As Kathy Hertz saw women and children being pushed to the front of the overcrowded dinghy approaching the shore, she thought, "This is what I'm seeing on TV. Oh my God, this is real."

When the boat, overflowing with refugees, reached land on the Greek island of Lesbos, more than 5,000 miles from her home in Clifton, Hertz and her cousin Joanne Feinberg were each handed a baby to be dried and warmed first. The parents would find them later.

"I don't even know what I thought," Hertz said. "I was just holding him as tight as I could, sort of in shock. There were 50 to 60 people on a dinghy made for 16. I thought of the enormity of this, that they made it."

Hertz and Feinberg hadn't even reached their hotel after landing in Lesbos the day after Christmas 2015. They'd rented a car and were driving that direction along the Greek coast when Feinberg shouted "Turn! There's a boat!"

The pair got off the main road and managed to drive to where it looked like the boat might make land. There they met an assembly of volunteers who were preparing to receive the refugees with blankets and warm clothing. Getting the people dry and warm as fast as possible was first priority.

"I realized I didn't know what to expect before we got there," said Feinberg. "That organized chaos threw me right into the emotional situations we were going to encounter."

LESVOS has been a major funnel for refugees fleeing Syria, Iran, Iraq and Afghanistan. There they register for a ferry to Athens and continue on to safe haven elsewhere. In the fall and early winter of 2015, the United Nations and other non-governmental organizations had yet to establish a significant presence on the island. Volunteers were arriving on their own to help refugees land and safely wait the several days before they could register for further transportation.

Looking for a more meaningful way to spend a vacation together, Feinberg, who lives in Ashland, Ore., had been reading about the situation there and suggested a service trip to Hertz. They both decided it was a no-brainer.

Feinberg found a Facebook page with information about going and helping with the effort in Lesbos, but it was contingent on each traveler to independently link up with the established volunteer group. Using the WhatsApp Internet-based chat app, look-outs for the volunteers from around the world could quickly communicate the location of boats arriving and initiate a welcome party in realtime.

After getting that first boatload of refugees on to United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees buses, the women were able to get settled into their quarters.

The next step for the refugees was a makeshift camp set up by volunteers in Moria. At the camp "Better Days for Moria," families could locate their missing members, seek medical attention, clothing, food, shelter, art and prayer in the few days before they were able to register to be taken to Athens.

Hertz and Feinberg spent much of their week-plus trip working among the tents, spending time one-on-one and either communicating through a refugee translator or making due through broken English.

"I wanted to make them feel human for a few minutes," Hertz said. "They'd left everything, sold everything to buy passage. So many pregnant women, people risking their lives and traveling without food or water, walking for days before even pushing off. It blew my mind this was the good option."

LOOKING BACK on her experience, Hertz said she wants to "combat fear that there are [Islamic State] terrorists trying to sneak through."

"That's just not what it is. There's more danger on I-66 than someone trying to get through. No one even said I'm going to the U.S.A.; most were trying to get to Germany."

Hertz is a life coach and mother, while Feinberg, also a mother, works in independent films. Documenting the trip wasn't her goal in coming, however.

"There was so much to do there," she said, "any time I had a camera in my hands, it was beside the point. My hands needed to be busy helping the refugees."

In addition to their manual labor, the two women had brought more than 30 coats, as well as hats, gloves and scarves they had collected prior to the trip. But with anywhere from 1,500 to 6,000 refugees arriving daily, they also knew money was the most valuable aid, so they'd also raised $4,000 to help purchase whatever was most pressing. One day it might be shoes for men and boys, the next it might be a whole outboard motor.

While working in the tents, Hertz and Feinberg met members of Proem-Aid, an organization of Spanish lifeguards that had mobilized to help rescue broken down dinghies and any refugees who had gone overboard.

"The engine usually stops and they don't know how to repair it," said Gabriel Hureau, a lifeguard from Madrid who began working with Proem-Aid in December 2015. "They haven't been in the water before. It stops. There's lot of water coming in, they crowd, plus the water, it makes the boat sinking down. If it doesn't sink, when they come to shore, there's too many people, it can't be controlled."

"They go to the rocks, the cliffs, they smash into the rocks before arriving," Hureau continued. "People drowning 15 meters before arriving. They didn't know

County Executive: Revenue growth is insufficient to fund all priorities. Schools still $68 million short.

BY KEN MOORE

County Executive Ed Long recommended a four-cent increase to the real estate tax rate.

But to meet the full request of Fairfax County Public Schools, he said, would require a three-cent increase on top of the budget he built.

Long presented the FY 2017 Advertised Budget Plan to the Board of Supervisors Tuesday morning, Feb. 16.

"The budget is a discussion with the community," said Chairman Sharon Bulova.

"This is the first step," said Lee Supervisor Jeff McKay, head of the board's budget committee.

"We have to see what the reactions are," said Long.

Bulova is scheduled to advertise the FY 2017 tax rate on March 1. At that point, the board can lower but not increase from the tax rate advertised.

The projected value of each penny is $23.3 million to the county, Long said.

"At the current real estate tax rate, revenue growth is insufficient to fund all of our priorities," Long told the Board of Supervisors.

But even with the increase, he warned, there are "many unmet needs and investment requirements that remain unfunded."

Each member of the Board of Supervisors will hold local community dialogues in their respective districts; then the board will hold public hearings on the budget from April 5-7.

The board will adopt the final budget on April 26.

FAIRFAX COUNTY

More than 50 percent of Fairfax County's $3.988 billion budget will be transferred to Fairfax County Public Schools, $68 million less than FCPS requested.

THE FEUD resumed between the School Board and the Board of Supervisors before Long's speech even concluded, with his proposed budget falling $68 million short of what FCPS Superintendent Karen Garza says is needed.

"We are dismayed that Fairfax County Executive Ed Long has ignored the pleas of Emotional independent outbursts and communal chants of "Fund our schools" and "Invest in kids" echoed through the grand amphitheater just beyond the entrance to the Fairfax County Government Center.

The same day Fairfax County Executive Ed Long announced his proposal for a nearly $4 billion county budget at the Board of Supervisors morning meeting, school advocacy groups including IamFCPS, the Fairfax County Council of PTAs, Fairfax Education Association, Fairfax FLAGS and Fairfax Arts Coalition for Education, organized a rally in the evening calling for the supervisors to fully fund the FY 2017 budget adopted by the School Board.

That budget, a $121.4 million increase over the previous year, represents not only a 6.7 percent increase in transfer from the county, but also enables Superintendent Dr. Karen Garza to steer the school system forward with no additional cuts to programs or services.

Though Garza won't formally present her budget to the supervisors until early April, Long's $3.988 billion proposed budget falls short of the current requested transfer to the school system by nearly $68 million.

"This is not good enough," said Fairfax

Education Association president Kimberly Adams. "Our children are worth more, our community is worth more, and Fairfax is willing to invest a few cents more to make sure our next generation has a bright future."

Adams was one of several speakers scheduled to speak who also included Debbie Kilpatrick, president of the Fairfax parents, students, employees and community members to fully fund Fairfax County Public Schools' budget in FY 2017," said School Board president Pat Hynes in an emailed statement. "Despite calling for a tax increase, Mr. Long's budget signals no increase to the schools above last year's budget guidance of three percent while increasing the county's budget by a greater percentage. ... This news means that, unless the Board of Supervisors provides for a funding increase above Mr. Long's recommendation, Fairfax County Public Schools will once again have to make damaging budget cuts that will reduce educational opportunities for our children."

McKay, head of the budget committee, immediately countered after the Board of Supervisors hearing. He had already read words from various school officials.

"Expressing to people somehow that the Board of Supervisors is cutting the school budget which was again expressed in writing today," said McKay, "is just technically not true."

"Let's talk about how we can better meet the school's needs but let's be truthful in presenting the facts to people about what is actually happening. While the county has dramatically increased education funding every year that I've been on board, the state has fallen further and further and further behind."

"There is a point in time in which we have to lobby the state to fix that problem," he said.

The board has increased the funding of schools by $230 million since FY 2008, he said during the presentation. "Clearly this budget doesn't meet the transfer request of the schools and we need to do something to address that."

VIRGINIA RANKS in the top ten in both per capita and median household income but in the bottom 10 for state funding of public education, according to county documents.

"As the county has been saying for many years, the state is not meeting its share of funding for K-12 education in Fairfax County," Long said.

"That puts a tremendous strain on other parts of our budget when the state doesn't come through," Long said.

"That's an awful lot for our citizens to bear," said Supervisor Pat Herrity (R-Springfield) of the proposed tax increase. "I'm hoping we can do something with our community to take the burden off the backs of our taxpayers."

Supervisor John Cook (R-Braddock) called it a "dark and dreary and ugly day."

"We are getting squeezed by national economic forces that are the worst in our lifetimes," he said. "This is where it comes to roost. Right here."

"We're going to have to get out a pencil and figure out where we can find some savings," said Cook. "Four pennies is nothing I can swallow."

"I'm not gloomy," said Supervisor Cathy Hudgins (D-Hunter Mill). "Four cents sounds like an awful lot, but I can tell you I feel stronger in the way that we can support the schools, and the ways we can support the community."

The countywide average assessment for all homes is $527,648, and the owner of a home valued that much would see $304 increase in property taxes. The county average assessment for a single family house is $632,507. Assessments vary by location. In Great Falls, the average is $1,055,249. In Centreville, the average is $385,089.

CRITICAL ITEMS included in the budget, according to Long: FCPS operating increase of three percent; FCPS infrastructure investment; improvements in county employee compensation; investments in public safety including increased staffing, beginning implementation of Ad Hoc Police Commission recommendations and Diversion First,

Several issues contribute to the revenue challenges, Long said.

❖ The local economy underperformed the national economy from 2011 - 2014.

❖ High office vacancy rate in the county - over 20 million square feet vacant out of 116.5 million square feet. As of mid-year 2015, direct office vacancy rate was 16.5 percent, highest since 1991, when it was 16.8 percent.

❖ Local real estate market is underperforming the nation, so county's FY 2017 real estate tax growth lower than anticipated.

But "looking forward," Long said, "there's reasons for optimism. I'm optimistic about our local economy."

The board adopted the Economic Strategic Plan, he said.

"The Silver Line is going ahead full steam and we are going to see that opening up in 2019-2020. That gives reason for optimism," he said.

"And all the rezoning in Tysons and Reston, I'm extremely optimistic we are going to grow our commercial base."

Free Community Education Helps Take Stress out of Tax Season

BY DENENE CRABBS

If you cringe when you think of tax season, you're not alone. Each year Northern Virginia business owners rally to get their W2s and 1099s mailed by the Jan. 31 deadline while employees and independent contractors begin gathering their documents to take to their tax preparer. The process of organizing receipts, searching for lost statements, and determining which expenses may be worth the time to calculate can often add stress to the already many demands upon Northern Virginia families. Tax preparation questions often go unanswered as taxpayers don't want to incur additional accountant fees.

To ease this anxiety, one local business owner, Melissa Khoo of Liberty Tax Service Fairfax Station, is taking an innovative approach to addressing taxpayer concerns. With over two decades of experience as a Certified Tax Auditor, Khoo and her team of experienced Tax Preparers are providing free seminars with question and answer sessions to inform taxpayers how to prepare for this year's tax season and plan future tax-saving strategies. Seminars will cover a variety of topics and frequently asked questions such as "Do I have enough medical expenses for a deduction?" "I sold and bought another home this year. What expenses can I deduct?" and "Is a SEP or SIMPLE IRA better for my small business?" All events are free and open to the public. While seminars are tailored to various occupations, taxpayers may attend the event that works best for their schedule, regardless of occupation or retirement status. Each seminar concludes with a question and answer session open to all.

OPINION

Fairfax Presses Ahead with Diversion First

When police encounter someone in mental health crisis, they can transport them to Merrifield Crisis Response Center instead of jail.

Natasha McKenna died a little more than a year ago on Feb. 7, 2015. McKenna, with a long history of severe and often untreated mental illness, had been deteriorating in the Fairfax County Adult Detention Center since Jan. 26, 2015, arriving directly from release from the hospital on an outstanding warrant from the City of Alexandria charging felonious assault on an Alexandria police officer.

We can't know whether new efforts to provide people in mental health crisis might have saved her life if they were available and put in place early in this particular crisis, which appears to have begun a month before her death. McKenna's death is a terrible tragedy, and no new program will remove that horror.

But it's clear that treatment rather than jail can make all the difference for many people who come into contact with law enforcement in a mental health crisis. Diversion First is a collaborative effort in Fairfax County to reduce the number of people with mental illness in the county jail by diverting low risk offenders experiencing a mental health crisis to treatment rather than bringing them to jail.

Sheriff Stacey Kincaid estimates that 40 percent of detainees at the Fairfax County Adult Detention Center have mental illness. Notably, it is far more expensive to house someone in county jail than to provide treatment.

The collaborative effort was in no small part launched by Supervisor John Cook when he asked that the Board of Supervisors to add crisis intervention training to the scope of work of the Ad Hoc Police Practices Review Commission. The Mental Health subcommittee along with the Community Services Board, the Sheriff's Department, police and mental health advocates set and met an aggressive agenda and timetable for implementation, with the program actually beginning in less than a year, on Jan. 1, 2016. In the first month, the Merrifield Crisis Response Center handled more than 100 cases involving police and people in mental health crisis.

Merrifield Crisis Response Center operates as an assessment site where police are able to transfer custody of nonviolent offenders who may need mental health services to a CIT-trained officer or deputy assigned there, instead of taking them to jail.

How far-reaching, life-saving and resource-preserving Diversion First will turn out to be will depend on how it is implemented and the discretion and policies of the police and prosecutors, among others.

Freedom of Information on Life Support in General Assembly?

Sen. Chap Petersen (D-34) cites FOIA on life support in his blog oxroadsouth.com:

"Last week, the Assembly passed SB 202, which undid a major push eight years ago to ensure that all of our public spending was 'online' and searchable by ordinary citizens. This, of course, meant disclosing the salaries of public employees over a certain income level. However, SB 202 has undone all of that, which means that you will no longer know how much a public employee (even a city manager) is paid unless you make a formal FOIA request. (Because we all have time to do that).

"This bad idea passed on a 27-12 vote.

"Today the Senate passed SB 552 which is even more sweeping. It actually prohibits from disclosure not just the salary information but even the names of public safety personnel, including the Sheriff, the Chief of Police and the Fire Chief.

"On the floor today, I pointed out that a Chief of Police could put his own family on the payroll and be protected from disclosure. This could also be an issue if a law enforcement agency hires an officer with a poor record from another jurisdiction — and nobody knows. Again, who are we protecting?"

"Again, the bill passed 25-15."

"If I'm making a veto list, these two are definitely on it."

We agree.

Regional Gas Tax, Digital Divide and Identity Protection

BY SCOTT SUROVELL
STATE SENATOR (D-36)

The fifth week of the General Assembly Session brought some long days and nights as we rushed to complete work on bills before our mid-session deadline called "Cross-over."

First the Senate passed legislation to plug a hole in the Northern Virginia 2.1 percent regional gas tax that is used to fund transit. This legislation was the top priority for Fairfax, Prince William and Stafford counties.

It now goes on to an uncertain future in the House of Delegates, but without the legislation, localities will be under even more pressure to raise real estate taxes if we expect to maintain the same level of transit service.

Eleven of my bills have passed the full Senate with two more still waiting for final passage. One bill involved improving the fairness of protective order proceedings and another ensured that Virginians can enforce subpoenas in civil and criminal cases in Virginia due to a recent Supreme Court of Virginia opinion.

My legislation to help close the Digital Divide moved through committee this week. Today's children learn digitally and digital literacy is a key job skill in a modern workforce. However, low income families often cannot afford devices or broadband connections.

After I learned Fairfax County was using electronic textbooks and failing to provide computers for low income families to use them at home, I introduced legislation to require any school using electronic textbooks to provide a digital device to every student. The legislation was vetted and approved by the Joint Commission on Technology and Science but was tabled in the House. Last week, the Senate Education, Health and Welfare Committee passed the bill on a 14-1 vote.

The proliferation of companies providing background checks for people has led to an increase in dissemination of inaccurate information. This severely limits Virginians' opportunities, especially in employment and housing. My legislation to create a Virginia-based cause of action to remedy these situations and hold companies accountable for putting out inaccurate information passed the Senate.

Several of my law firm clients and lawyers in Northern Virginia have told me that some orthopedic practices are refusing to see individuals who have suffered injuries in vehicle collisions — even if they have insurance. My bill to require insurance companies to contractually prohibit doctors from refusing patients based on how they were injured was continued to 2017 so we can convene meetings between insurance companies, doctors, and other stakeholders to mediate a resolution.

If you have any feedback, please send me a note at scott@scottsuovell.org. It is an honor to serve as your state senator.

Tire Fire at Lorton Landfill Causes Estimated $600,000 in Damage

Firefighter units from across Fairfax County responded to a large tire fire at the Fairfax County Landfill in Lorton on Feb. 6 around 11 p.m., a release from the Fire and Rescue Department said.

Firefighters were able to put out the flaming tires, located in the recycling area of the landfill, after working through the night.

No injuries were reported, however damage to equipment at the landfill is estimated to be $600,000.

The landfill is located at 9898 Furnace Road.

Cultural Diversity Sculpture

Work by Foon Sham on display at Workhouse Art Center.

BY DAVID SIEGEL
THE CONNECTION

Arts Council of Fairfax County Strauss Fellowship recipient, and internationally-renowned artist Foon Sham, who lives in Fairfax County, has created the large scale detailed work entitled “Culture House.”

“Culture House” is the first commission by the Workhouse Arts Center. Sham’s “Culture House” provides a physical representation of the diversity of people and language represented in Fairfax County. There are 170 languages spoken at home by children in Fairfax County Public Schools.

“Visitors to the exhibit will enter the installation, built in part by donated objects, and interact with the sculpture by reading and writing in their native language on the structure creating an ongoing visual dialog challenging ideas about culture, community and langue,” said Brett Johnson, director of visual arts, Workhouse Arts Center.

Foon Sham is a professor of Art at the University of Maryland, College Park. He has received many awards including from the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA). His works have been exhibited in the D.C. metropolitan area, throughout the United States and internationally.

Linda S. Sullivan, President & CEO, Arts Council of Fairfax County, stated, “Foon Sham’s ‘Culture House’ installation is exactly the kind of work the Arts Council

Hureau said anywhere from five to 50 volunteers from Seville and Madrid, Spain, have helped rescue refugees off the coast of Lesbos since he started.

“I was very prepared about where I was going, I read a lot of information before,” he said. “But I couldn’t believe what I was seeing. Being there was different. I was very shocked no one was doing nothing. We’re coming from Spain to help and couldn’t believe that there were not big organizations doing the work that we were doing.”

HERTZ AND FEINBERG were amazed with the rescue work of Proem-Aid, and heartbroken when that group’s own boat’s engine broke down and scuttled their operation.

The two women reached out to their friends and communities back in the United States and managed to raise enough money remotely to help buy and brand new engine so the lifeguards could get back on the water.

“This money raised by them saved a lot of people actually,” Hureau said. “I’m convinced we can motivate more people to do the same.”

Back in America, Hertz is trying to raise awareness of the situation in Lesbos, as well as the work Proem-Aid is doing, despite setbacks from local law enforcement. Several lifeguards have actually been arrested by the Greek coast guard for human trafficking, choosing to view the life-saving missions as smuggling. Legal fees and a warranty against future judgements have cost the lifeguards almost the money they have to run on, Hureau said.

Both of the women are planning to give public talks about their experience and encouraging others to contact their federal representatives and find a way to get involved.

“It was hard coming back, you want to do more,” said Hertz. “I feel isolated and alienated from people here, but I also want to help people understand they can make a difference.”

Hertz has created a Facebook page where people can post children’s art from the refugee camps, and is working on another comprehensive resource guide. The two women also kept a daily Facebook journal during the trip, which developed a larger following than they expected, outside their immediate friends groups.

“It made me think how for real people like us,” Feinberg said, “it’s so easy to ignore these stories, like on the front page of New York Times, until you have someone you know, your neighbor, translate what they’re seeing on the ground. I was amazed at the impact it had in terms of creating awareness and understanding that this is not just an issue, these are real people.”

“Everyone can do things that are amazing, the difference is a choice,” said Hertz, though acknowledging a trip to Greece may not be the most feasible charity work for everyone.

The point is finding what Feinberg called “this place in ourselves that we want to continue giving to others.”

“You have to have to do the thing that speaks to you,” Hertz said.

More information and photos from Hertz’s trip and her continued work is available on her Facebook profile at Kathy Scheman Hertz.

Star Wars Fans Flock to Local Classes

Movie's popularity leaves fans wanting to feel "The Force."

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

Beams of neon light flash around a dark room. Young Star Wars fans from a galaxy not so far away wield light sabers and move with carefully choreographed steps. These Jedi-in-training are undergoing a fantasy combat training that melds martial arts with light saber fighting, Star Wars-style.

"Star Wars fans are the ultimate martial arts enthusiasts. Star Wars is 100 percent developed on the concepts and philosophies of martial arts ... the use of the sword, the belief structure," said Michael Dietrich of Dietrich's Karate Fitness and Life Skills in Burke. "Now we have an opportunity to invite students because of their interest in the movie. It's an easy way to bring them into our schools and show them what martial arts are all about."

Building on the hype surrounding the recent release of "Star Wars: Episode VII - The Force Awakens," Dietrich began offering classes at his newly created "Laser Saber Academy." Students sign up for a six-week class, where they learn how to use a light saber, tap into "The Force," and improve their focus, discipline and determination.

"Any time a new movie or TV show comes out that features a robot, there is a spike in interest in robotics," said Dan Gallagher of RobotWorks in Burke. "Every kid I've talked to since the Star Wars movie came out wants to know how BB-8 works. Before that, they talked about other robots like Wall-E, R2D2, and Baymax."

At RobotWorks, Gallagher's students learn basic robot design, construction and programming. "In general, though, kids are always interested in robots and how they work. Robots are fun," said Gallagher. "Building robots is even more fun, so we see a steady interest that might jump a little when a new movie robot makes an appearance because it acts as a reminder of that interest — bringing it back to the front burner."

The concepts of the Star Wars universe are seeping into the extracurricular class choices at local schools, with students opting to take offerings like robotics and 3-D modeling. "I think that there is some interest in our STEAM (Science, Technology, Engineering, the Arts and Mathematics) activities that grows from sci-fi movies like Star Wars," said Richard Rho, director of Technology Education and Innovation at St. Stephen's & St. Agnes School. "I have had students 3D model and print the Tie Fighters and X Wing from the movies as well as talking about how we could create our own BB-8 droid in the robotics lab as the off season project."

Educators say that such activities are fun and engaging while also educational. "It's great students are getting inspired by the movie to create ideas and designs and spreading that interest with the rest of our community," said Rho.

"Any time a new movie or TV show comes out that features a robot, there is a spike in interest in robotics."

Theater as Family Good Shepherd Players mark 35 years with “Oklahoma!”

BY TIM PETERSON
THE CONNECTION

Carol St. Germain of Burke has theater in her blood. She and her husband met working on productions at Lynchburg College, she followed him as he pursued a career in theater design and together, they’ve worked to bring shows to life with the Good Shepherd Players for the last three decades.

“We’ve always loved theater,” said St. Germain. “Once you get it in your blood, it’s part of you.” St. Germain teaches English as a Second Language at The Church of the Good Shepherd, the company’s home base.

The Players are celebrating their 35th year with a production of Rodgers and Hammerstein’s old frontier-themed musical “Oklahoma!” opening this weekend. St. Germain has been in the chorus or specialized in prop decoration for 33 of those 35 years.

St. Germain remembers trying out for “Fiddler on the Roof” in the Players’ second year. The next year, for “Music Man,” she won a lead role. “It’s been downhill ever since,” she joked. But in all seriousness, St. Germain is excited about the professional-level rotating set piece in this “Oklahoma!” that doubles as a farmhouse porch on one side and a rustic smokehouse on the other.

UNLIKE PURELY PROFESSIONAL productions, many members of the Good Shepherd Players have performed alongside one another for years. The group is inclusive of multiple generations and, as of two years ago, amended its bylaws to invite performers from outside the church to participate.

“It’s just people who enjoy theater and enjoy being with a group,” St. Germain said of the Players, which now includes a variety of faiths in addition to Episcopalians from Good Shepherd, such as Catholic performers from Church of the Nativity in Burke.

Brian Walsh of Burke performed with the Players as a teenager, over a decade ago. He was in “Into the Woods” at Lake Braddock Secondary School and appreciates the opportunity shows with the Players give many students who compete for fiercely contested roles in school productions.

“It’s a chance to give those kids who might not have had a chance otherwise to be onstage, to have a part,” he said. As the church’s youth minister, Walsh gets to see the impact of students’ participation firsthand. “It’s really special for them, for the families.”

Walsh now has a head role in “Oklahoma!” as Curley McLain,

Burke residents Tricia Tyrell as “Ado Annie” and Jim Mroz as “Will Parker” rehearse for the Good Shepherd Players production of “Oklahoma!”

the love-struck cowboy trying to win the heart of farmer’s daughter Laurey Williams, set against the historic backdrop of 1906 Oklahoma Territory. The classic work of American theater canon first opened on Broadway in March 1943.

As an adult, Walsh has come full circle and enjoys performing across from people he’s known most of his life.

“You almost get to start a new relationship with a lot of people who you knew,” he said. “It’s being treated like an equal by people who knew me when I was eight years old. It’s like performing with my family.”

Fourth-year director Nancy Lavalley of Springfield said the familial dynamic is what makes Good Shepherd Players stand out from other theater companies.

“We form our own community and support each other through thick and thin,” she said, “through adversity, trouble. It’s family in a way I don’t think professional theater really is.”

With a cast of 40 performers whose experiences span professional musicians to people who’ve never set foot onstage before, Lavalley said having a helpful, communal culture is key to being successful.

“We all support and learn from each other, which makes for a really special production,” she said. “I think you’ll see that onstage. A lot of us been working together for a decade or more — you’ll see the joy we have of being together, doing this for the audience.”

West Springfield Gymnastics Earns State Berth

Spartans finish runner-up at regional meet.

BY JON ROETMAN
THE CONNECTION

West Springfield head coach Diana Edgell came to a pair of conclusions while observing during the 6A North region gymnastics meet.

- 1: The Spartans probably weren't going to win.
- 2: The Spartans performed well enough to compete with the best of the rest.

If Edgell was correct on both accounts, it would leave just one scenario in which West Springfield's season would continue beyond Saturday's regional meet: a second-place finish, which comes with a state berth.

A talented and deep Yorktown team would be announced as region champion. The Patriots produced a score of 146.05, nearly 2.5 points better than their closest competitor.

Moments before the winner was announced, however, Edgell's observations proved to be right on the money.

Members of the West Springfield gymnastics team celebrated on the gym floor at Patriot High School after it was announced the Spartans had finished second at regionals on Feb. 13. Nine days after winning the Conference 7 title — the program's first conference/district championship since 2007 — West Springfield produced a score of 143.575 at regionals and earned a spot at the state meet on Friday, Feb. 19 at Kellam High School in Virginia Beach.

"We didn't know. We had no idea where we would be," said Edgell, a 2003 West Springfield graduate and former cheerleader. "I was pretty sure we weren't going to win. After that, it was anyone's game. We really had no idea, so it was pretty exciting that we pulled it out. ... I thought we were doing well, and so I knew that if we did well, that we could have a chance. If we scored a little better, if we cleaned up some things on some different events that we did have a shot. I was pleased to see the improvements that we made."

Defending state champion McLean finished third with a score of 142.625, followed by Battlefield (141.25), Lake Braddock (139.625), Osbourn Park (139.625), Chantilly (133.525) and Oakton (130.225).

West Springfield sophomore Abbie Levine produced an all-around score of 37 and qualified for states with a third-place finish.

"She actually didn't have that great of a meet for her, so I was thrilled that she was able to qualify and will hopefully have a better meet at states, redeem some of the mishaps she had today," Edgell said. "She's just great. She's fearless and determined and always positive. She never gets down on herself. She always believes in herself and that's what I expect from her and she delivers."

Levine finished second on floor (9.525), placed fourth on vault (9.45), tied for sixth on bars (8.875) and finished ninth on beam (9.15).

"I feel very proud of myself," Levine wrote in an email, "and it makes me excited to know that there was room for improvement because I fell on two events."

Spartan freshman Hannah Dotson tied for sixth in all-around with a score of 36.55. She qualified for states as an individual on bars, placing second with a score of 9.5.

"Hannah Dotson was awesome," Edgell said. "She's a freshman and has no high school competitive experience. The fact that she can come in and can qualify individually on [bars] is just awesome. I'm super proud of her."

West Springfield freshman Alex Marsden qualified for states on beam, tying for sixth with a score of 9.35.

Abby Stout also competed for West Springfield.

"I'm so proud of them," Edgell said. "They lived up to every potential that they had and I couldn't be more thrilled for the girls because they've really worked so hard to get it."

After Friday's team competition, the individual state meet will be held Saturday, Feb. 20 at Kellam High School.

"I was on the team last year as well as this year and I can definitely see huge improvements," Levine wrote. "Not only because we added more people but because our team is more bonded and we're working together better. Personally, I've noticed that I am more motivated to do well this year. I'm having more fun with this sport that I previously did not have."

What are Edgell's expectations for states?

"I want to go and have fun," she said. "Other than that, I don't know. I know there's going to be a lot of really amazing gymnastics, a lot of really talented gymnasts there, so I just want to go and have fun because it's incredible that we've made it this far."

Hayfield senior gymnast Molly Overstreet won the 6A North region bars championship on Feb. 13 at Patriot High School.

Hayfield's Overstreet Wins Region Bars Title

Molly Overstreet's decorated high school gymnastics career will conclude with a fourth trip to the state meet.

The Hayfield senior and two-time state champion qualified for states in two events during the 6A North region gymnastics meet on Feb. 13 at Patriot High School. Overstreet repeated as region bars champion and tied for third on floor.

The top eight finishers in each event qualify for states.

Overstreet received a score of 9.8 bars and 9.5 on floor.

"I feel like my routine on bars was good and I'm very happy to have finished first," Overstreet wrote in an email. "... I was very happy with my floor. It was the first time I competed my one-and-a-half twist this season, so I was a little nervous about it."

Overstreet tied for sixth in the all-around (36.55). She tied for 20th on beam (8.7) and tied for 29th on vault (8.55).

Overstreet's performance at regionals came eight days after she won the Conference 6 all-around championship with a score of 37.875 — her first conference all-around title.

As a sophomore, Overstreet won the state bars championship with a VHSL record score of 9.925. As a freshman, she won a share of the state vault title with a 9.8.

The individual state championship meet is scheduled for Saturday, Feb. 20 at Kellam High School in Virginia Beach.

"For states I'm just trying to clean up my bar routine, mostly just my form throughout," Overstreet wrote. "... My goals for states are to just hit my routines and make them clean."

Loudoun Freedom Tryouts

The Loudoun Freedom is a competitive basketball organization for girls only. It provides players the opportunity to develop advanced basketball skills and knowledge, and to play in a very competitive environment. The Freedom emphasizes player development starting in third grade and continuing through high school. Open tryouts will be held for grades 3-8 on Sunday, Feb. 21 at Harmony Middle School.

Teams are formed at all playing levels to include an ELITE team at the eighth-grade level. Please visit www.LoudounFreedom.com for specific tryout times/locations. Pre-registration is highly encouraged.

Potomac Field Hockey Registration

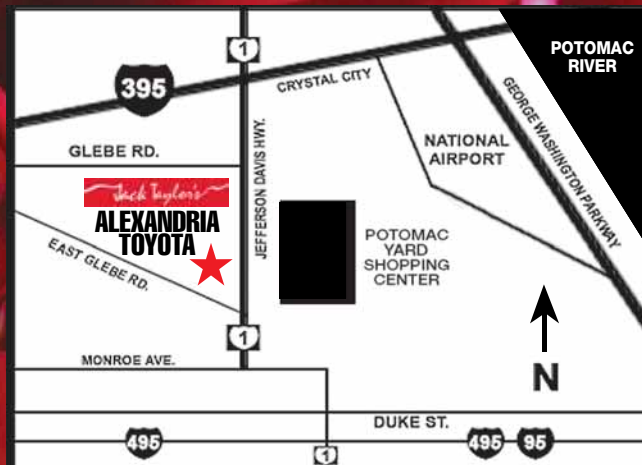

Registration is now open for Potomac Field Hockey's spring FUNdamental program for Pre-K through second grade and Youth Rec league program for grades 3-8. No experience necessary. Once-weekly team practices with games on Saturdays. Technical skills sessions included. Season begins March 28 and runs through June 4. For more information or to register, visit www.potomacfieldhockey.org or email info@potomacfieldhockey.org.

Community: 'Invest in Kids'

County Council of PTAs; Shirley Ginwright, president of the Fairfax County NAACP; and Garza.

Several members of the Fairfax County School Board were in attendance, as well as Supervisor Cathy Hudgins (D-Hunter Mill) and Board of Supervisors Chairman Sharon Bulova.

Bulova, whose introduction was met with lively cheering, attempted to reassure the audience that the budget process is just beginning, and requires public input and communication.

"We're hearing that communication here tonight," Bulova said. "Education is our number one priority, but we have to look at the budget holistically."

Bulova echoed the earlier remarks from Ginwright that "education from the top makes us sure to have an educated community" and added that this is just "the beginning of the budget process, we have to strike the right balance and make sure our children have what they need to succeed."

McLean High School senior Emily Robinson, who took credit for creating the viral hashtag #SaveFCPS, agreed that "fully funding public schools shouldn't just be a requirement of governing bodies, it should be the foremost priority."

"I fear for the students who will be in Fairfax County after me," she said.

Sarah Mattingly was School Board member Sandy Evans' (Mason District) appointee to the superintendent's budget task force that met to run the numbers for possible cuts prior to the formation of the school system's next budget.

She explained to the audience that despite the fact she and her husband don't even have children in Fairfax County Public Schools, "nothing is more important for us to do as taxpayers, property owners, or residents, than help children."

"I'm not here for my property values," Mattingly continued, "they'll be just fine on their own. Today was disappointing, but it's not over."
