Nysmith Teams Win, Advance In Academic Competitions

A diverse group of Nysmith School for the Gifted students and teams has recently recorded a number of academic accomplishments. Here are the details having to do with each of the competitions:

❖ Nysmith's Science Bowl team won last weekend's Virginia State Championship to advance to the National Finals April 27-May 1 at the National 4-H Youth Conference Center outside Washington, D.C. Created and presented by the U.S. Department of Energy, the nationwide event tests students' knowledge in a range of science disciplines including biology, chemistry, Earth science, physics, energy and math. Coached by Maria-Theresa Dragg of Herndon, the team includes four eighth graders:

Captain Kaien Yang (from Chantilly), Aneesh Edara (McLean), Anuraag Kaashyap (Herndon) and Yuvy Sethi (Great Falls).

❖ Nysmith eighth grader Vance Kreider of Herndon participated in the "You Be The Chemist" (YBTC) local event held last weekend at Marymount University in Arlington and advanced to compete in the YBTC State Challenge on April 29 in Richmond. The competition encourages students in grades 5-8 to explore chemistry concepts and their real world applications. Alisha Luthra, a sixth grader from McLean, also represented Nysmith at the local contest.

❖ Several Nysmith debaters had impressive showings in this past weekend's March DC Urban Debate League (DCUDL) tournament. Two eighth graders—Alex Misiaszek of Ashburn and Vikram Bala from Great Falls—won the varsity level competition. Seventh graders Sarang Arun (Fairfax) and McKenzie Hiek (Great Falls) recorded a second place finish in that same division. The debate topic was "Resolved: The United States should no longer pressure Israel to work toward a two-state solution to the Mideast situation."

Alex Misiaszek, coach Maria-Theresa Dragg, and Vikram Bala.

The Herndon Police Department invited the public to sit down and have a cup of coffee with officers at the Virginia Kitchen restaurant on Elden Street on Monday morning, March 13.

A handful of people, including Herndon Councilmember Sheila Olem, took them up on their offer.

"I wanted an update about activities in the town," said Bill Davis, president of the Four Seasons Homeowners Association in the town of Herndon. "I followed up on some issues that I reported. Most of them had been taken care of, but they're still working on one of them."

He was glad the department held the event and hopes they do more.

This was the department's second "Coffee with a Cop" event. The first one was at Amphora's Diner Deluxe on Elden Street in March 2016.

"It's about meeting with the community," said Jane Ross, the department's spokesperson. "There's no agenda. It's just a chance for officers to sit with the community and talk about anything. People get to know the officers in a relaxed atmosphere."

Shannon Cannell came to eat breakfast at the restaurant without knowing the department was hosting the coffee hour.

"I was surprised to see the chief is a female," Cannell said. "That's awesome."

She walked her two youngest children — 4-month-old daughter Lila and 3-year-old son Reed — over to meet the officers.

Herndon Police Department Officer Devin Sullivan chats with Jake Geyer, 19, of the town of Herndon.

"It's good for the kids to know they're around and that they're friendly," she said.

Ross said the department hopes to grow the event and hopes more people come to banter at the next one.

"The more interaction, the better," she said.

The department is hosting its next public forum at the end of the month, where Chief Maggie DeBoard will address the department's deployment of body cameras.

"I expect positive reaction, but some concerns about how they'll be used, which makes sense," DeBoard said.

She wants people to know that the bodycams will be used responsibly.

All uniformed officers on patrol or interacting with the community will be required to wear them and will not be able to delete videos, according to DeBoard. There will also be an auditing process to ensure officers turn them on when they are supposed to do so, she said.

"I hope people turn out so we can take their input and show that we're going to have a consistent application," she said. "It's for our transparency and accountability and I want people to be comfortable that we're doing things well and responsibly."

DeBoard started seriously considering bodycams for her officers two years ago and decided that the department needed other video enhancements first.

Last summer, the department replaced its interview cameras at the police station and all its vehicle cameras. The body cameras were the final step in the department's video upgrade, according to DeBoard.

A bodycam pilot program was implemented at the end of last year, with the full roll out planned for next month, which is sooner than expected.

"The bodycams aren't expensive, but the storage of the video is," DeBoard said.

The Herndon Town Council approved $71,000 of new funding for the bodycams in its fiscal year 2017 mid-year budget on Feb. 14.

"We wanted to really take our time," DeBoard said.

DeBoard's bodycam forum will be on Thursday, March 30, at 7 p.m. at the Herndon Police Station.

Suraya Sadeed said hearing more than 20 stories of students promoting peace in and out of their schools made her believe “there is still hope for a brighter future.”

Sadeed is a native of Kabul, Afghanistan who made a new home in the United States in 1982, fleeing the aftermath of the Soviet invasion. She founded the non-government organization Help the Afghan Children and is author of “Forbidden Lessons in a Kabul Guesthouse.”

The former owner of a real estate company, Sadeed has risked dangerous situations to deliver humanitarian aid to women and children in war-torn Afghanistan. On Sunday, March 12, she addressed high school students from around Fairfax County being honored at the Student Peace Awards.

Sadeed spoke about the importance of promoting peace through education, as a preventative measure against bullying, hatred and violence later in life.

“The cost of providing peace education to 8 million children in Afghanistan is less,” she said, “than buying one military plane.”

The student peace awards are offered in all Fairfax County public high schools and some private schools. Schools choose their winners based on their work to promote peace as well as prevent causes of violence: poverty, discrimination and injustice.

Each of the individual or groups of students not only took action for peace, but did so with creative, entrepreneurial energy — founding clubs, organizing charity projects, leading training sessions or creating documentary films.

Fairfax County School Board chair Sandy Evans said she was deeply impressed with the work of the students being honored at the Stacy Sherwood Community Center in Fairfax, from anti-bullying to human trafficking awareness to anti-genocide.

“Few goals are more important in the world today,” Evans said, “than promoting peace, acceptance, kindness and tolerance.”

Evans was joined in congratulating the students by fellow board members Ryan McElveen (at-large) and Dalia Palchik (Providence).

Fairfax County Board of Supervisors vice chairman and Mason District representative Penny Gross (D) read a letter of recognition from board chairman Sharon Bulova that thanked the students for their commitment to peacemaking.

All the students have come together, Gross read from Bulova’s letter, “in one goal, strengthening peace and unity.”

Del. Kenneth Plum (D-36) joined the other elected officials in congratulating the award-winners.

The 2017 Student Peace Awards of Fairfax County winners are as follows, bios according to the event program:

Ethan Mirani, junior at the Cedar Lane School in Vienna

Mirani was a member of the school’s Anti-Bullying Committee for two years and worked to grow the group as well as plan activities and keep things organized.

Jasmine Howard, senior at Centreville High School

Howard organized members of the Centreville Key Club to sell 240 wristbands from Guatemala, made out of leather and pieces of coconut shell with colored string, raising $1,700 in sales and donations that went back to the wristband artisans and disadvantaged foreign youth.

Shaan Chudasama, senior at Chantilly High School

Chudasama co-founded and is vice president of Young at Art, a non-profit organization using art-related activities to improve the quality of life of seniors, less fortunate children and veterans. With his sister, the other co-founder, they’ve partnered with the Special Olympics and Sunrise Assisted Living.

Vanessas Mae Avendano, senior at Falls Church High School

Avendano is vice president of Falls Church’s Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender club and also founded Falls Church High School United, a group of clubs united to spread peace and acceptance. The group has produced a series of videos dealing with anti-bullying and giving respect.

Sabah Munshi, senior at Hayfield Secondary School

Munshi helped organize a project called Walking for Water and raised both awareness of the world’s water crisis and more than $2,000 for the Tap Project by UNICEF. She has also volunteered at Virginia Hospital Center in the renal unit.

Surabhi Khanal, senior at Herndon High School

Khanal has been a member of the Herndon Leo Club and founded MedLove, Inc, a non-profit organization with the mission of helping rescue women in the United States and abroad who are human trafficking victims. Through the Key Club, Khanal and other students also organized a benefit gala to raise awareness of local trafficking and $3,000 for combatting HIV and AIDS in her native Nepal.

Naba Khan and Shafia Tala, juniors at King Abdullah Academy in Herndon

Khan and Talat founded the organization Women of the World (WOW) to promote women’s rights and help women struggling with homelessness, hunger, oppression or abuse. Some of their projects include opening a sewing institute in Nalgona, India and fundraisers involving the whole student body.

James Hunstad, senior at Lake Braddock Secondary School

Hunstad set up a Special Olympics program at Lake Braddock, starting with a basketball team and adding track and field. She coaches both teams, and also helped the Rachel’s Challenge program find a presence at her school. Rachel’s Challenge deals with stomping out bullying and promoting tolerance and inclusion.

Donya Momenian and Chrissie Ivanova, seniors at Langley High School

The two seniors co-founded a chapter of the Girl Up Club at Langley, growing it from two to 30 members who meet bi-monthly. The national and international club empowers young women in education, fundraising, advocacy and service, as well as runs development programs in Guatemala, India, Liberia, Malawi, Uganda and Ethiopia.

Naomi Soquar, senior at Robert E. Lee High School

Soquar helped found a chapter of the Amnesty International Club at Lee — she currently serves as its president. She led club members and volunteers in writing letters against human rights violations, which in one case contributed to two political prisoners in the Democratic Republic of Congo being released. Soquar also serves with Girls Learn International, the Capital Area Food Bank and Habitat for Humanity.

Sean Doyle, senior at James Madison High School

A member of Madison’s Amnesty International Club Doyle is coordinating activism with others on such issues as abolishing the death penalty, reducing gun violence and police brutality, and convincing the Vienna Town Council to make Vienna a “I Welcome Refugees” town.

Aidan Kemp, senior at George C Marshall High School

Kemp is the lead senior mentor for the Marshall Freshman Transition program and does community service work through St. Thomas Episcopal Church in McLean.

Josh Leong and Sam Gollob, juniors at McLean High School

The two juniors created a 10-minute film documenting the struggles of Herman Wainggai, a human rights advocate from West Papua who escape political imprisonment by taking a boat to Australia. “Herman Wainggai: A Hidden Genocide” premiered at the Garifuna Indigenous Film Festival in Los Angeles in April, 2016.

Yosaph Boku, senior at Mount Vernon High School

Boku helped create a program that teaches disadvantaged youth and adults in his community computer skills. The senior also gives groups of counselors feedback, suggestions for encouraging more minority students to take advantage of advanced courses.

Roza Al Barznji, senior at Mountain View Alternative High School

Al Barznji came to the United States three years ago as a refugee from Northern Iraq, and works to help her classmates understand her Kurdish heritage using photography. She's also published seven stories about her own journey becoming a Kurdish American, the people of Syria and refugees in American communities, as well as made a documentary about American Thanksgiving traditions.

Members of Blossoming Beauties at Quander Road School

Young women in the Blossoming Beauties program work on both becoming more well-rounded and confident, as well as carrying out school and community projects together. In 2016, the group raised money for Bethany House shelter for female victims of domestic abuse; they've also also produced fleece blankets for New Hope Housing and their mission to end homelessness. In 2017, Blossoming Beauties is collaborating with A Space of Her Own to target and support fifth grade girls avoiding delinquency.

Narjes Bencheikh, senior at South County High School

The South County senior helped co-found a Muslim Student Association and International Club at her school. The 50-person Muslim Student Association carries out role-playing exercises and discusses issues encountered in the community.

Emily Lockwood, senior at South Lakes High School

Lockwood mentors freshmen transitioning to high school and coaches track for children with special needs. For a school assignment, she worked with the Institute of Peace in Washington, D.C., to find primary and secondary sources looking at improving state and societal relations in Myanmar (Burma).

Members of TJ Minds Matter, Thomas Jefferson High School for Science and Technology

The student-led group offers support for handling stress and disappointment, and provides resources for learning how to engage with someone in a crisis and non-crisis situation. TJ Minds Matter hosted a Mental Wellness Week in January this year, including days dedicated to random acts of kindness and stomping out stigma (surrounding mental illness).

Students with Combatting Intolerance at West Potomac High School

The Fairfax County class Combatting Intolerance was created in 2015 — West Potomac teacher Robert Kerr molds the curriculum around social justice topics, racism, sexism, welcoming immigrant and refugee students, and advocating for the rights of lesbian, gay, transgender and asexual students, staff and other people in the community. The 22-member class raises money to support small local non-profits and sponsored a school-wide Diversity Week.

Rodney Wrice, senior, and Audrey Wever, junior, West Springfield High School

Friends Wrice and Wever started a kindness campaign using candy bars and sticky notes to encourage positive messaging around the time of the 2016 Presidential election.

Stop Bullying Federal Workers

BY U.S. REP. DON BEYER (D-8) AND
U.S. REP. GERRY CONNOLLY (D-11)

Republicans hold control of all three branches of government, and therefore have a responsibility to lead the civil service that employs millions of Americans, and every American relies upon for myriad services. The overwhelming majority of federal workers are hardworking people who devote themselves to public service. They secure borders, keep food safe, advance scientific and medical research, deliver our mail, and provide care to many of us, including our veterans.

Republican leaders have repaid this service with repeated attacks.

In 2013, they shut down the government as a political stunt, and came hours away from doing it again in 2015 at the Department of Homeland Security. They enacted the Budget Control Act, which ultimately led to Sequestration, cutting the budget of every federal agency with the surgical precision of a meat-ax.

But since Republicans acquired total control over government, their treatment of federal workers has been beyond the pale.

On the first day of the new Congress, House Republicans passed a rules package over our loud objections containing a reinstatement of the Holman Rule, which would potentially allow Congress to engage in political retribution against federal workers by reducing any given employee's salary to $1. Only three Republicans opposed the measure on the floor, none from Virginia or Maryland.

The Holman Rule was especially troubling in light of the new administration's so-called "enemies list" of employees who had worked on specific policy areas for the Obama Administration, such as climate policy.

Beyer

As one of his first actions, President Trump announced a hiring freeze for federal workers. This is terrible policy and a mindless approach to management that dodges hard decisions.

The Government Accountability Office studied past hiring freezes and found them "not effective." The government is more likely to rely on overtime and contract work, which often costs taxpayers more. Meanwhile, tens of thousands of Americans have total uncertainty in their professional lives. Agencies are unable to make efficient, long term plans, driving up costs and hurting morale. Over time, Americans trying to manage social security benefits, travel in airports, or secure healthcare will see the impact of this freeze when benefits are not mailed or airport security lines move much more slowly.

Two other classes of citizen are hit particularly hard: people with disabilities and veterans.

In 2015, due to Obama Administration initiatives, 19 percent of the federal government's new hires were people with disabilities. The federal government has hired 109,000 people with disabilities in the past five years.

Veterans stand to be among those hardest hit by the hiring freeze. The Veterans Administration is one of the largest federal employers, but is also significantly understaffed. Delivering the care promised to those who served in the armed forces depends on having effective staff to deliver that care.

Over 30 percent of the civilian federal workforce is made up of veterans, a number which has grown consistently as agencies prioritized hiring vets. Many of the positions held vacant by the hiring freeze would have gone to vets, and the progress we have made on veteran unemployment will be halted.

Contrary to this administration's claims, the federal workforce is dwindling as a share of the population. And 85 percent of federal workers are located outside the beltway. It is also aging, and over a third of the current feds will be eligible for retirement by September. Federal workers have been treated as a piggy bank by Congress for years now, their pay raises delayed or denied, they've been furloughed and had their benefits cut. Now their morale is hit by politicians who make them a political punching bag. A bill just proposed in Congress would make all federal workers "at-will" employees, exposing them to political retribution and punishment by a hostile administration without recourse.

The federal workforce is not, as Mr. Trump has said, a "swamp." It is a group of committed Americans who serve us, and they deserve better from Congress. The Republican Party has total control over the levers of government. Will any of its leaders have the decency or the courage to fight for the civil service which serves us all?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Who Pays Taxes?

To the Editor:

It is tax time again and one's thoughts turn to the question of just who in America is paying the taxes that keep our country running. Who pays the expenses for the White House and the President as well as the security protection for him and his family here and on their worldwide trips? Who pays the salaries and benefits of our elected officials and their staffs? Who pays for our schools and libraries and for our roads and infrastructure? Who pays for police and fire protection? Who pays for government agencies and for our military and our veterans? Who pays for wars and walls and prisons? Who pays for public transportation? Who pays to help states when a natural disaster occurs? Who pays profitable businesses to move to our city, county or state or to stop them from leaving? The list goes on and on and on.

Big business tries to pay as little tax as possible with the help of loopholes or a move to another country or both. Rich people, with the help of tax laws, hire accountants and lawyers to help them pay as little tax as possible in this life and even when they're dead. Heck, even our President pays no taxes and is very proud of that fact.

So, who is left to pay? The people who can least afford it!

Free St. Patrick's Day Lyft Rides Offered in Area

Preparing to combat that time of year when, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), nearly one-third of all U.S. traffic deaths are caused by drunk drivers, free Lyft rides will be offered to would-be drunk drivers throughout the Washington-metropolitan area next Friday, March 17, 2017 (St. Patrick's Day).

Offered by the nonprofit Washington Regional Alcohol Program (WRAP), the 2017 St. Patty's Day SoberRide program will be in operation beginning at 4 p.m. on Friday, March 17 (St. Patrick's Day) and continue until 4 a.m. on Saturday, March 18 as a way to keep local roads safe from impaired drivers during this traditionally high-risk holiday.

During this 12-hour period, area residents celebrating with alcohol may download Lyft to their phones, then enter the code SOBERRIDE in the app's 'Promo' section to receive their no cost (up to $ 20) safe transportation home. The SoberRide code is valid for new and existing Lyft users.

Last year, 250 persons in the Washington-metropolitan area used WRAP's St. Patrick's Day SoberRide program rather than possibly driving home impaired. The charity also offers its SoberRide program on Cinco de Mayo, Independence Day, Halloween and the winter holidays this year starting on Dec. 15, 2017 and operating through and including New Year's Eve.

Lyft will provide SoberRide trips throughout the Washington-metropolitan area to local residents age 21 and older who otherwise may have attempted to drive home after drinking.

SoberRide is offered throughout Lyft's Washington, D.C. coverage area which includes all or parts of: the District of Columbia; the Maryland counties of Montgomery and Prince George's; and the Northern Virginia counties of Arlington, Fairfax, Loudoun and Prince William.

More information about WRAP's SoberRide initiative can be found at www.soberride.com.

Practice Makes Perfect

Local educators share strategies for getting children to practice music.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

When Linda Gulyan's son reached high school age and asked to quit his clarinet lessons, the Arlington mother of four declined his request.

"My son Timmy is an excellent clarinet player. The philosophy I've established in my house is that music is part of your overall education like science or math, so you can't just quit," said Gulyan, saxophonist, former music teacher and professor of psychology at Marymount University.

During the month of March, which is designated at Music in our Schools Month, educators highlight the benefits of quality music education programs. Part of a music education is practice, encouraging that in children can be daunting for some parents.

For children who play a musical instrument, regular practice is not only a path toward proficiency, it helps establish discipline that is useful in other areas of one life's. This habit, however, must be established purposefully says John Kilkenny, assistant professor of music at George Mason University. "Treat practice time like a part of child's daily routine," he said. "They have to have a consistent time for practice. For example, they come home from school each day, have a snack and practice for 30 minutes."

One key to keeping children motivated to practice is setting goals, be they long-term or for the current practice session. "Goal-oriented practice for younger kids, like a recital to work toward, for example is a good motivator," said Kilkenny. "The biggest thing is consistency, practicing at or near the same time every day just like everything else they do so that it becomes part of their routine."

Adding a light-hearted element to practice, which can be seen by some children as laborious, also encourages students to practice. "There should be some sense that playing the instrument is supposed to be fun and students should ... have some flexibility beyond a rigid experiences," said Kilkenny. "It shouldn't feel like it's a negative experience."

For parents who have trouble getting a child to start a practice session, McCoy recommends trying different times of the day.

Optimistic About State of the Hospitality

Panelists at Northern Virginia Chamber Forum discuss state of hospitality under the new administration.

BY ANDREA WORKER
THE CONNECTION

The Northern Virginia Chamber of Commerce gathered some heavy hitters to offer their thoughts and answer questions from a standing-room-only audience at the “State of Hospitality Under the New Administration” symposium on March 6. While they weren’t forecasting a banner year, the panelists were cautiously optimistic about how the local industry would fare under the new administration.

❖ Barry Biggar, president and ceo of Visit Fairfax since 2008, with tenures in similar positions for Convention and Visitors bureaus in Texas, Kentucky, and Calgary, Canada.

❖ Mark Carrier, senior officer with D.C.-based B.F. Saul Hospitality Group, owners and operators of business class hotels, including the Hay-Adams. Carrier is also the current chairman of the American Hotel and Lodging Association, the advocacy voice for the industry.

❖ Chris Klauda, director of Destination Research for STR, the company that has been providing metrics, trend information and benchmarking for the industry since 1985.

❖ Carroll Rheem, vice president, Research and Analytics for Brand USA, the public-private organization established by the Travel Promotion Act in 2010 to promote the United States as a premier travel destination.

THINGS HAVE BEEN LOOKING UP of late. While the economic woes that began in 2008 did not hit the region as hard as they did other parts of the country, lodging had not begun experiencing any real return to pre-crash prosperity — until last year, according to Biggar and his panel colleagues.

“Revenue per occupied room (RevPar) was up 5 percent locally, versus 3.2 percent nationally,” said B.F. Saul’s Carrier, who added that it “had been a while” since the region had outperformed the country in these statistics. Carrier placed the blame on sequestration and the effects of budget cuts and government shutdown threats for keeping the DMV’s hospitality sector depressed in comparison to other U.S. markets.

Biggar concurred. “Seque-what?” is a response he said he has frequently received when asking peers around the country if the mandated budget cuts had affected hospitality in their localities. In 2013, when the rest of the nation was beginning to rise from the downturn, the negative impact of sequestration meant that all industry sectors and economic drivers in this region couldn’t keep pace.

In addition to the increases in RevPar in 2016, occupancy rates have also been on the rise: “71.3 percent in Fairfax County are the latest figures for last year, “again, something we haven’t enjoyed for a while,” said Biggar.

Being a “company town” can also have its benefits, as well as its disadvantages. Carrier and Biggar both saw opportunities in the proposed funding increases for the military. Those benefits may be more largely felt in the southern part of the states, if monies are allocated to building new naval vessels and equipment, but increased support services in Northern Virginia could also translate into additional room nights for local lodging establishments.

The overall positive outlook of the panel members came with some concerns and cautions of challenges by the industry experts.

Brand USA’s Rheem noted that airline bookings, an important measuring tool used to predict lodging trends, were down significantly since the start of the year.

“Vacation travel is a lot about emotion,” said Rheem. Travel bans and the perception of cultural divides can create an atmosphere of personal insecurity, and “security always ranks at the top of travel surveys,” added Biggar.

Rheem has found in her research that travellers from Canada and Europe, “and, to no one’s real surprise, Mexico seem to view the new administration the most negatively.” More discretionary travellers from those places indicate that they will wait and see how things shape up before visiting the United States, as opposed to Chinese and other Asian travellers for whom politics seem less of a factor in their travel decisions. “In some places, we use local voices to push our message that the U.S. is still a great place to come to,” said Rheem.

Biggar held up an article from a newspaper in Canada that suggested its citizens also wait, “maybe as long as four years. The Grand Canyon and Disney World will still be there.”

Brand USA has also found that currency rates are playing a big role in travellers’ choices. For other than political reasons, many Canadians and others are choosing Mexico for their sunshine holidays. “Why not?” remarked Rheem. “Mexico is 30-40 percent cheaper, the U.S. 20-30 percent more expensive right now.”

BUDGET AND POLICY uncertainties add to the concerns that hoteliers and other Northern Virginia businesses have when trying to assess the impact of the new administration on the regional economy. Reports that major cuts to agencies and programs like the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the Federal Emergency Management System, and even the Coast Guard, as the President seeks ways to pay for the promised protective wall along the country’s southern border, have all local business on high alert.

Still, when asked by event moderator Jim Corcoran, the CEO of the Northern Virginia Chamber of Commerce, if they voted “positive or negative” for the 2017 hospitality outlook, all four of the panelists ultimately gave their thumbs-up.

“Of course, it’s early days,” said Biggar, “but in the long run, Trump knows our business. He is all about trade. This could be a positive.”

"Literatti"

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

A not-so-necessarily fashionable set of people involved in the care and feeding of cats; more specifically, the purchase, cleaning, replenishing and discarding of their leavings/litter.

At present, and going on for nearly five years now, we live with five indoor cats: brothers Biscuit and Chino, siblings Andrew and Sloane, and one single female named Twinkle. Having lost our previous cat, Smokey, prematurely to outside effects: cancer at age 10, we decided on our next feline go 'round, that we would not let them out. It's much healthier for the cat, we were told, and so as our current brood grew, we committed to keeping them all inside. And inside cats, like Forrest Gump in The White House, have to go. And if their box/boxes are not cleaned and refreshed regularly, you might not be so happy about where they do go. Therefore, to avoid the inevitable, we are extremely litter centric. Although we may not have the requisite number of boxes available for their disposal (the unofficial mandate is one box per cat), nevertheless, we try to be extra busy with the task at hand. After years of this arrangement, the cats and our house seem none the worse for wear. It's not exactly a small price to pay (litter is not inexpensive and its weight sometimes makes for an awkward transport home), but there is absolutely no alternative.

With respect to the cats' litter box-use and occasional abuse, their behavior really is remarkable. Getting them to use their litter box doesn't require any training per se, as in house-training a puppy. In our experience, it's simply been a matter of availability and proximity, though I can't say for sure if unboxed residue has anything to do with location. If anything, it has to do with their owners negligence in providing a freshly scooped box. All we have ever done is place the kitten in the litter box and then they seem to know how to do the rest. Except for the cleaning of the box. They don't exactly fend for themselves. However, so long as the owners scoop and refill regularly, the cats are relatively low maintenance. The litter box remains high maintenance though.

To secure that maintenance, there are a few tools of the trade to consider. One is the litter scoop. Having broken numerous plastic scoops over the years, I made a commitment (in money) years ago to an industrial strength, commercial grade-type scoop; a metal scoop with a rubber handle. I haven't looked backwards since or forwards in a store. That scoop has been indestructible and has been worth every penny/dollar of its extra cost. My advice: don't skimp on the scoop.

As for litter boxes, size probably does matter, so far as avoiding "unpleasantness" is concerned. As to using boxes with covers (rather than the standard open-air boxes) or moving parts, recently, for the first time in our respective 50 years or so of cat ownership/accommodation, we bought a box with a cover and a swinging flap, providing the cats privacy, and access to go in and out (like a doggie door) and also to control litter spillage and to manage odors. Skeptical at first about the cats' likely reaction, within a very short time, all five were "flapping" and "littering" without any further adieu or mess. Initially, I thought the flap would intimidate them and the cover would crowd them. Moreover, I thought one or another would have a problem with something or other causing us to scrap the whole project. Amazingly, the exact opposite has transpired.

As much of a success as the metal scooper has been for me, I am now able to add, without any hesitation or reservation, that the cover/enclosed box with the plastic flap has similarly breathed fresh air (literally) into our multi-cat, litter box existence. There's also a charcoal filter in the box to absorb odors (to which we've likely gone nose-blind). Turns out to be a win-win, when one (this one in fact), might have thought (did think) it would be a lose-lose. However, unless we remain vigilant with the scooper, this situation could certainly take a turn for the worse.

Prepare for Spring

With spring nearing, the Fairfax County Master Gardener Association (FCMGA) is spreading gardening news and fostering camaraderie amongst area gardeners. The FCMGA have set up plant clinics in various places around the county, booths at farmer's markets and libraries, and a help desk located at Government Center, Pennino Building (10th floor) to offer free, unbiased, and research-based advice on selecting and caring for ornamental plants, vegetables, and lawn. Residents can take advantage of in-person answers to gardening questions, plant and insect identification, soil tests, and more. For a fee of $30, FCMGA volunteers will visit the homeowner's property to assess the general condition of the turfgrass, survey and identify major weeds, measure the lawn area, take a soil sample and provide recommendations. FCMGA also has speakers come out to citizens groups and HOA meetings to highlight a wide range of gardening topics. For exact times and locations, check out the plant clinic schedule on the FCMGA website: <http://fairfaxgardening.org/plant-clinics/2017-plant-clinic-schedule>.

A bit of attitude. The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors poses after their appearance at the Leadership Fairfax Breakfast with the Board.

Leadership Fairfax Hosts Breakfast with Supervisors

BY ANDREA WORKER
THE CONNECTION

On Friday, March 10, Leadership Fairfax (LFI) held its annual Breakfast with the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors for the 26th time. The county's governing elected officials are usually only captured on film in their professional personas, but this time each supervisor was announced in the style of a college hoops star a la March Madness. One after the other they high-fived, fist-bumped and attitude-gestured with an LFI partner as they made their way to the dais.

There were more laughs during the "Ask the Supervisors" portion of the program, particularly when the speakers were asked to name their favorite childhood snack food. Supervisor Kathy Smith, Sully District, confessed to something with white bread and sugar to looks of horror from some of her colleagues.

Moderator Casey Veatch, principal of Veatch Commercial Real Estate, balanced humorous interludes with serious questions. The supervisors were called upon to highlight some of the county's successes in 2016, as well as the obstacles that were faced and that may still lie ahead. "We're going to get news you can use today. No fake news here," he said.

CHAIRMAN SHARON BULOVA rose to the challenge of presenting a State of the County address in less than three minutes. The establishment of a civilian Police Review Panel, whose nine members were recently announced, was one of the year's high notes, according to Bulova. The panel "will act as an independent portal for residents to submit concerns or complaints and will promote further transparency in our community policing," she said.

Bulova also spoke of the success of the Diversion First program, which kept 375 people from potential arrest in 2016. Diversion First is designed to seek alternatives to incarceration for persons with mental illness or developmental disabilities who come into contact with the criminal justice system for low-level offenses. "It's the right thing to do," she said, "to get people assistance instead of jail time where possible," and it also saves county dollars and police resources.

After Bulova's remarks, Veatch called for a "speed round," with each supervisor commenting on an important project, event, or challenge. Some of their responses included:

❖ John Cook (Braddock) – Continuing the work of the Diversion First program.

❖ John Foust (Dranesville) – Economic Growth Fund. Foust supports providing start-up and entrepreneurial funds and "maker spaces" to make Fairfax a leader in diverse economic innovation. He encouraged everyone to read the county's economics success strategic plan.

❖ Penny Gross (Mason) – Environmental protection and energy efficiency are critical, particularly with threatened cuts to the Environmental Protection Agency and similar organizations.

❖ Pat Herrity (Springfield) – The growing opioid abuse and deaths crisis. "It's in your neighbourhood. A partnership for awareness, prevention and treatment" is needed.

❖ Cathy Hudgins (Hunter Mill) – Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (Metro) improvements. "We need to remember that 1.1 million services were provided during the Inauguration and the Women's March in January without incident," but there are no federal funds for maintenance and operations for Metro, although 45 percent of its riders are government workers. "We need everyone involved in the funding."

❖ Jeff McKay (Lee) – "One Fairfax is one of the most important things we've done." In a joint resolution with the Fairfax County Public Schools Board, the supervisors passed the written policy that demands all policies and decisions be put to the test, using a "lens of equity." "A zip code shouldn't determine your potential," McKay insisted.

❖ Kathy Smith (Sully) – Working on the Fairfax County Zoning Ordinance, which hasn't been amended since 1978. "There are processes to make changes, but it takes too long and inhibits growth." And, she noted, "We're getting a Wegman's in Sully District."

❖ Linda Smythe (Providence) – Continue efforts to revitalize communities like Merrifield. "Has anyone been to Mosaic? That's what can be done."

❖ Daniel Storck (Mount Vernon) – Promoting public/private partnerships that are having significant success in his district with "gateway projects" and school innovations.

IN ADDITION to putting the Board of Supervisors on the hot seat, this annual event is also the time when the Katherine K. Hanley Award for Public Service is presented. The award's namesake, former Fairfax County Board Chair and Secretary of the Commonwealth Katherine Hanley, was on hand to bestow this year's honor on Patricia Harrison, Fairfax County deputy executive.

With 30 years of service in Fairfax County, Harrison, who oversees the county's human services agencies and programs, "has played an integral role in improving the lives of families in our community," said co-presenter Rodney Lusk of the Fairfax County Economic Development Authority and an LFI alum.

Leadership Fairfax offers three different educational programs: The Signature Program, the Emerging Leaders Institute and the Lifetime Leaders program for those newly retired or preparing to retire. See www.leadershipfairfax.org for more information.
