Hunters share venison chili at Lorton Community Action Center.

BY TIM PETERSON
THE CONNECTION

Bob Flanagan of Fairfax Station and Tom Dalton of Springfield serve up samples of two styles of chili, just like a vendor at a grocery store. Except their chili — each man is responsible for one pot, either sweet and spicy or mild and chunky — is made with local venison. And the grocery store is actually the Lorton Community Action Center food pantry.

The men are members of Suburban Whitetail Management of Northern Virginia, an organization of bowhunters who provide a free service of controlling deer population on private property and suburban development. Flanagan estimates they harvest about 600 deer annually from around Fairfax County. He calls that “a small dent” in the county’s exploding population.

From that harvest, the hunters have the deer processed and distribute excess venison among friends, the Hunters for the Hungry organization and LCAC.

Several times per month, SWM drops of between 60 and 80 pounds of ground venison, frozen and vacuum-packed for guests to make into hamburgers, pasta sauce, tacos or, of course, chili.

“To be able to donate the deer in one way or another is fulfilling,” Flanagan said at the chili-tasting on March 28. This is the second year the two men have done such an event at LCAC.

Dalton added that it means a lot they’re able to help people locally with their hunting, as well as chipping away at the overabundance of deer in the area.

The men said the mild winter made for a good hunting season, though the flip side they’re seeing a significant increase in the fawn ratio already this spring. Based on that, they expect about a 20 percent increase in deer this year over 2016.

“We need more private landowners and agencies to buy into the idea of management,” Flanagan said. Fairfax County manages its own lands, including allowing hunters on to parks at specific times.

“Most people either don’t know about [deer management services] or don’t want it,” he continued, “they like seeing the deer around.”

son, frozen and vacuum-packed for guests to make into hamburgers, pasta sauce, tacos or, of course, chili.

AFTER THE VENISON CHILI DEBUT at LCAC last year, executive director Linda Patterson said it really opened doors for people trying new things. That’s especially valuable when they can’t always predict which meat they’ll have donated from one of the area grocery stores.

“They’ve become adventurous,” she said, “it’s helped broaden their horizons.” Where some guests of the pantry would only ever pick up one type of meat, now they’re willing to try several kinds. That’s carried over to vegetables as well, Patterson said, aided by nutrition and cooking demonstration classes LCAC offers.

Patterson said they’ve actually seen a 10 percent decrease in food pantry usage over this time last year. Around Christmas they were serving about 250 families each week. Then it went down to 230 for a few weeks, now it’s around 190-210.

More than 100 people filled the Ernst Cultural Center at Northern Virginia Community College’s Annandale Campus on Sunday, March 26, to hear more than a dozen elected and faith leaders, as well as representatives from local organizations speak about hate speech, bias incidents and hate crimes.

With a recent rise in hate crimes taking place across the country, Attorney General Mark Herring has addressed the issue at numerous events in Fairfax County already in 2017.

“There is a lot of fear out there,” Herring said. “I have felt it.”

Herring spoke about a web page he created for his website located at www.nohateva.com, dealing specifically with hate crimes: how are they defined, how to report one, what are resources for victims.

Herring’s page defines hate crimes as those “committed against a person or property motivated in whole or in part by an offender’s bias against a race, religion, disability, sexual orientation, ethnicity, gender, or gender identity.”

In 2015, the site states, there were a reported 155 such crimes in Virginia.

Herring said he wanted every Virginian to know they have rights he is working to protect, and that professionals in his office are there to “defend, keep families safe and seek justice.”

Steven Gordon, Assistant U.S. Attorney, defined harassment in the context of civil rights and federal laws, and encouraged anyone to contact him directly with complaints regarding harassment they’ve seen or experienced.

Giulio Arseni, Supervisory Special Agent, FBI Civil Rights Division, helped explain the difference between hate speech and a hate crime, particularly with regards to the First Amendment.

“Many times you can do nothing about speech,” Arseni said, “Where does it cross the line?”

Speech becomes a hateful act, in the eyes of law he said, “when it shows serious intent to commit violence against another.”

Speakers

Speakers at the “United Response to Hate Speech, Bias Incidents and Hate Crimes” included:

- ❖ U.S. Rep. Gerry Connolly, 11th Congressional District
- ❖ Mark Herring, Attorney General
- ❖ Sharon Bulova, Chairman, Fairfax County Board of Supervisors
- ❖ Imam Johari Abdul Malik, Dar Al Hijrah Islamic Center
- ❖ Giulio Arseni, Supervisory Special Agent, FBI Civil Rights Division
- ❖ Steven Gordon, Assistant U.S. Attorney
- ❖ Seth Gordon-Lipkin, Education Director, Anti-Defamation League
- ❖ Rev. Dr. Steven Hyde, Ravensworth Baptist Church
- ❖ Rabbi David Kalender, Congregation Olam Tikvah
- ❖ Dr. Mary Ann Panarelli, Fairfax County Public Schools
- ❖ Rev. Carlos Penalosa, Ekklesia Church
- ❖ Col. Ed Roessler Jr., Fairfax County Chief of Police
- ❖ Rev. Lisa Rzepka, John Calvin Presbyterian Church
- ❖ Kenneth Saunders, Director, Fairfax County Office of Human Rights and Equity Programs
- ❖ Rabbi Amy Schwartzman, Temple Rodef Shalom

Roessler said there were 83 hate “events” in the county last year, and 60 in 2015. Most of these, he said, involve graffiti and hate speech.

“Around the country, hate and bias are everywhere, including around this county,” Roessler said, “We will not tolerate this in Fairfax County.”

Roessler urged residents to engage with their local police districts; that FCPD representatives would come out to homeowners’ association meetings, to other local groups, to show they care, take responsibility and investigate any hate events.

Dr. Mary Ann Panarelli, Fairfax County Public Schools director for Intervention and Prevention Services, said building youth resiliency, helping them to believe in themselves, can prevent a variety of things, including hateful acts against one another.

Panarelli spoke about the importance of mentors in the community, that “every child needs to have an adult that cares and is trusting,” whether that be a teacher, parent, or community member who reaches out.

The program also included expressions of the Golden Rule from 10 different religions, including Bahá’ism, Buddhism, Hinduism, Islam and Judaism.

Religious leaders also discussed exploring community solutions to hate speech and crimes.

More information about bias crime committed in Fairfax County is available through Chief Roessler’s website at www.fairfaxcounty.gov/police/crime/biascrime.htm.

United Airlines employees May Hester and Jeff Lattea assist Felix Reges and mom Ina Laemmerzahl of Reston to “check-in” to their “Wings for All” simulated flight travel experience at Dulles International Airport.

“Captain” Julia Ferguson, a 16-year-old from Lorton, required some extra assistance to try out the Number One seat on the plane, but once in place, she was ready to go.

Glenn Reges and Ina Laemmerzahl are planning on taking their 9-year-old son, Felix Reges, on a trip to Colorado. Many couples would simply book their flights, a hotel room and the rental car and when the day arrived would be off to the airport for a fun-filled family vacation, but things are a bit more complicated for this Reston family. Felix has autism and is legally blind. His parents were worried how they would manage the challenges of travel by air, and how Felix would react to an experience that has been known to cause stress even for the most prepared travellers.

The “Wings for All” program’s latest offering was one way to take a dry run at the travel adventure.

The Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority (MWA) teamed up with non-profit The Arc, local chapter The Arc of Northern Virginia, United Airlines, Travelers Aid, MarketPlace Development, and the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) to simulate a typical airport travel experience for people with intellectual and developmental disabilities.

About 125 people — participants with differing special needs and their family members — arrived at Dulles International Airport on Saturday, March 25 and were guided through the travel process by an army of volunteers clad in neon-green t-shirts and directed by dozens of like-colored posters with directional arrows and additional instructions.

AT THE UNITED check-in kiosks, United employee May Hester helped each participant use the screens to enter their information and her colleague Jeff Lattea printed out boarding passes. Lattea, whose mother was a special education teacher, has volunteered to work this event several times. “I love doing this,” he said. “If it helps give these families the confidence to take trips they may have avoided, it’s worth every minute.”

To gain that kind of confidence is why Lauren Gibson brought her 8-year-old son Aiden out to participate in the program. Where would Aiden take his flight if given the choice? Without hesitation, the youngster declared “Disney World!”

With boarding passes for United “Flight 2839 to Baltimore” in hand, the “passengers” then made their way to the TSA checkpoints. Some accommodations for wheelchairs had to be made. A back brace posed a momentary delay. A few of the parents and guardians looked somewhat anxious, concerned that their participant would become distressed at the on-and-off shoe action, the passing through the monitors, and, in one or two cases, a wave of the wand, but the piece of the pre-flight travel puzzle that had worried many the most, went off without a hitch and it was on to the subway to Terminal C.

At Gate C12 there was the wait that seasoned travelers have come to expect, as planes are maintained and crews come aboard. Not part of the regular routine, however, was the visit of First Officer Julie Callens, who circled the gate area and introduced herself to all of her passengers, offering souvenir wing pins and a smile.

At first, Kelsi Da Re, 11, was too shy to accept Callens’ overtures and her gifts, but before long the girl, who had travelled from Haymarket to experience the travel rehearsal, was chatting with ease with the pilot, who was fresh off a flight from Frankfurt, Germany. Callens has volunteered with “Wings for All” before and said she wouldn’t have missed this opportunity, “no matter what.”

Kelsi’s mom, Ann, was thrilled at how things were going. Up to now, she wasn’t sure how her daughter would react to the noises, the lines, and the typical whirlwind of humanity that can be found at the airport. “There have been no plane trips,” she said. She’s thought about a trip to Maine, just for the peace and the beauty, or maybe a trip to see family in Chicago. “I think we can really start thinking about those trips now.”

Robbie Frost, an 11-year-old from Centreville, didn’t seem too shy or really too bothered by the wait at the gate. Surrounded by his grandparents Marsha and Lawrence Frost, from Springfield, and accompanied by his brother Tanner, Robbie had one word for the day’s activities so far: “Awesome!”

AT LAST, the call was given to begin boarding and everyone lined up according to their boarding pass group number. The walk down the jetway did bring on a few frowns, especially from Giovanni Solis-Sosa, but for the youngster from Manassas, there were too many interesting things to check out once he and his family had found their seats, so smiles once again became the order of the day.

The all-volunteer flight crew were prepared for their special passengers. Several of the participants had to be carefully transferred from their own wheelchairs onto special “aisle chairs” that can fit in the narrow cabin space, and then transferred again into their assigned seats. At the end of the “flight,” this process had to be performed in reverse, but was accomplished with minimal fuss and discomfort for the passenger. Janene Shaw, the Dulles Terminal opera by changes in the federal government, including President Donald Trump's two travel bans targeting people from several majority-Muslim countries, as well as increased immigration enforcement activity by ICE.

"Fear is what's winning," Patterson said.

Patterson said there is also much uncertainty about how changes from Trump's proposed budget may trickle down to affecting organizations like LCAC. In particular, cuts to housing could put a much greater burden on community members who are making ends meet, but only just.

"These are people doing critical tasks in the community," Patterson said, like school bus drivers, dental technicians, department store clerks and restaurant workers. "We need to have people doing this work, they need a liveable wage, to afford their housing and provide a better life for their children."

Though the food pantry user numbers are somewhat low, the LCAC leader said they have a high need for dry pasta, pasta sauce, rice and breakfast cereal. These are high-need items they don't receive from grocery stores.

Earlier than normal, Patterson said they've had to reach out to faith communities and local schools asking them to hold spring and summer food drives.

Expand Medicaid Now

Virginia has missed out on $10 billion, 30,000 jobs and care for 400,000 citizens.

Virginia's General Assembly has refused to accept one of the key provisions of the Affordable Care Act, expansion of Medicaid at almost no cost to Virginia that could have covered 400,000 uninsured Virginians and would have brought more than $10 billion into the state. It has also cost lives.

Ironically, the failed bill to "repeal and replace" the Affordable Care Act included changes to Medicaid that would have penalized states, like Virginia, that did not expand Medicaid, permanently reducing federal funding.

On Monday, Gov. Terry McAuliffe proposed a budget amendment restoring his authority to pursue planning for Medicaid expansion in the wake of the failed repeal effort in Congress.

Kansas and North Carolina are taking steps this week to expand Medicaid, hoping to join the 31 other states plus the District of Columbia that have already done so.

More than 140,000 residents of Fairfax County have no health insurance. More than 40,000 residents of Arlington and Alexandria have no health insurance. That's more than 12 percent of the people who live in one of the wealthiest areas in the nation.

A Harvard Medical School study determined that the decision by 25 states to reject the expansion of Medicaid coverage under the Affordable Care Act would result in between 7,115 and 17,104 more deaths than had all states opted in. In Virginia, the number of deaths due to failure to expand Medicaid: between 266 and 987.

From a practical perspective, declining federal money to provide healthcare to uninsured Virginians makes no more sense than declining federal funds for transportation or education.

In Virginia, 102,000 uninsured people with a mental illness or substance use disorder could qualify for coverage if Medicaid were expanded under the Affordable Care Act.

As Virginia and the rest of the nation wrestles with heroin and opioid addiction, expanding Medicaid would allow for expanding treatment programs. One of the big obstacles to helping people who are fighting addiction is the availability of treatment when it is most needed.

"The time has come for us to bring our taxpayer dollars back to serve the individuals who need them the most," said McAuliffe. "With this amendment, I'm asking the General Assembly to work with me to pursue Medicaid expansion and put this funding to work for our most vulnerable Virginians."

Primaries for candidates for the House of Delegates plus governor, lieutenant governor and attorney general are in June, with all seats on the ballot in November. An important question as voters choose: What is their position on Medicaid expansion? How did incumbents vote?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Disappointed

To the Editor:

I'm a little late in getting back to this but I was deeply disappointed in the article, "Standing Together Against Hate," by Tim Peterson (Connection, March 9-15).

He summarizes U.S. Rep. Gerry Connolly and state Sen. Dick Saslaw being anything but "united" at a gathering to condemn threats against local Jewish community centers. Unless by united, the reporter means they mutually reinforced each other's talking point?

Connolly is described as saying "the 2016 Presidential election represented a sliding back in the history of America. As a consequence hate groups are feeling emboldened." I'm assuming he was blaming the victory of Donald Trump for these threats against the centers.

Saslaw echoed the sentiment and added, "And that it didn't help with Trump encouraging supporters to violently remove protestors from his rallies, offering to pay their legal expenses."

Given a chance to do something that "unites" most people, Connolly and Saslaw displayed rank hack partisanship. Why must everything be politicized, used as an excuse to attack political opponents? Are they incapable of being civil, even to their own constituents who might disagree with them?

I guess they considered it more important to repeat the meme du jour.

Mr. Connolly surely knows that the locus of anti-Israel activity in the United States is Mr. Connolly's Democratic Party along with liberal groups on campuses.

And Mr. Saslaw is aware that the center of political agitation is the "Resistance" movement in the Democratic party and its allies to the left. It is Trump supporters who are attacked by masked anarchistic "Black Block" professional protesters and agitators. And it is Republican and conservative speakers who are attacked on campuses, as we saw with Charles Murray at Middlebury College recently.

Furthermore, it was the previous (Democrat) administration that set U.S.-Israeli relations back years and buddied up to hostile nations such as Iran. Donald Trump had already met (favorably) with Israeli leaders before the gathering referred to in the article.

Now we learn that the threats may be the work of a mentally disturbed Israeli-American citizen.

Apologies from Connolly and Saslaw? Will they be more circumspect in the future?

One last question, these days reporters are constantly tossing out the word "unsubstantiated" when Donald Trump says something, how about applying the same filter to some of the wilder claims from Democrats?

Trumpcare is Greater Threat Than Russia

To the Editor:

Do we care about Russia? We should. But while the FBI investigates whether Trump's campaign worked with a known enemy to intervene in our elections, I am concerned with a far greater threat to the health of our democracy, the Trump healthcare bill.

As a mom who carries an Epi-pen for her son, as someone who is familiar with the cost of expensive diagnostic tests and care for rare diseases, as someone who has studied the business of healthcare and practices for wellness, I could argue against the merits of Trumpcare, but I won't. Logic tells us the foundation of the bill is wrong.

The GOP healthcare bill is a terroristic threat to the fundamental power of our nation, the likes of which Putin could have never inflicted upon us. What better way to destroy a nation than physically weaken its people? A nation full of ill people who are financially compromised and emotionally distraught cannot create a strong, safe or independent country.

How malicious. How devious. To promote the bill as increasing health care choice when it will cut health insurance for millions of people. Trumpcare is a greater risk to our security than a foreign agent because it will cripple the source of our success, our people. We, enlisted (wo)men, government workers, technology innovators, doctors, teachers, artists and police officers should all exercise our choice to grant everyone access to health care by rejecting the GOP proposal.

In Northern Virginia we know better. In the districts where representatives have blindly or complicity argued for such a destructive bill, let's remind them that we know better. To the senators who have provided lukewarm support for access to healthcare, let's call them out.

FAMILY CONNECTION

Local national parks like Theodore Roosevelt Island are ideal for family staycations, says Lois Stover, Ph.D. of Marymount University.

Backyard Adventure

Ideas for a spring break family staycation.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

For Katie Wendel, a spring break vacation this year won't mean loading up the car and driving several hundred miles or waiting in long lines at the airport. While the Bethesda mother of five is planning to enjoy some relaxing downtime with her family, she won't venture far from home.

"We're going to be tourists this year and visit the monuments and museums in Washington. We're also going to try to find every avenue in the city that's named after a state," said Wendel. "If you think about it, there's so much to do in this area that we all take for granted. You really don't have to leave the area to feel like you're in another city."

From museum exhibits to adventure centers, a goldmine of family getaways abounds locally. There are even activities for family bonding available without leaving home.

"Ask the kids what they would like to do. Involve them and give [them] a choice. Whatever it is they suggest, come up with a plan to document their adventure so they can share it with grandparents or siblings away at college, said Lois Stover, Ph.D., dean, School of Education and Human Services at Marymount University. "Let them help plan the Metro route or just look at the Metro map and randomly pick a station and explore that area."

"A lot of adults assume that kids want a big trip, but a lot of times a kid will say, 'I want to blow bubbles in the back yard.' It's important for children to have a say in how the family uses its free time," said Carolyn Lorente, Ph.D., professor of psychology at Northern Virginia Community College.

Among the recommendations that Stover offers are activities at one's neighborhood library and trips to indoor public swimming pools. For animal-loving families the National Zoo offers beasts ranging from elephants and eagles to tigers and frogs.

"Get outside and take the family to one of the lesser known national parks, like Prince William, or walk the C&O Canal," said Stover.

There's also Gravelly Point Park near Reagan Washington National Airport in Arlington, which is ideal for family picnics, games of kickball or simply watching airplanes take off and land.

"If it's warm, do a beach day in the backyard [or] set up an indoor mini-golf course with Nerf balls [or use] Wiffle balls and bats," said Stover. "Have a dance party, a science day. Have a 'Today is Blue, or whatever color works, Day,' so everyone wears blue, all foods are blue, you ride the blue line Metro just to see where it goes, [for example]."

The U.S. Botanic Garden Conservatory on the National Mall is where Stephanie Kleinman is planning to take her twin daughters during spring break.

"The girls call it a museum for plants, and it's neat to go from the desert to the jungle all within one building," said Kleinman who lives in McLean. "We'll probably check out some of the other museums while we're downtown."

Spring Break

There are times when a staycation can be more relaxing than travel, says Lorente. "If you look at the list of the top 100 stressors in life, taking a vacation is on the list," she said.

"A staycation, when done with purpose, can really be good."

Advanced planning is a key to making that time spent together meaningful, advises Lorente. "A lot of times people say they're taking a staycation and they end up doing chores around the house. And everybody is on their electronics," she said. "But it's really about family bonding and everyone coming together and creating shared experiences as a family."

Excelling in Business and Labor Commission for Women honors trailblazers.

BY TIM PETERSON
THE CONNECTION

Constance “Connie” Cordovilla remembers signing up for college courses in the mid-’60s and being interested in taking electrical engineering. “Nice girls go into English,” her counselor told her. “What makes you think I’m a nice girl?” she said she responded.

Cordovilla is associate director, Human Rights and Community Relations, American Federation of Teachers (AFT), AFL-CIO. She was recognized as one of seven “Trailblazing Women in Labor and Business” for 2017 by the Fairfax County Commission for Women.

The recognition ceremony was rescheduled due to snow and held Wednesday, March 22 at the county government center.

Sondra Seba Hemenway, women’s commission vice chair and at-large commissioner, said the evening was about recognizing how women had made significant contributions in labor and business, and had an impact on history and the lives of others. “Women have always worked, and not always been paid the same, or at all,” Seba Hemenway said. “This year we’ve identified seven truly remarkable women” to recognize. This year was the first for which the commission accepted nominations for honorees. Fairfax County Board of Supervisors chairman Sharon Bulova said her path for being elected and serving as both a supervisor and chairman — as a woman — was made easier by “strong women who came before me.” Previous chairs Jean Packard, Audrey Moore and Kate Hanley helped residents to be more comfortable with women representing them in local government.

“But there’s still work to do,” Bulova said. Supervisor Cathy Hudgins (D-Hunter Mill) added they need to “work to make certain, continue to see that everyone has the opportunity to excel.”

“This year, women’s rights and issues are

Wings for All: Practice Flight at Dulles International

tions coordinator who was on hand throughout the event, said that the airport and many of the airlines were pleased to accept training from Kimberly DeLoatche, The Arc of Northern Virginia’s travel training project coordinator. As part of her duties, DeLoatche teaches airport personnel how best to interact with special needs passengers, how to alleviate many of their fears and make the experience the best possible for all.

Once everyone was safely belted in, the crew did their checks and the “flight” was underway, courtesy of an “engine-in-operation” soundtrack that was played over the PA system. Just a few minutes after “take-off” the cabin crew offered a beverage service.

When the “We’ve reached our cruising altitude” announcement was made, those able and who wished to do so were allowed to move about the cabin for some exploration. Flight attendant Rosemary Koenig said that airplane bathrooms have caused anxiety for some special needs passengers being such a small space, and equipped with louder-than-normal flushing mechanisms, so the fliers are welcomed to check them out during this travel walk-through.

There was one added bonus to the “Wings for All” journey that isn’t part of a typical travel experience — the chance to visit the cockpit. Many braved the close quarters for a chance to see the heart of their flying machine, and a lucky few, like 16-year-old Julia Ferguson from Lorton, even climbed into the captain’s seat and tried out the wheel.

AFTER THE ON-BOARD ADVENTURE, the newly-minted air travelers returned to the main terminal and the baggage claim area — a few of the passengers had checked bags that were awaiting their arrival near Carousel 2 — and a luncheon where they were joined by many of the staff, volunteers and the crew of Flight 2839.

MWAA media relations specialist Andrew Tull, who also joined the day’s “flight” hopes to help make more people aware of programs like “Wings for All.” Rizza and Erwin Lai of Fairfax only found out about the event a few days earlier, when they were researching the regulations regarding medications on flights. They want to take their 2-year-old son Ryle to visit their family in the Philippines. “It’s a long flight and Ryle has a lot of medications,” said Erwin Lai. “We were worried, so we looked it up and that is where we found out about this program.” The Arc of Northern Virginia’s DeLoatche urges the families of anyone with intellectual and/or developmental disabilities to contact them for assistance for any of their needs, concerns or questions. A “Wings for All” event is planned for the fall at Reagan National Airport, so more special passengers can become real-life travelers. Learn more about The Arc of Northern Virginia at www.thearcofnova.org.

As for Felix Reges, he passed all steps of the simulated travel day with flying colors and is ready for that family trip to Colorado.

Lions Cleanup Graffiti At Lorton Park & Ride

Craffiti isn't art, it's a crime. That's the message the Mason Neck Lions Club is trying to remind people of as they've coordinated several graffiti removal projects in the Lorton and Mason Neck area over the past couple of years.

The group's latest was March 25, when seven members and volunteers completed a graffiti removal project at the Lorton park and ride commuter lot on Gunston Cove Road.

For the project, they used paint rollers on extension polls to apply an acrylic emulsion paint to the concrete facility walls that face the railroad right-of-way. The volunteers also collected 10 bags of litter waste and other debris from the area.

Before that, the Lions organized a similar project at the Furnace Road railroad underpass in Mason Neck.

Joe Chudzik with the Lions said that in the past, they would report graffiti to Fairfax County Police, and at one point received some donated paint from the Sheriff's Office.

"Now, we just buy the latex water emulsion paint at Home Depot and organize the volunteers for each graffiti removal project," Chudzik said in an email. "The Mason Neck Lions Club supplies the painting equipment, gloves, bottled water and certificates of appreciation to the volunteers."

The next Mason Neck Lions project is a stream cleanup at Pohick Square on April 22. Volunteers are asked to meet at Timerand Court, Pohick Square HOA, for the cleanup lasting from 9 a.m. until noon. For more information, call 571-642-6000.

Festival Returns to Mosaic

Film and music festival at Mosaic's Angelika Theater April 10-23.

BY DAVID SIEGEL
THE CONNECTION

Celebrating the film lover and filmmaker, Fairfax's home-grown Northern Virginia (NOVA) International Film and Music Festival returns for its third year at Mosaic's state-of-the-art Angelika Film Center. This year's festival will be two-weeks in length with added events aimed at the music aficionado.

The 2017 NOVA Festival will use its two weeks to screen more films and have more sessions on the business-side for area filmmakers, screenwriters, and those interested in cinema production and distribution.

"We're thrilled that the acclaimed Northern Virginia International Film and Music Festival is returning to Fairfax County this year, as it is an exceptional demonstration of the art and culture that embodies this region," Barry Biggar, President & CEO of Visit Fairfax, the official destination marketing organization of Fairfax County.

"A film festival of this caliber is not only important to our visitors, but also greatly contributes to the quality of life of our residents," added Biggar.

"Our NOVA International Film and Music Festival showcases the creative talents in the local area. It offers an opportunity to see films before they are screened nationally," said Fernando Mico, festival founder. "The Festival is an opportunity for filmmakers to display their work in a competitive setting as well as learn the important business-side of the film industry."

The Festival will present a "Legend Award" to Eduardo Sanchez, who is best known for his ground-breaking film, "The Blair Witch Project."

This year the festival will present a "Legend Award" to Eduardo Sanchez, who is best known for his ground-breaking film, "The Blair Witch Project."

At last year's festival Red Zeppelin Productions, a Springfield-based film company, had its feature-length film "TRI" screened at the festival. In a recent interview, Theodore A. Adams III, President, Red Zeppelin Productions said the festival offers an opportunity "to meet and collaborate with distributors, financiers and award-winning filmmakers from the US and from around the world."

The film "TRI" is a drama about the first-time triathlete who was inspired by a cancer patient. The film was meant to "teach, inspire and invoke action," noted Adams. In an age when films are screened beyond a traditional movie house, Adams added that "TRI" has been available on digital platforms for viewing; it all started with the NOVA Festival.

Both Mico and Adams suggested that beyond seeing new movies another reason to take in the Northern Virginia Film and Music Festival is the opportunity "to network with fellow artist and film-goers."

Gillespie Wins GOP Straw Poll

More than 300 voters attended a Fairfax County Republican Committee straw poll and candidate forum on March 25, according to FCRC executive director Eric Johnson. The event was held at Robinson Secondary School.

With 55.84 percent of the vote from those in attendance, Ed Gillespie won the poll for Virginia governor. State Sen. Jill Vogel (R-27) received a winning 64.36 percent of votes for Lt. Governor. John Adams won the poll for Attorney General, with a 61.69 percent majority.

Matt Ames, FCRC chairman, said in a statement that winning in Fairfax County "is the key to winning in Virginia. "[One] in seven Virginia voters lives in Fairfax County," Ames said. "No candidate has been elected Governor of the Commonwealth without also caring Fairfax County in more than 30 years — and that includes Republican Governors McDonnell, Gilmore and Allen."

Primary Elections June 13

Del. Eileen Filler-Corn addresses the audience prior to the screening of the documentary.

More than 200 people attended the Richmond screening.

Filler-Corn Addresses Audience at Richmond Screening

Last Thursday, Delegate Eileen Filler-Corn (D-41) joined a crowd of more than 200 at the Richmond screening of "My Kid is Not Crazy," a documentary following the lives of six children affected by either Pediatric Autoimmune Neuropsychiatric Disorders Associated with Streptococcal Infections (PANDAS) or Pediatric Acute-onset Neuropsychiatric Syndrome (PANS).

PANS occurs when an infectious trigger, environmental factors, and other possible triggers create a misdirected immune response, resulting in inflammation on a child's brain. PANDAS specifically occurs when the infectious trigger is streptococcus bacteria (which causes strep throat). The event was sponsored by the PANS Research and Advocacy Institute. The crowd included many physicians and family members of children inflicted with PANS/PANDAS.

The delegate from Springfield only recently learned of PANS/PANDAS herself after a local activist reached out to her about her son's condition. The Founder and President of PRAI contacted Filler-Corn in the fall, explaining her idea for legislation. Filler-Corn introduced HB 2404 and along with the support of PRAI and advocacy of many parents, the bill passed this session.

The bill will create an advisory council on PANDAS and PANS and will advise the Commissioner of Health on research, diagnosis, treatment, and education relating to these identified disorders and syndrome. "Some of the best ideas for legislation comes from members of our community," said Filler-Corn. Gov. Terry McAuliffe has since signed HB 2404 into law.

Filler-Corn was at the screening addressing the large crowd prior to the screening of the documentary and she shared prepared greetings from the Governor. "PANS/PANDAS is not a new disease. The main issue is diagnosing it, as so many parents and physicians...can attest," wrote McAuliffe. "It is our shared hope that efforts to raise awareness about PANS/PANDAS will decrease the often lengthy period before a child is diagnosed and contribute to one day finding a cure."
