Award-winner Sun Design Remodeling created a kitchen solution for a Clifton home that eliminated a bearing wall between the kitchen and the family room. The makeover was named the Washington-area's "Best kitchen for over $150K" (Merit) in the recently concluded Contractor of the Year (COTY) awards. The kitchen will be open to the public April 9, noon-4 p.m.

The island is positioned for easy service to the new breakfast table, but also works as a dining counter. The base itself is equipped with an antique copper farm sink, a microwave and a dishwasher.

Tops-in-category "COTY" winner opens for tour April 9.

An expansive Clifton kitchen recently named the Washington area's "Best for over $150,000" will be opened to the public Saturday April 9 from 12-4 p.m.

The makeover won a "Contractor of the Year" (COTY) merit award for Sun Design Remodeling. The COTY award, which judges metro-area home improvements by category and budget range, is conferred annually by the National Association of the Remodeling Industry's (NARI) metro D.C. chapter.

The winning kitchen solution is in the Clifton home of Tom and Mary Healy, 7521 Cannon Fort Drive.

The honor is particularly gratifying for Craig Durosco, Sun Design's founder and chairman: "This is a very competitive category. Kitchens are the most frequently renovated part of the house, and a real frontier for remodelers these days."

Durosco notes that there's an ongoing homeowner preference for open floor plans, uncluttered sight lines and interactive spaces, "yet a kitchen still must function as a place where meals are prepared and dirty dishes can accumulate."

"For those of us who are concerned with the aesthetics of the big picture, the burden is on us to design-in masterful efficiencies: work triangles, invisible routes for wiring and plumbing, custom storage that brings everything to your fingertips. In the end, it's all about perpetuating a beautiful illusion in an everyday working environment. Walls and surfaces must give the eye something to enjoy — so that there's a peaceful, festive atmosphere in all directions."

Visitors in search of remodeling ideas will also find a trip to the Healy home enlightening.

"This is really an exceptional transformation," says Roger Lataille, the design consultant who guided the 4,700-square-foot residence from a vague set of options to a crisply defined interior plan now on display.

"Our revisions and renovations really shows what you can do with an open floor plan in a larger home surrounded by beautiful views."

Looking back, the 22-foot-by-20-foot kitchen that homeowner Tom Healy had a hand in designing in 1997 certainly had its charms. Surrounded by a course of divided light windows on two sides, the breakfast room offered a glimpse of backyard landscaping. Morning light was usually available, if not as abundantly so. The pine-facing cabinets, while dark, exuded a kind of rustic American ambiance.

On the other hand, the cooktop island and dining counter didn't work well. There was a range oven on one side; stools and place settings on two opposite corners. With the children now away at school, this was layout that could be improved upon.

Ditto the L-shaped counter configuration separating the kitchen from the large family room. The family room was a "step down" — a sunken affair set off by an interior colonnade and a coffered ceiling. But sequestering the space only closed it off visually from the kitchen, a plan which no longer held much allure to the Heals as they looked ahead.

"What really made sense was stronger unity between a redesigned gourmet kitchen and the family room," Lataille said. "To do this, [we] needed to raise the family room floor eight inches to level with the kitchen, and delete an interior kitchen elevation, which was also a bearing wall."

To hold up the home's second floor, Sun Design employed an I-beam bolstered by three vertical supports which would be wrapped in wooden facings that match the existing colonnade. Installing a subfloor, in turn, raises the family room floor to level with the kitchen. With existing kitchen tile removed, both rooms have been re-floored in fine hickory stained to suit the Healy's aesthetic preferences.

The family room's former sunken floor was raised 8 inches to be level with the kitchen. Hickory flooring built on a subfloor now visually unifies the 800-square-foot space great room. The running windows frame a panoramic view of the pool and well-landscaped surroundings.

To augment natural light availability, the original slider was replaced with a divided light door bordered by sidelights and transom. "The light effects are pretty impressive throughout," Lataille said.

In all, the nearly 800-square-foot expanse from kitchen to family room opens up vigorous sight lines in all directions. From the cook's station behind the new granite-surfaced food preparation island one gazes forward into the living room with its blazing hearth, or outside to the lushly landscaped surroundings.

To better rationalize nearby amenities, Sun Design enlarged and reorganized the pantry, re-tiled the mudroom, powder room and laundry, and upgraded powder room fixtures and cabinet facings.

Better yet, the interior finish work scheme by Sun Design's Katie Coram is a study in soft textural contrasts. The corner gas-powered fireplace in the former breakfast zone is now set off by a stacked stone hearth; smaller format stones of the same type were used to build the backsplash behind the range oven.

The African granite food prep island surface, a rare strain known as Namibia, was cut to emphasize the natural veins that run through the middle of a slab. The slab was selected to complement the custom-designed base. The base itself is equipped with an antique copper farm sink, a microwave and a dishwasher.

The island parallels the gas-powered cooktop and convenient roll-out spice racks, warming drawers and wine cooler. The gracefully arching slope extending past the base is perfectly situated for service to a new breakfast table aligned for a direct view to pool and gardens.

New decision-making training meant to alter how police officers approach use of force.

BY TIM PETERSON
THE CONNECTION

Making decisions can be instinctual, from the gut. It can also be practical and informed, coming to the best judgement considering all variables. For police officers responding to calls where there might be a threat of violence to civilians and or themselves, their decision whether to use force and which type to neutralize the situation quickly must be a hybrid.

In Fairfax County, Police Chief Edwin C. Roessler, Jr. has begun implementing a policy change in use of force decision-making that mandates officers “use time as leverage” and attempt to slow their reaction to a situation in order to engage a supervisor and better consider the subjects with whom they’re dealing.

A recent example Roessler gave is the March 2 barricade incident where 19-year-old Sayed Robbie Javid of Alexandria came out of his home carrying what police said appeared to be pistol but was later found to be a starter revolver. After he initially refused commands to surrender, officers used “less-lethal force” including firing a 40mm rubber bullet and bean bag shotgun, as well as the K9 unit to apprehend him.

“Deployment of deadly force would’ve been legal three times in my opinion,” Roessler said at a media event held at the Fairfax County Criminal Justice Academy in Chantilly on March 29. But in this case, Roessler said officers successfully followed the new policy by calling in a supervisor, taking a deep breath, assessing the scene and slowing it down.

“Preserving the sanctity of human life” is the end goal, he said, which the officers accomplished.

ROESSLER said this “re-engineered” concept for critical use of force decision-making has been in development since he took charge of the department in July 2013. He sought input from the Washington, D.C.-based policy organization Police Executive Research Forum, visited Police Scotland and worked with the vendor Polis Solutions to craft a plan for the Fairfax County force.

In June, 2015, PERF executive director Chuck Wexler presented the organization’s 71 recommendations at a meeting of the Fairfax County Ad Hoc Police Practices Review Commission, including changing critical decision-making policy. Many of PERF’s suggestions were folded into the 142 recommendations the commission would eventually make to the Board of Supervisors. Those were broken down into categories including use of force, communications and mental health.

“This is a department that wanted to get better,” Wexler said at the March 29 meeting. “They embraced the ideas, which are not risk-free.”

One reporter asked whether the new model that calls for more factors to be considered before taking forceful action, as well as bringing in a supervising officer, creates a safety concern for officers who otherwise might have been more decisive in less time.

“That’s not the reality here,” Roessler answered, saying that officers were involved in customizing the training program and that care was taken to ensure the new policy wouldn’t be unsafe.

Lieutenant Matt Owens of the Sully District station said he and other officers have been coming into the new training with open minds and “don’t feel less safe at all.”

Supervisor and Public Safety Committee Chair John Cook (R-Braddock).

Board of Supervisors Chairman Sharon Bulova applauded the “drastic and impressive” development in mindset and thought process of how officers respond to critical situations. “I was very impressed at the speed at which we’ve been able to implement a culture change,” she said.

Supervisor and Public Safety Committee Chair John Cook (R-Braddock) said that while the training is making the role of the police officer more complicated — asking them to be social workers and sociologists, among others — he’s excited for the county to be on the “cutting edge” of 21st-century policing.

“In Fairfax County,” he said, “we strive to be the best.”

Media observed two training modules for officers that were supposed to reflect the policy change. One was a room with a projection on the wall showing a potential scene officers might encounter in the field, such as a suspicious man walking around a suburban neighborhood or a bar fight.

THE OFFICERS were able to essentially interact with pre-recorded video clips to work through each scenario and decide whether or which type of force would be necessary, be it pepper spray, baton, taser or firearm. Practicing communication, before using force, with subjects in context was a key part of the exercise.

Afterward an instructor would review the crucial factors that led to the use of force decision, asking the officers to justify their actions.

Lieutenant Owens called the virtual training “invaluable” for helping keep officers’

Chief of Police Edwin C. Roessler, Jr.

verbal compliance skills sharp. “It’s as close to real life as it gets.”

The second module involved officers entering the home of a man who was potentially an “emotionally disturbed person.” In the scenario, the man’s sister had called police reporting that her brother was suicidal. Upon entering the home, officers saw that the man was sitting on a couch with a large knife close by on an end table.

Officers then practiced moving the knife away and talking the man through his options for evaluation and treatment at the Merrifield health center (or Fairfax-Falls Church Community Services Board).

Instructor Master Police Officer Peter Davila said the exercise was an extension of Crisis Intervention Team training. The goal, he said, is to “mitigate any potential for force, focus on communication, de-escalation and talk to the individual as a human being.”

Eating Smart

Profile: Jean Janssen, force behind area's Smart Markets.

BY ALEXANDRA GREELEY
THE CONNECTION

Food shoppers should take their collective hats off to Jean Janssen. She is the motivating spirit behind the area's Smart Markets, a collection of farmers' markets that showcase locally grown and raised produce and meats, plus a few temptations, such as hand-made sausages, popcorn, and baked goods (as in divine French pastries).

But once you know that Janssen has been in the food world since childhood, you can understand why these privately run markets are such a smashing success. A native Virginian, Janssen grew up in a family that purchased most of its goods from local farmers or from her grandfather's large garden plot. Also her parents were great cooks, a basic food influence for a youngster.

As an adult, Janssen worked as a caterer in the metro area for 20 years, during which time she often purchased goods from the now-defunct farmers' market in Vienna's Nottoway Park. "When I decided to retire from catering," said Janssen, "the Nottoway market was needing a new market manager. It was a volunteer position, but it sounded like it would keep me involved in the food world." Not only did she take that position, she was later asked to open a new market for Fairfax County on Braddock Road at Wakefield Park, and she ended up managing both markets.

In 2008, however, Janssen decided that the local producers needed better showcasing to improve sales, and that hosting local farmers' markets could be a great community resource. So with the support and encouragement of vendors, she decided to open Smart Markets. "The first market was down street from our present Oakton market," she said, "and I was led there by Nottoway Park shopper who encouraged me to talk to someone at her church. After that, others have come to me and asked me to do a market."

As in any enterprise, there are ups and downs, and as Janssen has found not every location is a good fit, and in one instance, an office property was sold out from under them. "I must deal with that," she said, "because we are on the bottom of the totem pole," since a market sets up usually only once a week. But when an agency or community residents see that a Smart Market helps them, a business may step in and offer space.

Because she does not pay to advertise, word-of-mouth attracts vendors, who then approach Janssen about setting up their stall at one of her locations. Once they start and sell successfully, she urges them to attend more than one market to enhance visibility and sales. "Our vendors do well compared with others," she said, "and we work

Jean Janssen's Fettuccine with Mixed Vegetables

Serves 4 to 6 as a main course

This is my very favorite pasta sauce and it can easily be converted to a vegetarian dish with a few substitutions and/or omissions. You can vary the quantity of the individual vegetables as I have done here while adapting from a recipe in the September 1974 Gourmet. You can also adapt it to a winter recipe with good results using canned tomatoes. It's still a great vegetable medley to serve over pasta.

In a large sauté pan, cook two slices of bacon till nearly done but not crisp. Remove bacon, drain, and add 1/4 cup good olive oil to the pan. Add one small onion, two small carrots, two garlic cloves, two radishes, all finely minced, and 1 to 2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh basil. Simmer, covered, for 12 to 15 minutes. Add three cups thinly shredded cabbage, 1/2 pound each of diced zucchini and tomatoes, 2 small green peppers, seeded and diced, and 1/2 cup chicken or vegetable stock. Season with one teaspoon each of salt and pepper. Simmer for another 10 to 15 minutes.

Meanwhile, cook one pound of fresh spinach noodles or packaged fettuccine in a large pot of boiling water with 2 tablespoons salt till done. Drain the noodles and toss them with up to 6 tablespoons butter, 1/2 cup each of Parmesan cheese and the chopped bacon. You may also add some finely chopped prosciutto at this point. Add the vegetable mixture and serve with additional grated Parmesan.

with them to help them succeed." Janssen notes that her rules are strict, too, and insists that vendors must arrive early to set up, and must be the owners of the farm or other business to interact with customers.

And, not surprisingly, Janssen has found that fresh, seasonal fruits and vegetables are the biggest sellers. She has also concluded that farmers reap bigger profits from farmers' markets sales than from selling their goods to wholesale merchants. "Small farmers, to exist," she said, "must sell directly to consumers."

Suspicious Noises Reported in Area of March 11 Mason Neck Homicide

The Department of Public Safety and Communications received several calls of “suspicious noises” around the 6000 block of River Drive in Mason Neck, early in the morning on March 20, a Fairfax County Police release said.

The calls, reporting possible gunshots, came in about 1:25 a.m.

Patrol and K9 officers responded to the calls and searched the area, but found no suspects, police said. Major Crimes Division and Crime Scene Section detectives also responded, as they continue to investigate the March 11 homicide of Johan de Leede, 83.

De Leede was shot several times at a residence on the same block. Police found him inside the home but believe the fatal shots were fired from outside. He died after being transported to a local hospital, police said.

Police also said the week prior to the reports of suspicious noises, the “Dive Team” had been deployed in the area to search underwater for evidence.

Money to Treat Addiction, Mental Health Issues

Poor people without health insurance in Virginia are being unnecessarily tortured, in some cases to death, by a General Assembly that refuses to expand Medicaid. They deny healthcare to as many as 400,000 Virginians despite the fact that for the first three years, there would be no additional cost to the Commonwealth, and after that Feds would pay at least 90 percent of the cost.

A new report released on Monday by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services points to an area beyond preventative medicine and primary care. According to the report, in Virginia, 102,000 uninsured people with a mental illness or substance use disorder could qualify for coverage if Medicaid were expanded under the Affordable Care Act. The report estimates that more than a third of low income people in Virginia without health insurance have "behavioral health" needs.

As Virginia and the rest of the nation wrestles with huge growth in heroin and opioid addiction, expanding Medicaid would allow for expanding treatment programs. One of the big obstacles to helping people who are fighting addiction is the availability of treatment when it is most needed. People die as a result. In Northern Virginia, heroin-related deaths increased 164 percent between 2011 and 2013. In Fairfax County, in just one year – from 2013 to 2014 – the number of deaths from heroin overdose doubled. Virginia is one of 14 states identified in a recent Centers for Disease Control reports with significant increases in overdose deaths in the last few years. Nationally, heroin overdose death rates increased by 26 percent from 2013 to 2014 and have more than tripled since 2010, according to the CDC. A mind boggling statistic: In 2014, there were approximately one-and-a-half times more drug overdose deaths in the United States than deaths from motor vehicle crashes.

Turning away resources to treat this eviscerating epidemic ensures that some people who need treatment but cannot access it will die. Turning away this money makes no more sense than sending back federal funding for building rail to Dulles.

Depression and other mental health disorders result in significant economic cost as well. This week's HHS report estimates that if Virginia expanded Medicaid, 16,000 fewer individuals would experience symptoms of depression, which would make them far more likely to be able to work.

Under the Affordable Care Act, states have the opportunity to expand Medicaid coverage to individuals with family incomes at or below 138 percent of the federal poverty level.

Progress on Ad Hoc Commission Recommendations

Thoughtfulness and deliberation should not be construed as resistance or foot dragging.

BY SHARON BULOVA
CHAIRMAN, FAIRFAX COUNTY BOARD OF

Fairfax County is fortunate to be the safest jurisdiction of its size in the country. This is the result of many factors including a superior public safety system. Our first responders – police, fire and EMS – enter harm's way every day in order to keep this county safe. For that, we as public officials owe them gratitude and respect.

Fairfax County is committed to finding ways to enhance and improve how we serve our community, especially when it comes to building public trust between our residents and our public safety family. I created the Ad Hoc Police Practices Review Commission just over a year ago in order to enhance the public trust. The commission met for seven months and adopted a slate of recommendations in mid-October. A tremendous amount of progress has already taken place to implement many of these recommendations.

As was covered by this paper (www.ConnectionNewspapers.com) all sworn patrol officers have completed the classroom portion of the training for a new critical decision-making process for the Fairfax County Police Department, and the scenario-based practical portion is underway. It emphasizes de-escalation and sanctity of all human life, two key underlying aspects of the Ad Hoc Commission's recommendations. The training includes seven core principles: be balanced; be real; control yourself to control others; be smooth; be empathetic; create lasting positive effects; never humiliate. Chief Roessler has made annual training in this process a priority.

The Police Executive Research Forum (PERF) has asked FCPD to help design a national syllabus based on the FCPD's efforts.

The Chief of Police has reorganized the Police Department's Public Information Office which is now called the Public Affairs Bureau (PAB). The PAB will increase transparency through more robust communications to the community, and the department is in the process of hiring a civilian director of the PAB.

A tremendous amount of progress has been made (and shared with the public) on implementing recommendations related to mental health. For more information on the establishment of Diversion First, including the establishment of the Merrifield Crisis Response Center you can go to <http://www.fairfaxcounty.gov/diversionfirst/>. The ongoing implementation of Diversion First covers numerous Ad Hoc Commission recommendations. Fairfax County's Advertised Budget for FY2017 includes $7.5 million for the mental health diversion program Diversion First and for a number of recommendations made by PERF and the commission.

During the months ahead our board will continue work toward the implementation of additional commission recommendations, specifically, the establishment of an Office of Independent Police Auditor, as well as an Independent Civilian Review Board. Anyone interested in following the board's progress is welcome to attend our Public Safety Committee meetings.

This is a committee of the whole — all Board of Supervisors are the members. Meetings are held at the Government Center in Rooms 9/10 and are open to the public. The next meeting will be held on May 10 and will focus on the use of force and communications recommendations. Representatives from PERF will be present. The PERF Use of Force report can be found on the county website (<http://www.fairfaxcounty.gov/policecommission/materials/fairfax-county-police-dept-final-report-june19.pdf>). The PERF report on communications will be completed and distributed by mid-April, prior to the Public Safety Committee meeting. The next meeting of the Public Safety Committee meeting will be on July 19 at 1 p.m. and will focus on the civilian oversight recommendations.

I am proud of the work that has been done since the Ad Hoc Commission delivered its report to the Board of Supervisors in October. Important culture changes are being made that require a thoughtful and deliberate approach; thoughtfulness and deliberation should not be construed as resistance or foot dragging. Our board and our Police Department are fully committed to changes and enhancements that I believe will result in Fairfax County becoming a model for enlightened and effective community policing.

Honoring Col. Bidgood

Comstock comes to Huntsman Square Starbucks in Springfield to present honor to veteran's widow.

Remembered for his wit, sense of humor and service to country, the late Colonel Fred Bidgood's family accepted a Congressional Record from U.S Rep Barbara Comstock (R-10) on Mar. 24.

Comstock presented the recognition to Bidgood's wife, Marilyn Bidgood, at a Starbucks in Springfield. Comstock also participated in a behind-the-bar-event, where she served coffee and chatted with constituents.

"...A neighbor in the community who recently was widowed, her husband was a decorated veteran, so we had submitted a statement honoring him in a Congressional Record. We thought we'd take this opportunity, while we were in the community, so all of the neighbors could come together and make it easy for them to be here," Comstock said.

Though he died in 2015, friends and family attended the event to honor Bidgood. The Bidgoods were married for 55 years.

"Oftentimes we recognize service members after they're not with us anymore so I think it continues to keep [Bidgood's] memory alive and continues to acknowledge the hard work that our service members do, even if they're not here with us," District

Friends, family and supporters gathered around Marilyn Bidgood and Congresswoman Comstock, after Bidgood accepted the Congressional Record.

District Manager Amy Pappas and U.S. Rep. Barbara Comstock (R-10) were guided through a coffee taste test by a barista at Huntsman Square Starbucks in Springfield.

Manager Amy Pappas said. In addition to allowing community residents to interact with Comstock, the event supported Starbucks' national effort to support military families and veterans.

"The goal is to help bring the Congresswoman closer to constituents in the area, as well as really to help promote and support Starbucks' veteran and military spouse hiring initiative. Starbucks is committed hiring veterans and military spouses, as well as really supporting the military community anyway we can, so we're glad to have her," Pappas, who is also a military spouse, said.

To many who helped host the event, this national effort is personal because stepping out of military uniform can be a difficult adjustment. Herrick Ross, military talent recruiter for Starbucks, served in the Marine Corps for 22

"So for a veteran that's transitioning like me, I was looking for a company which has proven their loyalty, a company that definitely wants to do something good and not just be about profit," Ross said. "So that spoke to me, that helped ease my worry a little bit, and they gave me this opportunity to help reach back and help my brethren service members transition well as well, so that definitely helped me grow more in comfort and confidence."

The event not only gave Comstock an opportunity to speak with constituents and support military families, but also reminded her of her first job.

"My first job was at a movie theatre doing popcorn and soda, so this was a little harder," Comstock said after learning how to make Cafe Mocha.

Girl Scout Shows Other Teens How to Fix Stress

Stress management workshop to be held Saturday, April 2, in the Fairfax United Methodist Church.

BY MARTI MOORE
THE CONNECTION

It doesn't matter what Molly McCracken's personal issues were last year. The 17-year-old Fairfax High School junior felt frustrated and sluggish. She needed to shake it off but didn't know how.

"I was overwhelmed with family issues and school work," she explained. McCracken knew there was a simple fix but didn't get the results she needed after asking teachers, friends and counselors for help.

Her mother took her in May to a Fairfax County Public Schools symposium on teen stress. However, the teen noticed more adults — teachers, counselors and parents — than her peers attended the conference filled with 82 work sessions.

McCracken was convinced her solution was as simple as reaching into a mental health toolbox to grab the right gadget to fix her problem.

She set a personal goal to empower teens between seventh and 12th grades with methods to relieve stress at a shorter program tailored to their needs. This multitasker also is using this initiative to earn her Girl Scout Gold Award.

HER STRESS MANAGEMENT WORKSHOP — held Saturday, April 2, in the Fairfax United Methodist Church at 10300 Stratford Ave. — will teach participants practical stress management skills from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

School counselors will define teen stress for participants and offer useful solutions for coping. Diane Tuininga is a guest speaker and school psychologist who teaches at Northern Virginia Community College. She knows high school "is a tough time for teenagers and their parents to manage."

The talk is followed by a traditional yoga session that teaches students "how to focus on their breathing to reduce stress" says Fairfax resident Anna Kim, certified yoga instructor.

Teens are offered quick and easy workshops at five activity stations that appeal to the sense of taste, touch, smell, hearing and sight. Each stress management tool takes up to 15 minutes to learn.

"The centers are kind of laid back," McCracken insists. She doesn't want her guests to worry about completing a checklist and set up the environment so individuals can spend more time at the work stations they find most interesting.

Teens can pick and choose from healthy options at a salad bar — followed by Girl

Molly McCracken holds a meeting March 16 with her adult volunteers to discuss everyone's readiness status for their stress management seminar for teens April 2 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Fairfax United Methodist Church at 10300 Stratford Ave., where teens will learn healthy ways to cope with anxiety at "Breathe Out!"

An aromatherapy specialist will demonstrate the soothing effects of scented oils extracted from plants, such as lavender.

Laughter yoga is a funny exercise designed to relieve stress. Kim will lead pupils through a series of comical role-play activities that are serious about elevating mood.

Comfortable clothing is recommended for teens willing to improve their attitude through a good belly laugh.

Tuininga feels some examples of teen stress may create a formula for a mental health crisis: divorce, death of a loved one, moving to a new home, illness, peer pressure plus school assignments compounded by parental expectations for college success.

Furthermore, technology has helped us become more connected to the world at breakneck speed from the palm of our hands. Smartphones show us news of the latest school shooting before we get home and turn on the television. Tuininga feels instant access to information increases teen stress and adds cyber bullying is a big thing now.

"They are so connected every minute," she admits, "and so anxious."

"I feel like people are the first to know everything in social media," McCracken said. Tuininga appreciates the teen's idea to call this April 2 stress management event "Breathe Out!"

"Waiting to exhale is what we do to alleviate stress," Tuininga explains.

Mechanics is the driving force behind McCracken's idea of a mental health toolbox for her peers.

McCracken submitted a proposal last summer for approval then reached out to the community. She garnered support from the Woman's Club of Fairfax and the Josh Anderson Foundation, a teen suicide prevention program in Vienna.

THE TEEN scouted for project funding and spent two weeks applying for a local grant. McCracken was awarded $385.50 last fall from the Fairfax-Falls Church Community Services Board.

"There is so much to think about for a teen for just one event," said Mary Driver-Downs of Fairfax — McCracken's Gold Award advisor. Her Girl Scout assembled a crack team of nearly 10 adults assigned various tasks from web design to washing dishes.

"I think it is a good opportunity for our church to participate in meeting some of the needs of our students and teens," says FUMC lead pastor David J. Bonney.

Although he wasn't a preacher's kid himself, Bonney understands the social pressures faced by his own four children. The pastor — who earned his master of divinity degree from Duke University — claims it's demanding on children to have parents who work a lot, are gone often and have to please a lot of people.

McCracken admits learning a lot through planning this event. It has transformed her stress into her message to help other teens. Breathe Out! attendance is free and registration is required online at breatheoutnow.wix.com/goldaward.

"Walk-ins are welcome" McCracken says as long as their parents sign a waiver. "I don't want to have to turn a kid away."

Fairview Teachers Get New Lounge

Over spring break, volunteers from Home Depot's Fairfax Store (#4601), Kohl's in Burke, and a handful of volunteers from Fairview Elementary School came together and made big changes to the Teacher's Lounge at the school. Before the dramatic makeover, there was nothing inviting or special about the nearly 400-square-foot room. That all changed on Monday, March 28 when the teachers first saw their new lounge. The reveal was a complete surprise.

"Although extremely rewarding, the work that teachers do every day is very demanding and the limited time they have to relax and eat their lunch is highly valued," said Lynn Mayer, Principal of Fairview. "It is hard to imagine how much it will mean to our staff to have this beautifully designed space within our school to relax, dine and converse with colleagues. The positive difference extends beyond our teachers and impacts our students."

Fairview's teacher's lounge before and after the renovation.

In November of last year, Anna Sherman and Heather Morrison, co-chairs of the Teacher Appreciation Committee, approached another parent, Erin Herbig, to help with fundraising for the project. At that time, the plan was to simply repaint the lounge and put in a reading nook. That all changed in February, when Home Depot awarded Fairview with a grant to improve the space. Simultaneously, Leonie, a business in Arlington contacted Herbig to donate furniture for the project. At that point, the three parent-volunteers started on a wishlist of items to make the room spectacular.

Clandestinely working with administrative assistant, Lisa Knox, the trio got to work selecting a new look and feel, finding new furniture and décor, and determining priorities. The outdated room got new cabinets, including a new countertop, sink, backsplash, appliances and a new coat of paint. Donated items completed the nook, and new lunch tables, chairs and carpet were purchased. Fairview parent and photographer, Heather Rafii of Heather Leigh Photography, donated the artwork that rounded out the beautiful new lounge. Leonie also donated countless bookcases, chairs and tables for use in classrooms and around the school.

Mayer added about the huge undertaking, "We are truly grateful to the parents who worked tirelessly to make all this happen, to Home Depot for providing much of the materials and to the employees from Home Depot and Kohl's who volunteered their time to this project."

Woodson Girls' Lax Dominates Lake Braddock in Second Half

BY JON ROETMAN
THE CONNECTION

“Lackadaisical” is the term junior midfielder Emma Vinall and head coach Bill Lewis used when describing the Woodson girls’ lacrosse team’s first-half performance against Lake Braddock on Tuesday.

“Dominant” would be an accurate way to describe the Cavaliers’ second-half effort.

After taking a 5-3 lead into halftime, Woodson came out firing in the second half and blew out the Bruins 18-4 at Lake Braddock Secondary School.

Woodson sophomore attack Logan Dougherty scored all six of her goals in the second half, Vinall finished with four and the Cavaliers improved to 3-1 overall and 2-0 in Conference 7.

“I think we started out pretty rough,” said Vinall, who is committed to American University. “We came in kind of lackadaisical but I think we realized we were the better team and picked it up by the end.”

Woodson built an early 5-1 lead but failed to score for the final 11 minutes, 21 seconds of the opening half. Lake Braddock goals by senior Dwyer Neal and junior Madison Lear cut the Cavalier lead to two entering halftime.

The second half was a different story, however, as Woodson scored 11 straight goals before Lake Braddock junior Bailey Edwards found the back of the net with 3:15 remaining, breaking a Bruins scoreless streak of roughly 29 minutes.

“I felt like we decided that we needed to start actually playing and not underestimate our opponents,” Dougherty said. “Once we started scoring it just kept going. They couldn’t really catch up after.”

Dougherty had a huge second half, scoring six goals, including three in the first six minutes.

“The engine that could,” is how Lewis described Dougherty. “[She] keeps on doing all the little things — working hard, wanting to get better, always wanting to improve. Practice is over and she’s out there working on free position shots to make sure it’s better.”

Vinall scored twice in each half. Her fourth goal came from free position with 14:44 remaining and gave the Cavaliers a 12-3 advantage.

Vinall is a “great leader,” Lewis said. “We follow her lead. She [was] dominant on draws again.”

Sophomore attack Natalie Gates and junior defender Claire Cooke each had two goals for Woodson. Junior attack Meghan Byrnes, junior midfielder Meredith Mackay, senior attack Grace Stephan and senior attack Emily Williams each had one.

Neal scored two goals for Lake Braddock. Lear and Edwards each had one.

Lewis is in his first season as Woodson head coach. He coached the Hayfield boys’ team last year, but has several years of experience coaching girls’ lacrosse at the club level.

Lewis takes over a program that has won seven consecutive district/conference championships.

“I’ve taken over a tough program,” he said.

Woodson will host West Potomac at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, April 1 in a rematch of last season’s Conference 7 tournament championship game.

Tuesday’s loss dropped Lake Braddock’s record to 4-1 overall and 1-1 in the conference. The Bruins will travel to face Mount Vernon at 7:30 p.m. on Friday.

“It was good competition,” Lake Braddock head coach Deb Maginnis said. “It was good for our girls. It was a fast-paced game; [Woodson] moved the ball well, so we’ve just got to get better.”

— Woodson sophomore Logan Dougherty
