Indictment Coming in John Geer Case?

Special grand jury began hearing testimony this week.

BY TIM PETERSON
THE CONNECTION

Since shooting John Geer dead in the doorway of his Springfield home on Aug. 29, 2013, PFC Adam Torres of the Fairfax County Police Department has remained at work, albeit out of the field, but undisciplined by police and unprosecuted for any criminal wrongdoing.

The next chapter of the nearly two-year-old case began unfolding Monday, July 27 when a special grand jury called by Fairfax County Commonwealth's Attorney Raymond F. Morrogh first met to hear testimony. Unlike regular grand juries that listen to multiple cases, a special grand jury, provided for in the Virginia Code, convenes to make a decision on one specific case.

The purpose of this such group is to decide whether there is probable cause to put Torres on trial.

According to Michael Lieberman, the lawyer who has been representing Geer's family and mother of his children Maura Harrington, the special grand jury has six months to issue a report after being impaneled. At that point, the judge has discretion to intervene.

At the end of January this year, Fairfax County released 11,000 pages from the police department investigation of the incident, detailing their findings of what took place that afternoon. The report said Torres was joined by four other officers outside Geer's home at the time of the shooting. Geer's best friend Jeff Stewart and father Don Geer were also in the area, close enough to see what happened. They make up the seven witnesses to the shot fired.

Torres claimed to see Geer quickly lower his hands to waist level after a 40-minute period of talking. During that time Geer had rested his hands on the top of the door frame and reached down to scratch his nose from time to time. Torres said the action he saw provoked him to fire. The other officers' accounts describe Geer's hands moving slowly at either shoulder or ear level and contradict Torres.

Geer's father and Stewart remember the version the other officers described.

Lieberman said he doesn't understand why a special grand jury was needed in this case. "They have seven witnesses," he said. "Six say one thing, one person says another. To me, that's more than enough for probable cause."

Among the witnesses, Morrogh had previously called one of Geer's two daughters Haylea to participate in the special grand jury. The girls had been with Geer that afternoon, when he became upset hearing that their mother and his partner Harrington was planning to move out of the house. He began throwing some of her belongings out of the house and the daughters called Harrington, who then called the police. When Geer knew the police were coming, he had his daughters go to a neighbor's basement.

Morrogh was not available for an interview, but in an email said that "The daughter is a witness to the events leading up to the shooting."

After Lieberman sent a letter questioning the move, Morrogh decided to not call Haylea after all. "She has nothing to offer — to put her on, to say bad things about her father," Lieberman said. "To me there's only seven witnesses. Maura's not one of them. Haylea's not one of them. It took place over a split-second."

Stewart, who is one of the witnesses and who remained on the list to testify before the special grand jury, was worried some of the testimony, including his, might be used in "trashing John's character."

"I'm not going to sit there and let them condemn John, try in some way assassinate his character as a defense for an officer shooting him in the chest."

Shortly after the incident, Stewart told investigators he knew Geer had been drinking that day and had told Stewart when he knew police were coming, something to the effect of, "The next time you see me, I may have a bullet in my chest."

"My open-minded discussion of thoughts that day, in shock, had no bearing of basis, or support from the facts," Stewart said. "John didn't want to be shot that day, now we know he said as much."

"I told the FBI John was executed," Stewart continued. "This has nothing to do with whatever his intentions were or weren't. With what I saw that day, he had not made the move yet, to initiate that action. The burden of de-escalating that situation was on the police."

Stewart is also member of the Fairfax County ad hoc commission to evaluate police policies, which was convened largely in response to Geer's death and the limited, untimely manner in which the police department and county government handled releasing information about the case.

"John's death brought to light a lot of issues," Stewart said. "The Culosis were brought back out, Masters were brought back out," he added, referring to Dr. Salvatore Culosi and David Masters, two other men shot and killed by Fairfax County police officers. "I guess it's been worth it to this point — I'm still reserving judgment."

For Geer's family, Lieberman said "They're still upset. Now they don't have confidence in the system. They've been through a horrendous experience for two years where people of authority have just let them down completely. Justice was just denied for the longest time."

‘Master Plan Wasn’t Finished Document’

City Council,
Planning Commission
discuss Fairfax
Boulevard's future.

BY BONNIE HOBBS
THE CONNECTION

In April 2012, the City of Fairfax adopted the Master Plan vision for the redevelopment of Fairfax Boulevard. It transformed this 3.5-mile corridor from transportation-oriented to more pedestrian friendly.

The plan supports office, retail and residential uses together, with storefronts at ground level, living spaces or offices above, parking in the rear and vehicle access via side streets and alleys. And in Nov. 2014, the City Council asked the Planning Commission to review the plan and recommend whether some or all of it should be incorporated into the City's Comprehensive Plan.

"The Comprehensive Plan was created in 1988 and updated and amended," said Brooke Hardin, the City's director of Community Development and Planning. "But we'd support taking a fresh look at it and rewriting the whole thing."

Fairfax Boulevard includes the Kamp Washington Center, East and West Connectors, the Northfax Center and the Fairfax Circle Center. And from January to June of this year, the Planning Commission reviewed the Fairfax Boulevard Master Plan. Then during a July 7 joint work session of the commissioners and Council, City Planning Division Chief Cindy Petkac gave a presentation describing what's in the Master Plan and how it relates to what's in the Comprehensive plan regarding that corridor.

THE MASTER PLAN describes buildings as two to four stories. It also recommends a multi-way boulevard with five, narrowed travel lanes in the middle for heavy through traffic. Also included are landscaped medians plus one-way, access roads – called slow lanes – with on-street parking.

The Comprehensive Plan for Fairfax Boulevard recommends landscaped medians, as well, and enhanced streetscape features and smaller blocks to encourage pedestrian activity. It, too, mentions slow lanes, but doesn't provide any details. And it supports a mix of uses and a balance of traffic with the safety and character of the corridor.

After its review, the Planning Commission made more than 80 comments dealing mainly with zoning, data and policy issues.

"The bulk of the comments were policy-related – about things such as building height, density [of development], right-of-way, etc.," said Petkac.

There was concern that the business community wouldn't want to provide the land required for the 156-foot right-of-way needed for the slow lanes. And the commissioners wanted to know where the access points would be for the one-way, local roads and how many such access points there'd be.

In addition, since the nearby signalized intersections back up, they wondered how efficient traffic circles are when backed-up traffic goes through them.

"The Master Plan wasn't a finished document," said Planning Commission Chairman Paul Cunningham. "Some issues still beg clarification."

ACCORDING to the Planning Commission, the current Comprehensive Plan implements the main ideas in the Fairfax Boulevard Master Plan. But changing economic conditions and ambiguity around several matters still need to be addressed and concepts further refined. So the commissioners recommended these issues be dealt with in an update of the Comprehensive Plan, as follows:

- ❖ Determine the appropriate building heights, density and mix of uses, reflective of current market conditions, planned projects and a Commercial Development Market Analysis earlier prepared for Fairfax Boulevard by the firms Streetsense and Partners for Economic Solutions.

- ❖ Further investigate the multi-way boulevard concept, as well as slow lanes, roundabouts (traffic circles), bike lanes, traffic-signal timing, reverse lanes, municipal parking and walkability as part of the multimodal transportation plan.

- ❖ Reestablish the vision for Fairfax Boulevard – develop a single, guiding set of principles for how to maximize, to the fullest extent possible, the economic viability and livability of this corridor.

"These issues could be defined in the Comprehensive Plan update," said Petkac. "And we'll also do a multimodal transportation plan in relation to the City and the I-66 corridor."

When shown information about the current traffic volume on various sections of Fairfax Boulevard, Mayor Scott Silverthorne said, "I find it interesting that our traffic counts are [virtually] the same as 10 years ago. [That road] certainly doesn't move as fast as it did then."

Councilman David Meyer then encouraged City staff to "see if the traffic on Fairfax Boulevard is coming to town or driving through it."

Wind Energy

Wind energy needs to be a part of the renewable mix of energy sources in Virginia and the nation.

BY KENNETH R. "KEN" PLUM
STATE DELEGATE (D-36)

With the federal Clean Air Act requiring higher air quality standards, many fossil-fuel power plants will be closing or converting to other fuel sources. On trips to the western part of our country and abroad, especially to Germany, I am reminded of the significant role that wind plays in being used to generate clean and sustainable electricity. In 2014, wind power added significantly more new electricity for consumers than any other source in the United States, according to the U.S. Department of Energy.

According to an American Wind Energy Association announcement last year the United States has more wind energy supplying its grid than any other country, enough to power 15.5 million American homes. Wind is the fifth largest electricity source in the U.S., generating 4.4 percent of all the electricity in this country. In Denmark, wind-produced electricity provides just under 40 percent of the nation's power. Scotland has enough wind-produced electricity to supply all its homes. Wind power is the leading source of Spain's electricity and is the largest component of Germany's renewable sources that now constitute a quarter of its power. China leads the world in investments in wind power.

Among the states Texas, Iowa, California, and Oklahoma, each generated enough electricity from wind to power more than a million homes. Other states with significant wind capacity include Kansas, Illinois, Minnesota, Oregon, Colorado and Washington. Virginia and other eastern states do not make the list because they do not have as significant a wind resource. For Virginia, only off-shore and in the mountains mostly in the southwest is there wind sufficient to site a wind turbine farm. Dominion, the largest power provider in the Commonwealth, has invested in wind-powered electricity generation in West Virginia, Indiana, Illinois, and in Virginia where it holds a lease from the federal government for off-shore wind development.

The success of wind-produced electricity in Europe has been realized from a feed-in tariff system that has effectively subsidized investments. In the United States, the Production Tax Credit has been the primary federal tax incentive for wind energy. As all countries look for ways to save money these incentives are in danger at a time when wind energy is beginning to demonstrate its value.

Virginia is the first state to secure a wind energy research lease to build and operate turbines in federal waters. Dominion's plan to build a pair of six-megawatt test turbines about 24 nautical miles off-shore from Virginia Beach seems to be in trouble as bids to build the turbines are about twice that projected. The expectation has been that eventually there would be 300 turbines in the off-shore area. Stakeholders are currently at work to identify options to salvage the project.

Wind energy needs to be a part of the renewable mix of energy sources in Virginia and the nation. Congress needs to extend the federal tax credit that keeps our development of wind energy competitive with the rest of the world. Consumers need to be open to buying wind and other renewable energies even if there is a cost premium. Our air quality depends on it.

Slavery in 'the Land of the Free'

To the Editor:

America, "the land of the free." I have always considered it necessary for a land of free people to assist in freeing the enslaved.

Yet 36,000,000 men, women, and children throughout the world are enslaved through human trafficking, according to the Global Slavery Index. That is more than there have ever been at any point in time in the history of humanity.

How can a world that is supposedly improving socially also have a constant increase in slavery? The two cannot coexist, and it breaks my heart to see the number of human beings forced into slavery increase each day. Human trafficking is the use of force or fraud to control someone to labor without payment or engage in sexual activity. This crime occurs all over the world, from Malaysia to Northern Virginia. In Northern Virginia alone, from October 2013 through January 2015, 290 victims of trafficking have been identified, according to the NOVA Human Trafficking Initiative.

Malaysia, also a center for modern day sex-trafficking and slavery, is a popular destination for men, women, and children subjected to forced labor and sex trafficking.

Though the Government of Malaysia proposed amendments to help decrease trafficking, these amendments have yet to pass through Parliament. Furthermore, despite Malaysia's significant increase in trafficking investigations, the government only convicted three traffickers in 2014, a sharp decrease from the 9 convicted in 2013 prior to the increase in investigations.

Crime does not dissipate naturally. Significant investigations and convictions are necessary if there is any hope for a decrease in human trafficking in Northern Virginia, Malaysia or worldwide.

Congress currently is reviewing the End Modern Slavery Initiative Bill.

If passed, the U.S. Government will authorize the formation of a nonprofit grant-making foundation to fund projects and programs outside of the United States in hopes of putting an end to slavery. The passing of this bill is a crucial step in the fight to end slavery.

Supporting Cook

To the Editor:

Last night I attended a human services function where Supervisor John Cook was taking the opportunity to educate the group about the importance of seeing beyond the labels when we enter into the voting booth in November. Cook, the Braddock District Supervisor, runs on the Republican ticket—but if you know anything about Supervisor Cook, you know that he is a champion when it comes to leveling the playing field for people with disabilities; ensuring communities create support for neighbors who want to stay connected and age in place; addressing domestic violence and strategies for minimizing these acts; starting the conversation about the importance of managing our health and mental health proactively; developing creative ways for ensuring all Fairfax residents have a place to lay their heads at night and call home, the list goes on and on and on...

"How can I be a Republican who makes human services part of my agenda?" Was the question Supervisor Cook started the discussion off with; and by the end of the evening we all learned that human services is not a "part" of his agenda—it is actually the foundation from which he works. As a young man growing up in a small town in New York he watched his father, a former Commissioner for Social Services and, himself, an elected official—model the principals that make a community strong—build communities on what each individual brings to the "table" rather than focusing on what someone does not have or cannot do...

As a Braddock District resident and an advocate who worked tirelessly to help rid Virginia of the "R" word , I look beyond the labels when I vote, and continue to be proud to support John Cook as my supervisor, because, like myself, he and his staff look for inclusive solutions for continuing to build a Braddock District I am proud to call home, for myself, my children and grandchildren.

Repairing a ‘Crisis of Confidence’

Ad hoc commission subcommittees report on police policy review.

BY TIM PETERSON
THE CONNECTION

“It is well past time for the Fairfax County Police Department to start providing timely, honest and effective communications with everything it does.”

When former director of Fairfax County public affairs Merni Fitzgerald delivered the final report and recommendations of the communications subcommittee of the Fairfax County ad hoc commission to review police practices, commissioner Joseph Cammarata responded immediately to those words in report’s introduction.

Cammarata wondered aloud at the commission’s July 27 meeting if the police members of the subcommittee had read the report themselves. He said if they agreed that the department had been “dishonest” in its past communication, “We’ve got a real problem. Whoever was giving dishonest communication, those people should be fired.”

Some heated exchanges among commissioners followed, including over the fact that the word “dishonest” wasn’t technically used.

Fitzgerald, chair of the Communications subcommittee, answered that the report “reflects the views of the subcommittee.”

“We’re not here to assign blame,” said Michael Hershman, chairman of the commission. “That was never the intention.”

“Communications in recent high-profile use-of-force and critical incident cases were mishandled, inadequate and untimely, leading to loss of public trust and questions about the legitimacy of police actions,” the report said. The most recent incident was the Aug. 29, 2013 shooting death of John Geer standing unarmed in the doorway of his Springfield home.

It continued: “The failures in both communications and its Freedom of Information Act policies have created this crisis of confidence for the Fairfax County Police Department. If the department had policies that fostered real transparency, it’s unlikely the controversies in recent years would have lasted so long and there likely would not have even been a call to form this Commission.”

“It is strongly worded,” said Board of Supervisors chairman Sharon Bulova. “We suffered from a lack of candor, that enraged a segment of the community. Not just Christian Klossner, deputy director of the Washington, D.C. Office of Public Complaints and at-large member of the National Association for Civilian Oversight of Law Enforcement board of directors, was the guest speaker at the July 27 meeting of the ad hoc commission to review Fairfax County Police policies.

Fairfax County Chief of Police Edwin Roessler reminded members of the community and ad hoc commissioners that he now has a personal scorecard through the Fairfax County website for citizens to rate his performance.

in the Geer case, but that really brought it to a head.”

Commissioner and Lt. Col. Tom Ryan with the Fairfax County Police department said, “The words don’t hurt us. We recognize the need to get better at release of information.”

“It isn’t easy to have your profession laid open,” Ryan continued, “we welcome that. We want to hear where we’re failing.”

The subcommittee’s recommendations fell under the categories of Maximum Disclosure, Minimum Delay; Community Engagement; Policies, Procedures and Personnel; Freedom of Information Act; Culture of Transparency and Moving Forward. It also proposed future regular review dates for the Board of Supervisors to the recommendations and implementation of input from the commission.

Shirley Ginwright, chairman of the Communities of Trust Committee, president of the Fairfax County NAACP and chairman of the commission subcommittee on Mike Curtis, Manassas resident and vice president of the Mount Vernon area-based Virginia Citizens Coalition for Police Accountability, asked guest speaker Christian Klossner if an officer-involved death would automatically trigger an investigation by the Washington, D.C. Office of Police Complaints.

Lt. Col. Tom Ryan with the Fairfax County Police Department said police recognize “the need to get better at release of information,” during the July 27 meeting of the ad hoc commission to review Fairfax County Police policies diversity, recruitment and vetting of police officers, also shared that group’s final report and recommendations.

Ginwright said that subcommittee appreciated the chief of police’s existing diversity council that “is paying off,” but thought the department could do more outreach into community forums. The subcommittee, among its recommendations, called for a “diversity goal” for each district commander that would make them independently responsible “for enhancing diversity within the department.”

Once each subcommittee has filed a final report, the commission will assemble a comprehensive final report and recommendations to submit to the Board of Supervisors later in the fall.

Christian Klossner, deputy director of the Washington, D.C. Office of Public Complaints and at-large member of the National Association for Civilian Oversight of Law Enforcement board of directors, was the guest speaker that presented first at the meeting.

“Things are moving away from reactive models,” Klossner said during his presentation, “moving towards more proactive, addressing causes and not just the symptoms.”

When asked about the effectiveness of his organizations, Klossner responded there needs to be better data collection on use of oversight. “The key is building trust,” he said.

The next full meeting of the ad hoc commission is scheduled for Aug. 17 at the Fairfax County Government Center. For the Sept. 14 meeting, commissioners will be at Walt Whitman Middle School in the Mount Vernon area of Alexandria.

More information on the police policies review commission, including the full text of final reports and proposals from the communications and diversity, recruitment and vetting subcommittees is available at www.fairfaxcounty.gov/policecommission.

Family Sports Challenge Benefits ODB’s Backpack Program

In spite of the morning rain, a Family Sports Challenge was held Saturday, July 18 at Van Dyck Park in the City of Fairfax to benefit Our Daily Bread’s Collect for Kids Back to School Program. Sponsored by local nonprofit Parties 2 Inspire, the City of Fairfax Parks and Recreation Department and XSport Fitness, participants paid $5 or donated backpacks and scientific calculators for a chance to take part in a number of sports challenges, including Jazzercise, a hula hoop contest, and soccer, football and basketball challenges.

“This has been an extraordinary day because through the rain, we’ve had so much help with our volunteers, including the George Mason Women’s Basketball Team, and other nonprofits joining in to inspire our community and children with health, fitness and fun to raise awareness for families in need,” said Hawanya Turner, president of Parties 2 Inspire, which sponsored the event.

“Our Back-to-School program is part of a countywide effort to help local kids in need go back to school with all the supplies they need,” said Heather Webb of Our Daily Bread (ODB). “We’re working to help 2,000 kids in Central Fairfax.”

ODB’s goal is to provide supplies for 2,000 qualified needy children who attend Fairfax High School, J.E.B. Stuart High School, the elementary and middle schools that feed into them, and some additional central Fairfax schools that have requested assistance.

Webb said a donation of $15 can translate into all sorts of school supplies in the Collect for Kids’ Back to School program. Some 52,000 school children who qualify for the free or reduced meals in the schools, or 27 percent of the school population, are eligible to receive backpacks with school supplies.

Anyone interested in helping may donate through Our Daily Bread’s website, www.ODBFairfax.org, or mail a check to 4080 Chain Bridge Road, 2nd Floor, Fairfax, VA 22030. Donations of new backpacks and/or gently used scientific calculators are also welcome. They may be brought to ODB’s offices through Aug. 7, Mondays through Fridays between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Contact Dawn Sykes 703-273-8829 or holiday@ODBFairfax.org or visit www.ODBFairfax.org.

Illinois De-Commit Ohanian Faces Uncertain Future

Bishop O'Connell softball standout training in California.

BY JON ROETMAN
THE CONNECTION

Patty Maye Ohanian arrived in Mission Viejo, Calif., on Friday to train for what she called her “most important” travel softball tournament of the year.

Ohanian, a Burke resident and rising junior pitcher and slugger on the Bishop O'Connell softball team, plays travel ball for the SoCal Bandits, a Huntington Beach-based branch of the Illinois-based Beverly Bandits. Ohanian and her teammates will compete in the 16U premier division of the Premier Girls Fastpitch tournament Aug. 1-8.

Travel softball tournaments are nothing new to Ohanian, a competitive and driven athlete who has dedicated countless hours to her craft. But this tournament has taken on added importance after a coaching change at the University of Illinois shifted Ohanian's softball future into a state of uncertainty.

Ohanian spent most of her 10U-16U travel seasons playing for the Vienna Stars. She also played one season with Virginia Glory and attended multiple camps with the goal of getting noticed by college coaches.

Ohanian's hard work paid off with a full scholarship offer from the University of Illinois. Ohanian, then a freshman at Lake Braddock Secondary School, committed to the Fighting Illini.

THE FOLLOWING YEAR, Ohanian transferred to Bishop O'Connell and excelled in both the pitcher's circle and the batter's box. She posted a 1.75 ERA in 44 innings pitched, and batted .594 with nine home runs and 57 RBIs in 30 games. She was named VISAA state Player of the Year and was a first-team All-Met selection by the Washington Post.

“People ask me [about the effects of committing early] a lot,” Ohanian wrote in an email. “They ask me if I got lazy. They ask me if I stopped practicing. The answer is, NO. I don't play softball for the scholarship. I play softball to be the best I can be. I am not naturally the ‘perfectly built softball player.’ I'm ‘too short’ to be a pitcher, and I'm ‘not from the right area.’”

“Every day I take off, someone else is taking advantage of it. The only thing that changed for me was how much more I knew I had to work hard to compete in the Big 10. Everyone who watches me play tells me I seem very intense, and I am. I mentally challenge myself every pitch of every game because I know how intense college will be. I play because I love to compete, with myself and others. I want to see how far I can take this thing.”

Things were going smoothly for Ohanian until Terri Sullivan, who spent 16 years as head coach of the Illinois softball program, announced in early June that she would retire. Ohanian, who listed Sullivan as one of the main reasons she committed to Illinois, retweeted the coach's retirement announcement from the Illini Softball Twitter account.

“Going into my unofficial visit, I was timid, knowing nothing about the university,” Ohanian wrote. “When I met the coaches, I felt unbelievably at home. The head coach that recruited me, Coach Sullivan, and her assistants, Coach [Donna] DiBiase and Coach [Katie] O'Connell, were exactly what I was looking for in coaches. They were athletic, and energetic. My personality fits well with that type of leadership. After looking in to the university, I found out how great of a school it was academically, too.”

How did Ohanian react to the news of Sullivan's retirement?

“My initial reaction was very upset,” she wrote. “I was sitting in [O'Connell] Coach [Tommy Orndorff's] office during lunch one day when I got a text from one of the recruits telling me what had happened. As I said before, one of the main things I liked about the school so much was her, and once she was gone it felt like what I had imagined it to be like was all gone.”

Less than a month later, Illinois hired Tyra Perry as head coach. According to Ohanian, “the commitment fell through about a week later.”

“Pitching is a hard thing,” Ohanian wrote. “Some coaches want power pitchers, some want junky movement pitchers. Some want 6-foot tall girls and some want girls like me (5 feet 8). The new coach and I weren't a good fit, personality-wise or pitching-wise.”

After committing early in her high school career and seemingly saving herself from a

“The early recruiting puts players, parents, and coaches in tough positions and forces them to make decisions that seventh and eighth graders should not be making.”

— Patty Maye Ohanian via email

stressful process down the road, Ohanian finds herself uncommitted entering her junior year.

“The early college softball recruiting has gotten out of hand,” Ohanian wrote. “Girls in the seventh and eighth grade commit to colleges. There was no specific reason why I committed then, to be honest. It was normal. I was right on schedule with all other 2017 pitchers who want to compete at the highest collegiate level.”

When asked what she meant by softball recruiting getting “out of hand,” Ohanian mentioned several reasons.

“I said that because softball is one of the earliest sports that recruit,” Ohanian wrote. “Girls in the seventh and eighth grade commit to college, similar to me. The problem with this is that five or six years is a long time in the collegiate athletics business. Coaches can change, and even more than once, in that time period. Girls can peak early, and not get any better from their eighth grade year on. Or, girls can peak late, but by the time they're up to speed, spots are already filled.”

OHANIAN IS CONFIDENT everything will work out.

“On my travel team, we have girls going to DePaul, ASU, Louisville, Southern Utah, and Miami of Ohio, but we also have many other girls who have not committed,” Ohanian wrote. “All that changes now is that I go back into the pool of girls who are not committed. There are plenty of Division I schools who still need pitchers and hitters. I know what I want in a school, I know how far away I want to go, and what I like and dislike in programs and coaches now. I truly believe I learned a lot from this experience.”

Next up for Ohanian is the Premier Girls Fastpitch tournament.

“This tournament is the most important of the year, so it was definitely important all year long,” Ohanian wrote, “although now that I de-committed, I know the importance of performing well in front of all the scouts that will be at the tournament.”
