Fairfax County Police Receive National Accreditation

Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies recognized compliance with 484 standards.

BY TIM PETERSON
THE CONNECTION

In a hearing in Baltimore's inner harbor on Saturday, July 30, the Fairfax County Police Department received a formal recognition of its national accreditation from the Gainesville, Virginia-based Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies, CALEA.

"It means we're meeting the best practices in law enforcement, to put it pretty simply," said Camie King, a civilian who's worked as a crime and intelligence analyst for FCPD for more than a decade, but most recently King is serving as the

King's job since FCPD entered into a self-assessment arrangement with CALEA in October 2014 has been to review the county's police force policies up against the 484 standards set forth by CALEA based on best practices in law enforcement around the globe.

The standards fall into the categories of: Public safety agency capabilities to maintain law and order; Agency effectiveness and efficiency in the delivery of public safety services; Cooperation and coordination with other public safety agencies, and with other agencies in the criminal justice system, and Citizen and employee confidence in the goals, objectives, policies, and practices of the agency.

When there were gaps, such as not having installed cameras in police cars, King was responsible for managing the process to shore up policy and practice, and then proving FCPD's compliance with the standard in a report. Camera's were phased into most cars between 2013 and 2014.

In April earlier this year, several representatives from CALEA visited Fairfax County for four days for an on-site assessment. Baltimore's announcement, at a CALEA conference, was the culmination of that review: All the standards were met or exceeded by FCPD in practice.

"We've had an outside perspective come in and review our policies and processes," King said. "That outside perspective has told us we are in line with the best practices with law enforcement worldwide."

"For us, we had excellent police to begin with," she continued, "it was just shoring up, having that room for improvement. We were really able to see a huge benefit for our agency."

King said CALEA's reviewers were particularly impressed with Chief Edwin Roessler's Diversity Council, military reintegration program and the hosting of the World Police and Fire Games in 2015. Each year, there will be a less formal electronic review of Fairfax County's maintenance to the standards by CALEA. They will send assessors onsite every four years, with the next visit coming in April 2020.

Every night, that's seven nights a week, Amanda Fox and her mother make rounds of the 169 houses in their community of Cardinal Estates in Springfield.

Fox is captain of the neighborhood watch. On National Night Out, however, she's walking around handing out glow-sticks while neighborhood children, parents and police officers watch "Zootopia" on a giant inflatable screen.

First responders from Fairfax County Police, Fire and Rescue, the Sheriff's Office, Virginia State Police and other first responders spent the night on Aug. 2 visiting special events being held in their communities.

The goal is to promote interaction, respect and trust between the various agencies and the people they're sworn to protect. And to remind and help educate community members to be more vigilant and aware of their surroundings.

"It's great to get the community actively involved, aware of crime," Fox said. "We have dog-walkers, runners, people out and about. If you see something, call it in."

Captain Gervais T. Reed is Commander of the West Springfield District Station for Fairfax County Police. He took over at the beginning of July, though he's been with the department for 26 years.

Speaking at another National Night Out gathering in the Crosspointe neighborhood of Fairfax Station, he said the special event is the department's "number one crime prevention effort."

"It's more eyes and ears out there," he said in an interview.

Reed called National Night Out a "tremendous opportunity for the community to come out and show strong ties."

"We get wonderful support in Fairfax," he continued. "We've always had a really good relationship, we've never taken that for granted. In some communities it's a challenge, but it's not here."

Gary Saturen, neighborhood watch coordinator for Crosspointe, is with the Community Emergency Response Team that put on the event in that neighborhood. It included demonstrations of first aid and CPR, and the Sheriff's office creating safety identification cards for children.

Saturen said he really likes the chance for people to interact with the public safety infrastructure.

"They're human beings like the rest of us," he said. "They support us, we support them, everyone's happier for it."

Supervisor Pat Herrity, R-Springfield, toured half a dozen different events with Captain Reed. He's been attending National Night Out events since he was elected in 2008. That community support "is part of what makes Fairfax County great," he said. "We learn what issues are happening, crime and otherwise, and remind people they have a supervisor," Herrity added. "We all get to hear what's important for them."

Police Investigating Two Deaths in Fairfax Fire as Murder-Suicide

Fairfax County Police have released the name of Roy Eugene Rumsey, 58, as one of the two dead bodies that were found during a house fire in Fairfax on July 27.

According to FCPD spokesman Don Gotthardt, it could be another ten days before the medical examiner's office identifies the second body, a young child.

There hasn't been any relationship established between the toddler and Rumsey, but police said the deaths are being investigated as a possible murder-suicide.

Gotthardt said detectives believe the incident to be domestic in nature, contained to the house and not a threat to public safety.

They're not looking for any outside perpetrators.

"If the child is who they think it is, then the child was supposed to be there at that time," Gotthardt said. "There are some ideas of who the child might be."

Talking with neighbors, Gotthardt said police heard no one believed a child existed at the residence. It appeared just Rumsey was living there.

Rumsey was the apparent owner of the home on the 12100 block of Fairfax Hunt Road, where firefighters responded to the fire around 11 a.m. on July 27.

Working with the Fairfax County Fire and Rescue Department, police said they believe Fairfax County Police have now released the name of Roy Eugene Rumsey, 58, as one of the two dead bodies that were found during a house fire in Fairfax on July 27.

the fire "was incendiary in nature."

According to Fire and Rescue spokesperson Ashley Hildebrandt, that means the fire was intentionally lit, but under circumstances where they know it shouldn't be lit.

That, as opposed to arson, which Hildebrandt said the National Fire Protection Association defines in its "Guide for Fire and Explosion Investigations" as "The crime of maliciously and intentionally, or recklessly, starting a fire or causing an explosion."

FCPD said they will continue to update on the case through their Twitter account @FairfaxPolice and blog www.fcpdnews.wordpress.com.

Police ask anyone with information about the incident to contact Crime Solvers electronically by visiting www.fairfaxcrimesolvers.org or text-a-tip by texting "TIP187" plus your message to CRIMES(274637) or by calling 1-866-411-TIPS(8477), or call Fairfax County Police at 703-691-2131.

New Policy Outlines Public's Rights to Record Police Activity

With the development and prevalence of increasingly portable technologies, people of all ages are capturing more and more moments on video, including law enforcement activity. On June 1, the police department issued a new departmental policy pertaining to anyone who might record police activity, whether it be something they see as a passerby or a direct interaction with an officer - according to FCPD Public Affairs Bureau.

The policy was proactively created and implemented to ensure the protection of everyone's First, Fourth, and Fourteenth Amendment rights. Additionally, it was developed using the US Department of Justice, Civil Rights Division, guidance letter in Christopher Sharp v. Baltimore City Police Department, et. al. and the Statement of Interest in Mannie Garcia v. Montgomery County, Maryland, et. al.

The FCPD General Order, 603.1, includes procedural guidance to officers who encounter individuals recording them while they are in performance of their public duty. You can review General Order 603.1 in its entirety here; however, to summarize a few key points:

- ❖ Anyone has the right to "observe, photograph, or record police activity in an area accessible to, or within view of the general public."

- ❖ Officers shall not inform or instruct anyone that recording police activity, if within their legal right, is prohibited nor shall officers otherwise obstruct the ongoing recording.

- ❖ The filming of such activity may not interfere with officers engaged in the public discharge of their duties, jeopardize their or others' safety, violate the law or incite others to violate the law.

- ❖ If officers feel the recording is interfering with the performance of their public duties or poses a safety hazard for the person recording or anyone at the scene, an officer may request or redirect that person to a safer location, while still respecting their right to film in the public domain.

- ❖ Should a person who is recording be found in violation of a criminal law (e.g., obstructing an investigation, disregarding an established crime scene perimeter), they may be subject to criminal charges.

- ❖ If a person who is filming police activity also capture evidence of a crime being committed, an officer is likely to request from the person filming that they voluntarily provide them a copy of it or allow the officer to temporarily take custody of the phone for evidentiary purposes. It is with rare exception that an officer may seize a recording device without consent from its owner; the policy provides specific instruction to officers.

It is FCPD's goal to provide Fairfax County residents and visitors with the highest level of police service and professionalism.

You can also view an episode of our local government channel 16 cable show, On the Beat, for a brief video summary of the new policy (see the second segment, which starts at minute 05:00): On the Beat, episode #24

Baggage Cart in Top Ten Artifacts Competition

The Fairfax Station Railroad Museum has entered a restored Southern Railway Baggage Cart in the prestigious Virginia Association of Museum's annual "Top Ten Artifacts" competition. Voting is done by the public. Voting begins on Aug. 1 and ends Aug. 31. The Baggage Cart is housed in a permanent display shed on the grounds of the Fairfax Station Railroad Museum at 11200 Fairfax Station Road in Fairfax Station. Information on the Museum and displays can be found at www.fairfax-station.org, www.facebook.com/FFXSRR, 703-425-9225. The Museum is open to the public every Sunday from 1-4 p.m. Vote at www.vatop10artifacts.org.

The Southern Railway Baggage Cart in care of the Fairfax Station Railroad Museum dates from the 1900s and represents the cultural heritage of small railroad depots found across the country during the peak of passenger rail services in the United States.

The baggage cart has been fully restored thanks to the community efforts of local Boy Scouts and is now housed in a permanent shed constructed by local volunteers.

OPINION

An Open Letter to Readers and More

Buy an ad in our annual Newcomers and Community Guide, please.

Has your organization been featured in the Connection Newspapers, or the Alexandria Gazette Packet or the Mount Vernon Gazette or the Centre View or the Potomac Almanac?

Have any of our papers taken note of your business when you and/or your employees pitch in to help the community? Or when you opened your doors or celebrated a milestone?

Are you an elected official whose messages are enhanced by coverage of issues in the Connection? Do you work for a part of local government that has asked for help getting the word out about a need or a new initiative or accomplishments?

I have a special favor to ask:

Buy an ad in our Newcomers and Community Guide. Please.

Show your support for our organization which continues to be here to support the forces of good in our communities.

Our annual Newcomers and Community Guide is a pullout section that will appear in the the Aug. 24, 2016 edition of all 15 Connection Newspapers, published by Local Media Connection. Deadline is Aug. 17.

We are creating a quality special issue, and we need your help. Whether you invest in a small ad in a single paper (super affordable), or a full page in all 15 of our papers (super value), we appreciate your help this month.

EDITORIAL

To put on my publisher's hat (and not my editor's hat) for a minute, if you have a marketing budget, and you value coverage of local newspapers (not just ours), why wouldn't you spend a portion of that budget (any portion) supporting that platform? There is a cautionary tale in the abrupt closure a year ago of the chain of local papers that served Montgomery and Prince George's counties in Maryland, as an extreme example.

But it's more than a charitable effort.

For the same reasons that organizations, businesses and campaigns know they want local newspaper coverage, newspaper advertising is an effective way to reach voters, residents, clients. The Connection reaches more than 200,000 readers, in print and online, including remarkable demographics. Our readers include local and national decision makers in the public and private sector.

According to an independent study during the last presidential campaign, cited by the National Newspaper Association: 86 percent of voters who cast ballots in the last election read newspapers in print or online; 79 percent of voters ages 18 to 34 read newspapers in print or online; 91 percent of voters who contribute to campaigns read newspapers in print or online.

The deadline for the Newcomers and Community Guide is Aug. 17. Digital enhancements and support are available. More information at email sales@connectionnewspapers.com or call 703-778-9431.

Share Tips about Community

We need help from our readers for our annual Newcomers and Community Guide.

We're hoping to share special places, activities, events, organizations and volunteer opportunities. What should someone new to your neighborhood know about? Events that should not be missed? Organizations that do a great job? Places to volunteer? Tips for navigating your PTA or your school's front office? A great place to see the sunset? We'd love to have your photos to go along with your suggestions.

What are your favorite parks? Favorite historic sites? What tips do you have for someone getting to know the community?

We will publish a selection of local tips along with a plethora of information useful to newcomers and long-time residents alike, including our award-winning Insiders Guide to the Parks, and information on how to vote and more.

See last year's community guides by going to www.connectionnewspapers.com/PDFs/ and scrolling down to Newcomers.

What We Did on V-J Day Vienna resident's memories of the end of the war.

BY MEREDITH LUHRS

Memories of WW II in an American child's mind are a distinct set of curiosities — special activities removed from the ordinary day to day routine of growing up. We accumulated aluminum from candy wrappers, tin foil, and wrapped it into heavy, grimy balls which were then collected "for the war." Every boy had one in his pocket. Our mothers gathered to roll bandages for the Red Cross, volunteering "for the war." Evenings at six, we stood back and kept silent for the ritual of the nightly news, when our parents huddled around the radio, listening to serious and somber voices, hearing the strange names of places in the world become familiar by much reporting. Much straining to hear and shushing of innocent prattle identified short wave broadcasts coming over the Atlantic from London. These memories were completely somber, and remain so. I must turn the page when I recall a completely different set of events which are simply identified as V-J Day.

We lived by a lake, and my father was determined that every child in the neighborhood should be able to swim. Riding in the truck bed was a normal, everyday event for us bigger children, as my father came home from work every day at five during the summer, loaded any and all into the truck, driving to a park which had a lake and sandy beach...an ideal place to learn to swim. He taught us — one by one — to swim, and to enjoy the water. He also taught us to pick wild blueberries! This detail will explain why we were so surprised to see him in the middle of a summer day, and why it was natural for neighborhood children join in our V-J Day adventure.

It was a hot humid day in August. We didn't know it was V-J Day. The story begins when my father came home at noon. We quit playing and stood in astonishment at this never before event, immobile seeing him and his truck in the middle of the day. Smiling, he went straight into the house. A few moments later my parents came out and announced the war was over. Japan had surrendered. How we cheered. We danced with excitement as a roll of red, white and blue bunting was pulled from the front seat, and my parents began to unfurl it, securing it to the lumber rack of the truck. There was no protocol for celebrating the end of a war, so what happened next was a thoroughly American invention: Make noise and let the joy be heard! Pot and pans, lids and wooden spoons were rounded up, and distributed to neighborhood kids and to my older brother and me as we climbed into the truck bed. My mother got into the cab with the baby on her lap, and my little sister climbed in between her mommy and daddy. Then we were off! But where were we going?

My father was a boat builder on the bay shore of New Jersey. The natural thing, in his mind, was to

Staying Fit and Healthy on Vacation

Advance planning is key to maintaining a healthy diet and fitness on the road.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

Listening to Christian Elliot describe part of a recent vacation that he took with his wife, Nina, you might think he was attending a fitness bootcamp.

"We woke up early, got in a jog and I did push-ups on a step, lunges on a dirt road," said Christian Elliot. "As long as you have gravity ... you can exercise."

While August vacations offer a chance to renew and rejuvenate, carving out time to exercise and creating opportunities for nutritious food are keys to maintaining a healthy lifestyle while on holiday.

"The biggest thing about eating healthy and exercising on vacation is planning ahead," said Elliot, a personal trainer and founder of TRUE Health and Wholeness in Arlington. "People plan their vacation in pretty good detail, but they fail to plan where and how they're going to work out."

Part of that planning includes bringing packable equipment and appropriate clothing for exercise. "Pack [resistance] bands for Nina and Christian Elliot plan ahead to incorporate a healthy diet and exercise into family vacations with their children Naomi, 8, Caleb, 6, Noah, 2, and Cohen, 7 months.

strengthening exercises, and a jump rope is a great way to get cardio. Those are lightweight and easy to pack," said Catie Bocker, NP-C, MSN, director of the Student Health Center at Marymount University in Arlington. "Whatever you do, keep it simple and fun. If we make it too complicated it might not work."

GETTING ACTIVE with family and friends is one way that

Bocker made exercise enjoyable during a recent vacation. "I led a bodyweight circuit for my family every morning when I was on a beach vacation recently," she said. "We were staying on the beach and we would wake up each morning and do a workout."

Part of the appeal of bodyweight exercises is that they can be done virtually anywhere and require no equipment. Bocker recommends 60-second exercise intervals with 15 seconds of rest between each set.

"I do an upper body exercise, a lower body exercise, sit ups and some type of cardio," she said. "For example, push ups, squats, jumping jacks and a sit up. There are fitness and workout apps out there that you can use if you feel intimidated by creating your own bodyweight circuit. If you write out a few exercises before you leave for vacation, you're far more likely to do it."

From swimming laps in a hotel pool to walking laps around an airport terminal while waiting for a flight, there are many ways to get creative with exercise.

"Hotels usually either have a gym ... and the concierge can tell you about nearby trails for hiking or walking," said Bocker.

In addition to planning to exercise while on vacation, packing a small, portable stash of fruit, vegetables or trail mix can quell hunger while sightseeing or waiting at the airport. "Stop by the grocery store and pick up healthier snacks," said Bocker. "Go-to foods for me are nuts or dried fruit.

They're great when going through security."

For those who, like the Elliots, will be traveling with children, child-friendly snacks are a must. "We have to manage their low blood sugar with quick energy hits," said Elliot. "Our kids love the grass-fed beef sticks or beef jerky."

"You can't deprive yourself and say 'I'm not going to have ice cream at all,'" said Janet Zalman, founder of the Zalman Nutrition Group. "You can say, 'I'm going to have ice cream one or two times, but I'm not going to eat the super-size, I'll have a kiddie size.'"

It's also a good idea to choose restaurants and peruse menus at your destination before leaving on vacation. "Research your options," said Bocker. "Like anything else you do, you have to plan and research it so that you can be an informed consumer."

Finally, if you decide to splurge on a favorite food, make it count. "When you go off the rails and eat high calories food, make sure it's fabulous," Zalman. "Most people cheat out of convenience, but if you're going to cheat, cheat high."

A healthy body starts with a healthy mouth!

At Peter K. Cocolis, Jr. and Associates, we believe optimum oral health is key to total body health and well-being. These days, going to the dentist is not just about taking good care of your teeth; it is about taking good care of your health. Problems in your mouth can be signs of trouble elsewhere in your body. Your oral exam reveals important early warning signs for many total-body conditions including diabetes, oral cancer and high blood pressure.

Whether your family seeks general preventive maintenance, cosmetic, or advanced restorative and implant dentistry to transform your smile's function and appearance, Drs. Cocolis and DaSilva are renowned by peers and patients alike for exceptional personalized care in a friendly, safe and state-of-the-art environment.

Consistently named "Top Dentist" in Northern Virginia magazine and among the "Best Dentists in the Metropolitan Area" in Challenged Brain, Healthy Brain?

Social engagement and mentally challenging jobs might keep Alzheimer's disease at bay.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

Most days of the week, Ana Nelson can be found educating others about Alzheimer's disease in her role as vice president of Programs and Services for the Alzheimer's Association National Capital Area Chapter. Her free time is spent touring historical sites in Northern Virginia and staying fit through competitive running and other activities. She's currently training for the Marine Corps Marathon.

"I have worked in the (Alzheimer's disease) field for 30 years and have always been a promoter of healthy lifestyles," said Nelson. "When you're sightseeing and asking questions, you're stimulating and challenging your mind. When I enter and train for races, I'm interacting with other people and staying socially engaged."

Nelson is incorporating into her life key elements that are credited with staving off age-related mental decline. In fact, jobs and activities that require complex thinking and social connections can help build resilience and delay age-related cognitive decline and dementia, according to a new study presented at the Alzheimer's Association International Conference (AAIC) 2016 last week.

The study suggested that working with people in challenging jobs such as Nelson's had the most protective effect on the brain.

"With the brain, like other parts of the body, you use it or lose it," said Dr. Dean Hartley, Ph.D., director of Science Initiatives for the Alzheimer's Association. "If you don't use it, it goes away."

Activities that require planning and processing information challenge the brain. "Sitting in front of the television is detrimental," said Hartley. "Being passive doesn't stimulate the brain."

In this study, researchers tried to answer questions about whether mentally challenging occupations and activities protected cognitive function against the impact of poor diet. Scientists studied 351 older adults who were living independently and adhering to a Western diet, which researchers said included red meat, potatoes, foods made with white flour and sugar.

Over a three-year period, the researchers found this type of diet to be associated with cognitive decline in older adults. However, individuals in the study diet who consumed a Western diet, but also had a mentally stimulating lifestyle, were protected from cognitive decline.

"Activities that required an engagement of executive functioning, like planning, volunteering or any task that get your mind thinking, those types of experiences are where we're seeing the best protection against cognitive decline," said Amy E. Coren, Ph.D., J.D., assistant professor of Psychology at Northern Virginia Community College in Alexandria. Coren was not involved with the study.

Not all types of social interaction have been shown to be equally beneficial to healthy brain functioning, notes developmental psychologist Dr. Linda Cote-Reilly, associate professor of Psychology at Marymount University in Arlington. "Older adults who have a lot of social interaction because they need assistance with activities of daily living do not experience these interactions as positive," she said. "People are helping them because they have lost the ability to do the tasks themselves and are dependent on other people."

However, Coren, Hartley and other researchers say that more research is needed.

"The study was done by a well-respected group of scientists, but we can't say that if you stay socially and mentally active you won't get this disease," said Pamela Greenwood, Ph.D., associate professor of Psychology at George Mason University. "There have only been a handful of these studies to date and the results have been inconsistent. For some, it doesn't have a big impact and for others it does."

Working Group to Consider Re-Naming JEB Stuart High School

Fairfax County School Board seeks additional community engagement on divisive issue.

BY TIM PETERSON
THE CONNECTION

Coming off its recent decision to postpone the implementation of new regulations for transgender students, the Fairfax County School Board has moved action on the possible re-naming of J.E.B. Stuart High School in Falls Church to a later date as well.

At its July 28 meeting, the last until school starts again, the board voted in favor of creating a working group that will “further consider community concerns” around re-naming the school.

The current namesake was a Confederate cavalry leader, which has sparked divisive controversy within the student body, alumni and community.

The issue was brought to the school board by a group of concerned students from Stuart who said it was shameful to attend a school named for a figure from the darker side of Virginia and the United States’ past.

Others say Stuart the man is not being given fair respect — that the context, the era, norms and beliefs in which he lived are not being taught at the school, much less considered in whether the name should change or remain the same.

THE SCHOOL BOARD has already done some outreach to gauge the community pulse, including a survey, for which board chair Sandy Evans said they received more than 500 responses.

Evans said they’ve looked back to School Board records from 1958, when Stuart was being named. She said not much rationale for the name was found.

“We can’t know what was in their hearts and minds,” Evans said on Thursday night at the meeting. But she said, the current board needs to be “reflective and responsive to all members of our diverse community.”

One motion and then a replacement were offered for the working group. A distinction in the alternative made clear that the working group would not ultimately decide a new name for the school, or even that one should be decided.

While it appeared the first motion presupposed that the working group result in a name change, it prompted Springfield District representative Elizabeth Schultz to comment that would be “the antithesis of what a democracy is.”

Per FCPS, the successful motion directs that, “The working group will weigh the pros and cons of a name change; continue to ensure public engagement and determine the extent of support for change; explore public-private partnerships to finance any name change; examine ways to prevent added burdens on the school’s booster clubs, PTSA, and Stuart school administration; decide the best method for transitioning from an old name to a new one; ensure proper record retention; and set the best timing for such a change, if approved by the Board.”

Vice chair Jane Strauss, center, speaks directly to the students from JEB Stuart High School who attended the School Board meeting July 28 in support of changing their school’s name.

The ad hoc working group will comprise students, parents, Stuart community members, alumni and business leaders chosen by the Superintendent and with the Board’s blessing, FCPS said.

Findings and recommendations from the working group will be due back to the School Board by March 2017.

Some have said the issue is divisive enough, creating the working group will just drive the wedge further.

“No one will walk away comfortable with what we decide tonight,” said At-Large member Ryan McElveen.

He said a difficult task before the board and community is “How to remember the past while honoring and respecting a diverse community.”

Shirley Ginwright is president of the Fairfax County NAACP, which has partnered with the Stuart student group for changing the school’s name.

AFTER THE DECISION by the board, she said the two groups have conducted and presented the board with extensive research, including that Stuart served for the Union army before he went to the Confederacy. “JEB Stuart was a traitor,” Ginwright said. “Is that who we honor?”

2012 Stuart graduate Nicholas Pisciotta was among alumni and opponents to changing the name who attended the meeting. Pisciotta said the name change has already and will continue to be a “distraction from the real needs of the school.”

Rather than put special effort into finding money that would be required to update school grounds, team uniforms, in the event of a name change, Pisciotta and others say that special effort could be better spent raising money for other uses around Stuart.

The board didn’t specify the size of the working group, nor when it will be created.

Charlie is my adorable, precious, little jogging partner. Every morning on a beautiful day, we go to Burke Lake Park which is only a few miles away from home and jog for at least two miles. Charlie, a two year old Pomeranian, loves running. He's a rock star. Everyone we meet at the park smiles and young and old alike love to pet him. He would also bark at dogs big and small along the way and let them know that he's the boss even though he may be half their size. Charlie and I are both February born, only two days apart.
