supervisor Catherine Hudgins' (D-Hunter Mill) outreach committee regarding Oakcrest School's proposed Special Exception Amendment, I write to update the community on this important matter before the Board of Supervisors.

Our community has submitted a compromise proposal that we believe is a win for the School, win for Fairfax County, and a win for the community. This win-win-win solution was submitted in our compromise plan to the Board and discussed at length with Supervisor Hudgins. The key highlights of the compromise proposal are:

1. School access at the current Golf Park Hunter Mill Road access, the same access as the SE that was approved in 2010.

2. Improvements at the intersection of Hunter Mill and Crowell – which retain the stop sign but add additional turn lanes.

3. Preserving the ecologically sensitive character of Crowell Road and the highly effective sound/visual buffer of the forested berm.

There are several reasons why this compromise makes sense:

1. It allows school construction to take place. All the members of the community are united in welcoming Oakcrest to the neighborhood and sympathize with their predicament (they sold their existing property prior to finalizing their new property).

2. It eliminates the safety concerns and additional congestion from Crowell Road.

3. The latest traffic counts prof-fered by Oakcrest are well within safety limits for an access onto

Vienna Man Guilty in Teen's Death

McLean girl, 16, died after using heroin.

BY BONNIE HOBBS
THE CONNECTION

Kyle Alifom, 20, of Vienna pleaded guilty last Monday, Feb. 10, in federal court in connection with the death of a 16-year-old McLean girl.

Charged with tampering with evidence, he admitted that he hid the body of Emylee Lonczak, who died after a heroin overdose. Alifom now faces a possible maximum punishment of 20 years in prison when he's sentenced May 16.

In a statement of facts filed with his plea, Alifom admitted that, on Aug. 21, 2013, he and three other people – two friends plus Lonczak – drove from Virginia into Washington, D.C., to buy heroin. Each of them then used it via injections from separate hypodermic needles, each containing about 30cc of the narcotic.

"Lonczak, who wasn't a heroin user, was unable to administer the heroin to herself intravenously because she couldn't find a vein," the document stated. So the person who'd made the drug buy "injected her."

They then headed back to Virginia and, during the drive, Alifom and the others noticed Lonczak was unconscious. They dropped off the drug buyer at his home and the other friend dropped off Alifom and Lonczak, who remained unconscious, at Alifom's home in Vienna.

According to the statement, Alifom and the friend placed Lonczak in a bed in a basement bedroom and the friend left. The following morning, Alifom discovered that Lonczak had died.

According to his statement, Alifom "dragged Lonczak's body through the grass behind his residence to an area of shrubbery behind a neighbor's house. [He] covered [her] body with an abandoned screen window in an attempt to conceal [it]."

Meanwhile, the teen had been reported missing, Aug. 21, when she failed to return home. Using a bloodhound, Fairfax County police discovered Lonczak's body, Aug. 23, 2013, after the dog tracked her scent to a wooded area. An autopsy and toxicology report confirmed she had a fatal level of heroin in her system and that heroin use had caused her death.

The statement concluded that Alifom's actions in connection with this tragedy were, "in all respects, knowing and deliberate." Now that he's been convicted, he's scheduled for sentencing May 16 in U.S. District Court in Alexandria before Judge Claude M. Hilton.

This case was investigated by the Fairfax County police and the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA). Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael P. Ben'ary, formerly a commonwealth's attorney in Fairfax County, is the prosecutor.

Dana J. Boente, Acting U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of Virginia; Karl C. Colder, Special Agent in Charge for the DEA's Washington Field Division; and Fairfax County Police Chief Edwin C. Roessler Jr. made the official announcement of Alifom's guilty plea.

"It'll show us where we're falling short or doing well," said Vice-Mayor Laurie DiRocco.

"Yes," said Barr. "This will help us see what the residents' priorities are and where the gaps are. And you can use this information as a tool for where you want to guide the town."

The results will also provide a window into residents' overall satisfaction with their town, as a whole. And ETC will do a survey analysis including benchmarking data allowing Vienna to compare its residents' satisfaction levels with similar, national and regional data for more than 80 types of local gov-

THE SURVEY RESULTS will be provided in a written report. In addition, GIS mapping/Geo-Coding will enable these results to be displayed in a map format pinpointing satisfaction levels throughout Vienna on specific questions.

At its Feb. 3 meeting, the Town Council formally awarded the survey contract to ETC to the tune of $12,000. It was money Vienna had already earmarked for this purpose.

During the FY2013-2014 budgeting process, the Council approved adding $10,000 to the Public Information budget to procure and undertake such a survey. The additional $2,000 for this project was provided by the Departments of Public Works and Parks and Recreation to pay for the Geo-Coding and GIS Mapping.

"I think it's a nice idea to reach out and ask the town," said DiRocco. "I'd like to have it implemented by May."

Money on the Shelves

Northern Virginia jurisdictions take a variety of approaches to funding libraries.

BY MICHAEL LEE POPE
THE CONNECTION

What is the future of the neighborhood library? That's an open question as jurisdictions across America are rethinking their library system, a reevaluation brought on by tight budgets and technological change. Here in Northern Virginia, jurisdictions have taken a variety of approaches to funding libraries. Some, such as Arlington, have restored almost all the funding cut during the recession. Others, such as Fairfax County, lag behind the statewide average. "We are very concerned about this because our funding is far down behind the rest of the state of Virginia and in the entire metropolitan area as well," said Charles Fegan, vice chairman of the Fairfax County Public Library Board of Trustees. "How are we going to get books on the shelves? How are we going to get hours?"

Supporters of public libraries are concerned that elected officials who control funding don't seem as committed to the idea of public libraries as they once were. Some of that change is technological. In an era when bookstores are vanishing and books are available for download, some are questioning the logic behind having public libraries at all. That's why libraries across Northern Virginia took massive hits when budgets became tighter because of the recession.

"The libraries are a convenient target because a lot of people look at the libraries relative to many other things and decide they are not as important," said Alexandria City Councilman Justin Wilson. "I don't necessarily always come to that conclusion, but I do think libraries are changing. They're definitely changing."

BACK IN FISCAL YEAR 2009, before the recession hit, the Fairfax County Public Library system had a budget of $33.1 million. Since that time, members of the Board of Supervisors have slashed about 20 percent out of budget for the library system, which has reduced the numbers of hours libraries are open and the collections available on the shelves. As a result, library officials have had to get creative to stretch their limited budget as far as they can. "As an example, there are some days that we don't answer the telephone," said Mary Mulrenan, marketing director with the Fairfax County Public Libraries. "We just don't have the staffing." When the recession hit, all Northern Virginia jurisdictions cut back on library funding. Some have made efforts to restore funding, while others have lagged behind. Arlington had led the way in restoring almost all the hours that were cut in their neighborhood libraries, although the Central Library still opens an hour later than it used to and closes an hour earlier than it used to. But overall, Arlington's library system remains one of the best in the region. Earlier this month, the Library Journal named the Arlington Public Library one of six "star" libraries in Virginia.

"The library is the only place you can get face-to-face personalized research assistance that you would never get online," said Peter Golkin, public information officer for Arlington Public Library. "Librarians are a professionally trained group of experts. They're kind of like concierges for all sorts of life issues."

LIBRARIES REMAIN a budget target, even as jurisdictions emerge from the recession. Last year, for example, Alexandria City Manager Rashad

"How are we going to get books on the shelves? How are we going to get hours?"

— Charles Fegan, vice chairman, Fairfax County Public Library Board of Trustees

Young's proposed budget included a proposal to reduce hours at three libraries as well as the materials budget at the central library and services to the visually impaired. The proposal would have eliminated three employee positions and slashed about $240,000 out of the operating budget, but members of the Alexandria City Council restored funding when they voted on a final budget. "The citizens really turned out and said no. The City Council responded, and the cuts were restored," said Oscar Fitzgerald, vice chairman of the Alexandria Library Board. "We're facing the same thing again this year because the city is facing a substantial downturn in their income, and they are looking for cuts across the board."

Nowhere will the battle be more pitched than Fairfax County, where libraries are still working with reduced staffing and reduced collections. Members of the library's board of trustees say they are ready to make a pitch to the Board of Supervisors that it's time to restore the hours that were reduced and add back the funding for the collections. "A library is the heart of a community," said Fegan. "I've spoken to a number of people who have come into this country, and the first thing they did was get a library card."

Imagine if in your childhood, it was normal for a social worker to show up unexpectedly, hand you a big black garbage bag and tell you to pack your things.

That's what happened to Tyrell in the first quarter of his senior year of high school. Left behind were Tyrell's friends, the football and wrestling teams he had played on and the security he had finally found after nine years in foster care.

Tyrell, a resident of Fairfax County, was once among the 500,000 kids who are in foster care across the United States. He struggled to earn his high school diploma in his new school but succeeded, thanks in part to a mentor from Fairfax Families4Kids.

Earning that high-school diploma put Tyrell ahead of more than 50 percent of kids who have been in foster care, according to a report by the Association of Small Foundations/Annie E. Casey Foundation.

In Fairfax County, foster kids can choose to stay in foster care until they are 21, rather than aging out at 18. The extra years of services come with requirements that are designed to prepare kids for adulthood. They must go to school or work with little oversight. Imagine young adults who, in many cases in foster care, were housed more than they were raised. Kids whose caregivers did not work to instill ambition, confidence, self-esteem, work ethic or core social skills. What are their chances for becoming self-reliant? Many former foster children can't meet the requirements to stay in the system, and even those who made it through until 21 did not gain the skills needed to be successful.

NOW 22, TYRELL IS one of the 26,000 young adults who age out of the foster care system each year in the U.S. without family and the emotional and economic support that often come with family. In Fairfax County in 2012, 49 foster children aged out. Nationwide, four years after aging out of foster care, 25 percent have been homeless and more than 80 percent are unable to support themselves, according to Association of Small Foundations/Annie E. Casey.

Despite his winning smile, good nature and potential, Tyrell was living precariously. He has been essentially homeless. Alternating between the couches of friends and not having a place to sleep, there have been times when Tyrell stayed on the bus, where it was warm, until it stopped running at 3 a.m. Then he would head to an all-night McDonald's where he would hope that the manager didn't kick him out.

Mentors and other adults tried to support Tyrell, both emotionally and materially by paying his phone bill and providing him with leads on jobs. He never followed through on the job leads. Like the social workers before them, these well-meaning adults, myself included, became frustrated. For an adult who was raised with caring parents, it was mind-boggling. How could he not make one single phone call to help himself? Why didn't he see that he had to change his life? This was a kid who we believed in, why couldn't he believe in himself?

But Tyrell represents so many young adults who have grown up in the system. They are focused on survival, food and shelter. They don't trust. They have seen only failure, despite their potential. Their expectations are low. Their dreams don't exist. They are lacking that one person who is pivotal to success: the full-time, caring motivator. The person who is on them, as emerging adults, every waking minute to get out of bed, to follow up on job leads, to never give up.

I was working to develop a plan for Tyrell and others that would incorporate this "caring motivator," that could include housing and maybe even employment, when Kyria Henry, co-founder of paws4people.org, contacted me. Understanding the human and actual price tag that comes along with foster care's failures, Kyria wanted discuss developing a program for young adults, paws4potential.

The non-profit that Kyria Henry founded with her parents, paws4people.org, has a mission to enhance the lives of those living with serious illnesses or disabilities.

ties by utilizing highly trained assistance dogs for children, veterans and civilians. The bulk of the dog training is done in prisons by inmates. I have seen firsthand the magic that happens when you bring together dogs and people with emotional and physical needs. Many lives have been forever changed by paws4people.

Kyria's proposal had the right ingredients to create success. The program frees participants from the stresses of seeking shelter and job. These emerging adults have stability inside a supportive community of staff, volunteers, students, clients and the dogs themselves. They learn marketable skills, among them dog grooming, care and training as well as facility maintenance skills. The boss becomes the full-time, caring motivator.

Tyrell said he was ready to get his life on track. He agreed that if he was accepted into the program, he would leave friends and family behind here to move to Wilmington, N.C. for the three-month pilot program.

The first hurdle was getting him down to Wilmington for his interview. Tyrell was more than three hours late to meet me for the six-hour drive. Biting back my frustration, I told him that, if he was accepted, being on time was a something they would help him with. I knew he could do this. He had to believe it too.

When Tyrell was offered the one place in the pilot program, he was shyly pleased.

There were two weeks between that day and the day I drove him to North Carolina to start his new life. We were in constant communication, talking through the what-ifs, me constantly reassuring him that he could do it. And he reminding himself that it was only three months.

TWO DAYS BEFORE we were to drive down to Wilmington, I got a text from Tyrell. He couldn't do it, he wrote. He wasn't going to go.

Tyrell working with a young dog at paws4potential

WWW.CONNECTIONNEWSPAPERS.COM

Tyrell, selfie with Joan Brady

My heart fell. The statistics were already against him. He had to really want this in order for him to have a chance of succeeding. In my opinion, this pilot program would give him the best chance of having a successful life. Then he texted, "I new I would get u. Haha. U fell for it. See you at 10:30am on Saturday."

The kids I have watched grow up in the foster care system are in now prison, living on the street and/or are parents. There are very few success stories. I believe that the many young adults who have been let down by both their families and the foster care system can succeed if given the right opportunity. These were once babies who entered the world expecting to be loved, taken care of and supported. They didn't get those things as children. Nothing about this is easy. It will take commitment and caring support.

Tyrell texted me after I left him at the extended stay hotel which would be his home for the next three months, "I am going to do my best to complete the program. [This] is what I'm starving for. I know it'll all work out for me. I just have to leave everything in the past and I will be ok."

Paws4potential isn't going to be the right fit for everyone, but I believe that paws4people.org is on the right track to change outcomes for kids who have aged out of foster care and others similarly at risk. According to a study by the Jim Casey Youth Initiative, every person who gets his or her life on track, saves society an average lifetime cost of $300,000. Getting ex-foster kids successfully launched makes for a better society and a better world.

Madison Grapppler Eckhardt Finishes Region Runner-Up

Robinson wins third region championship in four years.

BY JON ROETMAN
THE CONNECTION

Brendan Grammes said he lost to a “stronger” opponent during the 6A North region wrestling championships on Sunday, but the McLean freshman’s pre-season goals remain attainable.

Jacob Adams came up short in the region finals, but the Langley senior said he will learn from his experience in the spotlight.

Connor Eckhardt suffered a knee injury in defeat, but the Madison senior vowed to return for the state meet.

For wrestlers unable to secure a title during Sunday’s region finals at Centreville High School, the state meet on Feb. 21-22 at Robinson Secondary School will provide another opportunity to prove themselves with a championship up for grabs.

Grammes lost to Battlefield junior Matthew Asper by decision, 10-4, in the 113-pound region final. Grammes entered the match with a 43-3 season record, including an 11-6 victory over Centreville’s Victor Echeverria in the semifinals, but settled for region runner-up.

“He was just stronger than me, for the most part,” Grammes said. “I felt like he was more developed than me. He was a little quicker. In the very beginning, I felt like I came out a little tense because I was a little nervous. I worked that out by the end, but I was down by a little bit at that point.”

EARLY IN THE SEASON, Grammes set goals of winning the Conference 6 championship, finishing runner-up in the region and placing at states. The McLean grappler came through with a conference crown and remains on track to achieve his goals.

“I thought it was a little [far-fetched], like [they were] pretty challenging goals,” Grammes said, “but I thought I could do it if I really tried.”

Adams lost to Robinson senior Dane Robbins by decision, 4-1, in the 138-pound final. He entered the match with a 42-4 season record, having won the Conference 6 championship.

“I want to win,” Adams said about his goal at the state meet. “I’ll be on the opposite side of the bracket as [Robbins], so I should get another shot at him in the finals.”

Adams wrestled at 132 pounds as a junior, when he placed fifth at regionals. He said Sunday’s experience in a championship setting should help him at states.

“It’s probably the biggest crowd I’ve ever wrestled in front of,” he said. “I’m starting to get used to it and I think it will definitely help at states — the spotlight and everything.”

Eckhardt, a Conference 6 champion experiencing his best season as a high school wrestler, injured his left knee during the 145-pound final. He finished the match, but lost to Chantilly senior Walter Carlson by decision, 10-4.

Eckhardt said he had multiple surgeries on the knee in the past. He walked with an ice pack on the knee after the match, but said he will “definitely be able to compete at states.”

“I wrestled terribly,” Eckhardt said about his performance in the region final. “... I didn’t wrestle my match. I didn’t take my shots. I could have wrestled a better match, and that’s what I’m going to have to do next weekend to get a state title.”

McLean sophomore Conor Grammes placed third in the 132-pound bracket, beating Westfield junior Ryan Yorkdale via injury in the third-place match.

Langley senior Alex Pratte placed sixth in the 145-pound class, losing to Centreville senior Connor Mitchell via pin in the fifth-place match.

Madison 195-pound senior Chris Hines finished fourth, falling to Osbourn Park sophomore Jacob Maile by decision, 16-9, in the third-place match. Warhawks junior Ryan Barrett captured fifth place at 182 pounds, beating Chantilly senior Logan Barr via decision, 7-4, in the fifth-place match.

“I didn’t wrestle my match. I didn’t take my shots. I could have wrestled a better match, and that’s what I’m going to have to do next weekend to get a state title.”

Herndon senior Sean Pike took fifth place in the 160-pound bracket, beating Chantilly senior Jeffrey Weinberg via decision, 9-5. Hornets sophomore Sam Milligan finished sixth in the 138-pound bracket, falling to West Springfield’s Junior Ramos by major decision, 15-5, in the fifth-place match.

South Lakes senior Colby Laxton finished fifth in the 195-pound bracket, pinning Robinson senior Maksym Sears in the fifth-place match.

Robinson won the team championship with 257.5 points, giving the Rams three region titles in four seasons. Robinson has also won two of the last three state championships.

“This is a pretty special team, a great group of kids,” Robinson head coach Bryan Hazard said. “They’ve been together a long time. They have an expectation that they place on themselves and they really competed well.”

INDIVIDUAL CHAMPIONS: Lake Braddock’s Dante Wiles (106); Asper (113); Lake Braddock’s Ryan Haskett (120); Robinson’s Mason Rockman (126); South County’s Hunter Manley (132); Robbins (138); Carlson (145); Robinson’s Jack Bass (152); Robinson’s Zak DePasquale (160); Robinson’s Daniel Mika (170); Robinson’s Cole DePasquale (182); Centreville’s Tyler Love (195); Osbourn’s Jake Garcia (220); and Robinson’s Jake Pinkston (285).

House Fire: $100,000 Damage

Fire investigators say combustibles too close to a heat source caused an accidental house fire in Vienna, last Thursday, Feb. 13. Officials estimate the damage at $100,000.

Fairfax County Fire and Rescue Department units responded around 8:25 p.m. to a single-family home at 2251 Richelieu Drive. First-arriving firefighters encountered fire showing from the roof of the one-story, split-level house.

They conducted an aggressive attack and extinguished the blaze in approximately 20 minutes. The residents were able to get out of the house before the firefighters arrived; two adults and two children were displaced. No one was injured.

Oakton Woman Is Charged

For an Oakton woman, things recently went from bad to worse. Last Monday, Feb. 10, at 9:30 p.m., a Fairfax County police officer stopped a vehicle for suspected DWI in the area of Emerald Rock Drive and White Flint Court. The driver, Nadine Marianne Lee, 36, of Oakton, was taken into custody. During her arrest, however, police say she allegedly assaulted the officer. Lee was charged with assaulting a police officer, DWI and refusing to take a breath test.

Music Contest Feb. 22

The 52nd Annual James A. Bland Music Contest, sponsored by the Vienna Host Lions Club, will be held Saturday, Feb. 22, at 1 p.m., at the Vienna Assembly of God Church, 100 Ayr Hill Ave. The contest will include vocalists and instrumentalists who'll each present a song or piece of no more than eight minutes and will be judged by local experts in their field.

Cash prizes will be awarded to first- and second-place winners in each category. The first-place winners move up to the next level of competition. For more information and an application, contact Lion Nancy Volpe at 703-938-7716, 703-851-1313 or n.volpe8@verizon.net. Application deadline is Monday, Feb. 17.

Chilly? Eat Some Chili

A Chili Cook Off is slated for Sunday, Feb. 23, from 5-8 p.m., at American Legion Post 180 at 330 Center St. N. in Vienna. Cost is $8; call 703-938-9535 for information.

Donate Used Greeting Cards

Local residents may help the St. Jude's Ranch for Children by donating their used greeting cards. Just separate the front from the back of the cards – as only the fronts are needed – and make sure there's no writing on the card. Then drop them off at the Fairfax City Hall, Parks and Recreation Office, 10455 Armstrong St., in Fairfax, through Feb. 28.

Until Further Notice

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Not to state the obvious (which I readily admit I do), but to be given a terminal diagnosis: stage IV, non-small cell lung cancer, along with a rather disappointing prognosis: "13 months to two years" is a challenging set of extremely unexpected (given my immediate family's medical history) circumstances. I don't want to say that I live under a dark cloud – because I don't like the negative implication or reaction it conjures, but I definitely feel as if I have a metaphorical sword of Damocles hanging over my head; which I only refer to as an out-of-context Three Stooges reference wherein a non-Stooge was innocently standing under a pie which Moe had thrown to the ceiling and there it stuck, hanging precariously over the character's head. Now I still don't know the proper historical context of the sword of Damocles, I only know the Three Stooges version, but there was some imminent danger involved (not death, mind you), but rather a falling pie which ultimately landed flush on the character's face as she looked up to make further inquiries.

Nevertheless, pie issues/references notwithstanding, having seen my oncologist today while being infused and receiving a big smile/ "you're going great"/thumbs-up set of gestures/reactions while reclining in my Barcalounger with a chemotherapy I.V. dripping medicine into my right arm, is the kind of super-positive feedback with which I can live. Along with my every-three-week pre-chemotherapy lab work and my every-three-month CT Scan followed by my every-three-month face-to-face appointment with my oncologist, this is how I roll. Worrying about upcoming tests, waiting anxiously for results, trying not to anticipate good, bad or indifferent; living day to day and trying to appreciate my good fortune and the unexpected above-average quality of life with which I've been blessed – for a terminal cancer patient, that is.

Ergo, the title of this column: "Until Further Notice." Whenever I'm asked by those in my know how I'm doing, I typically respond: "I'm doing fine, until further notice." And "further notice" is my way of lightening the emotional load under which I live and thankfully still breathe; any port in a storm, you might say. Moreover, even though there's relative calm right now, given my diagnosis/prognosis, there's likely to be some inevitable unpleasantness down the road – as I'm semi-fond of saying/joking. And as many changes as I've already made to diet and lifestyle since I was diagnosed, I don't suppose I'll know what turns I've taken until my oncologist advises me after my miscellaneous test results have been analyzed. As much as I'm doing internally, I still feel as if the news will come externally. As a result, I feel pressure every day; self-assessing, analyzing, introspecting; it's a constant battle of mind over what may or not matter yet. And of course, I can never forget the pie.

The great Satchel Page joked to not look back because you never know who's chasing you. And though I'm certainly mindful of death and what's chasing me (figuratively speaking), ignoring certain facts as they were presented to me by my oncologist is much easier said than done. When I first learned about my medical situation/diagnosis/prognosis, it certainly sounded like a death sentence; now, five years later, it has evolved into more of a life sentence. And though it's unlikely I'll ever make parole, it is life nonetheless, and though there are some days when it's not very pretty, these are days I didn't anticipate having. And so far, there's been no pie or sword to diminish them – all things considered.

Hunter Mill. In fact, these counts are no more than the existing Golf Park and Fairfax Christian School – current establishments that access Hunter Mill Road at this point. Furthermore, Oakcrest offered to provide police assistance for entering/exiting vehicles – exactly what is in place at other schools in Fairfax County which front on busy streets. FCDOT and VDOT approved those arrangements in the past and therefore should have no concerns with this arrangement at the exit onto Hunter Mill – especially due to its interim nature.

4. The compromise also enables future Hunter Mill Road/Crowell Road intersection improvements as part of future developments for the residual land.

5. The “green buffer zone” between the Reston-Herndon Suburban Center and the Tysons Corner Suburban Center is preserved.

Finally, and most importantly, it upholds the integrity of the Special Exception Process... something that Community residents as well as builders in the area are closely watching. The County does not need a precedent for letting developers wriggle out of prior critical commitments and requirements.

The community’s compromise proposal is a solution that holds significant promise. It enables school construction to start and also provides time for the school to take advantage of the Hunter Mill Road improvements that will come with the opening of the Silver Line and increased development in Reston. The County needs to conduct an expeditious, thorough, and transparent consideration of the proposal instead of simply making an expedient decision driven by the school’s schedule.

don’t get paid by the uninsured. Those of us who do have insurance pick up these costs in higher premiums.

Virginia is the eighth wealthiest state, yet it is 46th in Medicaid expenditure.

If Virginia accepts Washington’s help to make more people eligible for Medicaid, the federal government will pay 100 percent of the cost through 2016 and 90 percent thereafter. And if sometime in the future, the federal government reduces its contribution to Medicaid expansion, Virginia can modify its program. The state budget already includes language that compels the Department of Medical Assistance Services to disenroll the expansion population if the federal match rate falls below current legal requirements.

I’d like to see my federal tax dollars used to insure my hairdresser and other hard-working people right here in Virginia so they can address health problems before they become health emergencies. It’s a more common-sense approach and a better use of our tax dollars.

Ending Fox Penning

To the Editor:

The American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (ASPCA) applauds Virginia state Senator David Marsden (D-37) for his tireless efforts to pass legislation to crack down on fox penning, a brutal blood sport in which wild-caught foxes are released into fenced enclosures and made targets for packs of dogs in gruesome competitions. When the foxes are cornered and forced to fight for their lives, the dogs are also often injured. A bill to place a moratorium on fox pens – S.B. 42 – passed the Senate earlier this week, thanks to Sen. Marsden’s continued efforts to keep the issue of fox penning front and center to ensure that the foxes – and dogs – are protected against this vicious activity.

Over the past six years, more than 7,000 wild-caught foxes have been forcibly transported to Virginia pens often hundreds of miles away, where they are forced into these cruel fox penning competitions. As if this deplorable activity wasn’t cruel enough, the transportation of foxes and coyotes across state lines can also lead to the spread of rabies and other zoonotic diseases to domestic animals and humans, posing a threat to everyone involved.

Virginians have spoken on this issue. According to a 2014 Mason-Dixon poll, Virginia residents oppose fox penning by a margin of 9 to 1. It’s time to turn public opinion into law and stop this vicious and unnecessary cruelty inflicted upon defenseless foxes and dogs. These animals cannot speak for themselves, so it is our job to give them a voice and fight for their protection.

The ASPCA thanks Sen. Marsden for his concern for animals, and we strongly urge the Virginia House of Delegates to pass S.B. 42 to crack down on this barbaric and intolerable practice.

Expand Medicaid in Virginia

To the Editor:

Do you know someone who works but cannot afford health insurance? I do. My hairdresser supports an adult son who cannot work because of a physical condition, and her four-year-old granddaughter. She simply does not have the money to buy insurance even under the Affordable Care Act. And she is not alone. In Virginia, 70 percent of the uninsured come from families where at least one person is employed.

According to the Centers for Disease Control, the uninsured are more likely to use the Emergency Room because they do not have a family doctor. Hoping their symptoms will go away, they often delay getting medical help until their condition is serious and more expensive to treat.

Those of us who can afford insurance bear the cost of the uninsured (working folks, pregnant women and children) in several ways. The General Assembly usually appropriates $100M from the General Fund (our tax revenues) for indigent care at state teaching hospitals. Hundreds of millions more are lost by private hospitals when they

THANK YOU TOGETHER WE DID IT!

We Met Our Jeans Day Challenge We Turned $5 Into $60,000!

Thank you to these businesses, organizations and individuals in our community for their contributions to Jeans Day and for their commitment to ending homelessness in Fairfax County and Falls Church. The $60,000 raised will make a difference for the more than 3,000 children, women and men facing homelessness and the threat of severe temperatures and hunger today in the Fairfax-Falls Church community. The awareness raised by Jeans Day will help in the continued efforts to end homelessness in our community by 2018.

Our Jeans Day 2013 goal was to partner with our Fairfax-Falls Church community and raise $25,000 to meet the Philip L. Graham Fund Challenge for a $25,000 match and together we did it.
