Friends, family and members of the Potomac Chamber of Commerce gathered Thursday evening, Nov. 13, at Normandie Farm Restaurant to honor Potomac’s People of the year, including Citizen of the Year Barry Perlis, who moved to Potomac in 1976.

Perlis is vice-president of the Potomac Community Village, part of the national village movement providing support for local residents to stay in their homes and neighborhoods as they get older. Perlis also volunteers at Manor Care Nursing Home, serves as president of the Ridgely Neighborhood Homeowner’s Association, is a member of the board of directors and Investment Committee of Jewish Social Service Agency and is president of two synagogues.

Perlis for the past 10 years has served as chairman of U.S. operations of Save a Child’s Heart, providing life-saving pediatric heart surgery and follow-up care for indigent children from developing countries.

Business People of the Year Jill and John Phillips have been involved in every aspect of Potomac life. They are both former Army officers, retired to Potomac and bought a home with a large yard for their five children. Jill Phillips thought it would be a good idea to acquire an alpaca to help “trim the lawn.” As she collected more animals — goats, chickens, ponies — they decided to launch “Squeals on Wheels,” a portable petting zoo with pony rides. The concept was almost an instant hit, and they have been in business ever since.

“It is a huge honor for us to be chosen as Business of the Year by the Potomac Chamber of Commerce,” said Jill Phillips. “In recognizing our family business, you are honoring the importance of being engaged, giving back and sharing our gifts with the community. It is a privilege to operate a business in Potomac and our purpose is to share our love of animals with our home town and to bring joy to children and families.”

The Phillips are also involved in volunteer work for many Potomac organizations. They are helping establish the Potomac Community Village; Jill Phillips sits on the board of the Potomac Chamber of Commerce.

OPINION
Why Shop Small? Shop Large Locally

Small business Saturday isn’t enough; don’t wait until then, and don’t stop after that.

There is a joy to shopping in local stores at the holidays, to participating in community traditions and celebrations, to walking along a sidewalk with the streets decked out for the holidays, to being greeted by someone likely to be the owner of the store, to finding gifts that are not mass-produced.

One way to be sure holiday shopping comes with some holiday spirit is to do a portion of your shopping in some of the area’s locally owned stores. There is a special holiday ambiance available by shopping in the heart of a community that is decked out for the season. Small retail shops are part of defining any community. Their livelihood depends on their livability and quality of the neighborhoods around them. A small business owner pays attention to every detail in his or her business in a way that is otherwise unmatched.

We all benefit when local stores thrive, when local business districts beckon. An effort to support locally owned businesses has resulted in the recognition of Small Business Saturday, the Saturday after Thanksgiving, also called Shop Small. This year that day is Nov. 29.

Locally owned retail shops, services, restaurants depend on vibrant local communities to thrive, and communities depend on those businesses as well. Most small, locally owned businesses invest in community, helping to transform our towns and communities with a sense of place. Frequently, it is the small retail person who is active in fundraising for local charities, advocating for improvements, for fire and rescue service, for local schools and in organizing holiday events.

PARDON MY TURKEY
But is that a bird in your hand?

Each year before Thanksgiving, the President of the United States “pardons” a live turkey presented to him by the National Turkey Federation. The gifts have been going on for over a century, but it wasn’t until recently that the turkey pardon became an official White House tradition.

There are many stories surrounding the origin of the presidential turkey pardon. Some say the tradition can be traced as far back as 1863, when by some accounts, President Lincoln interrupted a cabinet meeting to grant clemency to a turkey named “Jack” his son had befriended. An 1865 dispatch by a White House reporter confirmed this version noting, “Tad’s plea was admitted and the turkey’s life spared.”

Records show, however, that official gifts of turkeys to American presidents date from the 1870s, when a marketing-savvy Rhode Island poultry dealer named Horace Vose began sending birds to the White House. In 1873, Vose delivered a 38-pound stunner to President Ulysses S. Grant. Vose went on to supply turkeys to presidents for over 40 years, becoming a national celebrity.

By the 1920s, turkey gifts began taking on a whole new flavor. Chicago’s Harding Girls Club sent a turkey to President Warren Harding in 1921 dressed in a custom-made flying suit complete with goggles. The bird arrived at the College Park airport on a mail plane escorted by an armed guard. Another turkey arrived in 1922 in a crate designed as a battleship.

Harry Truman was not the first president to pardon a turkey, but many stories have him originating the tradition. In 1947 at Thanksgiving, Truman was urging Americans to conserve food in an effort called “Poultry-Less Thursday.” Poultry growers were outraged and in protest sent crates of live chickens dubbed

President Barack Obama pardoning a turkey.

“Hens for Harry” to the White House. The stunt grabbed headlines. Though records show Truman did not eat turkey that particular year, in December of 1948, he accepted two turkeys and was heard to remark they would “come in handy” for Christmas dinner.

President John F. Kennedy is known to have spared a turkey, but his decision was not due to a love for the bird. Kennedy received a Thanksgiving turkey from the Poultry and Egg National Board with a sign around its neck reading “Good Eatin’ Mr. President.” Kennedy sent the bird back to the farm saying, “We’ll let this one grow.”

President Ronald Reagan is the first president on record to formally issue a “pardon” to a turkey; in this case a turkey named Charlie, who was sent to him in 1987 from a petting zoo. Some say, however, the reprieve was a joke made to deflect criticism over his considering a presidential pardon of Iran-Contra player Oliver North.

It was George H. W. Bush who, in 1989, made the turkey pardon an official White House tradition. Rumor has it that he did this in response to animal rights activists picketing nearby. He said, “Reprieve,” “keep him going,” or “pardon” — it’s all the same for the turkey, as long as he doesn’t end up on the president’s holiday table.

Whatever the reason, turkeys have been pardoned ever since and taken to area farms to live out the rest of their natural lives. For many years the birds were sent to Frying Pan Park in Fairfax, Va. Other “farms” have included Disneyland and Walt Disney World Resorts where the turkeys have served as marshals in the annual Thanksgiving parade.

The National Thanksgiving Turkey Presenation and pardon take place in the White House Rose Garden just before Thanksgiving. In an official ceremony, the president is presented with a live domestic turkey and issues a pardon.

Local retail stores, mom-and-pop stores, face tough challenges right now. Competition from big box stores and online sellers makes the holiday shopping season all the more important to locally owned retailers. But local families will literally spend millions of dollars to shop and exchange gifts during the next month, spending tens of millions of dollars in a variety of places.

Everyone will do some of their shopping at the mall. Everyone will do some shopping online. Many will answer the call of the big box. But local shoppers should be sure to save some shopping time and dollars for local stores.

Spend some time shopping in your own community, and also plan an excursion to a nearby town to check out the local businesses and holiday spirit there.

Exploring Life-Changing Travels

Local authors discuss unexpected adventures.

By Marilyn Campbell
The Almanac

A group of local writers contributed to a collection of literary travel essays, “Destinations & Discoveries,” which was released earlier this month. Meghan O’Neill edited the collection.

“The goal in collecting these essays was to show a trip, be it a vacation or business assignment, can offer unexpected and life altering lessons,” said O’Neill, who lives in Potomac. “Writing about your travels forces you to be reflective and focused.”

— Meghan O’Neill

This collection explores the joys, challenges and insights travel can bring. “Destinations & Discoveries” enables readers to take vicarious journeys without leaving the comfort of their reading chair.

“I spent time hiking through Ireland with my 13-year-old daughter,” said essayist Derek Perkins of Centreville. “What started out as a ‘forced fun’ trip for my daughter turned into a family vacation, albeit cold and wet, that brought our family closer and created memories that we will always cherish.”

O’Neill selected eight literary travel essays that are varied in both style and geography. The settings range from a Mexican fishing trip to rural Ireland, a western Canadian beach, a Tuscan kitchen, a snowy day in the Blue Ridge mountains, and a memorable study abroad experience in Paris.

There are essays that share cherished family traditions. “There is a wizardry to the art of packing, and in it Mary Poppins has nothing on my grandmother,” said essayist Bonnie Foote of Alexandria.

“Destinations & Discoveries: A Short Collection of Literary Travel Essays” can be found on Amazon.com and in local bookstores.

Few of the more than 400 artists and crafters featured in this weekend’s Sugarloaf Craft Festival got their start in a classroom.

Potomac resident Jill Newman has lost her last hour after creating vividly colored felted jewelry in her Zazzy Peacock Studio, melding together pieces of combed or uncombed wool to fabricate rings, necklaces, brooches, earrings and other household items.

One of the few members of her family that didn’t fall heart over loom for knitting or crocheting, Newman said she came across felting after repairing a favor}

When she decided to leave her previous job, in corporate law, to spend more time at home with her then-young children, she rekindled her love of art, namely painting. Once she started felting a few years ago, Newman said she started thinking about one day taking her jewelry to the Sugarloaf festival but considered it a "lofty goal" at the time.

Undeterred, she applied for this fall’s shows in January and made her first appearance in October. She’s also slated to participate in December’s event, followed by the Tewaian Artists in the Country-side holiday studio tour, taking place Dec. 5-7 and 12-14.

With a handful of shows and sales under her belt, including a show in Chicago that required a good deal of pre-planning and shipping goods to be sold on site, Newman is more prepared than ever for the fun.

Encouraging STEM for Girls

Holy Child will host female speakers in science, technology, engineering and math fields.

By Marilyn Campbell
The Almanac

When Trish Whitcomb’s daughter Colleen began to express an interest in engineering, she and her husband were at a loss as to how to foster her academic and career aspirations.

“I am a pediatric oncology nurse, my husband is a general contractor, and our daughter Colleen’s interests are in technology and engineering, which is something we knew very little about,” said Whitcomb, whose daughter is a sophomore at Connelly School of the Holy Child in Potomac, and a member of the school’s Tech Club. “Over the years I have learned what arduino microcontrollers, LEDs and soldering irons are, and seen how Colleen uses them in different projects.”

Whitcomb and other Holy Child parents have a new tool to help them support their daughters. The school has planned a year-long speaker series called Leading Voices, during which female leaders in science, technology, engineering and math (STEM) will offer guidance to parents and students interested in exploring STEM careers.

“Research also shows us that exposing girls to female mentors has a strong impact on their willingness to consider a career in the tech field,” said Shannon M. Gomez, Ed.D., Connelly School of the Holy Child head of school. “There are minimal differences in aptitude for math and science between the genders, but society makes them much bigger. Having an example of a successful woman scientist or mathematician standing before them completely debunks the myth.”

Leading Voices will have an impact on the school community. “I think this program will provide students with more possibilities for their future,” she said. “Leading Voices will also help by encouraging faculty members to think about problem-solving as a concept that can be applied across all disciplines.”

“Whitcomb is enthusiastic about gaining new tools to inspire and support her daughter. “I look forward to receiving guidance in how to help Colleen navigate to the career of her choice,” she said.

“I think it will be an invaluable experience for Colleen to have the opportunity to speak … with women who have successful careers in fields that interest her.”

Holy Child has planned a year-long speaker series designed to inspire students’ interest in science, technology, engineering and math.

And The “Scancer” Is…
By KENNETH H. LOURIE

Unknown at this date - Saturday, November 15, 2014. In fact, it will be six days from now until we’ll know the results. As it is always scheduled, a week or so after quarterly CT Scan, we will have our usual follow-up, face-to-face appointment with my oncologist. At this meeting, I am examined, and of course, the radiologist’s report of the most recent scan is discussed, and plans for the future – stay the course and/or adjust or switch altogether – are considered.

However, this week there’s been a blip. My chemotherapy infusion was delayed one week at least, maybe longer, because my creatinine levels were too high. Creatinine levels reflect kidney function, and when my level exceeds normal, given the potential for kidney failure – ultimately all the associated, interrelated complications/effects – treatment is stopped until additional lab work is completed. Now, in and of itself, this presents concerns; in conjunction with a potentially disappointing CT scan, results of which will be learned on the 21st (even though I remain asymptomatic and feel as normal as a stage IV, non-small cell lung cancer survivor could possibly feel nearing year six, post-diagnosis), this presents worries exponentially more distressing.

Still, I’m not there yet and won’t react as if the diagnosis is confirmed until it is. For the moment, I am simply enduring the typical ups and downs of living with an originally-diagnosed-as-terminal/inoperable form of lung cancer (are there any others)? There are good days and bad days to be sure, and many days before, during and after. To be alive and facing this as yet unconfirmed complication is par for the course. To expect any different would be unrealistic. Most stage IV, non-small cell lung cancer patients don’t survive as long as I have. Ergo, I would never complain about a situation that few of my fellow lung cancer patients have lived long enough to even consider. Heck, I’m the lucky one, considering I was originally lucky one, considering I was originally given a “13-month to two-year” prognosis back in late February, 2009. I’m grateful to be alive in shoes (any shoes, actually; sneakers mostly, because the chemotherapy-induced neuropathy in my feet is uncomfortable, a small price to pay relative to my original diagnosis/prognosis).

Initially, when I thought of this title, I was planning on channeling Alex Trebek by incorporating as many Jeopardy! game show touches as I could into this column: the questions, the answers, the categories, the “Daily Double,” “Double Jeopardy,” “where the scores double and the game can really change”), “Final Jeopardy” (although working in its theme song would have been a challenge) and maybe even Merv Griffin would get a mention, all in an attempt to be funny.

But there’s nothing very funny about the situation in which I find myself, which remain positive and upbeat, and after almost six years of experience living this emotional roller coaster, this week of wait until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additional lab work is completed until additiona...
Whitman Girls’, Boys’ Soccer Teams Win Championships

Whitman soccer had phenomenal weekend.

The Whitman girls’ and boys’ soccer teams each captured a state championship during the weekend at Loyola University in Baltimore.

The girls’ team repeated as 4A champs with a 1-0 victory over Howard on Saturday, Nov. 15. With the victory, Whitman completed an undefeated season (17-0).

“It was an amazing feeling of accomplishment and pride,” Whitman head coach Greg Herbert wrote in an email. “We do set a goal to come away with a state championship and run the table the way we did is really just a testament to the mental make-up and technical ability of these girls.

“To think that after last year’s successful championship run that we would even better ourselves this season is mind-blowing.”

After a 12-0 regular season, Whitman defeated Walter Johnson and Bethesda-Chevy Chase before beating Northwest, 1-0, in the 4A West region final on Nov. 4.

The Vikings beat Eleanor Roosevelt, 3-1, in the state semifinals on Nov. 7.

For the season, Whitman outscored its opponents 50-7.

How did this year’s Vikings compare to the 2013 title team, which finished 16-1-1?

“The teams’ seasons are actually very different from each other,” Herbert wrote. “Last year, I think the whole team expected to come away with a state championship and was just so driven to do it. This year’s team came in with so many new players and questions that we really didn’t know what to expect.

“Last year, the team knew that they were destined for success but this year’s team took longer to find its identity and I think once it did it found that it could be unbeatable. I think what we see as the true difference between the two teams was the way each team played. This year required the whole team to work together as one cohesive unit from the first to the last player in order to be successful whereas last year, we leaned so much more on a core group of 3-5 players to carry us through. That’s why I feel like this season was more of a team championship.”

This year’s team captains were Emma Anderson, Clare Severe, Erin McClanahan and Lindsay Wytkind. Herbert said senior Andreas Djurhuus and Aaron Tanenbaum each scored one goal in the state final. Andreas Djurhuus and Aaron Tanenbaum each scored one goal.

The Vikings finished 15-3-1, including a 2-1 victory over Gaithersburg in the 4A West region championship match on Nov. 4.

“It was an awesome experience,” Herbert wrote about the Whitman girls’ and boys’ soccer teams winning state titles in the same weekend. “Dave Greene, the boys’ coach, and I have talked about just this same situation for several years now about how great it would be if we could do this together one season and now to finally have it happen is just amazing. The fact that we could both bring home the hardware for the school and the community is just something that we really appreciate and are proud of doing. There is actually a brother/sister combination (Alex Harris on the boys’ team and Ellie Harris on my team) on the teams. What an amazing time for that family to have a member of each state championship team living under one roof.”

Friends Seek Forever Homes

Luncheon raises funds for rescue work.

BY SHARON ALLEN GILDER
THE ALMANAC

There’s no better way to go than adoption,” said Dottie Fitzgerald at the Friends of Montgomery County Animals’ fall luncheon with boutiques at TPC at Avenel on Wednesday, Nov. 12. Adoption success stories abounded at the annual event attended by women and men devoted to the welfare and humane treatment of animals.

Fitzgerald added, “We are so aligned with the animals in so many things. We can learn so much from them and in my case it’s from dogs. Your dogs teach you compassion and the true meaning of forgiveness.”

Attendee Brenda Monaco, who said her love of cats goes back to her childhood, has fostered 90 kittens during her eight-year tenure as a member of Friends. “We always had cats in the family. As fosterers, we’re just a stop along the way to help them. We help these little guys get a second chance. It makes us feel good we’re helping this tiny little creature and finding it its forever home,” said Monaco.

Friends, an all volunteer, 501(c)(3) non-profit established in 1974, is celebrating its 40th anniversary. The organization has no shelter or office and relies heavily on private donations and volunteers who assist at adoption clinics on Saturdays at the Germantown PetSmart; provide foster homes; assist with trap-neuter-release/place (TNR/P) endeavors; and support fundraising projects.

A primary focus of the group is the issue of abandoned strays and at-risk animals living on the street. Partnering in 2014 with some of the areas most experienced TNR trappers to provide financial assistance for targeted, high-impact areas, has resulted in the successful spay/neutering of 200 felines. According to Friends’ literature, the majority of the animals are abandoned strays, litters of kittens born in colonies, or kittens born to abandoned house pets. Many are unable to survive the outside elements and are malnourished and in need of medical treatment. Though the group receives reduced rates from several local veterinarians, costs are high. Ninety-six percent of the animals in the group’s TNR program require full vetting.

Friends often extends a helping paw of financial support in emergency situations to other humane and wildlife groups. Recent recipients include Tip Me Frederick for TNR and Owl Moon Raptor Center for the preservation of the birds of prey population.

Potomac resident Claire Proffitt, president of Friends, emphasized the need for funding and outside donations. She said the group has helped individuals and families with the support needed to ensure they could keep their pets healthy and happy. She shared several stories including the story of Peanut, a rescued cat, who arrived at a Friends’ participating veterinarian “half dead” after two misdiagnoses.

“He had ingested a long thread that had cut his intestines and liver in a number of places. After two surgeries, two blood transfusions and much TLC, he has completely recovered,” Proffitt said. “Friends also helped a young family with food, heartworm meds and flea control for their three rescued dogs after learning the mother of the family required brain surgery after childbirth and the father lost his job.”

Friends is committed to finding forever homes for the 100-plus cats, kittens and puppies currently in foster care. Approximately 200 animals have been placed to date. Recent adoptions have included, “Buddy” a Labrador/Australian shepherd mix whose owner said, “Things are going so well with Buddy. He is so anxious to learn. He’s growing so fast – he still has a way to go to grow into his feet though. Thank you so much – we love him.”

Sometimes unexpected friendships develop as in the case of an adopted orange and white domestic shorthair cat named Cairo. His family reports that he is wonderful, they feel lucky to have him, and he recently befriended an abandoned baby lovebird named Hope.
