County, private sector unite to build workforce housing.

With an eye toward providing workforce housing in the local area, Fairfax County recently broke ground on a 270-unit apartment complex in Fair Oaks.

“This is a celebration in many ways and a great day for Fairfax County,” said Greg Lamb, executive vice president of the Jefferson Apartment Group, the project’s developer. “It took determination, dedication, persistence and commitment.”

He was speaking May 5 in the county Government Center’s forum, during a ceremony prior to the groundbreaking. The apartments are being built on county-owned land off Monument Drive, on the Government Center’s perimeter, so they’re named Residences at the Government Center.

On some 9 acres across from the Fairfax Corner shopping center, they’ll offer a 5,800-square-foot amenity space including an outdoor pool, fenced playground, two courtyards and connections to walking trails. The apartments will include green and energy-saving features and will be available to people making up to 60 percent of the area median income (AMI).

Calling it a great addition to the county, Robert Schwaninger, chairman of the county’s Redevelopment and Housing Authority (FCRHA), said it took nine years to bring it to fruition. And Lamb said it was actually “birthed by Congressman Gerry Connolly (D-11)” when he was the Board of Supervisors chairman in November 2006 and made ending homelessness one of the county’s eventual goals.

After the recession hit in 2008, the county asked first responders

if they’d live in Fairfax County if affordable housing were built for their income levels, and 68 percent said yes. A plan to build it was proposed and approved, and construction documents and permits were obtained through 2013. But, said Lamb, “Rising interest costs made it unfinanceable.”

However, in June 2014, the project became the first of its kind in Virginia to structure the financing via a combination of both 9-percent and 4-percent tax-credit allocations from the Virginia Housing Development Authority (VHDA, plus tax-exempt bonds from the FCRHA and other financing sources. It’s a public-private partnership between the county, the FCRHA, Jefferson Apartment Group and Stratford Capital Group.

The apartment complex will be LEED-certified, with its marketing targeted to Fairfax County employees, although availability won’t be restricted to them. And besides being affordable to households earning up to 60 percent AMI, at least 20 percent of the units are geared for households at or below 50 percent AMI.

Paradigm Construction Co. is the general contractor. There’ll be studio, plus one-, two- and three-bedroom apartments. For people with yearly incomes of $38,000-$70,000, the rents will range from $1,000-$1,700 per unit. Site work actually began in April, and the first apartment is expected to be available for occupancy by October 2016.

Steve Wilson, president of Stratford Capital, which provided the financial backing for this project, also spoke during the ceremony. He said the Residences will improve the quality of life for those living there, but “We’ve only just begun. This was a real Rubik’s cube of a deal with lots of moving parts, but we were able to do it.”

“The affordable-housing problem continues to grow every year — especially in large, metropolitan areas — and Northern Virginia is no exception,” continued Wilson. “We couldn’t have done this without help from the local community. The county provided the land, effectively, at no cost to the developer.”

“What we’re celebrating today is

The Board of Supervisors named the 2015 Lords and Ladies Fairfax on Tuesday, May 12.

Sully's Lord and Lady Fairfax

Jerrold L. Foltz and Bonnie L. Hobbs are Lord and Lady Fairfax from Sully District.

Celebrate Fairfax, Inc. announced the 2015 Lords and Ladies Fairfax at the Board of Supervisors meeting on Tuesday, May 12 at the Fairfax County Government Center.

"The tradition of honoring Lords and Ladies Fairfax began in 1984 to recognize exceptional citizens of Fairfax County," according to Celebrate Fairfax. The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors selects two people from each district who have demonstrated superior volunteer service, heroism or other special accomplishments.

Sully District Michael R. Frey named Bonnie L. Hobbs and Jerrold L. Foltz as his Lady and Lord Fairfax.

Hobbs has covered Centreville for the Centre View community newspaper for the past 20 years.

"She has made tremendous contributions in giving neighborhoods a sense of identity, as well as highlighting the many positive aspects of Centreville.

From the athletic prowess of our Little League teams, to the accomplishments of the elementary school robotics team, to Adopt a Highway cleanups of local churches, no event is too obscure for Ms.

Hobbs to cover," he said.

"She also has an amazing ability to rally community support with public interest stories of children and residents with life-threatening illnesses. Fostering public awareness of land use, transportation and many other local projects, she always encourages public input and lets readers know how they can get involved."

The Rev. Dr. Jerrold L. Foltz is a retired, ordained minister in the United Church of Christ and was the organizing pastor of Wellspring United Church of Christ in Centreville, according to Frey.

"Rev. Dr. Foltz and Mrs. Foltz, have been instrumental with the Centreville Immigration Forum and the Centreville Labor Resource Center," he said. "In addition, he has organized a non-profit food co-op, a local chapter of Habitat for Humanity, and is the Sully District representative on the Human Services Council."

Foltz has served as volunteer chaplain with the Fairfax County Fire and Rescue Department and assists the Centreville Volunteer Fire Dept. Station 17. "As part of the Disaster Ministries Network of the United Church of Christ, Rev. Dr. Foltz has led recovery and rebuilding efforts all over the U.S. and in other countries," said Frey.

The Lords and Ladies will be honored at a special dinner hosted by Great American Restaurants, Celebrate Fairfax, Inc., and the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors, on Tuesday, June 2, 2015.

Lord and Lady Fairfax at Large

Bulova names Kate Hanley and Lt. Col. John P. McAnaw as Lady and Lord Fairfax at large.

Fairfax County Board of Supervisors Chairman Sharon Bulova named Katherine K. Hanley, former board chairman, as this year's At-Large Lady Fairfax.

Hanley was first elected to the Fairfax County School Board, then the Board of Supervisors as the Providence District supervisor and then as Board of Supervisors chairman.

"During her tenure, Ms. Hanley worked tirelessly with other members of the board, not only advocating for education, but also for human services and affordable housing. In recognition, a homeless shelter for families, was named after her. Recently additional transitional housing units called 'Kate's Place' were built adjacent to the shelter," said Bulova.

Hanley was instrumental in the establishment of the Revenue Stabilization fund along with a significant investment in building Fairfax County's Information Technology infrastructure, said Bulova. "She was also a great proponent of transportation initiatives, helping to position the Silver Line for federal funding."

After leaving the Board of Supervisors, Hanley served as Secretary of the Commonwealth, and is now on the Metropolitan Washington Airport Authority, the Fairfax County Electoral Board and the Community Services Board. She has led the bipartisan election commission, the committee on the meals tax, an effort that brought together disparate, competing groups who came up with a near unanimous vote to bring a report to the Board of Supervisors, said Bulova.

Bulova cited Lt. Col. John P. McAnaw's love for history, love of country and love of service reasons she named him the 2015 Lord Fairfax.

"Lt. Col. John P. McAnaw is well known for his tireless work to preserve history in Fairfax County," said Bulova. "His love of our past earned him a Lifetime Achievement Award from the History Commission for his decades of service as a Civil War Historian."

The Park Authority honored McAnaw by naming a recreation area for his preservation efforts.

A veteran serving in leadership roles within VFW Post 8469, McAnaw is the past president of the Bull Run Civil War Roundtable. He helped lead the effort to preserve Ox Hill, an important Civil War site. In addition to this, he is also a board member of the Fairfax Station Railroad Museum and has served as a historian for a number of local organizations in Fairfax County.

In his Kings Park West community, McAnaw has served as chairman of the Parks committee, leading numerous efforts to mobilize scouts and volunteers to build and maintain trails throughout the parkland surrounding Royal Lake.

a value system — a community that understands we need a mix of housing and that people need to be able to afford to live here,” said Connolly. “And I can’t thank my colleagues on the Board of Supervisors, years ago, enough for their commitment to make this happen. This is the fulfillment of that pledge — allowing people who want to live here to do so.”

Supervisor Cathy Hudgins (D-Hunter Mill) said she was excited about it. “You can talk about something, but you don’t have something to celebrate unless you can produce,” she said. “And this provides a community people can be a part of. This is one more example of our commitment to affordable housing in Fairfax County, and it’s housing where people can live and give back to their community.”

“This project’s been around so long that it was in the Springfield District and Elaine McConnell was its supervisor when it first started,” added Supervisor John Cook (R-Braddock). “It shows how we can build things via partnerships — and things that couldn’t have been done any other way. It’s also an environmentally friendly building, so we’re putting our money where our mouth is and showing we can do what we ask the private sector to do.”

Board of Supervisors Chairman Sharon Bulova called it “a project that refused to die; people stepped in at various times to Artist’s rendition of the apartment complex that’ll provide homes for firefighters, police, teachers and other workers who currently can’t afford to live in Fairfax County.

save it.” And she thanked Connolly for his vision and her board colleagues for “having the courage to make this happen.”

Because the developer was able to lease land from the county, and federal low-income, tax credits were obtained, said Bulova, “This is being done at no cost to the county. By providing workforce housing, many young people, low-income families and those having long commutes to jobs here will be able to live here. And because the property is privately owned, it’ll also be a source of revenue for the county. It also illustrates an innovative use of smart growth, going forward.”

VHDA Executive Director Susan Dewey said her organization’s sole mission is affordable housing, and she thanked everyone involved in this project “on behalf of the 270 families who’ll live here. It’s difficult to do affordable housing; it takes a long time and a lot of people to put it all together.” Thanking the supervisors and county staff for making sure the county has affordable housing, she said, “The tax credits amounted to $26 million of equity that made this project possible.”

Agreeing, Schwaninger told those gathered, “Affordable housing is vital because it shows the soul of a community — its compassion. And I ask you to go out and tell others about it.”

Remembering on Memorial Day 2015

On Memorial Day, take at least one minute to reflect on those who have died.

On Memorial Day, we remember all of those who have died in military service, more than 400,000 in World War II, more than 30,000 in Korea, more than 50,000 in Vietnam.

As many as 620,000 soldiers died in the line of duty in the Civil War, stunningly about 2 percent of the population at that time. To compare, while more than 2.5 million soldiers have served in Iraq and Afghanistan, that number is still less than one percent of the U.S. population.

Since Sept. 11, 2001, more than 6,800 U.S. military service men and women have died in support of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

On Memorial Day, there are many ways to remember the fallen, including a visit to Arlington National Cemetery, or many other local commemorations. But at a minimum, wherever you are, you can observe a moment of silence at 12:01 p.m. along with Iraq and Afghanistan Veterans of America (IAVA), or you can set your own moment at some point during the day.

More than 52,000 U.S. military service members have been wounded in action, although that number is likely to be revised upward. In 2013, the military confirmed traumatic brain injury in more than 220,000 of the more than 2.5 million troops who have served in Iraq and Afghanistan. The long-term consequences of many of these injuries, including mental health consequences, are unknown, but they will require a national commitment to excellence in health care and services for both active duty military personnel and veterans. Virginia's U.S. Senators Mark Warner and Tim Kaine continue to advocate for better service from the Veterans Administration.

Since Memorial Day 2014, with military operations winding down in Afghanistan, the Department of Defense announced the deaths of two military service members from Virginia. Sgt. Charles C. Strong, 28, of Suffolk, died Sept. 15, 2014 in Herat province, Afghanistan while conducting combat operations. Sgt. David H. Stewart, 34, of Stafford, was one of three Marines who died June 20, 2014 while conducting combat operations in Helmand province, Afghanistan.

A Few Ways To Pay Tribute on Memorial Day

❖ Monday, May 25, Arlington National Cemetery, National Memorial Day Observance to honor America's fallen military service members. 10:30 a.m., prelude by U.S. Marine Band. 11 a.m., Presidential Armed Forces Full Honor Wreath-Laying Ceremony at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, to be followed by an observance program hosted by the Department of Defense in Arlington's Memorial Amphitheater. Free and open to the public. Attendees are encouraged to be at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier or seated in the amphitheater by 9:30 a.m. Free parking and shuttle in the Arlington National Cemetery Welcome Center's parking lot from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. OBSERVE A MOMENT OF SILENCE at 12:01 p.m. This Memorial Day, Iraq and Afghanistan Veterans of America (IAVA) will lay a wreath before the Tomb

Bright lights, colorful costumes and spectacular singing and dancing – that's Chantilly High's Jazz & Pizzazz. And this year's extravaganza, the 29th annual, is slated for Wednesday-Saturday, May 27-30, at 7 p.m. each night.

Tickets are $10 at www.chantillychoral.org. Advance purchases are encouraged since Friday and Saturday performances often sell out. Under the direction of Choral Director Evan Ayars and Jazz Band Director Chris Singleton, approximately 60 students total will be taking the stage during this family-friendly show.

"It's always a great time to put together the Jazz & Pizzazz performances," said Singleton. "Seeing the collaboration between the band and choir departments in everything from planning to logistics to the music itself is very fulfilling, especially when you get to see how proud the students are of the final product."

The band members' program will feature the music of jazz greats such as Quincy Jones, Dizzy Gillespie, the Brecker Brothers and Gordon Goodwin. Another highlight will be Hank Levy's 1970s hit, "Whiplash," which has recently regained popularity courtesy of the movie of the same name.

"The students have really enjoyed digging in to learn 'Whiplash,'" said Singleton. "Many of them saw the movie that came out earlier this year and were very excited to play the piece that is the title track. The tune is in 7/4 time and really keeps you guessing as it leads to a thrilling finish. The entire soundtrack is great, and this piece seemed like the perfect choice [for them to play]."

All in all, he said, "Chantilly Jazz has worked very hard this year and we're excited to have Jazz & Pizzazz as a part of our performance schedule. The band has about nine performances every year, including many community events, and Jazz & Pizzazz is a great way to kick off the last part of the year. Still coming up for Chantilly Jazz is the Spring Awards concert on June, and the Touch-A-Truck event at the Chantilly Library on June 13."

Ayars described Jazz & Pizzazz as "a great cumulative activity that combines the talents of the jazz band with the flair of the show choir." This year, he said, "The ShowStoppers are drawing from many different decades and genres of music, including the music of the Beatles, the Temptations, Britney Spears, Janet Jackson and Earth, Wind & Fire. There's music for everyone to enjoy."

Chantilly High School Takes Virginia Economic Championship

Third statewide victory in a row and sixth altogether.

BY BONNIE HOBBS
CENTRE VIEW

For the third year in a row, a team from Chantilly High has won the state championship in economics. The four students took first place in the Adam Smith Division (advanced economics) of the 2015 Governor's Challenge in Economics and Personal Finance.

The competition was held April 17 at VCU and marked the school's sixth championship overall in this division. The winning team members are senior Brendan Aronhime and juniors Aron Malatinszky, Alice Wang and Kincaid Youman.

"I'm extremely proud of this group," said economics teacher Joe Clement, their coach. "They worked hard and it paid off. They also got along really well and were fun to work with. I think we win so often because we have fantastic economics students. We have kids who ask the right questions, think of different ways to solve problems and are super curious."

"It's also a function of the fact that success begets success," he continued. "That is, we win and kids become interested the following year; we win again, more kids become interested; rinse, repeat. We are constantly building on the success of prior years. We get the most amazing students to come out for this competition, and this year's students certainly continued that tradition of excellence."

More than 3,200 Virginia high-school students competed in the event's preliminary rounds, with 168 qualifying for the day-long championship. And although Chantilly didn't make it to the national finals, it did reach the semifinals.

Regarding the Governor's Challenge, there's a statewide test to see who makes each school's team and which schools compete at states. Twelve people tried out for Chantilly's team, which was formed during spring break.

"We met once a week after school," said

Malatinszky. But the students said they mainly honed their skills in class. Each also explained why they like economics.

"Economics is so much more than the study of money," said Aronhime. "It examines how people make decisions. And it provides explanations for the choices we make in our everyday lives that we don't really think about — and I find that fascinating."

"My grandfather worked in the World Bank, so I thought economics was a cool field to follow and I started studying it," said Malatinszky. "Our school's economics team is really strong because Mr. Clement is a really good teacher. So I had an extra motivation to study even more to add onto Chantilly's economics dominance."

Since people are always talking about the economy, said Youman, "I wanted to understand more about what's going on in the world. I joined the team because I was doing well in the class and wanted to help win a state championship."

"Economics has the power to target social issues, like poverty, that are plaguing society in general," added Wang. "It's practical in all fields of study and it's basically life."

THE STATE championship consisted of two rounds. The first one was a written test taken by all the teams. It dealt with macroeconomics (the larger picture) and world events. Then the two, top-scoring teams overall competed in the second round. Called the "buzzer round," it's similar to a quiz bowl where team members buzz in to answer questions before their opponents do.

An example of a macroeconomics question, said Wang, would be: "When excessive government spending reduces private investment, what is that called?" (Answer: Crowding out).

Aronhime provided a sample buzzer-round question: "This concept in game theory describes a situation in which everyone makes the best decision based on everyone else's decisions." (Answer: The Nash Equilibrium). Each student focused on studying a specific area for the competition. Aronhime covered economists; Malatinszky, international relations; Youman, U.S. economics; and Wang, economic history.

Malatinszky said the toughest parts of the macroeconomics section were the questions involving net capital outflow. In world events, said Aronhime, the most difficult questions dealt with world trade statistics. He also said it was hard knowing what to study in advance because economics is such a broad discipline.

However, Wang said the worst part of the whole competition was "waiting for them to announce the top two teams." But she was thrilled that Chantilly was one of them. "There aren't words to describe how awesome Mr. Clement is," she said. "He was confident that we'd win, and we didn't want to let him down."

Youman said the most surprising thing was that "they asked about specific questions that no one would be expected to know. For example, 'To which two nations does Virginia export the most agricultural products?' The answer was China and Canada."

But, said Aronhime, "We really enjoyed winning. We didn't think we would because we were competing against really good schools, such as T.J. [Thomas Jefferson]."

"I was relieved because we really wanted to win and we worked hard," said

Malatinszky. "And the trophy for our school was a physical representation of our success." Youman was just happy with their victory, and Aronhime also felt relief because they'd prepared so much and Clement had high expectations of them.

"The quiz bowl was the most fun part, when we went onstage in front of all the other teams and destroyed the competition," said Youman. "Brendan buzzed in before the questions were finished and answered them right, almost every time."

All in all, said Wang, "It's an awesome experience that was really unique — something to have on your bucket list." When the Chantilly students heard they won, she said, "I felt kind of numb; it didn't set in until we were halfway home."

All four students attributed their victory to their coach. "He's a great teacher and made us really enthusiastic about the subject," said Aronhime.

Calling the tournament "a cool and fun experience," Malatinszky said it was "great to see so many economic experts judging us — and they also had phenomenal doughnuts and sandwiches there."

Educating about Alcohol and Drugs

Suggestions for talking to teens about staying safe.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
CENTRE VIEW

Craduation, prom and the summer before heading off to college are some of the highlights of a teen's high school experience. While the season brings landmark events, it can be marred by the consequences of engaging in harmful activities.

Parents can play a pivotal role in keeping teens safe. The Unified Prevention Coalition of Fairfax County reports that teens cite their parents as the leading influence for them not to drink, and say that it is not difficult to get alcohol from their family home, older siblings or friends. Initiating a dialogue with teens about the dangers of unsafe behaviors such as drinking and drug use can be daunting for some parents.

"We know that teens who receive consistent messages from their parents about their expectations that their child not use alcohol are much less likely to use," said Diane Eckert, deputy executive director, Unified Prevention Coalition of Fairfax County.

The season brings celebratory activities and less supervision, and therefore more opportunities to take chances, said Eckert. It's critical that parents "sit down with your teens and talk with them about your expectations," she said.

"With less structure and more excitement, teens can find themselves taking more risks, so it's important for parents to be involved."

Conversations about safety during activities where teens will have more freedom can be difficult to navigate. "For sure those are hard conversations," said Amy L. Best, Ph.D., professor of Sociology and chair of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at George Mason University in Fairfax.

"Parents want to be careful not to drown out the fun times that prom and graduation also represent. It's about finding balance. Part of it is about finding ways to talk about the risks without your teen walking away feeling hyper-vulnerable and disempowered."

"... It is about finding ways to talk about the risks without your teen walking away feeling hyper-vulnerable and disempowered."

— Amy L. Best, Ph.D.,
George Mason University

The dialogue should be factual and non-threatening. "Ask open-ended question about what is going on at school and with their friends," said Best. "It's easier to open those conversations when you're not talking about your child, and you're collecting information about what is going on at school and with their friends." Best is author of "Prom Night: Youth, Schools and Popular Culture" (2000 Routledge), which was selected for the 2002 American Educational Studies Association Critics' Choice Award.

Difficult conversations are made easier if there is a history of open, honest communication between a parent and child. While parents should make their expectations for their child's behavior clear, Best warns against lecturing or talking down to a teen. "The prom should not be the first time that these conversations occur," she said. "It's really important that kids be able to express their feelings and have an active role in the conversation. Trust has to be built into the relationship in order for that to happen."

A concrete plan for ensuring safety should be part of the conversation. "Kids are often in situations where alcohol is being consumed and they may not be the ones consuming it," said Best. "So safe driving arrangements are important."

"The good news is that a lot of kids are opting out of drinking and greater awareness around the potential for sexual assault," said Best. "The message has to be communicated in advance and schools have a role to play in that."

In Arlington, School Resource Officers are collaborating with local high schools to focus on alcohol use prevention and awareness programs now that prom and graduation season is underway. Programs such as "Drive to Stay Alive" and "Prom Promise" are in place to educate students in having a safe and fun prom season. One of the roles of the officers is to provide positive guidance to students "and to act as positive role models both inside and outside the school environment."

Kathy Ely, spokeswoman for Connelly School of the Holy Child, an all-girls school in Potomac, Md., says her school, as well as most schools, have safety plans in place. "We understand the pressures that these girls are under, and work hard to educate them about effects not just now but for their future," she said.

Tips for Keeping Teens Safe

Help make prom and graduation night safe for teens by following these tips:

- ❖ Do not serve or allow alcohol at any party you are hosting; an adult who provides alcohol to a minor is breaking the law and risking that teen's life.
- ❖ Know where your teenager is attending a party; verify there will be parental supervision, and that it will be alcohol-free.
- Make it clear to your teen(s) that you do not approve of their drinking alcohol.

- Report underage drinking parties by calling the Fairfax County Police Department's non-emergency number: 703-691-2131. Your call can be anonymous and may prevent injuries or a fatal car crash.
- Educate your family on the risks associated with underage drinking and its proven harmful effects on the brain. The legal drinking age is 21, and students who wait until their early 20s to drink are 84 percent less likely to develop an addiction than those who start earlier.
- Make sure your teen has a plan for the night and that you know what it is.

- Do not rent hotel rooms for prom-goers.
- Know who is driving — if it's a limo, check their policy on not allowing any alcohol in the vehicle and driving any teen who clearly has been drinking.
- Encourage your senior to attend their school's All Night Graduation Celebration.

In Contrast

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Even though my previous CT Scan "looked good," nonetheless I am already, two months out, thinking about my next scan, scheduled for July 15. I am not nervous or anxious about it yet. But I am something. Typically, those emotions begin a week or so before the scan and last a week or so after, until we learn the results. What I am addressing in my own way, is what challenges some cancer patients, certainly me: we can't leave well enough alone and, as a related condition, might not savor the moment/good news because the underlying diagnosis – in my case, non-small cell lung cancer, stage IV – is so bad, and by bad I mean incurable. In fact, that was the first thing I remember my oncologist saying to me/Team Lourie: "I can treat you but I can't cure you."

Nevertheless, here I am six-plus years later, alive and abnormally well, given my original prognosis: "13 months to two years." Still undergoing chemotherapy, still not cured; characterized by my oncologist as his "third miracle." As I wait for the other shoe to drop, other than experiencing symptoms – which I rarely have – and evaluating my every-three-week pre-chemotherapy lab work, the diagnostic scans (CT Scan for me mostly, occasionally an MRI or a bone scan) are the best indicators of tumor growth, movement and/or new activity. To get the clearest radiological picture/assessment, often a dye (a.k.a "contrast") is injected into the patient to provide the computerized tomography what it needs to create a more detailed rendering of the affected area. Given my pre-existing, chemotherapy-affected kidney damage, and factoring in that the "contrast" would be filtered through the kidneys, causing potential stress to that organ, per doctor's orders (or lack thereof), I've not had a CT Scan with contrast for three or four years (and I usually have four CT Scans per year).

However safe he/we have been, neither my oncologist nor I are the least bit sorry about it. He has been able to reasonably track the tumors in my lungs; and so far, so good (amazing, actually). But, for the next scan, he has ordered that it be completed with contrast. When I asked him why now/what about my elevated creatinine/kidney function, his answer was something about my levels being higher than normal but not trending up, so, since it's been years, he thought it prudent – and timely, all things considered – to proceed. Seemed reasonable, so I consented; so "contrasting" we shall go.

I can't imagine there will be confirmation that all is indeed well and what the oncologist initially feared was trouble two months ago will be even less of a concern than he expressed two weeks ago when we last met and discussed the findings of this most recent scan. But what do I know? Certainly it's possible. I'm living proof of that. Still, this next scan/result is two months away. I shouldn't even be thinking about it now. I should be enjoying the positive findings of my last scan, not anticipating what could possibly be worse with the next one. But I am.

This is the life, albeit an extremely lucky one, of a "terminal" cancer patient (this one, anyway). I want to live for today but it's hard not to worry about tomorrow.
