You get the windows, we pay the interest

The problems with plastic, vinyl windows:

• Even through normal temperature changes, vinyl windows and patio doors can expand, contract, warp and leak.

The solution is our Fibrex® window:

• We’re the replacement window division of Andersen, and they developed our Fibrex material to meet their superior standards.

• Fibrex is so strong it helps prevent glass movement, seal failure, and discomfort in your home.

Springfield Shortlisted for FBI Headquarters

Other locations are Greenbelt and Landover

By Janelle Germanos
The Connection

Springfield could very well be the next site of the FBI headquarters. The General Services Administration and FBI announced Tuesday that Springfield was included on the shortlist for the new FBI headquarters.

“We are very pleased that the Springfield Warehouse in Fairfax County has made the short list for the new FBI headquarters. The project would help spur redevelopment in that area and because it is federally owned, this site is a lower cost option for the FBI. Virginia is unified behind this site and we feel it is the best of the three,” said Sharon Bulova, chairman of the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors.

Greenbelt and Landover in Maryland are also included on the list for the new headquarters, which would replace the current J. Edgar Hoover building. The Springfield location is located at the GSA Franconia Warehouse Complex near Interstate 95 and Franconia Road.

“I’m very pleased that the GSA recognized the merits of our Springfield site. With extensive transit options, access to almost every major highway in the region, and close proximity to Quantico and Washington, D.C., the Springfield site remains the best option to serve the FBI’s needs,” Supervisor Jeff McKay (D–Lee District) said in a statement. “I hope this process continues to be one based on merit and good use of taxpayer funds and not political considerations. All of Virginia will continue to unite behind just one site: Springfield. We will re-double our effort moving forward to promote Springfield’s attributes.”

National Environmental Policy Act reviews will be conducted at all locations.

“We are pleased that the GSA warehouse site in Springfield is on the short list for the FBI headquarters relocation. All the sites named today have advantages, but we believe the Springfield site best meets the criteria laid out for the FBI. Our main hope is that the FBI has a location that best allows the bureau and its employees to fulfill their important mission in the most productive and efficient manner possible,” said Gerald Gordon, president of the Fairfax County Economic Development Authority.

Public comment will also be available on the plan. Virginia governor Terry McAuliffe announced Tuesday that he believes Springfield is the best option for the FBI.

“Virginia’s inclusion on the final list of prospective sites for the new FBI headquarters is unquestionably positive news for our Commonwealth and economy. There is no doubt that the Springfield location offers the FBI and its employees the best combination of location, access to mass transit and local amenities. I look forward to continuing to work with Virginia’s congressional delegation to convince decision makers within the FBI that Virginia is the location for this headquarters and the thousands of jobs that come with it,” McAuliffe said in a statement.

Serving Families For 90 Years

Mary Agee, NVFS president and CEO, and Karen Horowitz, director of volunteer and internship engagement, present Ralph Lickey with the Presidential Award for Community Volunteers.

By Reena Singh
The Connection

A n organization does not thrive for 90 years by chance.

Northern Virginia Family Services, a county institution, has impacted families throughout the region for nearly a century with no sign of slowing down.

CEO and President Mary Agee, who has been at the organization for 46 of those years, has seen the nonprofit flourish during her time there.

“In reading the history, there were a lot of passionate and smart people that were on the board in the ’20s, ’30s and ’40s,” she said. “Very adaptable and very principled. That’s the other thing that struck me — that the decisions were based upon doing the right thing and never turning a child away.”

She said that even today, her staff is willing to push boundaries while still adhering to the organization’s mission.

NVFS opened its doors in 1924 as a family counseling center; it was run by a single volunteer at the time.

Agee joined the 11 person staff in 1972. She just announced her retirement, effective next June, on Monday.

“The budget was $182,000 at the time,” she said.

The budget is now $32 million and staff count has soared to 150 people. One of those staff members is current Chief Operative Officer Cheri Villa who has been with the organization for five years.

“One of the reasons I came here was to work with Mary on her vision,” she said.

Recently, the organization has helped families who have suffered during the recession to adapt to the change.

“I think one of the most interesting things is when you look at our history, it’s a reflection of the region as a whole,” said Villa. “As community needs have emerged, Northern Virginia Family Services has stepped in.”

In the last 20 years, affordable housing and mental health issues were added to the list of NVFS’s concerns. However, Agee does not think they were ever a non-issue for the area.

“The needs in the community have absolutely not changed,” said Agee. “The thing that has changed is the faces that use them.”

She said that the organization had the chance to help its community during the response after a plane struck the Pentagon on Sept. 11, 2001.

“It was an honor to be asked by the Community Foundation of the National Capital Region to design a program that would support the families that were impacted by the attack on the Pentagon,” she said.

“What that taught was how to perfect a case management model — help them recover from trauma and bring in a number of resources.”

She said the leadership the organization showed made NVFS a national leader in trauma response. It is currently poised to help the numbers of children that have crossed the border into Texas.

But it does not do the work alone. Many of the issues that leaders at NVFS are passionate about are also tackled with other local organizations.

“I think collaboration is a big part of our success,” she said. “These issues are so big that you have to tackle them together.”

Finally, Marriage Rights Protected in Virginia

By John C. Cook
Supervisor (R-Braddock District)

Fairfax County is actively working to improve services to seniors and make the County friendlier to those growing older in our communities. One of the most prominent advancements has been the 50 + Action Plan developed by the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors, in partnership with the Fairfax Area Commission on Aging and the Fairfax Area Agency on Aging. The plan addresses gaps in services and identifies future improvements to address the challenges facing our seniors. The final plan is expected to be presented to the Board of Supervisors this fall for approval.

In 2013, the 50 + Committee of the Board of Supervisors put forth ideas on the County’s efforts in the 50 + plan and initiated a community dialogue. Based on the input received, several workgroups were established to address topics such as transportation, housing, services and community engagement. Each of the subcommittees has a community champion and comprises community members from the public, private and nonprofit sectors.

Thirty-one initiatives were enumerated with the guiding principles to be attainable, affordable and actionable within the next five years.

What is happening right now? A few of the initiatives are already in practice and some are on the verge of implementation. One example is NOVA Rides, which has been awarded some start-up funding from the Consolidated Community Funding Pool (CCFP). This project, operated by the Jewish Community Center, coordinates transportation efforts between local nonprofits providing the services.

One segment of the plan I would encourage is senior volunteerism. The 50 + plan is working to establish two unique approaches to promoting senior participation in our communities. The first is Grand Involvement, which is a program that connects experienced older adult volunteers to work with local schools. The program will help strengthen the bonds of the oldest and youngest community members and support the education of our most vulnerable populations.

The other endeavor is Venture in Volunteerism, which concentrates efforts on recruiting and placing older adults with various volunteer opportunities. Our retired folks have a vast array of talents and skills that are perfectly suited to meet the needs of many of our charities and nonprofit organizations.

Another important priority for Braddock District laid out in the 50+ plan is preventing criminal exploitation of residents. I will be promoting safe living by hosting and promoting a series on criminal exploitation prevention. Protecting our residents is matter of great importance, so look for this series in the coming months.

Action items on the Horizon:
With full Board approval of the Plan this fall, many of the other initiatives are positioned to come into realization.

Join the effort! Reach out to one of the subcommittees: Transportation, Housing, Safe & Healthy Communities, Services for Older Adults and Caregivers and see how you can contribute. Feel free to contact my office directly and we will put you in touch with the right person.

Our aging population has given their time and support to our communities and schools endlessly. In order for these solutions to take place, they need community ownership. Join in the effort to empower seniors to live many healthy, happy years here in Fairfax County.

Fairfax County Takes Steps To Improve Senior Services

On July 28, 2014, in affirming that Virginia’s ban on same-sex marriage is unconstitutional, Circuit Judge Henry E. Floyd writes: “We recognize that same-sex marriage makes some people deeply uncomfortable. However, inertia and apprehension are not legitimate bases for denying same-sex couples due process and equal protection of the laws.

Civil marriage is one of the cornerstones of our way of life. It allows individuals to celebrate and publicly declare their intentions to form lifelong partnerships, which provide unparalleled intimacy, companionship, emotional support, and security. The choice of whether and whom to marry is an intensely personal decision that alters the trajectory of any individual’s life. Denying same-sex couples this choice prohibits them from participating fully in our society, which is precisely the type of segregation that the Fourteenth Amendment cannot countenance.”

Judge Arenda Wright Allen, on Valentine's Day, 2014, ruled that Virginia’s ban on same-sex marriage is unconstitutional, writing: “A spirited and controversial debate is underway regarding who may enjoy the right to marry in the United States of America. America has pursued a journey to make and keep our citizens free. This journey has never been easy, but we have pursued a journey to make and keep our Constitution as meaningful for all of us as it was for the generations that preceded it. Denying same-sex couples this choice prohibits them from participating fully in our society, which is precisely the type of segregation that the Fourteenth Amendment cannot countenance.”

Rome’s Favorite Shows, Robinson Memories

Chip Rome directed at least 150 plays during his three decades at Robinson Secondary School. Below, he discusses some of his favorites:

“Morph” brought Robinson’s first Cappies win for Best Play in 2005. “It was a special show and a brilliant score,” said Rome. “We had a pool with three dollars of water in the stage. My son Robert was in that show and was nominated for Comic Actors.”

“The Tyne,Birds.” For his 20th year at the school, Rome reprised “Rocky,” which was the first musical held at Robinson. And, he said, “The kid who played Birdie, plus the voice of Ed Flanders in our original show, came back and that was amazing.”

“When we did it for the second time, it was the first time we won the Cappies,” said Rome. “It’s everything my grandfather’s personal tory. To me, it totally under- stand that show.”

One of his most treasured memories, however, wasn’t a particular play but what happened for it. “My 25 show,” the drama teacher held a surprise party in my honor,” said Rome. “My students from 1983 through 2009 returned – and that’s something I’d wish for every teacher. Some of them flew in from all parts of the country – it was extraordinary.”

Call a "formidable teacher," said Rome, "when you see the light go on in kids’ eyes because they get it. And when kids later come back and tell me, or write me, that I made a difference – that’s enormously gratifying. My job is to create theater lovers and Aristotle’s going to teach them. Son Robert was a Cappies winner and a future director. Daughter Anna is in a hit musical in The Beacon Bus and teaches advanced musical arts to young actors on the autism spectrum.

Robinson grad performs in “Shrek the Musical.”

By Bonnie Hobbs
The Connection

A big green ogre, a Princess, a wisecracking donkey and a love-struck dragon — they’ll all be onstage when The Alliance Theatre’s Summer Stars program presents “Shrek the Musical.” And right there with them will be Robinson Secondary graduate Spencer Boyd.

The cast and crew of nearly 100 have been working on the show since May and, when the curtain rises, they’ll be joined by a 13-piece pit orchestra. Helming his fourth Alliance show, Director Scott Olson says things are going really well.

“I’ve got an insanely talented cast,” he said. “My leads are spot-on for their characters, and 30 members of our Summer Stars theater camp — from third through eighth grade — are in the show, too. They’re doing really high-level dances, tight choreography and even marching.”

Olson said special prosthetics were created to transform actors into ogres and fairytale characters, and the costumes and make-up will be “amazing,” as will the 26-foot-long, light-up, dragon puppet that exhales smoke. The scenes take place in a swampy forest, a castle, a dragon’s lair, a church and at Shrek’s house — an oversized tree stump.

‘THERE’S ALSO A MORAL’ to the story. “This show’s about understanding and appreciating others’ differences and accepting and appreciating yourself for who you are,” Olson said.

Playing Shrek is Oak Hill’s Glynn Cosker. “He’s an ogre who lives by himself in a swamp,” said Cosker. “So he’s surprised to one day find dozens of fairytale creatures there. But he’s not immune to adventure. Yet when he falls in love with Fiona and forms a friendship with Donkey, you see a different side of him and learn that he actually has a big heart.”

Cosker’s been in 30 shows, but calls Shrek one of the most fun roles he’s ever played. “He’s such a big, full-of-life character,” said Cosker. “And the whole experience — working with the kids and seeing their reactions to Shrek — has been wonderful. It’s about 180 degrees from my own, nice and introverted personality. As Shrek, I do lots of yelling and screaming, so it’s quite therapeutic.”

His favorite song, which he sings, is “When Words Fail.” In it, said Cosker, “Shrek’s trying to get the courage to ask Fiona to spend time with him — and worrying what he’ll do if his words fail him. The song speaks to his humility as you see him shedding the ogre shell and becoming more human.”

Cosker said the audience will also enjoy the show’s energy and focus, plus the singers and dancers in the ensemble. “The choreography and costumes are awesome,” he said. “People will step into a different world for two hours and have a good time.”

NEW ROBINSON GRAD Spencer Boyd, who’ll major in musical theater at JMU in the fall, portrays Lord Farquaad. “He’s the Lord of Duloc, but is constantly searching for power,” said Boyd. “He’s over-compensating for his short height, so he wants perfection. He’s banished all the fairytale creatures from his land because he only wants to rule over perfect people.”

However, the only way he can become king is by marrying a princess like Fiona. “He’s very proud and can be charming and charismatic,” said Boyd. “But he’s also mean, strict and ill-tempered — and the subject of his height is off limits.”

“It’s great playing him because he’s just over-the-top with everything,” continued Boyd. “He has a regal air of royalty, but is touchy about his height, so he’s a very funny character to play.” But Since Boyd is actually tall in real life, he’ll be walking on his knees during the show to be short.

He especially likes the number, “What’s Up, Duloc?” which he sings. “It’s Farquaad’s entrance song, makes fun of other Broadway numbers and is very humorous,” said Boyd. Overall, he said, “This is a really funny, family-friendly show with a great message — let your freak flag fly and don’t be afraid to be different. And it’ll be really enjoyable to watch.”

Lake Braddock Grad Owens to Play Baseball at ECU

Q&A: Former Bruins SS enjoys playing beach volleyball.

Jack Owens was a four-year member of the Lake Braddock varsity baseball program. As a sophomore, Owens helped the Bruins win the program’s first state championship. The following year, he helped Lake Braddock capture the Northern Region title. Unfortunately for Owens, he missed part of his senior year due to a wrist injury, and the Bruins failed to qualify for the region tournament.

While Owens’ high school career ended in disappointing fashion, he will continue playing baseball in college at East Carolina University in Greenville, N.C. Owens recently participated in a Q&A via email with The Connection.

❖ Connection: What made East Carolina the right fit for you?
Owens: Greenville is a great college sports town. The all-around school pride and attitude within the baseball team felt like a perfect fit.

❖ Connection: What is your major? What position will you play?
Owens: No major chosen yet. I’ll be playing middle infield.

❖ Connection: At what age did you start playing baseball? Have you always been a shortstop? When did you realize playing college baseball was a possibility for you?
Owens: I’ve been playing baseball since before I can remember. I’ve played everywhere from center field to catcher to shortstop. Shortstop felt like the right fit. I’ve known college was a definite possibility after freshman year when I developed and started getting attention from schools.

❖ Connection: The Lake Braddock baseball program seemed to deal with quite a few injuries in recent years. How many times were you injured in your high school career and how much time did you miss? Owens: I battled tendonitis in my knee for almost three years, which didn’t sideline me but it was a handicap. I missed almost half of the 2014 season due to a torn ligament in my wrist. All healed now and I’m feeling 100 percent.

❖ Connection: You won a state championship your sophomore year, a region title your junior year, and then the team failed to qualify for regionals your senior year. What was it like dealing with the disappointment of your senior year after all the success you experienced in the past?
Owens: The failure to win a regional or state title my senior year was tough. It was hard to comprehend that my last season in high school could end so quickly. But in my years at Lake Braddock, we made history. The 2012 Lake Braddock team was always be remembered as Lake Braddock’s first state baseball title.

❖ Connection: What is your favorite memory of playing high school baseball?
Owens: I’ve had more good memories than I could ever remember but the thing that stands out to me most is when Coach [Jody] Rutherford was in a rare good mood and I got my second ring.

❖ Connection: Are you a pro sports fan? If so, who are your favorite teams?
Owens: I’m a big pro sports fan except for the NBA. I’m a big Steelers fan and a bigger Nationals fan.

❖ Connection: What is your favorite movie?
Owens: ‘The Other Guys.’

❖ Connection: What is your favorite music artist? Why?
Owens: Zac Brown, because he has the voice of an angel.

❖ Connection: What location is the farthest you have traveled from the Washington, D.C. metro area?
Owens: I flew alone to Phoenix, Ariz., for the Perfect Game World Series, where the Evoshield Canes team I was a part of won, and I got my second ring.

❖ Connection: What are you most looking forward to about the transition from high school to college?
Owens: I’m excited to experience the freedom in college to mature and grow. The biggest thing for me though is the level of baseball I get to see. I’m excited to challenge myself.

❖ Connection: Who is your favorite music artist? Why?
Owens: Not one thing. I worked my [butt] off and every hardship brought me to where I am today.

❖ Connection: What is your favorite hobby outside of baseball?
Owens: Beach volleyball. My friends and I will play at Burke Lake for hours on end. We’re not very good but it’s still fun.

❖ Connection: What is your favorite sport other than baseball?
Owens: Not one thing. I worked my [butt] off and every hardship brought me to where I am today.
