Seniors Rush to Yoga

Yoga teachers, research point to health benefits for seniors.

Shortly after 10 a.m. on any given Tuesday or Thursday morning, 84-year-old Lola Wulchin can be found slowly stretching into a downward facing dog pose or lunging into a warrior one posture. The Vienna resident has been a yoga devotee at East Meets West Yoga Center in Vienna for slightly more than two years. In fact, she credits twice-weekly, gentle yoga practice with boosting her health and improving her quality of life.

"I had been bothered by a lot of neck pain from arthritis," said Wulchin. "I had seen a pain management doctor who gave me shots, I had physical therapy, but I still had neck pain and very little range of motion."

A turning point came after she was struck by a passing comment from one of her doctors. "My neurologist mentioned that his wife had been doing yoga for back pain and it had helped. So I decided to try it."

Wulchin embarked on a twice-weekly ritual that she describes as life changing. "My gentle yoga classes have been a God-send," she said. "I have less pain now. I still have some stiffness, but I have a better range of motion."

She isn't the only senior to reap the benefits of yoga. Researchers at the American Congress of Rehabilitation Medicine and the American Academy of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation conducted an eight-week study of 23 adults aged 62 to 83 years old.

They designed a yoga program for that age group with the goals of improving lower-body strength and flexibility. Participants SEE YOGA, PAGE 8

More Seniors Plan To Age in Place

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

The AARP reports that nearly 80 percent of adults age 65 and older want to remain in their current homes as long as possible. That population is growing. According to the Department of Health and Human Services' Administration on Aging, the population 65 years or older numbered 39.6 million in 2009. By 2030, that number will grow to about 72.1 million.

Many local techniques and programs can help seniors stay in their homes longer.

While people are living longer and healthier lives, there are still barriers to aging in place, including medication management, self-care, socialization and transportation. But there are innovative strategies and initiatives to help combat these roadblocks.

"We're showing people how to modify their home so that it is accessible," said said Robert C. Eiffert, the Long Term Care Program manager for the Fairfax County Health Department. Fairfax and other local counties are conducting workshops on how to make a home safe for a senior who wants to live alone. "We're talking about things like adding a ramp to your front door, changing your door knobs and cabinet handles for people who have arthritis in their hands."

"There are wonderful emerging technologies that allow adult children to monitor their parents who live alone," he said. "It is not intrusive. There are not cameras involved, but there are motion sensors. For example, if there is no movement in the morning, an adult child might think, 'Hmmm, I need to check.'"

Andrew J. Carle, director of the Senior Housing Administration at George Mason

University, recommends First Street for Boomers and Beyond (www.firststreetonline.com) which offers products for seniors and their caregivers. "Products like a nice walk in bathtub for seniors or an alarm that reminds you when to take your medicine are things you can do to change your home and make it safe."

A LACK OF SOCIAL interaction and mental stimulation can contribute to depression and mental deterioration, Carle said. Or-organizations like the Osher Lifelong Learning Institute (OLLI) at George Mason University, offer opportunities for intellectual stimulation and cultural experiences for retirees in Northern Virginia.

“OLLI, as we call it, is for people who don’t want to sit around and watch television all day,” said Carle. “Professors volunteer their time to give lectures on art, history, science and other topics. Listening to professors speak about stimulating topics helps keep their brains sharp.”

Jennifer Disano, OLLI’s executive director, says the group has 1,200 members, and is funded by an endowment from the Bernard Osher Foundation. The group’s main campus is in Fairfax, but other campuses are in Reston and Sterling. It serves the needs of those who might not feel comfortable in traditional college classrooms and don’t want the pressure of writing papers and taking tests, but are still interested in learning.

“We have people here who were economists and worked with finance, but in their retired life they want to explore areas ... like art classes or history classes,” she said.

One of those members is 76-year-old John Woods. He has attended three to four OLLI events a week for 10 years. “We have a wide variety of professionals and a wide variety of groups that meet,” he said. “We have a group that meets to talk about financial investments. Another group meets every Monday morning at 9 a.m. and looks at the past week’s headlines from the Washington Post, New York Times and Wall Street Journal. They have insights that are important. The stimulating thing is sharing ideas among ourselves.”

VILLAGES ARE community-based organizations designed to help members help each other remain independent and in the communities of their choice. “Back in 2000, villages started with a group in Boston, and in 2007 there was a big boom,” said Barbara Sullivan, executive director of Mount Vernon at Home in Mount Vernon. “It is community-based. Every village is different, but they’re there for people who want to age in place.”

Eiffert, of George Mason, says village members define the type and scope of services. “A good starting point when creating a village is to survey the community members to determine their needs,” he said. “We provide technical assistance to community groups that are interested in putting together a village and encouragement on what models work best for their community. Fairfax County is working with Montgomery County to rewrite the manual on how to start a village.”

There are a few different models, including the “Concierge Village,” which is a non-profit model that coordinates access to an array of services through vetted providers, including transportation, home repairs, care coordination and computer technicians. Most also include social and educational activities. Members arrange for services by calling a central phone number, and pay annual dues that can range from $500 to $800 for an individual and $700 to $1,200 for a couple.

The “All Volunteer” model organizes community volunteers to provide services and support to others. There are no paid staff. In some cases, hours donated by volunteers are “banked” and can be used in the future if the volunteer needs services or assistance. The “Neighborhood Network” is also informal. Groups meet on a regular basis to hear speakers on topics of interest selected by members.

ANOTHER BIG GAP is medication management, Eiffert said. “If someone can’t manage their own medication and can’t afford to pay someone to come in to do it for them, that is a service gap that forces people into assisted living facilities.”

Carle agrees that the decision to age in place is complicated. “The first knee-jerk reaction is that when asked, seniors want to stay in their own homes,” he said, adding that those surveys can be misleading: “The surveys are not always credible if you’re surveying people who are 50-plus. I’m 54 and of course I want to stay in my house, but ask me again in 20 years. I think they should be surveying people who are 75-plus.”

In addition, “people don’t always understand the economic, social and safety aspects of it,” he added. “You can create all kinds of technology and universal designs to create a house for aging in place, but a senior might not be able to afford it. It could end up costing far more than the best assisted living facility in town.”

Granny Pods, small prefabricated homes that allow families to house their relatives in small backyard cottages, are another alternative. “These small living units allow you to put an elderly relative in your backyard and hook up to your electricity,” said Carle.

Arlington seniors take a hatha yoga classes. A recent study showed yoga programs specifically designed for seniors can improve strength and flexibility.

Yoga for All Ages

attended two 90-minute yoga classes per week, and were asked to complete at least 20 minutes of directed home practice on alternate days.

The study found yoga programs tailored to elderly adults can be a cost-effective way to prevent or reduce age-related changes, specifically an increased risk for falls, dependency and other ailments.

Local yoga teachers agree, saying that while yoga classes designed for the 55 and older crowd are increasing in popularity, myths about the practice keep some seniors out of yoga studios.

"The main thing that I hear is that you have to already be flexible to do yoga," said Sandy Pradas of Joyful Heart Yoga in Mount Vernon. "People look at pictures in magazines of people wrapping their legs around their necks or doing other advanced poses and they think, 'If I can't do that, then I can't do yoga.'"

Pradas, whose students are mostly between 50 and 75 years old, said, "Everybody can do yoga, but there are a lot of types of yoga and not every type is good for everybody."

Dawn Curtis, owner of East Meets West Yoga Center, recently completed a course at Duke Integrative Medicine and believes an increasing interest in yoga among seniors will be known as the Silver Tsunami.

"That is baby boomers going into yoga," she said. "Yoga for seniors is going to be the biggest target audience that yoga teachers are going to have because of the number of baby boomers who are looking for alternative ways of exercise because they are not going to be able to keep up with impact exercises like running."

In fact, she says gentle yoga classes are among the most popular at her studio. "I have students who are as old as 84. We deal with people who can't get on the floor," she said. "We use chairs. We work on balance because that is a main concern among seniors. We work on coordination because that is another thing that tends to diminish as we age."

Jennifer Collins, a countywide program specialist in the Office of Senior Adult Programs in Arlington, said that yoga classes that are specifically tailored for those 55 and older are among her office's most popular.

"Some of our [yoga] classes fill up within minutes of opening," said Collins. "We have people sitting at computers at our senior centers ready to register as soon registration opens because they know the classes are going to fill."

Sean .FM (yes, that is his name) of OneAum in Potomac, works with seniors with a wide range of abilities. He said it's important to find a class that is a good fit.

"There are many kinds of seniors," he said. "There are seniors that are immobile and some who are really active. We have a student who is almost 70 and I just taught him how to do a handstand. We created Yoga Rx for those with mobility issues. We work them in the chairs. We also do a lot of private sessions."

George Lynch, fitness director at Vinson Hall Retirement Community in McLean, is planning to incorporate yoga classes into the community's fitness program. The instruction will be tailored to meet the needs of his clients. "We have residents who are in their 80s, 90s and some in their 100s. Everything we do is designed specifically for seniors."

Andrew J. Carle director of the Senior Housing Administration at George Mason University said an increasing number of retirement communities are offer yoga classes as part of their fitness programs. "The future of senior housing will include science-based wellness activities like yoga," he said. "Anything that gets us beyond senior activities such as birthdays, Bibles, bingo and bridge is a step up."

Accessibility on a Different Level

BY JOHN BYRD

Details

How can you tell when in-law suite is outperforming the usual requirements? Well, for starters, when the owners themselves decide to occupy the new accommodation as their primary living space.

Such was the recent choice of Gee and Aycha Saad, two Northern Virginia seniors who started investigating options for retrofitting their three-level home when the wife, Aycha Saad, transitioned from a walker to a wheelchair.

The idea was to improve everyday mobility and even incorporate equipment needed for physical therapy treatments while preserving the home's upper two levels should the couple later decide to sell the house and move to a retirement facility.

After weighing several scenarios, the couple summoned Russ Glickman, president of Glickman Design Build and an expert in aging-in-place, to explore options.

"We began by looking at ways to add an elevator," Glickman said. But the modifications for the elevator would disrupt the existing second floor plan without fully solving the accessibility issues.

The home's mostly unfinished 2,000-square-foot lower level, however, provided opportunities, and the Glickman team proposed a plan for a largely self-sufficient suite complete with accessible bath, kitchenette and other amenities.

Configured as an open floorplan that incorporates a sizable master suite, the new layout is differentiated into use zones that emphasize privacy.

Key components include: A kitchenette and dining zone finished with cherry Shaker-style cabinet facings, granite counter surfaces and ceramic tile flooring. A den/family room contiguous to the dining area that offers direct access to the rear yard. The space has been fitted with a large-scale plasma TV and a "Sensurround" sound system. A private master suite with spacious bedroom and a bath that includes a 5-foot-by-8-foot curbless "roll-in" shower with a pull-down seat. The bathroom connects to a fully-equipped laundry room.

To assure a suitable space for physical therapy treatments, Glickman custom-designed a wall cabinet in the dining area that contains a pull-down table with a reinforced steel frame.

To accommodate a wheelchair platform lift, the steps leading to the suite from the first floor were widened from 30 inches to 46 inches.

To make it easier for the Saads to identify visitors, the home's front door has been equipped with a security camera linked to a laptop. Glickman also introduced technologies that enable the couple to lock and unlock the front door from the lower level suite.

Aesthetically, the suite's carefully developed interior design confers both warmth and spatial cohesion. Mosaic tile flooring differentiates the kitchen/dining zone from the adjacent den and entertainment area. In short, it's a pretty, comfortable home that's also healing and supportive.

"Our goal was to satisfy immediate needs while implementing a makeover that will add re-sale value," Glickman said. "The house has simply been re-defined as a traditional single family home that includes a full-size in-law suite. It's a very marketable improvement, yet meets all the present requirements."
