Inaugural Celebration of Gospel Event Held in Burke

By ALVIN BROWN

Last Wednesday, Feb. 11, the Lake Braddock Secondary School (LBSS) welcomed the Howard Gospel Choir of Howard University (HGC) to headline its first musical Celebration of Gospel. The concert was sponsored by the Minority Parents for Excellence in Education (MPEE), a parent-led organization that has been active at LBSS for almost 30 years. The program opened with the LBSS JROTC presenting the colors and LBSS Principal Dave Thomas recognizing special guests in the audience. Fairfax County School Board At-Large member, Ilryong Moon; Dr. Angela Atwater, Assistant Superintendent, Region 4; a few other special guests, Lake Braddock families, numerous community members from nearby churches in Alexandria and even friends coming across the bridge from Maryland attended.

The New Voices Choir, comprising seven extremely gifted high school students with a calling for musicianship, opened the evening of singing; they came to the stage

Lake Braddock New Voices Choir

and uplifted the audience with several notable selections including a civil rights anthem from the 1970, "To Be Young, Gifted and Black" originally made popular by Nina Simone.

The Howard Gospel Choir took to the stage of the Little Theater with a rousing arrangement of "Great is Thy Faithfulness," a Gospel standard that raised the audience to their feet and involved in a sing-along.

The choir sang other Gospel standards including "Take my Hand, Precious Lord" that is currently experiencing resurgence in popularity since being featured in the film "Selma" and Beyonce's rendition at the recent Grammy Awards ceremony. The concert culminated with HGC and New Voices Choirs singing a rendition of "Oh Happy Day."

The Celebration of Gospel concert was the MPEE's premier event this school year designed to support fundraising efforts for scholarship awards for deserving minority students at LBSS.

The mission of the MPEE is to foster a commitment toward academic and personal excellence through increasing awareness, generating educational opportunities and representing the diverse interests of minority students at LBSS.

The concert was not only to support their mission to generate funds for scholarships, but also to bring a cultural awareness to high school students and the community during this year's Black History Month. Visit their website at www.mpee-lb.org.

Stalled Labor Market Slows County Budget

Proposed budget calls for no real estate tax rate increase, but average homeowner would pay $184 more.

BY KEN MOORE
THE CONNECTION

Supervisor Jeff McKay pointed out the irony in County Executive Ed Long's proposed $3.8 billion budget. Three planning positions would be eliminated from the budget even though Long suggested the county needs more efforts to raise revenue from commercial and industrial venues.

"A timely planning process in revitalization is important in economic development," said McKay after Long's 30-minute presentation to the Board of Supervisors on Tuesday, Feb. 17. "The planner piece is not going in the same direction as the economic development question."

McKay pointed to redevelopment along the Route 1 corridor as a source of economic growth that would require extra input from planning. Long agreed that the county urgently needs to expand the nonresidential tax base in the county.

Commercial assessments dropped 0.6 percent, while residential assessments increased 3.4 percent. Commercial vacancy rates are higher than they have been since 1991. Although the U.S. economy grew at an estimated rate of 2.6 percent during the fourth quarter of 2014, "we are clearly underperforming the national economy," Long told the Supervisors, mostly due to the sequester and reductions in federal spending and contracting.

"Our economy is very dependent on people buying cars, buying houses and shopping," Long said.

Long forecasts no significant improvements in the short term future. "We cannot fund all our priorities and investments." Most departments, aside from public safety, will see some expenditure reduction.

Just 5,100 jobs were created in Northern Virginia in 2014, less than half of the 11,900 jobs created in 2013, which is half the number of jobs (25,250) created on average in 2011 and 2012.

"It is a bit sobering," said Hunter Mill Supervisor Catherine Hudgins.

5 Things to Know about the Budget

- ❖ One penny change in the real estate tax rate, currently $1.09, is worth $22.6 million.
- ❖ The average 2014 home selling price, $517,000, has still not reached its previous peak value of $543,271 achieved in 2005.
- ❖ Direct office vacancy rate was 15.2 percent as of mid-year 2014, the highest office vacancy rate since 1991.
- ❖ Fairfax County Public Schools request $14 million more than is in the current proposed budget. Schools ask for a 3.99 percent increase; the current county budget proposal includes 3.43 percent increase over last year.
- ❖ School Age Child Care (SACC) fees restructured to generate revenue and to better reflect income levels and affordability for participating families. Full paying families will see an increase of 8 percent.

General Assembly Reaches Crossover

Bills live, die or fold into other legislation before review by the opposite chamber.

BY TIM PETERSON
THE CONNECTION

As the current meeting of the Virginia General Assembly neared the one-month mark, legislators in the House of Delegates and Senate had to finalize work on bills they would send to their counterparts for consideration. Last week's "cross-over" on Feb. 11 marked their final chance to either move forward with promising legislation or kill it, with the exception of budget or revenue bills.

"We're always told not to fall in love with your bills," said Del. Eileen Filler-Corn (D-41), "but it's hard not to do that. When you work with stakeholders and get to know the issue, especially with a lot of personal stories and testimonies, you get attached to them."

Even though some bills don't make it to the opposite chamber, many come back in subsequent sessions.

Sen. George Barker (D-39) likes to say, "My bill isn't dead, it just hasn't passed yet." Several of his bills that passed the Senate this year have gotten killed in previous years. "It takes a good while to build up enough support," he said, "and work with people who have concerns."

The cross-over milestone is standard procedure for a session that lawmakers said is moving along as expected, without much fanfare or controversy.

"This is really the way it should be," said

Del. Dave Albo (R-42). "We're running a state: Our job is to pave roads, put bad guys in prison, keep kids in college and schools."

But that doesn't mean it's all downhill from the cross-over.

"As with any session, there's ups and downs, some very tough votes you have to take," said Del. David Bulova (D-37). "There are things you really like, or wish you weren't in the package, but does this move the ball forward or not? The easy bills are typically the ones taken care of in first week or two."

Bulova cited the request for Dominion Power to forego the biennial rate review it would normally be subject to as an example of a "tougher" and "more nuanced" issue now being dealt with.

"On one side, it's nice to have that review," he said. "On other side, with the cost of new regulations that are going to dramatically reduce carbon emissions, there's something to be said for freezing rates. To understand all that goes into rate-making, with responsibility to consumers and the environment, I wish I had 30 minutes to explain it to every constituent."

Ethics legislation and tweaks to the budget passed last year are two other major areas receiving attention.

Sen. Toddy Puller (D-36) thinks the budget is "looking pretty good," but remains curious to see how the ethics bill comes out. "What we did last year I voted for, but just thought it was pathetic," she said. "It's pretty hard not to vote for ethics reform. This year I'm hoping it will do something."

With the the cross-over moving the legislative process along healthily, there's some speculation the session may even end "a day or two early," according to Sen. Dave Marsden (D-37). "That saves us about about $35,000 a day."

But nobody's holding their breath.

Dead or Alive

Lawmakers pick their highlights from bills that were killed, folded into other bills or passed to the other side.

Del. David Bulova (D-37)
DEAD

HB1872: Would have required the Board of Education to arrange a special training program for principals working with struggling schools. The bill passed the House education committee but died in appropriations.

ALIVE

HB1725: Creates a Virginia Solar Energy Development Authority. Technically Bulova's bill was rolled into a similar bill from Del. Timothy Hugo (R-40), HB2267.

HB1667: An ethics bill that would cap all gifts to legislators at $100, whether tangible or intangible. Bulova's bill was rolled into a similar bill from Del. C. Todd Gilbert (R-15), which retained the $100 cap core concept.

HB1515: Requires hospitals to provide new parents with information on safe sleep environments for their baby at their discharge.

Del. Eileen Filler-Corn (D-41)
DEAD

HB1327: Would have permitted voters 75 and older, or disabled voters, to go to the head of the line on election day.

HB2041: Would have established an advisory council for identifying open education resources, helping prevent students from spending as much money on hard copy textbooks.

HB1668: Dealt with allowing students of different grade levels the opportunity for an "expedited retake" of their Virginia Standards of Learning (SOL) exam. The concept stayed alive as it was rolled into Del. Gregory Habeeb's (R-8) HB1490.

ALIVE

HB2306: Establishes Achieving a Better Life Experience (ABLE) trust accounts for individuals and families with children to help them save for living and other expenses. This follows a ABLE Act Congress passed at the end of 2014.

HB1343: Requires that sexual assaults on college campuses be reported either by campus police or local law enforcement to the Commonwealth's attorney within 48 hours of beginning an investigation. Filler-Corn's bill was rolled into Del. Jimmie Massie III's (R-72) HB1785.

HB1552 and 2046: Provide for fingerprinting, background checks and other regulations for child care providers. These bills were folded into a larger omnibus bill from Del. Robert Orrock (R-54), HB1570, of which Filler-Corn is a chief co-patron.

Del. Dave Albo (R-42)
DEAD

HB1539: Would have set up a Virginia Translational Medical Investment Fund for the state to make loans to private businesses doing research in translational medicine.

ALIVE

HB1445: Allows patients receiving treatment for epilepsy to legally possess and use a derivative of marijuana, provided they have certification from their doctor.

HB1503: Corrects a loophole allowing people to get out of a Driving Under the Influence charge, according to Albo.

HB1635: Deals with defamation over the Internet. If someone files an action within a year, they're given a "reasonable" amount of time to find out who the people are that made anonymous defamatory statements.

Del. Mark Sickles (R-43)
DEAD

HB2054: Any time a citizen receives a payment from the state, this bill would've required the state to offer a hard copy check option as well as electronic payment transfer. A similar bill did pass, one that only affects tax refunds.

HB2388: Would have forced a closer look at the 5-600 state prisoners sentenced prior to 1995, before there was no parole, releasing them if eligible based on their time served exceeding "the midpoint of the most recent discretionary sentencing guidelines."

HB2158: Dealing with special elections, this would've regularized some of the arbitrary selection of dates to help reduce the cost of holding the elections themselves.

Inova to Create a New Center in Fairfax

Fairfax County-based Inova Health Systems will take over the Exxon Mobil headquarters building in the Merrifield area of the county to house the Inova Center for Personalized Health. The center will make Fairfax County “a community known worldwide for genomic science,” said Gerald L. Gordon, Ph.D., president and CEO of the Fairfax County Economic Development Authority (FCEDA) at the event at Inova Fairfax Hospital where hospital system officials announced creation of the center. The event also featured Gov. Terry McAuliffe and Fairfax County Board of Supervisors Chairman Sharon Bulova as well as leaders from Inova and Exxon Mobil. Inova CEO Knox Singleton announced that the Peterson Family Foundation will donate $10 million for the initiative.

“This campus will make Fairfax County a hub for world-class research and the commercialization of ground-breaking discoveries. New companies will grow as a result and more world-class researchers and businesses will want to be here,” Gordon said.

The Inova Center for Personalized Health will have three goals:

*Create the world’s leading center for translational cancer research and patient care based on genomic science and individualized therapy;

*Create a leading center of nationally recognized biotech researchers developing new tests, therapy and population health processes based on genomic science and bioinformatics; and,

*Stimulate collaboration of life-science companies with world-class researchers leading to the expansion of the life-science economy in Virginia and the Washington, D.C., area.

Gordon noted that the center will dramatically accelerate the FCEDA’s goal of further diversifying the economic base of the county. “We’ve been working to attract, retain, and grow the county’s non-government contracting economy for several years. This announcement places Fairfax County in a leadership position in the growth of the nascent industry of translational medicine,” he said.

The center will be based in a landmark building, near the Capital Beltway interchange with Arlington Boulevard (U.S. Route 50).

OPINION

Staying Ahead of the Feds

The federal government is not always wrong. At the same time, the state government is not always right.

BY KENNETH R. "KEN" PLUM
STATE DELEGATE (D-36)

The Virginia House and the Senate have penned similar but competing mid-point versions to the 2014-2016 biennial budget. These budgets will now go to a conference committee to work out differences in time for a Feb. 28 adjournment of the annual legislative session. With both houses being under the same political party control, the differences are not great and will likely be easily reconciled.

Governor McAuliffe had proposed revisions to the Commonwealth's budget, but his recommendations were ignored in one significant way: his budget proposal included the expansion of Medicaid for the working poor, but the majority party in both houses adamantly oppose it. Had Medicaid expansion been approved, the state would have saved $107,000,000 in state spending in FY 2016 alone and would have picked up $482,300,000 in new federal money. The issue of this column is not Medicaid expansion, however, for which I have made my position known in several columns. Instead, I want to focus on the paranoia in Richmond over the actions of the Federal government that the opposition to Medicaid expansion reflects. That paranoia was reflected among other places in a budget amendment in the House that provided that "no general or non-general funds shall be appropriated or expended for such costs as may be intended to implement any federal program or Presidential executive action calling for 'free' tuition at institutions of higher education." The amendment passed with my speaking against it, suggesting that we should at least see the new program before we decided to oppose it.

Virginia has a long history of opposing federal action. Going back to 1798, James Madison introduced the concept of interposition – that the state could interpose itself between the federal government and the people when it deemed federal laws to be unconstitutional. Interposition or nullification has been used by many states to oppose federal actions on many issues. The Civil War was the most dramatic statement at attempted interposition.

In the 1950s, Virginia attempted to interpose itself against federal action to desegregate the schools. Its efforts through more than 40 lawsuits became known as "massive resistance", which of course ultimately failed.

The call has gone out once again for the need to protect ourselves against the federal government, particularly the Obama administration. Several bills, for example, were introduced this session to nullify actions of the Environmental Protection Agency in air and water quality regulations. Our Federal system with its checks and balances have worked well for many years to protect citizens from a run-away government. At the same time, it creates challenges for smooth operation. This continuing power struggle diverts attention from the real issues of our economy and society and leads to the frustrations that many feel with the operation or gridlock of government. The federal government is not always wrong. At the same time, the state government is not always right. The public expects that leaders work through these differences and that issues be resolved.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Outstanding Article, Outstanding Services

To the Editor:

Mr. (Kenneth) Moore's feature article ("Combining Health and Mental Health," Connection, February 11-17, 2015), which provided information concerning the Community Services Board (CBS) services to the Fairfax community was outstanding.

Prior to reading his article, I did not know such an organization existed. The CBS services, described in the article, provided by the leadership and staff are to be commended for helping so many people in need these last few years.

Having been involved on the staff of a state's Mental Health and Disabilities department in the midwest prior to moving to Fairfax County, mental health needs were ever growing in numbers. As pointed out in the article, "One in every five people live with a mental health problem...and two-thirds go without treatment." This is alarming and most disturbing in today's society. From where I came from, the state's budget for Mental Health and Drug Abuse could not keep up with the demand and needs of its citizen, and this was back in the 70s.

Fairfax County is well known for outstanding services provided in our schools.

It is also encouraging to learn the county, under the directorship of Tisha Deeghan and her staff commits themselves in providing mental health services by letting us know "we are here (to serve) everybody." Thank you.

Beneficial Choices

To the Editor:

The cab drivers who seek protection from the government against Uber and other ride-sharing companies have this all wrong.

Cab drivers who are dissatisfied with their work hours or earnings are free to either remain cab drivers or to seek another way to earn money. If they don't like the regulations they have to deal with or the fact that there are "too many cab drivers at National Airport" to make enough money, then they are free to use their gifts and talents to seek other ways to live productive lives. They are free, for example, to drive for Uber or any other ride sharing company and they should be free to offer such services on their own.

Society benefits most when there is free and open market and when the choices of who to engage in commerce with and on what terms are broad. If a consumer wants to call even a wholly unregulated Uber car, then so be it, it is not the proper role of government to say "you can't do that." Someone needing to get from point A to point B should be free to use their own minds to decide which is the better option for them.

It is up to the taxicab industry to convince consumers that a taxi is a better option rather than to seek the heavy hand of government to quash innovation, competition, and entrepreneurship.

New Marker Honors African-American Woodcutters in Burke

Civil War heroes risked being captured and sent back into slavery.

Centreville resident Debbie Robison hasn't chopped a cord of lumber or laid a railroad trestle. But for more than a year she's done hard labor at the National Archives and Records Administration, researching Civil War-era railroad workers in Northern Virginia.

Patrick Lennon of Visit Fairfax approached the Fairfax County History Commission in 2011 with the idea of participating in the state sesquicentennial remembrance of the Civil War. Several years into their participation, Robison, a history commissioner representing the Sully district, thought it would be a good idea to create a historical marker honoring the contributions of African-Americans to the war.

She knew she wanted to do a marker on African-Americans who worked on the railroads, a major asset to the military supply chain, but needed to find out more about what occurred in different locations around the state.

The Orange & Alexandria Railroad, built in 1851, facilitated the development of towns along its path including Clifton, Fairfax and Burke Station.

"It is important to note the many nameless African-American heroes who protected our land and heritage — without them, the Orange & Alexandria Railroad would not have been able to contribute to the success of the Federal troops," said

Lynne Garvey-Hodge with the Fairfax County History Commission.

"They would not have been supported by the Overland campaign which included 6,000 heads of cattle sent weekly (1,200 daily Friday through Tuesday) from Alexandria to Brandy Station to feed the Union troops on 300 cattle cars," Garvey-Hodge continued. "The entire operation required the constant employment of 300-plus men and many, many more wood choppers to support the fuel needs of the railroad."

ROBISON WENT to the National Archives and poured over U.S. military railroad records and newspaper records from the period. What she teased out was the story of a group of African-Americans, freed and "contraband" former slaves working in Burke Station as woodcutters.

The Burke Station area was heavily wooded in the mid-19th century, and the cords of lumber these men cut and removed went into railroad ties for Union trains moving troops and supplies, and rebuilding bridges that Confederate soldiers made a habit of torching. "What struck me was the fact that these men, who had escaped slavery, were working outside protected Union lines," said Robison. "Many were captured and sent back South. They weren't always protected and risked being captured."

"It was a very personal war," said Jon Vrana, president of the Burke Historical Society. "They were really fighting for their lives and independence."

The marker Robison helped create, now standing in the ground in front of the Burke Volunteer Fire & Rescue Department, tells this story and recounts a specific incident on Oct. 28, 1863 at Burke Station.

"Confederate raiders had captured many contraband workers," said Robison, "a wagon master, a handful of mules. One of the contrabands escaped and went and warned the Union garrison. He was able to alert people they were captured."

The Confederate captors had been marching their prisoners toward the station guard when the garrison, forewarned by the man who escaped, fired a volley at them. The raiders fled, leaving the woodcutters free and unharmed.

THE MARKER was unveiled at a ceremony on Saturday, Feb. 14 at the community center in the Burke Volunteer Fire & Rescue Department. The Mt. Zion Gospel Men's Choir added a musical flair to the event. "It was a good celebration of community, the fire department and historical society, coming together to honor people that really risked their lives," said Supervisor Pat Herrity (R-Springfield). "These are good examples of people that are true heroes." "The marker is really serving as a reminder to people of the past events that were occurring in the Burke area," Robison said, "not just shopping centers."

VRE is considering a 4 percent fare increase.

Public Hearings Scheduled to Discuss Potential VRE Fare Increase

Increased operation costs are forcing the Virginia Railway Express to consider a 4 percent fare increase. The price of Amtrak Step-Up tickets would rise from $3 to $5, but the discounted 10-ride, five-day and monthly passes would remain unchanged. Before VRE goes ahead with any changes, the organization is holding a number of public hearings around Virginia and Washington, D.C. to solicit customer feedback. A hearing will be held in Burke on Feb. 24 at The Commons Community Center at 7 p.m.

The Commons is located at 9837 Burke Pond Lane. More information on the hearings can be found at www.vre.org. Written comments can be submitted until Friday, March 6 electronically to publiccomment@vre.org, over the phone to Bryan Jungwirth at 703-684-1001 or by mail to Bryan Jungwirth, 1500 King Street, Suite 202, Alexandria, Virginia 22314.

Lawmakers Pick Their Legislative Highlights

ALIVE

HB2372: Creates an electronic asset verification program for applications for medical assistance such as Medicaid. "This bill is needed so that we can help reduce some of the potential fraud in people seeking benefits," said Sickles.

HB2056 and HB2062: Technical election administration bills, including a requirement on presidential election years for scantron voting machines to be available for every 4,000 voters in a precinct.

Del. Scott Surovell (D-44)

DEAD

HB2339: Would have helped students access electronic textbooks by requiring schools to provide them with computers to use.

HB2011: Would have helped prevent motor vehicle title lender "subsidiaries" from operating in unregulated storefronts. "The practice is completely unregulated," said Surovell, "they're completely evading the law."

HB2337: Sought to require the Board of Education to include the dangers and legal implications of "sexting" in Family Life Education curriculum.

ALIVE

HB1684: Would allow students who achieved a certain score or above on Advanced Placement exams to waive taking the Virginia Standards of Learning test in the same subject area. The bill was rolled into other, similar legislation.

HB2015: Adds items such as child support, spousal support and low income families' tax refunds to creditors' collection exemption list.

HB1764: (Chief co-patron with Del. G. Manoli Loupassi [R-68]) If a data provider sells, publishes or otherwise shares data about a person's criminal background that has already been expunged, this bill strengthens the remedies available to consumers on the opposite end of the data provider.

Sen. Chap Petersen (D-34)

ALIVE

SB957: Restricts license plate readers and use of other "spying technology" by the police when there's no warrant or investigation pending. "It's going to be a landmark law in Virginia establishing personal privacy," said Petersen.

SB1008: Homeowners Association bill of rights, such as the right to notice of meetings and due process when a complaint is filed.

SB982: In cases of life-threatening drug overdoses, this bill would protect anyone who reports the situation from being prosecuted for possessing illegal substances themselves.

Sen. George Barker (D-39)

DEAD

SB1274: Would have allocated more funds for re-paving secondary roads.

SB1295: Would prevent government officials from censoring sermons given by National Guard chaplains. This bill was folded into SB690.

SB1112: Would have provided for five and a half-hour school days for kindergarten students.

ALIVE

SB701: Requires the state to offer citizens the option to receive income tax return refunds as a check.

SB757 and SB900: Two bills that deal with the Virginia Standards of Learning tests: One allows middle school and elementary school students that were close to passing the test the opportunity for an expedited retake; the other gives schools flexibility on when they administer the tests. "This would allow curriculums and teaching to be more individualized," said Barker.

SB1122: Helps set up a support network for suicide prevention among college students, universities and parents of students.

Sen. Dave Marsden (D-37)

DEAD

SB681: Three-year plan to raise the minimum wage to $10.10. "We'll get that soon," said Marsden. The bill died in the Commerce and Labor committee. "Last year, the Republicans couldn't look me in the eye."

SB687: This bill would have imposed more regulations on legislator retirements, specifically if they were promoted to a new position in their last four years of service and received a pay increase more than 400 times their previous salary.

SB1391: Sought to create a procedural guarantee for Department of Corrections officers facing allegations that could threaten their job.

ALIVE

SB1235: Medical marijuana bill, specifically regarding the use of Cannabidiol oil and THC-A oil, very similar to Albo's HB1445.

SB730: Deals with individuals serving a life sentence without parole for non-homicide crimes. The bill would give them a "meaningful and reasonable opportunity at release" through a four-judge circuit court review panel.

SB1390: Would help homeowners associations to hold elections despite failing to obtain a quorum at meetings.

Sen. Toddy Puller (D-36)

DEAD

SB728: Would have given art instructors the opportunity to obtain a license for serving alcohol at private instructional events.

ALIVE

SB675 and SB 676: Regarding funding of a Northern Virginia Veterans Care Center, including allocating two sums of over $60 million from the federal government.

SB1032: Would reorganize Virginia alcoholic beverage control, getting rid of the ABC board in favor of a Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Authority.

SB903: Would set up a problem-solving court docket specifically to meet the needs of veterans, the mentally ill or people re-entering society. "There are so many that really do need some special attention because of their circumstances," said Puller. "I hope it goes well."

Black History Month Celebrations

Local students learn about the history and accomplishments of African-Americans.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL

Fourth grade student Eli West crafted a poem this month that was modeled after Martin Luther King, Jr.'s famous, "I Have a Dream" speech. As part of February's month-long celebration of the history and culture of African-Americans, fourth grade students at Norwood School in Bethesda, Md., wrote and delivered poems reminiscent of the speech that the famous civil rights leader delivered in 1963. The students also delivered their verses before Norwood's lower school community.

"I learned more about Martin Luther King, Jr. I learned that he was a very spiritual man," said West.

The exercise was part of a broader lesson in honor of Black History Month, a time when students learn about the history of African-Americans as that history is incorporated in to the overall curriculum of many schools. From concerts to school projects, there are opportunities to join the month-long celebration.

"Black History Month is a time to honor the accomplishments of the African-American men and women who have made contributions to the world in spite of the injustice they faced," said Sandi Hannibal, Director of Multicultural and Ethical Education at Norwood School in Bethesda, Maryland. "One might ask why it is necessary to highlight these accomplishments in 2015. After all, we have lived through the Civil Rights Era and the Civil Rights Act was passed in 1964. We have a black president. We have made so much progress. All of this is true, but in some schools the contributions and accomplishments of African-Americans are not woven into the overall curriculum, so it is important that Black History Month provides an opportunity to learn about prominent African-Americans in a very intentional manner."

Some educators are encouraging students to take time to ponder the history of African-Americans. "It's more than just the Jim Crow Laws. There're a whole host of things that African-Americans have done," said Lisa Styles, school counselor at Arlington Public School's Career Center in Arlington.

St. Stephen's & St. Agnes School, in Alexandria, will host a Middle School Student Diversity Conference on Friday, Feb. 20.

"Students at the middle school age are trying to learn who they are. We want to expose kids to the ideas of identity, inclusive behavior, and respect, and to let them know that what they feel matters," said KiKi Davis, St. Stephen's & St. Agnes School director of multicultural education, diversity, and equity initiatives. "We want to give them tools to become leaders in their own schools, and it starts with being able to talk about diversity and social justice issues at their developmental level. What it looks like to them, in their lives, at this age."

St. Andrew's Episcopal School in Potomac, Md., hosted a regional diversity conference earlier this month called "Diversity in the DMV" Conference. More than 200 representatives from independent schools in the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia explored some of the tools needed for cross-cultural understanding.

Among the observances in Fairfax County Virginia, George Mason University Potomac Arts Academy and George Mason University School of Music will present a Black History Month celebration concert on Saturday, Feb. 21, called, "The Dream Lives On."

The Mason Wind Symphony and Vocal Studies Students, Mason Spiritual Ensemble will join local church choirs and elementary school choirs in a performance of gospel, spirituals, jazz and original compositions. The concert is designed to honor the legacy of Martin Luther King, Jr. and other African-American leaders.

Fairfax's Barborek Wins 6A North Region Floor Title

Senior qualifies for states on floor, bars, vault.

BY JON ROETMAN
THE CONNECTION

Rachel Barborek started her regional gymnastics performance by falling off the beam and winding up with a sub-par (by her standards) score of 8.475.

Rather than being consumed by disappointment, the Fairfax senior responded with a championship effort in her next event.

Barborek's floor routine entertained fans and judges alike, earning her a score of 9.75 and a region title.

In all, Barborek qualified for states on floor, vault and bars during the 6A North region championship meet on Feb. 11 at Lake Braddock Secondary School.

"On beam, I only fell once and I thought the rest of my routine was good, so I was pretty mad when my score turned out to be just an 8.45," Barborek wrote in an email, "so I channeled that emotion on floor and just did the best that I could."

BARBOREK DESCRIBED her performance during the meet as "one of my worst," but she put on a show during her floor routine.

"While I was waiting to salute before floor,

Fairfax gymnast Rachel Barborek, center, won the 6A North region floor championship on Feb. 11.

I heard people saying 'Go Rachel!' from seemingly all sides of the gym and I thought that was pretty cool," she wrote. "In the beginning of my floor routine I felt a little shaky, but when the beat dropped in my music I just had fun for the rest of the routine."

Barborek also had a strong showing on vault, placing fourth with a score of 9.5. She tied for eighth on bars with a score of 8.775 despite struggling with her dismount. She tied for 18th on beam.

After an equipment malfunction in the main gym during the third rotation, the uneven bars were moved into a snug gymnastics room. Barborek and the rest of the competing Conference 6 gymnasts were on vault at the time and would compete on bars during the evening's final rotation.

"On bars, I've just been having a mental block with my dismount recently, almost like I've just forgotten how to let go of the bar," Barborek wrote. "The room wasn't a problem; my whole routine was really good just up until the dismount. I just couldn't let go."

Barborek finished fifth in the all-around with a score of 36.5. The top four all-around finishers qualify for states.

"For states, I'm just going to do my best on the three events I made it on: floor, vault, and bars," she wrote. "I'm hoping to place well on floor and bars (once I figure out how to let go of the bar). I was really hoping to move on [with] all-around, but now I just have to work with what I have and do my best routines and have fun for my last gymnastics meet."

Washington-Lee's Sophie Hatcher won the all-around with a score of 37.65, followed by Yorktown's Bella Kane (37), Hayfield's Molly Overstreet (36.975) and McLean's Lizzy Brown-Kaiser (36.95).

SOUTH COUNTY sophomore Collea Burgess, last year's all-around champion, attended this year's region meet but did not compete. Burgess said her club coaches (Apollo Gymnastics) did not want her to compete. McLean won the team title with a score of 144.425. Battlefield earned the other state berth with a score of 141.025.

Three-time defending region champion Washington-Lee placed third with a score of 139.525. Lake Braddock's Jordan Clark earned a state berth on beam (second, 9.225), vault (seventh, 9.325) and bars (tied eighth, 8.775). Teammate Carsyn Quackenbush qualified on beam (sixth, 9), and Jordan Tautges earned a trip on floor (tied eighth, 9.45).

Robinson's Caroline Burda is headed to states on vault (sixth, 9.4).

The state meet is scheduled for Feb. 20-21 at Patriot High School.

Robinson's DePasquale Escapes Defeat at Regionals

Lake Braddock's Haskett wins third region championship.

BY JON ROETMAN
THE CONNECTION

Trailing 2-1 with seconds remaining in the 182-pound region final, Robinson wrestler Cole DePasquale masterfully timed his escape from defeat.

Starting from bottom position, DePasquale timed his lunge perfectly with the referee's starting whistle and worked free from Hayfield's Antonio Agee with 6 seconds remaining in overtime, earning one point for an escape while forcing an ultimate tiebreaker.

DePasquale would secure the win with another escape, capturing his second region championship with a 3-2 victory on Feb. 14 at Centreville High School.

"You go when [the referee] inhales — right before he exhales in the whistle," DePasquale said. "You've got to time it just right. I'm glad I got a head start on him and I was really fortunate."

DePasquale received a cut above his right eye during the first day of the regional tournament. The cut re-opened during his match against Agee, leading to multiple blood-time stoppages.

DePasquale at first had gauze placed over his right eye and eventually had a wrap around his head, limiting his peripheral vision. DePasquale, who missed nine months due to injury, also battled fatigue, having been back with the Rams for less than a month.

"I knew Agee was going to be tough; I knew he was a really good wrestler," DePasquale said. "I'm just glad with my limited training I was able to come away with the win."

Robinson's Austin Riggs won the 145-pound title, beating Osbourn Park's David Sniffen, 10-3.

DePasquale and Riggs helped the Rams finish third in the team standings with a score of 141. Battlefield won the team title with a score of 188.5, and Osbourn Park placed second (142.5).

Hayfield finished ninth (83), South County 10th (77), and Lake Braddock 11th (69).

Lake Braddock's Ryan Haskett captured his third region championship, finishing atop the 126-pound bracket.

Haskett defeated Annandale's Alex Joya,

"It was a low-scoring match," Haskett said, "but I felt I was in control the whole time."

Haskett, who finished state runner-up at 120 in 2014, said he is motivated by the way last season ended.

"Every day I think about last year [and how] I was runner-up," Haskett said. "[I will likely have] the same kid (Colonial Forge's Joshua Nail) this year [in] the state finals. [It] motivates me every day. This time I'm gonna win it."

Other individual winners include: Patriot's Killian Cardinale (106), Centreville's Victor Echeverria (113).

Lake Braddock's Ryan Haskett (126) captured the third region title of his high school wrestling career on Feb. 14 at Centreville High School.

Battlefield's River Curtis (120), Westfield's Justin Yorkdale (132), Ryan Yorkdale (138) and Austin Knies (285), McLean's Conor Grammes (152) and Mack McCune (170), West Potomac's Joshua Carter (160), Centreville's Tyler Love (195) and Annandale's Tony Gibbs (220).

Love, the defending 195-pound state champion, received the tournament's Most Outstanding Wrestler award, and was recognized for pinning three opponents in a combined 2 minutes, 6 seconds.

The state meet is scheduled for Feb. 20-21 at Robinson Secondary School.
