Langley Principal Leaves for South County

Matthew Ragone created “Saxon Country,” says school family network committee co-chair.

BY REENA SINGH
THE CONNECTION

For six years, he was the glue that brought Langley High School (LHS) together.

LHS Principal Matthew Ragone has left the school to boost South County High School's academics as its new principal.

“South County has spent a long time looking for a qualified principal,” said Ragone. “I think I have the right fit to help a school like South County with qualities that have been dormant at Langley.”

Ragone has spent his entire 22 year education career at Fairfax County Schools. Even further back, he graduated high school from South Lakes High School in Reston.

“I always loved history,” he said. “I remember going to Monticello and downtown D.C., and I would finish our tour guide's sentences and it would tick everyone off.”

While studying at the University of Mary Washington, he taught swimming over the summers while on break. He said he was amazed that instructions could lead to action. He knew then that he wanted to become a teacher.

After years of being a social studies teacher, however, he realized he wanted more.

“I always thought I was going to be a teacher my entire life,” he said. “I always found it rewarding.”

However, he wanted to reach more than the 150 students who would come through his classroom every week.

“Also, there were things you complain about as a teacher, and I didn't want to complain anymore,” he said.

AFTER BEING AT FOUR OTHER SCHOOLS, he landed at Langley High. Former Parent Teacher Association President and current Family Network Committee co-Chair Betsy Shomaker worked closely with him for many years, saying he created unity where there was little before.

“I think Matt's legacy will be his work and effort to change and improve school spirit and school culture,” she said.

Previous to his principalship there, the school celebrated Color Day where different school teams would wear different colors - a practice of rivalry within the school.

Ragone decided to change the day to Unity Day, instead, asking students to all wear school colors and stand together.

“He created the school idea of Saxon Country,” said Shomaker. “No matter who you are, we are one.”

Ragone said he was especially proud to have reached out to the students he called the “middle kids,” the students who were neither the disadvantaged nor overachievers.

Although student mental health is widely discussed topic within Fairfax County Public Schools and around the nation, Shomaker said he may have been one of the first people who talked about it five years ago.

She remembered a speech where he said,

“He was also a rock to the community during some dark times last year,” she said.

Last winter, two Langley students killed themselves during the same week - one on Monday and the other Tuesday - shaking the school system to the core and prompting changes like the addition of Crisis Text and later high school start times.

“He really binded the community together,” said Langley senior and FCPS School Board student representative Harris LaTeef.

LaTeef said he was sad when he found out that Ragone - who he called a role model - was leaving in the middle of the year.

“I was looking forward to crossing the stage at graduation and shaking his hand,” he said.

Ragone's first day at South County High School was on the Dec. 15. Former South Lakes principal Bruce Butler will replace him as LHS's interim principal.

RAGONE is excited for the fresh start and feels he is leaving Langley a better place than how he found it. He knows that he will face different challenges like lower test scores, a more diverse population and a greater percentage of students who are qualified for free or reduced lunch.

“South County is one of those really great places to be,” he said. “You walk in and see that people have so much school spirit. I think that their academics could match their spirit and enthusiasm at the school.”

Proposed Connector Slated for 2018

BY REENA SINGH
THE CONNECTION

The proposed Jones Branch Connector may be the answer to some of the congestion issues on Route 7.

During the public hearing on Dec. 10 at Spring Hill Elementary for the pending transportation project, Project Manager John Dresser said it would be a pressure valve for the increasingly heavy traffic through Tysons Corner during rush hour.

“We need another connector to get through Tysons on Route 123,” he said.

The connector will run over I-495 from Jones Branch Drive to Dolley Madison Boulevard by the McLean Metro Station. Current plans, which are not official yet, include sidewalks and bike lanes on both sides of the four lane roadway. The connector on the roadway will include a grassy median and room for landscaping in between the bike lane and the sidewalks.

“The plans are now 40 percent complete,” said Dresser.

The project is expected to last between 25 and 30 months. The public comment period will last until Dec. 20.

“We are here to take your questions and comments and use those to refine the project,” said Fairfax County Department of Transportation (FCDOT) Director Tom Biesiadny.

Dresser said he expects to begin the right-of-way acquisition phase next fall and begin construction by late 2016 or early 2017.

Expected completion is 2018.

The east side, connecting to Route 123, will be built first. Once completed, it will be opened to traffic as the side connected to Jones Branch Road is worked on.

Gates of McLean Unit Owners Association President Lisa Samuels spoke out at the meeting about resident concerns.

“Our biggest concern is access,” she said. “We really have significant concerns with getting home at night.”

Jones Branch Connector hoped to relieve Tysons traffic.

She was worried also about the amount of noise the night construction would make, but Dresser said the contractor has to abide by local noise regulations.

When he mentioned a possible soundwall being erected by the Gates of McLean if residents were interested, Samuels became excited.

“I can tell you the answer to that is yes,” she said.

Other locals were happy to see pedestrian and bicycle-friendly access in the project.

“Until now, there had been no other way for cyclists to get from McLean to Tysons Corner,” said Dennis Frew, McLean, a county bicycle advocate. “This will be the only safe way in.”

Running with Purpose

Colleagues say delegate candidate Craig Parisot's 'got his priorities straight.'

BY REENA SINGH
THE CONNECTION

Craig Parisot can juggle. Whether that means candy canes or work-life balance, he catches everything that comes his way.

With a growing new family, a growing list of leadership roles in the community and an active campaign as the Republican candidate for delegate for the 34th District, this is a job that requires both hands.

"If there is one thing I want people to know about me, it's that I'm not looking for purpose by running," he said, sitting in the tight quarters of his McLean "Parisot for Delegate" office. "I'm running with purpose."

Although his son Jackson is only 12 weeks old, Parisot has just weeks to knock on doors and pound pavement to win voters over. He loves having the opportunity, however, to talk to the diverse group of locals that make up McLean, Great Falls and parts of Loudoun County, an opportunity he said he would almost never have without running for office.

"It inspires me to do right by all people," he said.

He said his parents divorced when he was a young boy in South Carolina. His mother raised him, and at one point, the family had to go on food assistance while she put herself through school to become a nurse.

"I always paid attention," he said. "I asked why my mom was a Republican - what does it mean to be a Republican?"

Working in the House of Representatives, his eyes were opened to how the legislative process worked. His interest in politics found its spark.

"It's about being conservative," he said about what it means to be Republican. "The Republican Party I know and love welcomes everybody."

HE MOVED to the area 13 years ago after serving as an officer in the U.S. Air Force.

Sang Yi, a Navy reserve officer who met Parisot through community activities, says that service in the military gives him an edge to run for office.

"I think when people serve in the military, they learn leadership skills that are not readily available at other jobs," he said.

Also, with a child under 3 months, Yi is impressed that Parisot decided to run in a drastically shortened race.

"He's probably not getting a lot of sleep right now," he said. "He's a remarkable guy."

His wife, Kristen, and he lived in Washington, D.C. while they worked for many years, then moved to McLean three years ago.

They finally bought a house in McLean two years ago. They also have a family farm in Great Falls where Kristen can ride horses.

Two years ago, he also sold his company Aperio International, that once had nearly 300 employees. He said the benefits and fair wages the company provided made them competitive in the field.

"NOVABizPAC, the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce's political action committee, is pleased to endorse and support Craig Parisot for Delegate," said NOVABizPAC Chair Scott McGeary in a press release announcing their endorsement. "It is our hope that Mr. Parisot will take his pro-business and pro-jobs policy positions to Richmond to ensure Virginia remains a top state for business."

Serving in the military gave him drive to serve in other ways once he retired. He has taken leadership roles in local nonprofit boards and goes to McLean Citizen Association and Great Falls Citizen Association meetings to listen to the issues that impact the area the most.

In pursuit of a way to serve during the short time he lived in Chevy Chase, Md., he decided to run for mayor - something he

Q&A: Get to Know Craig Parisot

What are your top three accomplishments?

Craig Parisot: The number one is I am so fortunate to have a magnificent wife and things just keep getting better every day. I have such an adorable, healthy child.

My second is my service as an officer in the United States Air Force.

The third is really growing and operating a successful business where we had nearly 300 employees at one point. And we never missed a payroll. That was really special.

What would be your top three priorities as delegate?

Parisot: Growing and diversifying the Commonwealth's economy. Transportation. Education. They all go hand in hand. They're all key investments.

Why should our readers vote for you?

Parisot: I'm very deliberate about the decisions that I make. I'm deeply committed to this community, deeply committed to being the best delegate that I could possibly be. I've absolutely got the best background for this. I think it translates for the needs and priorities for the 34th district, and I am not a career politician.

How would you show off Northern Virginia to out of town friends?

Parisot: First of all, we'd have to use a car, so hopefully the roads are clear and we don't come across much congestion. I would start by taking them out to our farm in Great Falls, just to show them the raw beauty. I'd then show them all my favorite spots here in McLean. If we get a little more daylight, we might go out to Great Falls National Park, take a little hike, because it's just so gorgeous.

What would people find surprising about you?

Parisot: I can juggle - apparently not odd sized objects - but cylindrical objects that in particular. I think the other thing is that my entrepreneurial roots run really deep. I was that typical kid that had the lemonade stand on the side of the road on a hot sunny day to make a little bit of money, because I do come from a single family home.

How do you relax off the campaign trail?

Parisot: Well, when you do get time, it's really about spending time with my family, making every opportunity to spend those moments with my wife and my son. Especially now, I'm watching him grow up and discover life.

says his opponents misread about his intentions.

"I knew I wasn't going to win," he said. "But I learned a lot of things. It really helped me to learn about my communities very quickly."

What he is learning from local communities this time around are the issues he plans to take to office if he wins: boosting the state's economy, promoting education and improving transportation. He believes that all three of those requests are connected.

"Listen, listen, listen," said Parisot. "You will learn so much, and your actions will be so much better by listening."

Fran Fisher, of Vienna, met Parisot when they were campaigning over the summer for Barbara Comstock's run for U.S. Congress. Fisher said she briefly contemplated running for her open delegate seat, but is excited that Parisot decided to.

"He's got his priorities straight," she said. "He's level-headed. He's got a good grasp of the issues of the district."

She also noted that his business background gives him an edge.

"As a business person, he understands a budget and how to live within a budget," she said.

THE BIGGEST CHALLENGE he is facing is just letting voters know there is an election in January even though there was just an election in November. Between those two elections are some of the biggest holidays to nearly every denomination - but he does not want to compete with them. Rather, he is collecting canned goods while on the campaign trail to donate to a food pantry.

Ryan Rauner, who met Parisot through the Finance Committee on the Fairfax County Republican Committee, said Parisot's success in business will make him a successful delegate. He described his colleague as passionate, dedicated and business-minded - a smart person who understands the issues.

"He doesn't need to become delegate," he said. "I know he's doing it because public service is a service. It's not a career for him, it's a passion."

Jim Tragakis serves on the Volunteer Fairfax board that Parisot leads. He said he was excited when he found out Parisot was running for delegate.

"He's very strategic in his thinking and focuses on getting things done," said Tragakis. "I can see him working his way into leadership positions like committee chairman and other positions like that."

Parisot continues to knock on doors and go to community meetings where he can listen in and hopefully take those concerns to the General Assembly one day.

"When people talk to me, they know what they're getting," Parisot said.

OPINION

Holidays Are for Giving

In the scramble to finish Christmas shopping, remember tens of thousands of local children are short of food as well as presents.

The holidays are for giving. Christmas and Hanukkah are about children and family, about sharing, about joy, about being thankful and about faith and appreciation.

Here in Northern Virginia, many of us see few signs of families in need as we go about our daily lives and holiday shopping. Our neighborhoods are largely segregated economically; we mostly see the people who are most like ourselves economically.

But in Fairfax County, about 65,000 people live below the poverty line, about 6 percent. In Arlington and Alexandria, more than 8 percent of the population lives in poverty, about 18,000 people in Arlington and more than 12,000 people in Alexandria.

EDITORIAL

To be clear, the poverty line is $19,780 for a family of three; it's $11,670 for a single person household. Imagine for a minute how far $20,000 a year would go in your family. To live in Northern Virginia, a family needs to earn about twice the rate of poverty to get by. The median household income in Fairfax County and Arlington is well over $100,000.

In Fairfax County Public Schools, more than 52,000 students, or more than 28 percent, are poor enough to receive free or subsidized meals, a significant measure of poverty.

In Arlington more than 32 percent of the students are poor enough to receive free or subsidized meals; that's 7,452 students at last count.

In Alexandria, more than 8,500 students are poor enough to receive free or subsidized meals. That's 60 percent of the 14,222 students enrolled.

These are children who may not be sure that they will have a meal between the meals they get in school. School holidays can bring uncertainty and hunger, a far cry from the celebrations, gifts and plenty that we associate with Christmas, Hanukkah and winter holiday vacations.

Many of these are children are living in families who must choose between medical bills, car repair, heat and food. Almost all are families where at least one adult is employed full time, but still many are one unexpected expense away from disaster. Many of these families live on the brink of homelessness.

There are literally hundreds, probably thousands, of ways to give locally this season. Also mark your calendar to help again in a month or two. The needs don't go away after the holidays. Here are a few ideas.

Helping People without Homes

BY PAMELA L. MICHELL
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR
NEW HOPE HOUSING

The weather has turned colder and the holidays are in full swing, which means it's the time of year when people ask "what can we do for the homeless now that it's so cold?" Or "how can we help the homeless have a good Christmas?" For those of us working with men, women, and children who are experiencing homelessness, the great community interest in December in those we serve can be heartwarming — and overwhelming. Overwhelming because we are inundated by your extraordinary generosity during this time. But heartwarming, because you are thinking about the persons in our program as individuals; as people with their own holiday dreams.

In my 30-plus years in homeless services, one of my pet peeves is the phrase "the homeless." When we use that phrase we unknowingly dehumanize the people we describe. We are also inaccurately lumping together a diverse group of people under one label as though they are all the same with the same needs. Nothing could be further from the truth. They are individuals, each with a unique story. They are children. They are mothers and fathers. They are veterans. They are people from all walks of life. The one thing they have in common is not having a permanent address.

At New Hope Housing, we don't help the Homeless, we don't house the Homeless, we don't serve the Homeless, we don't work for the Homeless, because here, we don't believe the Homeless exist. We serve people. And sometimes people experience homelessness. We believe homelessness is something that happens to you. Our job at New Hope Housing — and the job of our nonprofit partners — is to prevent that experience from happening, or if it does happen, making it as short as possible by helping get people back into appropriate permanent housing.

We at New Hope Housing, and our partners, as well as the families and single adults in our programs, are truly grateful for your support in filling a holiday wish list, providing a meal, volunteering at one of the many hypothermia sites, or donating money to help our agencies end the homelessness of each person who walks through our doors. We will still need you on Dec. 26 and Feb. 5 and during the summer. Until each person is home, we've all got work to do.

Thank you for making this person-to-person connection this holiday season. Thank you for seeing that those who seek our assistance are not "the homeless," but men, women, and children with hopes and dreams, just like each of us who are blessed with a place to call home. Because there is no place like home — anytime of the year.

Wolf Honored as Defender of Human Rights, Dignity

U.S. Rep. Chris Smith (R-NJ) delivered the following speech on the House floor on Dec. 10, 2014, honoring retiring U.S. Rep. Frank Wolf (R-10):

Congressman Frank Wolf of Virginia will cast his last vote this week, capping off a remarkable 34-year career of altruistic deeds, selfless service, bold humanitarian initiatives, and durable achievement.

Both of us got elected in 1980, the Ronald Reagan class. Many of us wanted to have a Special Order tomorrow night, including the gentleman from Virginia, Bob Goodlatte, to honor him. But he said, "Absolutely not." That is the kind of guy he is. He never seeks any attention. But I am here today. Tough. I am going to speak about him.

At home and overseas, Frank Wolf, the William Wilberforce of the United States House of Representatives, has been an indefatigable defender of human rights and human dignity. Last week, WORLD magazine named Frank Wolf the 2014 Daniel of the Year.

Whether it be helping a young mother in a refugee camp in Sudan or political prisoners in Russia or jailed pastors in China or any number of the marginalized and persecuted, Frank Wolf has always sought to rescue and to protect.

Frank Wolf is the author of the landmark International Religious Freedom Act of 1998, which established both an independent commission and a State Department office led by an ambassador at large wholly dedicated to safeguarding—via sanctions, if necessary—religious freedom.

I saw firsthand his devotion to human rights in a myriad of ways, including trips with Frank to a prison camp in the Soviet Union, the infamous Perm camp 35; a gulag in China, Beijing prison number 2, right after Tiananmen Square; Vukovar, a city under military siege during the war in Yugoslavia; and Romania on behalf of persecuted believers, just to name a few. He has chaired the Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission with great distinction.

A man of deep Christian faith, Frank Wolf not only passionately believes in Jesus Christ but "walks" as St. Paul admonishes us, in a way worthy of his calling. Frank Wolf is a devoted family man. He, along with his wife, Carolyn, have five adult children and 16 grandchildren, all of whom are the apples of his eye.

In his district, Frank Wolf has delivered as well. His casework is superb and responsive; his staff reflects their boss' commitment to assist and to solve problems big and small.

As chairman of several Appropriations subcommittees over the years—including his latest assignment as chair of the Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, Science—he has authored nine major appropriations laws, including five transportation statutes that funded major projects in his district and throughout the Nation.

U.S. Rep Frank Wolf (R-10) retires after 34 years in Congress.

Frank Wolf's many other accomplishments include: His bipartisan Bring Jobs Back to America Act, designed to return manufacturing jobs to the U.S. from countries like China; raising awareness of the growing threat from cyber attacks; efforts to address America's unconscionable debt—it is $18 trillion now—through bipartisan reforms; the formation of two anti-gang task forces operating in the region, as well as the creation of the National Gang Intelligence Center in the FBI; and the funding of the 103-mile Metrorail system.

He led the way in obtaining about $1 billion to extend Metrorail through Tysons and out to Dulles Airport and to Loudon County. He pushed for lower carpool restrictions on I-66 and has helped many commuters get to the Capitol and to Washington. He led efforts to place Ronald Reagan Washington National and Washington Dulles International airports under a regional authority, providing the capital to build a new terminal at Reagan National and vastly expand Dulles.

He has been a leader in fighting with great tenacity Lyme disease. He has fought to address hunger by creating the Feds Feed Families food drive, which has generated more than 15 million pounds of donated food. And in 2014, he put language into an omnibus bill to create the National Commission on Hunger.

And one of the Nation's newest national parks is in his 10th District, the Cedar Creek and Belle Grove National Historic Park, established in 2002 through yet another one of Frank's laws.

Finally, let me make it clear: Frank Wolf's departure from the House is only the end of his current place of service to humanity and marks a new beginning, a transition to the private sector, where he will continue and even expand upon his extraordinary life's work.

Colonial Day at Churchill Road

On Friday, Dec. 12, Churchill Road fourth graders stepped back in time to the 19th century and participated in the school's annual Colonial Day. This immersion into the lifestyles and customs of the colonial days marked the culmination of the fourth graders' social studies unit on Colonial America.

Organized by CRS fourth grade teachers Pat Brownley, Nicholas Kilpatrick, Claire McHale, Steven Nicklas and Devon Rook, students, teachers and parents participated in a variety of period activities that included tin punching, calligraphy, candle-making, stenciling, dancing, corn husk doll making, quilting and more. The students particularly enjoyed dancing and making pumpkin pie and corn husk dolls.

An Essay To Remember

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

While many are knee-deep in wrapping paper and eggnog, some students are holed up with computer keyboards and books of quotations. In addition to driving to the mall for holiday shopping, some parents are throwing rapid-fire questions at their children to make sure they are fast on their feet.

For students and parents who hope for slots at the area's top independent schools next year, 'tis admissions season.

"As a school we want to know what the relationship will be between what a student brings to the table and what we will need to bring to the table," said Tim Simpson, assistant head of school and director of admission and financial aid at Bullis School in Potomac, Md.

Interviews are opportunities for admissions teams to get to know applicants and their parents, and share information about their schools.

"We try to encourage students to view the interview as a conversation," said Julie Jameson, director of admissions at St. Andrew's Episcopal School in Potomac. "They should feel comfortable ... be themselves ... and feel free to ask any questions they might have."

In fact, the interview is really a two-way street, says Ann

Richardson Miller, director of admission and financial aid at The Madeira School in McLean. "The girl and her parents should be asking as many questions of me as I am asking of her," she said. "After all, this will be her school for the next four years, and fit is critical, both for us, but also for the girl and her parents."

"Learn as much as you can about the school before your visit and be prepared to ask questions," said Scott Conklin, director of admissions, Episcopal High School in Alexandria. "This is also an opportunity to brag about your interests, talents and accomplishments. ... Be humble, but make sure you let us know all about you."

That doesn't mean you should ignore your flaws, however. "We look for genuine conversations that convey the student's real interests and passions," said Simpson. "We also want students and parents to be open to talking about strengths and weaknesses."

THE ADMISSION ESSAY is another opportunity for students to reveal facets of their personalities that might not be obvious through test scores, transcripts and even letters of recommendation, said Patricia Harden, director of admissions and financial aid at Connelly School of the Holy Child in Potomac. "It should be a well-written snapshot of how an applicant thinks and how she understands some aspect of her world," Harden said.

Some schools even require the admission essay to be completed in person.

"We want to see a student's true, natural writing ability, and we are interested in assessing their ability to develop and present a cohesive, thoughtful essay on the spot," said Michael Cresson, director of admissions, Bishop O'Connell High School in Arlington. "A polished essay prepared at home with lots of edits really doesn't tell us what we want to know to best evaluate an applicant."

No matter where the essay is written however, the same basic writing advice applies.

"We are looking for students to express themselves and give us an insight into what kind of person he or she is," Cresson said. "My suggestions for students ... would be ... to proofread their essay, allow for enough time, do some research on the school and include that in the essay. "These are simple suggestions, but it is disappointing as a director to read through essays and find simple mistakes and see that it was rushed."

Clemyjontri Park Celebrates Renewal

Community honors Adele Lebowitz who died earlier this month.

After spending nearly $1 million on renovations to repair Clemyjontri Park's worn-out surfacing, the park is ready to fully reopen. The Fairfax County Park Authority celebrated the renewal this past weekend at the park, hosting a holiday-themed event that included pictures with Santa, a craft table for making ornaments, collections for the Toys for Tots program, and a visit by several farm animals from Frying Pan Farm Park.

Clemyjontri Park was built when McLean resident Adele Lebowitz donated her land to the county, with the vision that it would become a fully accessible playground where every child, regardless of ability, could play with one another. With an estimated 200,000 unique visitors to the park every year since opening in 2006, Clemyjontri was due for a renovation.

"Clemy is a very special place," said Rip Sullivan, Dranesville District Representative of the Fairfax County Park Authority Board. "With all due respects to the many and numerous wonderful parks in the Fairfax County Park System, I have long referred to Clemy as the crown jewel."

Lebowitz, who passed away quietly earlier this month at the age of 98, was honored at the renewal ceremony for the joy her vision and generosity continues to bring to the community.

"Clemy is more than just a playground, it's really a community treasure," said Sullivan. "And it has always taken the support of the community to make this such a very special place." Sullivan

Kathleen Helein, the president of the Friends of Clemyjontri, says the park "really is a much loved and magical place." Helein also mentioned that the Concert in the Park, a black tie fundraiser for Clemyjontri, will be taking place this spring on April 25.

Also at the ceremony, Sullivan announced that due to his commitment as an elected member of the Virginia General Assembly, he will be stepping down from the Park Authority Board and be replaced by Grace Wolf.

A Level That's Anything But

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

This is not a home improvement reference, but this is most definitely a do-it-yourself column. And though friends, family and all the medical professionals at The Infusion Center, and of course the Oncology staff, have been wonderfully supportive and encouraging throughout my nearly-six-year ordeal, at the end of the day – heck, at the beginning of the day, every day – the patient has to figure a way to navigate through this characterized-as-terminal minefield. More often than not, this has been my greatest challenge: keeping my spirits up and my attitude positive when there are only three people present and accounted for: me, myself and I.

Dealing with unexpected results – both good and especially bad, from lab work, diagnostic scans and/or in-person appointments/physical examinations/assessments – and the effect all of it has on the patient's presumptive life expectancy, are emotional hurdles I regularly endure. Moreover, interpreting any of these results, better left for the professionals, rarely prevents us amateurs (patients) from wishfully-thinking, denying or freaking out entirely. After all, your life is at stake and since there are no guarantees or 100-percent predictable outcomes in the treatment of stage IV, non-small cell lung cancer – other than it's not curable, according to my oncologist – anticipating the worst while praying for the best becomes your 24/7 reality.

This reality is never more apparent to me, since I'm relatively asymptomatic, than when I complete my every-three-week, pre-chemotherapy lab work. That's when (other than my quarterly CT Scan), the tale of my tape, so to speak, is updated. If certain measurements are too high: creatinine, bilirubin, potassium – then no chemo for me. If certain other measurements are too low: white and red blood cells counts, oxygen, also potassium; then again, no chemo for me. The real anxiety, new anxiety – for me, is what levels show up on the inevitable retest (the first order of business is to confirm the abnormality with additional lab work). Typically, at least historically, my retests, taken a week later (sometimes even a day later), have always returned to normal, and accordingly, chemotherapy has proceeded as usual. This week, however, something different has occurred. This is the first time that my creatinine levels were too high on consecutive three-week intervals. If my next retest does not return to level (as the previous one did), and chemotherapy is put off an additional week again, that too will be a first and cause – in my head anyway, for new concern. This would be a complication/result that in the previous six years has never happened.

Should I be worried? And whether or not I should be, can I even control my feelings and somehow patiently (no pun intended) wait for new results from the retest without coming apart at the seams? If I could, I would; but given this column's subject, apparently I can't. Wish me luck; hopefully, I won't need it.

CAPPIES REVIEWS

Fictional Town, Real for Viewers

Madison High's production of "Our Town."

BY LUCAS STRIGEL
TUSCARORA HIGH SCHOOL

Plays can transport one to new places, perhaps a magical land, a pivotal point in history, or perhaps the small town of Grover's Corners. While it might sound stale, "Our Town," produced by James Madison High School, is a phenomenal play that always pulled me into the lives of these small town people.

"Our Town" was written in 1938 by none other than Thornton Wilder. The play is set in the small American town of Grover's Corners, New Hampshire, during the early 20th century. The "Stage Manager" acts as a narrator throughout the production, showing the everyday lives of the people who reside in the small town. Wilder decided to try something new, he decided to use minimal set pieces and props, relying on the use of pantomime. His logic behind this was "I know it's a play, you know it's a play, the only thing that's real in a play is emotion," so that's all he focused on. A difficult task, but given in the right hands, "Our Town" grew into a huge success, winning the Pulitzer Prize for Drama in 1938.

Surprisingly enough, James Madison did a great job of painting the image of their town with minimal and simple tech. Chad Robertson did a superb job on sound cues, they were always on point but not overwhelming whatsoever. Josh Laney, who worked on the lights, used different lighting cues for the different times of day, a cloudy moon, and even the stained glass windows of a church! The tech never overpowered the actors, but always provided ominous sounds and lights the fit the scene.

Actor chemistry is the binding force of dramatic interpretation, and "Our Town" would be nothing without it. All of the actors in James Madison's "Our Town" had effective emotional bindings and feelings for one another. I felt as if they knew each other for all of their life, which immersed the audience. Another thing that added into the immersion was the use of effective pantomime. The various actors performed their daily tasks as if it was second nature, a good amount of work went into the pantomiming. One of the best moments of the show was when the two main children (Matthew Landsdell and Caroline Campbell) were conversing from their windows. They were across the street from each other, but I could feel the bond between them. What sealed this bond was the faint church choirs singing in the background, one could actually feel a part of their town.

In order to create a town with no set pieces, you have to have someone describe it to you, and that's where the Stage Manager (Mitch Coomer) came in. Coomer had a voice of gold, every little thing that came out of his mouth was perfectly enunciated with appropriate diction. Given into the wrong hands, the Stage Manager wouldn't be the interesting narrator that he was in this show.

The audience was always looking forward to hearing what he had to say, Coomer was an excellent casting choice.

The emotional binds brought everyone together, and pulled the audience in. James Madison may have thought they put on a play, but it was much more than that. "Our Town" hit the audience on an emotional level that they won't forget soon. This show really made one think about life and the purpose behind it. Although Grover's Corners is a fictional town, it will be real to the viewers forever.
