BY VERNON MILES
THE CONNECTION

Despite Alexandria swiping the TSA headquarters away from Arlington, the relationship remains cordial enough that the two have begun discussions around a shared Aquatic Center. While both sides emphasize that nothing has been agreed upon yet, this fall, Alexandria and Arlington will seek public input on the possibility of partnering to develop a 50-meter pool at Long Bridge Park.

Alexandria and Arlington both recognize the need for an aquatics center. Mark Jinks, Alexandria city manager, said that previous surveys of recreation needs have continually indicated that existing athletic and competitive swimming facilities do not meet the demand. Susan Kalish, director of public relations for Arlington's Department of Parks and Recreation, said that a 2004 Citizen Survey found that indoor aquatics facilities were the area of the Parks and Recreation Department citizens were least satisfied with. An updated survey five years ago found similar dissatisfaction with indoor aquatics. In 2013, plans were put forward for the second phase of the Long Bridge Park renovations, but in 2014 those plans were cancelled after the construction bids came in higher than the budget.

Kalish said that the Aquatic Center project has a $79.2 million budget in the Arlington CIP with $59.3 million reserved for hard construction costs. The new total project budget is $64 million with $46 million for hard construction costs; Kalish said $15 million had already been spent on design, environmental programs, project management, and permits. This early in the project, it's unknown how that cost could be shared with Alexandria.

"We don't know how that cost is broken up right now," said Kalish. "We don't even know if we're going to partner with them. If the community is interested in partnering, then we'll look at that."

Jinks emphasized that nothing has been decided beyond agreeing to have a discussion on the topic. Jinks noted, however, that there was precedent for collaborations.

"We have projects we jointly share over 30 years where working together in a common facility makes sense," said Jinks. "In some cases, we decide to forgo [partnerships]."

Jinks specifically pointed to Alexandria and Arlington's separate bus systems and fire departments as areas where Alexandria chose not to collaborate with Arlington. However, Alexandria and Arlington do share patients in their drug treatment programs. They've also shared a waste management plant since the 1980s.

"Some things work and have economies on a regional basis," said Jinks. "But others, like DASH and Art Bus, work better as individual jurisdictional services. With each service, one of the tools in the toolbox is 'should we be looking at this regionally?'"

TSA Transports out of Arlington

Transportation Security Administration move is Alexandria's gain.

BY VERNON MILES
THE CONNECTION

While Alexandria celebrates the recent Transportation Security Administration's decision to move to West Eisenhower, Arlington struggles to recover from another blow to the county's office vacancies. The 3,800-person headquarters will leave its Arlington location in 2018 to settle into the Victory Center.

Stephanie Landrum, president and CEO of the Alexandria Economic Development Partnership, celebrated the move as jump starting the city's plans to revitalize West Eisenhower. Less than a week after the announcement, Landrum said she'd already gotten phone calls from contractors possibly interested in moving into the area.

"The Federal Government is a very stable office tenant," Landrum said. "The lease is for 15 years, but the average stay for a federal entity is 40 years."

But the TSA was not as stable an office tenant for Arlington, who now faces the task of filling the half a million square feet of office space at the TSA's current 12th Street headquarters in Pentagon City.

"Obviously it's disappointing," said Marc McCauley, director of the Real Estate Development Group within Arlington Economic Development. "We aggressively went after the deal, but it all came down to cost."

McCauley said the county will continue to focus trying to fill the vacant office spaces with cyber security, tech groups, and nonprofits in growing industries. Arlington faces a 20 percent office vacancy rate. Pentagon City faces 17 percent office vacancy.

But Landrum dismissed concerns over the Alexandria facing similar instability.

"The TSA is a teenager," Landrum said. "It was founded after 9/11. It's in its formative years, and this will be the first real headquarters they've ever had. The Arlington location was put together during the emergency, but this headquarters allows them to design a facility based on their operations. It's like they were subletting an apartment. They've pieced things together, and now they're ready to move into their new home."

Landrum also said that Alexandria has specifically made a point of drawing in diversified federal agencies.

"The Patent and Trademark Office (PTO) is an enterprise agency," said Landrum. "They charge fees for the work they do and so they build up a budget. That's how they fund their operations. The PTO was not impacted by sequester, they generate their own revenue. The National Science Foundation, from a federal agency standpoint, is something that's incredibly attractive because of the spin-off activities. It's unlike any other federal entity."

Landrum said the TSA is also considered a very stable federal agency, but said the city had additional motivations for courting the shift.

"As we look at the TSA, the reason we were aggressive in trying to land this is because of the location," said Landrum. "[The Victory Center] been sitting empty for 10 years in an industrial area. We need someone to go in and be the catalyst. For the city, that's an amazing investment. This should accelerate development by 15 years."

According to Landrum, the only potential use for that building was as a federal agency.

"There's no other business that was going into that building," said Landrum. "Our options were: land a federal agency, let it sit empty, or tear it down."

Landrum said that a site in the Hoffman area of Eisenhower, near the Patent and Trademark Office and almost directly adjacent to the National Science Foundation, was also considered. However, more incentives were offered for the West Eisenhower site in hopes of bringing additional development to that part of the city.

The TSA headquarters will receive a $23 million tax abatement, or $1.5 million annually for the duration of the 15-year lease. However, according to City Manager Mark Jinks, the city still anticipates bringing in $1.6 million every year from the site, or $25 million over the course of the 15-year lease.

"The City Council proposed a tax incentive, a partial real estate tax abatement," said Jinks. "[It's] a different structure but similar to National Science Foundation. It helped the project become feasible at a low rental rate. Over 15 years, many of those people will move [to Alexandria], and they will have dollars to spend. As we work on redevelopment of Landmark Mall, the mall will be on the road as they drive there. While these are not new jobs to the region, there is an economic benefit to the city to bringing new jobs to the city."

BUT THE IMPACT may not be as heavy as Alexandrians and Arlingtonians alternatively hope and fear, at least not immediately. "From a regional standpoint, it doesn't really matter," said Dr. Terry Clower from George Mason University's Center for Regional Analysis. "They're moving about eight miles down the road. The new location is closer to the Van Dorn Metro, but it's going to be the same employees."

Clower acknowledged that new people would move in over time, but said it wasn't enough to constitute a shift in labor force. Clower also noted that, with Alexandria's lack of affordable housing, it's questionable whether the majority of TSA employees at the building would consider living in Alexandria. However, Clower recognized that there were other benefits to Alexandria besides additional employment.

"It is a signature government agency occupying a vacant building," said Clower. "From Alexandria's perspective, that is a good thing... Sometimes in development, the best way to draw a crowd is to already have a lot of people."

The Victory Center has been empty since 2005, when Army Material Command command moved from the Victory Center to Fort Belvoir. The property owners, Eisenhower Real Estate Holdings, LLC, will provide $50 million in property improvements before the TSA officially moves into the building in 2018.

Clower noted that the move is still a major loss to Arlington, even though the county will still maintain those jobs over the next few years.

"Certainly Arlington didn't want to lose that," said Clower. "If you had a private sector backfill for that building, that would be a good thing, but Arlington overall is struggling with vacancy rates and this certainly isn't going to help that."

Celebrating Startup Day

U.S. Rep. Don Beyer, U.S. Deputy Secretary of Commerce Bruce Andrews, and Deputy Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Economic Development Matt S. Erskine visited 1776 Aug. 13 for a roundtable and walkthrough at the incubator and venture fund's recently opened Crystal City location as part of Start-Up Day Across America.

The three officials met with small business and tech leaders to highlight federal resources available to startups and the business community; from offering grants and facilitating the patent process to incentivizing collaborative research and development. They also discussed the federal government's role in driving the innovation needed to solve problems and fuel the 21st century American economy.

Beyer and the Secretaries were joined by 1776 Global Affairs Director Brandon Pollak, 1776 members Blake Hall, co-founder and CEO of ID.me; Jordan Lloyd Bookey, co-founder and chief mom of Zoobean; Felix Lloyd, co-founder and chief dad of Zoobean; Matt Provo, founder and CEO of ParkedIn; Kelly Zafar, founder and CEO of CareerMaven; Jason Green, co-founder of SkillSmart; David Fairbrothers, co-founder of Dorsata; and Gary Hensley, founder and CEO of edBacker.

Provo demonstrated his "personal parking assistant" app, connecting drivers to parking spaces.

New Deputy County Manager

Arlington County Fire Chief James Schwartz will take a new position of deputy county manager, responsible for the county's public safety agencies, including Arlington County Fire Department, Arlington County Police Department, the Office of Emergency Management, which includes the Emergency Communications Center, and for the Department of Technology Services. Schwartz was appointed chief of the Arlington County Fire Department in June 2004; he has been part of the fire department since 1984.

Acting Arlington County Manager Mark Schwartz made the appointment, which is effective Sept. 8. Schwartz also named Arlington County Fire Department Assistant Chief Joseph Reshetar as acting fire chief, effective Sept. 8.

Reshetar joined the fire department in 1985. For the last three years, he has served as assistant chief for operations.

Arlington County will conduct a national recruitment for the new fire chief; the recruiting process will begin this fall.

Girl Scout Julianne Meany of Arlington (on the left wearing blue shirt, necklace and glasses) participated in an Outward Bound program in Costa Rica.

Hiking Through Rainforest of Costa Rica

Julianne Meany, a 16-year-old Girl Scout from Arlington and member of the Girl Scouts of the Nation's Capital Council, completed Outward Bound Costa Rica's Rainforest, River, and Reef Destination.

The course included a seven-day tropical rainforest trek, cultural immersion with traditional Costa Rican families, and adventure activities.

Julianne and her group hiked their way through untouched rainforest to the remote village of Piedras Blancas, passing waterfalls and cloud forests. In the village, the group stayed with local families, practicing their Spanish skills and learning about traditions through hands-on activities such as harvesting sugar cane. Julianne also rappelled an 80-foot waterfall.

The group then headed to Manuel Antonio National Park, where they learned about the local wildlife and enjoyed the beach. They finished up the course with a day of rafting whitewater rapids on the Pejibaye River, a zipline canopy tour in the rainforest, and a visit to the vibrant artisan market of San Jose.

The group also spent a day of volunteering in a nature reserve near Outward Bound Costa Rica's rainforest base, where they maintained trails used by the local community.

LETTERS

Bipartisan Support

To the Editor:

A letter to the editor published on Aug. 12 under the headline "Diversity And Politics" includes several errors of fact regarding the Africa Growth and Opportunity Act (AGOA) that beg for correction.

The writer states that the original AGOA bill was signed into law in 2000 by President George W. Bush. In fact, as Bush was not yet president that year, the law was signed by President Bill Clinton. Reflecting AGOA's widespread bipartisan support, however, an extension to it was signed in 2005 by President Bush.

The letter also suggests that the renewal of AGOA due this year has been blocked because of the addition of Haiti into the system of trade preferences instituted by the Act. In fact, in legislation introduced by House Ways & Means Committee Chairman Paul Ryan (R-Wisconsin) and Senate Finance Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch (R-Utah), AGOA was extended for an additional 10 years and included provisions regarding Haiti. There was little opposition to the legislation by members of Congress in either party.

Any delays in approving the extension were due to protracted debates about the Trade Promotion Authority (TPA) and Trans Pacific Partnership (TPP) proposals. There was never any doubt that AGOA would be renewed before the current law expires in September.

The 14th annual AGOA Forum — with 1,600 to 2,000 participants including diplomats, heads of state and other government leaders, and business executives from the United States and across Africa — will take place in late August in Libreville, Gabon. The forum will celebrate AGOA's successes over the past 15 years and look forward to a decade-long extension as trade and investment between Africa and the United States continue to grow.

Joint Effort Distributes 900 Backpacks

The Reading Connection (TRC) and local employees of The Boeing Company recently stuffed more than 900 backpacks full of supplies and books for local at-risk children. During the month of July, Boeing employees donated funds and gathered supplies in support of the company's annual Books & Backpacks drive. With the help of TRC and First Book, the funds were used to purchase the backpacks, supplies and book using First Book's award-winning Marketplace, which allows registered organizations to purchase books and educational materials at a 50-90 percent discount off retail prices.

Representatives from TRC, First Book, Boeing and partner agencies spent the morning of Aug. 7 stuffing each of the backpacks with a set of supplies and books that will help local children in need. At the end of the event, the backpacks were distributed to shelters and affordable housing organizations who are TRC partners.

TRC was founded in 1989 by three Arlington school teachers. In fiscal year 2015, it served 1,100 children and distributed 13,700 free, new books with the assistance of 250 volunteers.

First Book, an international nonprofit, provides new, free and low-cost books to programs and schools that serve children in need. Since 1992, First Book has distributed almost 130 million books to schools and

Checking the Back-to-School Healthcare Blocks

Local governments, clinics offer free immunizations for all and physical exams for the uninsured.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

As the lazy days of summer wind down, beach trips, lemonade stands and lax bedtimes give way to alarm clocks, textbooks and backpacks. Public health officials say that a back-to-school list should include more than pencils and paper. For many, the first order of business is a well-child physical, a dental exam and required immunizations.

During a physical exam, parents should double check that immunizations are up to date, ask if their child's growth is on target and what normal developmental changes they should expect during the next year. Parents should also be prepared to answer questions about their child's sleep patterns and eating habits.

"Vision checks are an important part of a routine school entry physical so make sure to ask for one," said Caroline Sutter, a family nurse practitioner, DNP-BC, co-director of Mason and Partners (MAP) clinics and an assistant professor of nursing at George Mason University in Fairfax. "Dental exams are important to maintain health. Ask for a referral for a dental visit."

George Mason University's College of Health and Human Services runs MAP clinics, which offers school entry physicals at no cost.

The Fairfax County Health Department provides free school-required immunizations at five locations in the county. "We are offering some special extended hours in August and September to accommodate the back-to-school rush, but we recommend that parents make the appointment now," said John Silcox, public safety information officer, Fairfax County Health Department.

In conjunction with Inova Health System's Partnership for Healthier Kids, the Fairfax County health department also offers free physicals for school entry to uninsured children. The health department also operates three dental clinics that provide services to children based on eligibility.

"We operate three health centers in Falls Church, Alexandria and Reston that provide primary health services for low income, uninsured residents who cannot afford primary medical care services for themselves and their families," said Silcox.

Dental services are available for eligible children in Arlington through high school age. Vaccines required by Arlington County Public Schools are also available free of charge.

In Alexandria, the Child Health Clinic provides preventative health services for infants and children through age 5, and physicals for daycare and school entrance through age 11. The Alexandria Health Department offers routine immunizations for infants, teens and adults.

The Montgomery County Maryland, Health and Human Services Department offers an Immunization Program with walk-in immunizations to children under the age of 19. The county also offers dental care for children ages three to 18.

Sutter says proper sleep and physical activity are also part of the pediatric health care picture and should not be overlooked. Transitioning from a summer of sleeping late to a school year of early wake-up calls can be challenging if children are not prepared. "Establish a sleep schedule now," said Sutter. "With summer coming to an end, it is important to get kids on a regular sleep schedule before school starts.

"Stress the importance of routine physical activity with your child," she continued. "Talk about sports they might be interested in during the school year or other ways to stay physically fit but most important set a good example. Exercise regularly yourself or with your children."

For those experiencing anxiety about returning to school, Sutter suggests addressing the issue before the first day of school. "Come up with a good plan to address them," she said. "Talk to your children about kindness and what to do if he or she is a victim of bullying and how to ask for help if needed."

LOST DOG & CAT RESCUE FOUNDATION

W-L Football Facing Preseason Adversity

Generals have questions at running back, quarterback.

BY JON ROETMAN
THE CONNECTION

While the Washington-Lee football program is used to dealing with a lack of depth, the loss of multiple potential playmakers has the Generals in a bind.

During the offseason, W-L had a running back transfer to a private school and lost a quarterback candidate to off-the-field issues. Less than a month ago, projected starting quarterback Ceneca Espinoza experienced a family tragedy and is not expected to play until the third game of the season, head coach Josh Shapiro said.

The Generals entered their Blue/Gray game on Aug. 15 with roughly 50 players between varsity and JV, Shapiro said. Starting center Justin Robinson suffered an ankle injury during the scrimmage, the severity of which wasn't immediately known.

"It's definitely been the most challenging preseason," said Shapiro, who enters his ninth season as W-L head coach.

The Generals finished the 2014 season with a 6-5 record, losing to West Springfield in the opening round of the 6A North playoffs. It was the Generals' third playoff appearance in the last five years.

If W-L is to return to the postseason, the Generals will need a strong season from rising senior Espinoza, who played running back and strong safety last season but worked at quarterback during the spring.

"He's very intuitive," Shapiro said. "[He's the] most intuitive player I've ever been around. ... He's the guy that's going to stir it up. If he's healthy, we can do a lot of good things. He's paramount to our success."

Filling in at quarterback for Espinoza is rising senior Henry Casey, who has no prior experience at the position.

Casey is normally a receiver.

Whoever is playing quarterback for W-L will line up behind an experienced offensive line composed of five seniors. Shapiro said it is the biggest line he's had in nine years. Fredd Smith (6 feet 1, 290 pounds) will play left tackle, Jack Appel (6-1, 270) is the left guard, Robinson (5-10, 260) is the center, Heath McCoy (6-4, 290) is the right guard and Mick Appel (6-1, 270) is the right tackle.

Rising junior Quinn Parks, rising senior Gene Jones and Casey are receiving threats. "If you get a healthy Ceneca, and with Gene Jones, Quinn Parks and Henry Casey to throw to," Shapiro said, "we're pretty good."

Rising senior Diego Orantes is the projected starter at running back.

"I think we've got a good core group of seniors," Shapiro said, "who are hard-working good kids and they've been on the field on Friday nights."

W-L has operated out of the shotgun in recent years, but Shapiro said the Generals might transition to an under-center offense.

On defense, W-L operates out of a base 4-3 scheme. Rising senior linebacker Tyler Lutz, rising junior linebacker Tommy Ellis, rising senior lineman Keani Solorzano and rising junior lineman Tony August are standouts.

Washington-Lee will scrimmage at home against Annandale at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Aug. 20, and on the road against Chantilly at 6 p.m. on Aug. 27. The Generals will open the regular season at home against Westfield at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Sept. 3. Westfield has played in each of the last four region championship games.
