It’s a typical Thursday there, and a diverse group of people are both enjoying themselves and receiving the specialized services they need. There are about 80 of them, ages 21-70 and older.

“ServiceSource serves 18,000 people annually in 10 states and Washington, D.C.,” said Mark Hall, an executive vice president with the ServiceSource Chantilly Center. “We’re the largest nonprofit organization in Northern Virginia serving people with disabilities. We’re headquartered in Oakton and have been in Fairfax County since 1971, but have operated the Chantilly Center for three-and-a-half years.”

“It’s a community-based, day habilitation center for people who are medically fragile and have other significant disabilities,” continued Hall, of Chantilly’s Poplar Tree Estates community. “Several are bedridden and need help with personal issues, medication and behavioral issues.”

Many, however, are able to go into the community and do things. They package and deliver meals and load trucks for Meals on Wheels, eat at restaurants such as McDonald’s, go to parks and out shopping and also enjoy themselves at the Cub Run Rec Center.

“They’re doing what everyone else does, as much as possible,” said Hall. “People with disabilities want to be part of the community, and we’re always looking for more ways to engage them in it. We also work with Therapeutic Riding in Clifton. It’s an opportunity for them to have fun, be outside and try something new — and they always

Taking the Crime Out of Mental Illness

Fairfax County officials announce Diversion First program designed to help individuals get treatment not jail time.

Kevin Earley said he’s living proof that Diversion First works. Earley has been living with bipolar disorder and had his last episode in 2007. “I was tasered, I broke the law and endangered myself,” he said.

Earley was picked up by a Fairfax County Police officer who had received Crisis Intervention Team training and driven to the hospital, not the adult detention center.

Earley said the officer spoke with a calm tone and “treated me with dignity and respect. The smallest gesture can mean the world.”

He was linked with a case manager “who loved and cared for me,” and he also benefitted from other psychological and family support.

“I was sick and needed help, support, not jail time,” Earley said. “It shouldn’t be a crime to live with mental illness.”

Now Earley works as a recovery specialist with the Fairfax-Falls Church Community Services Board. He spoke to a room full of reporters and supporters on Feb. 11 at the CSB Merrifield Crisis Response Center, a massive Fairfax County-owned facility for mental illness treatment services located off Gallows Road in Fairfax.

THAT DAY a panel of government leaders explained the new program Diversion First, the main goal of which is to prevent people with mental illness from unnecessarily filling up the jail. To create more success stories like Earley’s.

Fairfax County Sheriff Stacey Kincaid said about 40 percent of the jail’s inmate population has mental illness. “It used to be something taboo for people to talk about or report,” she said.

Taking the Crime out of Mental Illness

After an intensive study of the mental health program in place through the Sheriff's office in Bexar County, Texas, Kincaid said her office has been making changes such as the relocation of women with mental illness to a separate housing area and change in release time to 8 a.m.

Kincaid also commented that the Diversion First program was "quite a bit" in reaction to the in-custody death of Natasha McKenna just over one year ago. Video was released of McKenna, an African American woman with mental illness, being tased numerous times by Fairfax County deputies while she struggled during an effort to transport her to Alexandria City jail.

"It certainly pushed this forward," Kincaid said.

Prior to Diversion First, deputies might bring an individual with mental illness to the CSB for evaluation or treatment, but then be responsible for waiting with them, sometimes for many hours, until they could be seen.

Now, a deputy and police officer will be stationed at the Merrifield Center for 21.5 hours every day for other officers and deputies to hand off custody and then return to duty.

"The officers love this, the morale is good," said Fairfax County Chief of Police

Lt. Ryan Morgan (left) with the Fairfax County Police Department works full-time at the Merrifield Center to oversee the work of a police officer and sheriff's deputy who take custody of individuals with mental illness from patrol officers. (Right) Deputy Derrick Ledford, the Crisis Intervention Team agency representative for the Sheriff's office, shows how officers monitor calls coming into the Center and can be prepared with a plan of how to respond before the individuals arrive.

Edwin Roessler. "We do have gaps" in policing, he said, "especially where we serve those with mental health episodes. The majority of our use of force incidents are with those suffering mental health crisis."

For their part in Diversion First, Roessler has also been working towards getting 100 percent of officers trained in Crisis Intervention Team. This year, 176 officers have already received the training, he said. CIT is a Commonwealth of Virginia-certified program that teaches officers about what it's like to live with mental illness as well as procedures for de-escalating critical episodes both in the field and jail.

"This is a great first start," he said. The police are also implementing a new Critical Decision-Making Model based on policing in Scotland, the Chief said, and are the first department in the country to do so.

The model is "the backbone of CIT," said Roessler. "The goal is to preserve the sanctity of human life."

In the first month of implementing Diversion First (Jan. 1-31), Roessler said field officers have conducted 265 mental health investigations. Of those, 40 percent involved the Merrifield Center and 39 percent had participation from a CIT-certified officer or officers.

Once an individual with mental illness arrives at the CSB Merrifield Center, either under their own power or in custody, they check in, undergo a preliminary interview and psychological and medical evaluation. From there, CSB staffers determine whether treatment or further transport to the hospital is necessary.

Roessler said Diversion First isn't meant as a pass from jail for serious offenders or violent crimes. But empowered by Diversion First, officers may use their discretion in determining lawlessness.

IF JAIL AND HOSPITAL are ruled out for the individual, a problem currently being tackled by the General Assembly is housing. The local psychiatric hospital in Fairfax County is the Northern Virginia Mental Health Institute in Falls Church on the INOVA campus, with 123 beds.

Those include emergency psychiatric beds, involuntary beds and forensic beds, said Tisha Deeghan, executive director of the CSB. Deeghan said it's a statewide problem that facilities such as the Institute in Falls Church don't have the capacity to handle all the referrals.

"We're working in Richmond to resolve it," she said. If there is no room in Falls Church, officers or deputies then try taking the individual to another facility outside of northern Virginia.

Kincaid encouraged people to contact their elected officials about building a new mental health facility to add capacity in northern Virginia.

"It's the right thing to do," said Board of Supervisors Chairman Sharon Bulova, who explained there's a three-to-five-year funding mechanism in place to increase the capacity and services of the CSB. "There's savings in having someone not live in jail, but receive services and continue to live in the community."

Nonprofit ServiceSource Helps People with Disabilities

Most of the Chantilly Center participants live in the Sully District (Centreville and Chantilly), but don't have to be to use the program. “It's an important part of human services coming to Sully,” said Hall. “And it helps build the infrastructure to serve people with disabilities in western Fairfax County.”

Located at 14048 Parkeast Circle, Suite 200A, off Newbrook Drive, it's a 25,000-square-foot, one-story, all-accessible building. It's light, airy, bright and spacious, but also has private rooms for participants needing personal-hygiene care.

“The program area is nearly 20,000 square feet,” said Division Manager Jacque Scholl. “There, people do activities based on their own, individual, service plan, working toward their goals/outcomes. Four to eight people at a time mainly deal with their safety and health, plus communication skills and visual and tactile stimulation. Many need medical care, so we have two, full-time nurses who help give out medications.”

At the center, participants receive a variety of therapies. For example, speech-and-language therapist Cathy Coleman uses an iPad to increase people's abilities to communicate with others. Others receive occupational, physical or sensory therapy, as well as music, art or dance therapy.

“It's a good place to receive quality service,” said Hall. “But it's not about the building, it's about the people.”

Noting the opportunities the participants have to interact with the community, Scholl said they volunteer with the Lunch for the Soul in Herndon. “Our staff drives and they hand out meals to day laborers in Herndon,” she said. “They also do the set up and cleanup for it.”

Scholl said some participants rearrange furniture and books and dust items at Habitat for Humanity's ReStore in Chantilly. And others get paid for sweeping floors and breaking down boxes at Unicom, a government warehouse also in Chantilly.

“We offer a lot of employment opportunities,” said Hall. “ServiceSource has a contract with government agencies and other businesses. We do evaluation, testing and job placement.”

Meanwhile, at the Chantilly Center, said Scholl, “We provide people with the opportunities they need to become as independent as possible. The range of disabilities runs the whole spectrum, and we serve wounded veterans, too. Our ratio is one staff member to three-and-a-half participants.”

Offerings such as music and art therapy, yoga and horseback riding are an enhancement paid for by the ServiceSource Foundation, the fundraising arm of ServiceSource. “Public funding from, for example, Medicaid and Fairfax County doesn't cover these things, and we want to provide the highest-quality program possible,” said Scholl. To donate, go to www.ServiceSource.org.

At any given time, a variety of therapy is going on. Occupational therapist Maureen Lynch evaluates the participants' needs before working with them. On a recent day, she was adjusting the seat on Larry Hernandez's wheelchair.

“I'll do feeding and seat-positioning assessments, and I have particular equipment to relieve physical pressure and make people comfortable,” she said. “We have stairs and a trampoline to strengthen the joints, provide a sensory experience and drain the lymph nodes. We also use standing walkers with support and do leg and trunk strengthening to improve balance.”

Across the room, physical therapy assistant Celine Tourpe was about to help Ronald Lambert. “I had surgery on my wrist in 1987, but it didn't work, so my elbow is painful,” he said.

“And the pain got worse over time,” said Tourpe. “So he's receiving physical therapy for it so he can have a better range of motion.” Not that he lets his problem stand in the way of helping others.

“I do a lot of work on behalf of the disabled,” said Lambert, 43. “I raised over $200 toward wheelchairs and walkers for wounded warriors. And I held a coat drive and a food drive and was on the board of the Northern Virginia Training Center.”

He's been coming to ServiceSource's Chantilly Center for two years and, he said, “I like the therapy here and I really love playing basketball here. I planned a lunch out last week for my buddies here, and I wrote and put together a Christmas play for people to perform here. I come here every day and I look forward to it. I would recommend this place to others because there's a good staff here and the facility's wheelchair-accessible. And the physical-therapy offerings are really good.”

Tourpe has worked for ServiceSource for eight or nine years. “I like it because I'm really making a difference,” she said. “And even though it can take months to see results, it's so rewarding to see improvements – I just love it. And they allow us to take the time we need to work with our clients. And when Medicaid stops paying because the person isn't making progress, ServiceSource will pick it up so we can finish our work and have a good result.”

The ServiceSource Foundation also funded the building's sensory room, filled with various lights, colors and objects. With different things to touch, feel and see, it's geared for people needing tactile and visual stimulation. There's background music, plus aromatherapy so nonverbal people can communicate what they do or don't like.

In one area are bubble tubes with colored bubbles rising inside them. There's also a tactile board to help desensitize people in need of that treatment; it also allows the visually impaired to touch things.

Besides Chantilly, ServiceSource has branches locally in Oakton, Springfield, Manassas, Alexandria, Annandale and Arlington. The participants live in group homes or with their parents, and those attending the Chantilly site mainly come from Centreville, Chantilly, Herndon, Reston and Vienna.

Toughest, said Hall, is finding the funding for everything. “We serve people with significant disabilities,” he said. “We value people's lives and want to enhance them and keep them safe. Historically, Fairfax County has done a great job helping to fund us. However, there's a lot of budget pressure, so we have to be strong advocates.”

“We can do the work, but it takes money,” continued Hall. “We also want to create new opportunities for our participants to work, volunteer or participate in the community. And we want the community to know we're here.”

Scholl, who's been with ServiceSource 35 years, says the best part of her job is “the smiles — to see people enhance their lives and know we're doing what we can to help them.

It's also seeing them grow. Whether they're playing games, doing therapy or talking to other people, they enjoy the camaraderie — and that makes their day.”

Hall's son James has Down syndrome and, he said, “As a parent of a child with a disability, it's about the families. Everybody we serve has someone who cares for them and wants to know they're in an environment where they're safe, healthy, engaged and cared about every day.”

Launching Mustang Sally Brewing Company

From dream to reality in 25 years.

BY ASHLEY CLAIRE SIMPSON
CENTRE VIEW

Opening a brewery, a place for a community to come together and bond over cold glasses of craft beer, was the post-graduate dream of Fairfax County business owner Sean Hunt. Twenty-five years ago, a fresh out-of-college Hunt and his equally green work buddy talked about starting and running a welcoming place in Fairfax County where locals could swing by and enjoy a high-quality, reliably tasty beer or two.

Now, a little older and wiser, Hunt is on the brink of launching Fairfax County's second production brewery in Chantilly. The Mustang Sally Brewing Company is set to open for business by the end of February of this year.

"This is my first brewery," Hunt said. "I've been wanting to do this since I was right out of the University of Virginia, as an engineer at Booz Allen Hamilton. Another engineer and I talked about opening up a brewery, banged the ground for a few months, but then it went away. The name comes from the same era, when I was also working on a boat called 'Mustang Sally.' That boat, 'Mustang Sally,' is a memory of being carefree and not having a lot of worries. This is a dream that started up 25 years ago and is finally coming to fruition."

Hunt's passion for beer blossomed while living in Germany for a few years before college, where he came to appreciate both beer and the communal aspect that can surround it. Although toying with the idea of starting a brewery for more than half his life, Hunt said he finally left his corporate career as a transactional attorney in 2014 to pursue his Mustang Sally dream.

"My wife has an engineering company called iPower, and every so often over the years, I would say, 'hey, I want to start something myself,' but we always came to the conclusion that one startup company was enough for a family. So finally, we were talking about it again at the beginning of last summer, and she said, 'Go ahead.'"

Hunt's strategy for Mustang Sally, from the financing to the menu, remains the same: keep things simple.

PHOTO CONTRIBUTED

The Mustang Sally tasting room.

"Our corporate foundation is to keep it really simple," Hunt said. "It's just me doing this. It's pure commercial financing, so no private equity financing. I did it this way because private investors can distract you. Private investors tend to be looking for an exit plan and I have a very long outlook for Mustang Sally."

While Mustang Sally is still under construction, Hunt has found a core team to ensure that when the building is done, a variety of high-quality brews will be ready for the masses.

He hired his head brewer, Bret Kimbrough, over a year ago from Leesburg's Vintage 50. And, while he promises there are no beer snobs, his team is not lacking in brewing experience or credentials.

Kimbrough, a graduate of the American Brewers Guild and the Culinary Institute of America, has been professionally brewing beer since 1996. Even when he was a career chef, he said he still made a point to incorporate beer in his recipes.

While paint might not be on the walls yet and tables and chairs haven't been set up, Kimbrough has been brewing a number of pilot beers over the last year, from light beers to Indian Pale Ales (IPAs), carefully recording every recipe in intricate detail, down to the temperature of the room where the process takes place. Depending on the type of beer, it can take up to six weeks before one is ready.

"Mustang Sally beer will be brewed using a 30-barrel brew house," Kimbrough said.

"That's the equivalent of 60 kegs at a time. Right now, we are doing pilot brews so that everything we present to customers will be tried and true recipes. Among the beers that we are testing are Radlers [a type of beer mixed with lemonade]. I am currently brewing an IPA though."

The production process for ales is anywhere from 10-21 days, and brewing lagers takes five to six weeks, he added.

Most breweries, Hunt explained, are either brewpubs or nanobreweries. Where brewpubs offer home-brewed beer, other beers, and a variety of food, nanobreweries are smaller establishments with limited to a few signature beers at a time. As a pure production brewery, Mustang Sally will be a bigger brewery focused on its beer. Its dining menu will be simple, offering foods that pair well with the beers on tap.

"We have 14,400 square feet here," Hunt said of his gaping space. "It's a production brewery. With that said, we are going to devote a huge portion of our space to a really big, fun tasting room."

The tasting room will function both as a place for customers to enjoy themselves but also a welcoming place for them give feedback on all the beers they try.

Hunt said Mustang Sally will ultimately have a dozen beers on tap, but in the spirit of only serving the best, it will open with just four or five selections. The team is still in the process of finalizing the handful of winners for opening day.

"The three of us on the core team feel like we have a good idea of what the initial lineup will be," Hunt said. "We want the community to tell us what they want. What we want to do with that tasting room is put a collaborative process in place to get a real, true understanding of what the community wants and is looking for when they come here. This is ultimately how we will commit to flagship beers."

The long-term goal is for a third of the beers on tap to be flagship beers, a third to be what the Mustang Sally team considers soon-to-be flagships, and for the last third to be pilot brews.

Both Hunt and Kimbrough said their prime focus is on quality assurance. Mustang Sally will even have a lab onsite to maintain beer samples, and ensure that every type of beer can be replicated down to every last hop.

"Recordkeeping in brewing is extremely rigorous and detail-oriented," Kimbrough reiterated. "It is the base of the quality assurance. Any changes that happen as the beer is being made — a 10-minute power outage, for example — down to the letter, it is tracked."

Beer-brewing is both a science and an art, and Mustang Sally won't ignore either aspect. Kimbrough and the brewing team will always have creative freedom to come up with new, daring samples.

"We are going to put effort into the technical aspect of the beer," Hunt said. "Still, we never want to lose that artistic side, which is why we will devote the last third of the taps to experimental brews. We want to have fun with it. It's not a dull industry and it shouldn't be."

Mustang Sally Brewing Company will host the Fairfax County Brew Fest at the end of April. Major breweries have already committed to being there, and every brewhouse in the county was invited. Hosting the event, which is open to the public, is another move toward keeping the local brewing industry all-inclusive.

"It would be nice if we stay collaborative instead of competitive," Hunt said. "Right now it's really young and it's a great culture."

At the core of the brewing industry, and Mustang Sally, is respect for beer and for other people who have a passion for it.

"At the end of the day we see ourselves as a classic American brewery with a commitment to doing things right," Hunt said. "Experts always say, never start a business without an exit plan, and I sit here, making that fatal flaw. I don't want an exit plan."

Lax for a Cause

Southwestern Youth Association (SYA), Chantilly Youth Association (CYA), and Fairfax Police Youth Club (FPYC) are joining forces to host the third annual “Lax for a Cause” day of lacrosse. The eight-hour lacrosse event features dozens of lacrosse games and will be held March 12, at Centreville High School. The goal is to raise $20,000 to directly benefit the nation’s veterans through Fisher House Foundation.

The lacrosse marathon will feature more than 20 teams — with players ages five and up — which will play at a different time slots throughout the day. Funds will be raised through both individual player and corporate sponsorships, as well as through concessions and t-shirt sales on the day of the event.

SYA Lacrosse, CYA Lacrosse, and FPYC are local, volunteer, non-profit youth sports organizations that serve the youth of western Fairfax. Proceeds beyond the money raised for Fisher House Foundation will be used to improve player safety through the purchase of updated equipment and gear. Funds raised also will help keep these sports programs accessible to every household in western Fairfax by keeping registration costs low, as well as help subsidize the organizations’ free off-season training programs and clinics.

More than 500 boys and girls are involved in these community programs, which are dedicated to ensuring positive experiences for players of every skill level.

Businesses and individuals can sponsor a designated team or player.

Fairfax Presses Ahead with Diversion First

When police encounter someone in mental health crisis, they can transport them to Merrifield Crisis Response Center instead of jail.

Natasha McKenna died a little more than a year ago on Feb. 7, 2015. McKenna, with a long history of severe and often untreated mental illness, had been deteriorating in the Fairfax County Adult Detention Center since Jan. 26, 2015, arriving directly from release from the hospital on an outstanding warrant from the City of Alexandria charging felonious assault on an Alexandria police officer.

We can't know whether new efforts to provide people in mental health crisis might have saved her life if they were available and put in place early in this particular crisis, which appears to have begun a month before her death. McKenna's death is a terrible tragedy, and no new program will remove that horror.

But it's clear that treatment rather than jail can make all the difference for many people who come into contact with law enforcement in a mental health crisis. Diversion First is a collaborative effort in Fairfax County to reduce the number of people with mental illness in the county jail by diverting low risk offenders experiencing a mental health crisis to treatment rather than bringing them to jail.

Sheriff Stacey Kincaid estimates that 40 percent of detainees at the Fairfax County Adult Detention Center have mental illness. Notably, it is far more expensive to house someone in county jail than to provide treatment.

The collaborative effort was in no small part launched by Supervisor John Cook when he asked that the Board of Supervisors to add crisis intervention training to the scope of work of the Ad Hoc Police Practices Review Commission. The Mental Health subcommittee along with the Community Services Board, the Sheriff's Department, police and mental health advocates set and met an aggressive agenda and timetable for implementation, with the program actually beginning in less than a year, on Jan. 1, 2016. In the first month, the Merrifield Crisis Response Center handled more than 100 cases involving police and people in mental health crisis.

Merrifield Crisis Response Center operates as an assessment site where police are able to transfer custody of nonviolent offenders who may need mental health services to a CIT-trained officer or deputy assigned there, instead of taking them to jail.

How far-reaching, life-saving and resource-preserving Diversion First will turn out to be will depend on how it is implemented and the discretion and policies of the police and prosecutors, among others.

Freedom of Information on Life Support in General Assembly?

Sen. Chap Petersen (D-34) cites FOIA on life support in his blog oxroadsouth.com:

"Last week, the Assembly passed SB 202, which undid a major push eight years ago to ensure that all of our public spending was 'online' and searchable by ordinary citizens. This, of course, meant disclosing the salaries of public employees over a certain income level.

However, SB 202 has undone all of that, which means that you will no longer know how much a public employee (even a city manager) is paid unless you make a formal FOIA request. (Because we all have time to do that).

"This bad idea passed on a 27-12 vote.

"Today the Senate passed SB 552 which is even more sweeping. It actually prohibits from disclosure not just the salary information but even the names of public safety personnel, including the Sheriff, the Chief of Police and the Fire Chief.

"On the floor today, I pointed out that a Chief of Police could put his own family on the payroll and be protected from disclosure. This could also be an issue if a law enforcement agency hires an officer with a poor record from another jurisdiction — and nobody knows. Again, who are we protecting?"

"Again, the bill passed 25-15."

"If I'm making a veto list, these two are definitely on it."

We agree.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Oppose ICE's Raids

To the Editor:

The following is an open letter to the community.

Dear Friends and Neighbors,

On the morning of Saturday, Feb. 6, Immigration and Customs Enforcement conducted residential raids in Centreville, taking one family member of a worker from the Centreville Labor Resource Center. CLRC staff learned that the person detained was a recent arrival who came as an unaccompanied minor and just turned 18. CLRC staff was able to quickly connect the family member to a lawyer for assistance.

ICE has been conducting raids such as these for the past two months, targeting those who have arrived since the beginning of 2014. Many included in this group are women, children and youth who have fled poverty and violence.

The fear and distress from this most recent raid is reverberating throughout our community. Some people are even afraid to leave home; people with pending immigration cases worry that they will be deported, despite their compliance with court orders. These raids are sudden, they are random, and they are affecting our neighbors right here in Centreville.

The CLRC will serve as a resource to connect those affected by raids to reliable legal counsel, and will continue its efforts to ensure that the immigrant community is aware of their legal rights in the event of another raid. The CLRC is a project of the Centreville Immigration Forum, a 501c3 non-profit which receives no public funding. The Immigration Forum has always considered CLRC to be a local solution to a local problem, but we cannot ignore the crippling effect that fear is having on our community.

If you are moved to action as we are, please tell DHS secretary Jeh Johnson and President Obama to stop these raids and create a real solution for families fleeing violence. Go to <http://action.groundswell-mvmt.org/petitions/tell-the-obama-administration-stop-the-raids-on-central-american-refugees>.

Thank you for your consideration,

Molly Maddra-Santiago

And staff, board and workers of Centreville Immigration Forum

Intolerance And Hatred

To the Editor:

Donald Trump — the fading hot topic of last year; currently known for being the frontrunner in the Republican presidential primaries along with his infamous bigotry. Throughout 2015, the media exploited all the ignorant acts he displayed towards any minorities, beginning with the Hispanic community and now moving on to Muslims, or anyone with a darker complexion for that matter.

There are two recent events which I would like to shed some light on where Mr. Trump indecently targeted two people he believed to be Muslims. At the recent Iowa rally, a Sikh man protesting "Stop Hate" was removed purely for wearing a turban. Trump was on the topic of terrorism when he spotted the man peacefully protesting and taunted him as he was kicked out.

The second occasion was at a rally in South Carolina, where a Muslim woman wearing a hijab silently stood up during his speech as a form of protest. She was instantly picked on and escorted out as a "disturbance." Both of these harmless acts of protest are in response to Trump's ludicrous idea of banning all Muslims from entering the U.S. Did these individuals cause any harm or havoc upon anyone? In fact, the protests sparked a conjoined hatred from the crowd and Trump himself.

Trump's main source of support comes from his ability to pin point a group of people to blame and

'We're There to Help Them Out'

CAC learns about Police Department's hostage negotiations team.

BY BONNIE HOBBS
CENTRE VIEW

Each month, members of the Sully District Police Station's Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) learn about a different section of the Fairfax County Police Department. Recently, they learned about hostage negotiations.

Det. Doug Comfort explained how the police handle hostage situations and how officers are trained to respond. And since he first started in this field with the Vienna Police Department in 1976, he has 40 years of experience in it.

"We tell [hostage holders] we're there to help them, not hurt them, and to get them out of there alive," he said. "We give them an out, usually involving mental-health treatment."

In the early days, said Comfort, police didn't have the ability to talk to the perpetrator directly, so they developed crisis-management teams. But it's a part-time specialty for the officers, he said, because Fairfax County doesn't have enough hostage cases to warrant full-time.

"So we work in conjunction with the SWAT team," he said. "We do the negotiations and gain intelligence, and they base their response on that and on how well we're doing with the person. In 1978, I was traded for a hostage — but that's stupid and is no longer done."

Seventeen officers are part of the hostage negotiations team. "Two captains and two lieutenants lead it, and it's a team effort," said Comfort. "So if I'm negotiating, I have a coach who's helping me, plus multiple intelligence officers. They're talking to family and friends — which I really enjoy doing — to get a picture of that person's life. We also have a mental-health professional with us from Woodburn [Center for Community Mental Health]. So negotiations are done by group."

Modern technology also plays a role. "Last year, we had one negotiation done completely by text," said Comfort.

"We stay up with the latest technology and negotiating techniques. We're taking Crisis Intervention Training here so we can recognize whether the person is depressed, in their right mind, homicidal, suicidal, etc."

"I enjoy doing it because it's a huge challenge," he continued. "And when you get someone out, after three or four or five hours, it's very satisfying. The longest negotiation we had was over 24 hours. It's usually spur-of-the-moment, so we listen to radio [transmissions] on the way over [to the scene] to learn more about the situation and who's responding."

Comfort then shared details of a barricade situation the police encountered in 2014. "This developed out of another situation and we hadn't made contact with the person," he said. "Then all of a sudden, we got a text from him. He was depressed and knew what he wanted to do — kill himself — and he set his house on fire."

We'd been negotiating three or four hours and didn't know whether he had hostages."

Police learned later that he didn't but, at the time, they had to assume he did. "We build trust between the person and we don't lie to them," said the detective. "The house caught fire a second time, but he didn't plan that one and he couldn't get out because of it. So our SWAT team turned into a rescue team."

I've seen him a couple times since then, and he's gotten help and is very grateful to us."

Sometimes, the person speaks a foreign language and, in that case, Comfort also works with interpreters he's familiar with and knows will translate accurately.

"But you miss voice inflection and emotion, so I ask the interpreter to tell me if the person's excited or depressed," he said.

"And in some cultures, the negotiation has to be done face-to-face, not over the phone."

He said most hostage cases involve a variety of factors. "For example, a domestic problem may have sparked it and alcohol fueled it," said Comfort. "But there may also be an underlying mental-health issue."

We have to deal with each one separately and then put them all together. Hostage negotiations aren't rushed."

"In 1978, I was traded for a hostage — but that's stupid and is no longer done."

Fairfax County police

Pleasant Valley Lane Closures

Drivers can expect lane closures and 10-to-15-minute delays on Pleasant Valley Road near Braddock Road this week for cable relocation:

- ❖ Thursday, 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.
- ❖ Friday, 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.
- ❖ Saturday, 7 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Motorists are advised to use alternate routes. This project replaces the existing four-way stop with a one-lane roundabout in western Fairfax. The $5.8 million project is being administered in cooperation with Fairfax County and is expected to be complete this spring.

Free Carseat Inspections

Certified technicians from the Sully District Police Station will perform free, child safety carseat inspections Thursday, Feb. 18, from 5-8:30 p.m., at the station, 4900 Stonecroft Blvd. in Chantilly. No appointment is necessary. But residents should install the child safety seats themselves so technicians may properly inspect and adjust them, as needed. Because of time constraints, only the first 35 vehicles arriving on each date will be inspected. That way, inspectors may have enough time to properly instruct the caregiver on the correct use of the child seat. Call 703-814-7000, ext. 5140, to confirm dates and times.

Garza's 2016 Listening Tours

Fairfax County Public Schools Superintendent Karen K. Garza will hold five listening tours in 2016, and invites students, parents, employees, and community members to participate. The local session will be held at 6:30 p.m., Monday, Feb. 29 at Centreville High School. Garza, accompanied by the regional assistant superintendents, will provide an update on the budget, Strategic Plan, classroom initiatives, and other happenings in FCPS and listen to ideas, comments, and questions from the audience. Those planning to attend are asked to register in advance online at www.surveymonkey.com/r/2016ListeningTour6YZ7PCY and indicate if an interpreter is needed.

Moving Equipment Is Sought

The Centreville Labor Resource Center is in need of moving equipment to add to its tool supplies. Requested items are back braces, lift belts, sliders and straps that are used for moving jobs.

This equipment can be checked out by workers and brought back when they complete jobs. It will ensure that they're able to complete moving jobs more safely. In addition, the CLRC is seeking Spanish-speaking people to fill a number of volunteer positions. Contact Molly Maddra-Santiago at director@centrevillelrc.org.

Westfield Boys' Basketball Extends Win Streak to 17

BY WILL PALENSCAR
CENTRE VIEW

The Westfield boys' basketball team finished the regular season with an 18-2 record and will enter the postseason on a 17-game win streak.

On Feb. 10, the Westfield boys' basketball team played in its final regular season home game against Chantilly for Senior Night. Prior to the start of the game, Westfield honored Cole Huling, Joe Katchmark, Kory Jones, Tyler Scanlon, Hank Johnson, Skye Koutstaal and Gabby Moses.

The seven and the families of each were honored at midcourt, prior to the start of the game.

Westfield jumped out to quick 26-12 first quarter advantage and eventually finished off a 72-62 win. Westfield was led by senior Blake Francis' 26 points and Tyler Scanlon's 19. Francis hit three 3-point baskets and Scanlon had one. Jones and Huling each had a 3-pointer and Johnson added 16 points.

Chantilly was led by Zach Crenshaw's 22 points and Kendall McHugh's 11.

The following evening, Westfield traveled to Centreville. The Wildcats hoped to avenge an earlier season loss to Westfield.

Westfield, however, would jump to a commanding double-digit lead in the first half over Centreville, 27-12, and defeat the Wildcats 64-42. Scanlon and Francis accounted for 40 of the 64 points. Scanlon finished with 22 points and Francis 18.

William Unterkofler was the only Wildcat in double figures with his 23 points.

Westfield entered its final regular season game at Oakton on Feb. 12 riding a 16-game win streak. The Cougars would start the first quarter outscoring the Bulldogs 16-14. Both Zachary Sickels and Jacob Posz connected from long range, knocking down two 3-pointers in the opening quarter.

In the second quarter, Westfield would outscore the Cougars 18-13. Westfield's Scanlon and Francis accounted for 16 of Westfield's 18 points to take a 32-29 half-time lead.

In the second half, Nick Albert and Johnson provided scoring in the third quarter. However, it was Scanlon's 33 points and Francis' 19 that finished off the Cougars, 68-58. Westfield will enter the Conference tournament with a bye.

Region Champion

Westfield senior Jay Aiello, top, pinned Osbourn Park's Glenn Curtis to win the 6A North region 195-pound wrestling championship on Feb. 13 at Fairfax High School. Westfield finished 10th as a team with 74 points. Battlefield won the team title (194), followed by Hayfield (161) and Robinson (157.5). Chantilly finished ninth (84) and Centreville finished 16th (32).

Time To Plan for Summer Camp

Local camp fair offers sampling of summer programs.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
CENTRE VIEW

Under a blanket of February frost, summer might seem light years away, but it's closer than one might think. As coveted slots fill at some of the area's most sought-after camps, now is the time to begin planning, say camp directors. With options ranging from sailing to fencing, narrowing down the decision can be daunting. That's why local camp fairs can be a valuable one-stop-shopping service for choosing summer activities. Hundreds of camp representatives will be on hand for the Northern Virginia Camp and Summer Fun Expo on Feb. 20-21 at 2100 Dulles Town Circle, Dulles.

"We will have a lot of exhibitors in one location so that parents can see a variety of camps to make sure that their children have a fun summer," said Samantha Carter of Washington Parent, the event's sponsor. "There are programs to fit every budget."

Camp fairs, says Carter, offer parents an opportunity to meet representatives from a variety of camps, gather information and ask questions. "We have camps from all up and down the eastern seaboard, even as far away as Maine."

With so many choices, narrowing the list of options can leave many parents feeling flummoxed. Camp experts shared a few key factors parents should consider before settling on summer camps to help avert unpleasant surprises.

"First, I think that parents should take their children into consideration, and the kinds of activities they like to do and whether they are being offered at the camps they are looking at," said Kevin Rechen, Summer Camp director for Norwood School in Bethesda, Md.

It's a good idea to inquire about the camper to staff ratios and the types of staff the camp will hire, such as adult teachers or activity specialists. "Who are the individuals who will watch over the campers and what kinds of licenses do they have?" asks Francesca Reed, a mother of two and associate vice president for Enrollment Management at Marymount University in Arlington.

Safety and medical considerations are also key factors to consider, especially for children who have allergies or other medical issues. "Is there a nurse on site?" asks Stacie Gottlieb, director of Summer Programs at Bullis School in Potomac, Md. "What safety and medical procedures [does the camp] have in place?"

Now is the time to plan for summer camp, say experts.

Reed suggests parents also inquire about a camp's drop off and pick up times, availability of after-care services and whether fees are charged for late arrivals. "Some of the basic questions are the cost and any additional fees that might not be apparent," said Reed. "Find out the camp's reimbursement policy in case you have to cancel before camp starts or while it's in session."

For parents who have more than one child who will attend camp, Rechen suggests looking for camps that offer an assortment of activities that appeal to children of different ages. "For the sake of convenience, it's key for a lot of parents to have all of their children in one camp, so they don't have to make multiple trips each and every day," he said. "Having a variety of programs for a wide age range also allows younger children to see the activities that they have to look forward to as they get older."

In execution of a Deed of Trust dated October 7, 2013, in the original principal amount of $180,000.00, recorded as Deed Book 23421 at Page 0043 in the Clerk's Office of the Circuit Court of Fairfax County, Virginia, the undersigned Trustee will on Wednesday, March 2, 2016 at 10:00 a.m., by the front main entrance to the Fairfax County Courthouse, 4110 Chain Bridge Road, Fairfax, VA 22030, offer for sale at public auction to the highest bidder the following property with improvements thereon commonly known as 14740 Flint Lee Road, Unit Q, Chantilly, Virginia 20151 and more particularly described as follows:

Building 14740, Unit Q of Parcel A of FLINT LEE BUSINESS PARK CONDOMINIUM, as created by the Declaration and By-laws, Plats and Plans as recorded in Deed Book 7173 at Page 1896, among the land records of the County of Fairfax, Virginia, together with an undivided interest in the common elements as set forth in the Declaration and Exhibits.

Tax Map Ref: 034 3 12 4740Q

This sale is subject to any reservations, restrictions on use, covenants, obligations, rights of way, conditions, easements, and mechanic's liens, if any, whether of record or not of record, to the extent any of the foregoing apply and take priority over the lien of the Deed of Trust.

Deposit of $15,000.00, or 10% of the sales price, whichever is lower, by cashier's or certified check, shall be required to qualify as a bidder prior to the sale, except for the Noteholder.

The deposit, without interest, is applied to the purchase price at settlement. Settlement will be held on or before fifteen (15) days after sale. Upon purchaser's default, the deposit shall be forfeited and the property shall be resold at the risk and costs of the defaulting purchaser.

The balance of the purchase price shall be paid by certified or cashier's check, or wire transfer. Settlement shall be at the offices of the undersigned Trustee, or other mutually agreed upon location. The property and any improvements thereon shall be sold in "as is" condition without any warranties. The successful bidder shall assume all loss or damage to the property from and after the time of the sale. Purchaser shall be responsible for all costs of the conveyance, which shall be by special warranty including, but not limited to, the preparation of the deed and the grantor's tax. Real estate taxes shall be adjusted as of the sale date. The sale is subject to such additional terms as the Trustee may announce at the time of sale. The purchaser will be required to sign a Memorandum of Sale incorporating all the terms of the sale.

One Hundred Pills

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

What exactly am I going to do with 100 pills? Well, barring unforeseen (good or bad) circumstances, I'll certainly continue to take them every four weeks: two the day before my chemotherapy infusion, two the day of and two the day after, as I've done so now, for this particular medication, going on 30-plus months. "Not that there's anything wrong with that," or new, for that matter. But when I refilled this prescription last week, I was surprised when, after the pharmacy customer-server opened the bottle to show me the pills and ask if I had any questions, she then mentioned the count: "100." That's a lot of pills, I thought, more than usual. Typically, I receive only 30 pills.

As I drove home from the pharmacy, I began to think (always dangerous). Why would my oncologist prescribe so many pills? I only need six per month. Is there a minimum he must order? A maximum? Did he over prescribe? Does he even have any input? Perhaps he's projecting my life expectancy? One hundred pills divided by six per month calculates to 17 months/infusions for which I now have pills. I don't want to look a gift oncologist in the mouth, but as a seven-year cancer survivor, I'm well aware that cancer treatment/results are hardly cast in stone and 17 months seems like a long time not yet gone (David Crosby song title, sort of).

I'm sure part of my presumptuousness is naiveté. I want/need to believe in something/anything positive (any port in a storm) concerning/relating to my health/treatment. More so when I'm in between my every-three-month, face-to-face appointment with my oncologist. That's when we review my most recent diagnostic scan and assess my overall status and consider treatment options before agreeing on a schedule for the next three months. Not that I'm discouraged from communicating with him in the interim. Quite the opposite in fact; he's very responsive to my e-mails. It's more that electronic communication is a "two-dimensional" type of communication, and I'm a "three-dimensional" kind of communicator. Obviously, I can respond electronically to his answers and presumably we could type back and forth, but dare I show my age and say: It's just not the same as being there/talking on the telephone. Ergo, during this between-appointment interval, I'm sort of left to my own devices and in turn inclined to wobble – and wonder, emotionally, about my life. Perhaps I should look on the bright side and be glad my oncologist didn't order six pills.

I suppose, if I wanted to be honest with myself, I'd say the number of the pills prescribed/in the bottle probably mean nothing. The doctor simply checked a box and off the order went with nary a consideration of the patient's reaction. Nor do I think the doctor is aware of patient co-pays, deductibles, percentage of benefits used or any of the other out-of-pocket expenses associated with the prescription/patient's health insurance. "Hippocratically" speaking, that's not his job. His job is to keep me/the patient alive. And since I'm still alive, pill-count notwithstanding, I'm looking forward to the next 17 months. Seeing my bottles of pills become less full over time gives me a peculiar sense of accomplishment: that I continue to survive in the face of what was originally a fairly discouraging set of circumstances. Occasionally, however, I have to be realistic; 100 is simply a number, not a prognosis.

convince his followers to do the same. As an American-born Muslim woman, I cannot see how Trump wants to exclude all Muslims from America, under the notion that all of them are terrorists, when he is the source of hatred towards innocent individuals. Trump degrades all Muslims and labels them as terrorists, even though those two terms do not go hand in hand. The definition of terrorism is using violence or intimidation in the pursuit of political aims. If I am not mistaken, Trump has degraded Muslims in almost all of his rallies and debates purely to gain more support from the like-minded ignorant Americans voting for him. I hope that our nation can educate itself about his presidential candidacy rather than be brainwashed by his fact-less profanity.
