How To Solve Affordable Housing Dilemma

County seeks public's ideas.

BY ANDREA WORKER
THE CONNECTION

The turnout was pretty small, considering the topic, but those who attended the county-wide Housing Strategic Plan meeting at South Lakes High School, led by the Department of Housing and Community Development and hosted by Hunter Mill District Supervisor Cathy Hudgins, made up for the lack of numbers with their attention and their engagement in the discussion.

The April 17 meeting was in competition with the joint Town Hall event of state Sen. Janet Howell (D-32), and Del. Ken Plum (D-36), as well as several other public meetings taking place simultaneously around the county.

"It was our first go," said Vincent Rogers, director of Policy, Reporting and Communication for the sponsoring Fairfax County government agency. "We will do everything we can to get the word out to the public for future meetings. This is an issue that really does affect us all."

Rogers explained that his department has been tasked by the Board of Supervisors to develop a strategic plan to tackle the problem. "No one wants another plan that sits on a shelf," he said. The goals for this strategic plan are concrete. It must not only "create a shared community vision of how housing supports local economic growth and community sustainability," but also "quantify the housing needed to sensibly accommodate future growth, develop specific, measureable, and actionable strategies for meeting the goals, and identify the programs and policies, and specific funding sources that will be required to address housing needs in 5, 10, and 15 years."

Rogers feels confident that the county staff working the problem are up to the challenge. The county will build on work already done: The Strategic Plan to Facilitate Economic Success, last year's county Human Services Needs Assessment that compiled and analysed the data on who in the county is in need of social services and what those service needs are, and the One Fairfax Resolution that "directs the development of a racial and social equity policy to ensure all individuals in Fairfax have an opportunity to reach their highest potential."

But even all of the previous work, and the dedication of the county staff to solving the problem, will not be enough, said Rogers. He and his group will be engaging with nonprofits and faith-based groups. They will also take the issue to the business community for their input, since "no local workers can ultimately mean no local work."

Dr. Lisa Sturtevant reads a series of vignettes, illustrating the extent, and potential harmful impact, of the affordable housing dilemma and leads a discussion with the attendees.

And then there will be more meetings like this one, aimed at educating the community as to the depth and extensive nature of the problem, and asking for residents to pitch in with their thoughts. As Hudgins said, "This is not a county plan. You are critical to the creation and success of the plan."

THE ATTENDEES SEEMED prepared to accept their responsibilities, but even some among them confessed to not knowing the extent of the problem. Consultant Lisa Sturtevant, Ph.D., and president of Lisa Sturtevant & Associates, LLC, has been contracted to help guide the process. She helmed most of the presentation, and used a series of vignettes as case studies to illustrate the needs, and the potentially devastating effects of failing to find an answer to the housing crisis.

The vignettes not only personalized the issue, but offered some possible consequences if those described in each narrative failed to secure affordable housing in the community.

"Especially when you look at each one as representing dozens, if not hundreds, of people in the same situations throughout the county," she said. The stories were fictitious, but based on real-life people and situations.

In one scenario, Sturtevant spoke about "Patrice Markham" who was a licensed practical nurse earning $48,500 a year and working at INOVA at a job she loved. In order to afford decent housing in a safe neighbourhood, "Markham" currently lives in Stafford, but the hour and a half commute each way every day has made her consider leaving INOVA for a job closer to home.

Key Employment Sectors in the Fairfax County Economy Have Lower Wages

Fairfax County Jobs by Wage

Source: GMU

About 45% of all jobs in the County pay less than $50,000 per year.

That includes nearly 300,000 jobs in the Business Services, Retail, Hospitality, Construction, Health Care and Education sectors.

CONTRIBUTED BY FAIRFAX COUNTY DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

At the county-wide Housing Community forum, county staff provided graphs showing the breakdown of wages in the county.

Another vignette focused on a millennial worker. A recent college graduate earning $50,000 as an analyst in the Tysons area, this young woman has accumulated $40,000 in student loan debt. A friend recently moved to Memphis where the cost of living is lower and she is thinking of moving, too, so that she can afford to live on her own, and consider owning her own home in the future. This particular case had several audience members commenting that Charlotte, N.C., seemed to be a hot destination for many of the young workers in their families or among their acquaintances.

The two-income "Park" family have good jobs and together earn $118,000 per year. With a new baby to consider, they wanted to stop renting in Herndon and buy their own home somewhere in the area that they now consider home base. Having a hard time finding something that they can afford without over-stretching the budget, the "Parks" are talking about moving back to Seattle where they have a better chance of finding affordable housing, and where family can help with the newest member.

"So, you are starting to see the common consequence, and what it could mean," Sturtevant said. Losing talented workers and good neighbors is not the way to sustain a diverse, economically healthy and happy community. "Where the work pool goes, so go the employers," she said.

She also offered scenarios that included couples ready to downsize, or even those older residents who want to stay in the community that they know and in which they have their roots, but need to leave the four-bedroom house behind in order to age in place.

That was a circumstance that had several in the audience nodding in understanding. The loss of too many people in this age group was of particular concern to Kerrie Wilson, who works for Cornerstones, the Reston-based nonprofit. "People who have retired or are near retirement are the backbones of many nonprofits and faith-based service organizations through their volunteering. So much gets accomplished in the community because of these volunteers."

Sturtevant also presented narratives about the housing needs of public and health sector workers, like teachers and law enforcement personnel, as well as the many residents who work in retail, restaurants, and other service positions. "Did you know that there are nearly 150,000 workers in Fairfax County earning less than $30,000 a year?" she asked. "And they are working hard and doing their best."

THE VIGNETTES, coupled with slides and graphs provided by the county, illustrated an issue that touches all sectors of the populace, young and old, below-poverty level earners and households above the mean average income for the region, in jobs as diverse as their backgrounds, ethnicities and religious beliefs.

"That's why we need all of you, all of us, working together to keep our community strong and growing," said Hudgins as she thanked the attendees at the close of the session.

The county will be holding more public forums as it heads toward its goal of producing a strategic plan for review by the end of the year. A website dedicated to the issue and keeping residents informed of future meetings and progress should be up and running shortly. Visit www.fairfaxcounty.gov\rha.

Local officials cut the ribbon on the new golf facilities at Burke Lake just in time for the summer golf season.

In celebration of the $6.6 million renovations at the Burke Lake Golf Center, a ribbon-cutting ceremony was held atop the new double-decker driving range on May 13. Presented by the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors and the Fairfax County Park Authority Board, the ceremony touched on the old and new aspects of the golf center.

Welcoming remarks were given by Fairfax County Park Authority Board Secretary Michael W. Thompson Jr. who touched on his time at the golf center as a child.

“When the weather was bad, you were out of luck,” said Thompson.

That was one of the initial issues with Burke Lake’s driving range — its disadvantage in inclement weather. The driving range used to be just 40 hitting stations, but there was no roof. The golf center’s manager, Louis Musolf, said they would often have to close the range because of the weather.

“We found the need to redevelop. We had a lot of times, especially during our peak hours, that people were waiting to hit golf balls,” said Musolf.

With the need for more stations and a solution to being rained out, the golf center contacted Hughes Group Architects to make the necessary changes to the driving range.

Amado Fernandez, a principal with Hughes Group, said initial discussions about the renovations were made around two years ago, following with the year-long design process.

"The existing facility that was here before followed roughly the same shape," said Fernandez. "The idea was to create a two-story element that would increase the number of tee boxes," he added.

After the plans were finalized, the golf center closed on Oct. 1 of last year to officially start the renovations.

The new driving range now has 64 lighted stations, 24 of them covered and heated. In addition, private functions can now reserve tee areas, and Wi-Fi and televisions are soon to come.

"In the past, we have always had to send (private functions) to Burke Lake Park and use one of the picnic shelters or the mini golf area," Musolf said.

The new reservable areas can seat 20 to 25 people, housing bistro tables and benches behind the stations.

Thompson also talked about the ongoing construction of the new clubhouse, set to open in October. The new facility will be 4,000 square feet compared to the one room, 800 square feet operation that is the current clubhouse right now. A larger outdoor patio will be constructed as well.

Attendees at the ribbon cutting were Fairfax County Supervisor Pat Herrity, Park Authority Director Kirk W. Kincannon and Golf Enterprises Manager Todd Johnson.

Johnson said that the new driving range "gives us a chance to execute our commitment to youth golf." The Burke Lake Golf Academy has already taken in 200 students in the three weeks it has been open. It offers clinics, camps, and private lessons to people of all ages.

Doris Huff, a Burke Lake Golf Center veteran and Springfield local, has been golfing for a "long, long, long time." She and her daughters, who have been golfing for four years now, come to the driving range between classes.

She plans to come to the range more often now that it is heated and covered, making it possible to comfortably drive balls in the colder, rainier weather.

"(The range) is different and much, much better than it was. It looks more dedicated," said Huff.

For more information about the new range and signing up for the golf academy, visit www.fairfaxcounty.gov/parks/golf/blgc/.

OPINION

The Ugliness of Prejudice

BY KENNETH R. "KEN" PLUM
STATE DELEGATE (D-36)

COMMENTARY

Last week without provocation a woman in the check-out line at a local grocery store told another customer — a Muslim woman — “I wish they didn’t let you in the country.” In the exchange that was recorded on a camera phone, the woman to whom the remark was directed explained that she had been born in the United States. Rather than leave it at that, the first woman went on saying, “Obama’s not in office anymore; you don’t have a Muslim in there anymore. He’s gone — he may be in jail in the future.”

I realize that there are more people than I would like to acknowledge that have strong prejudices against others because of their race, religion, ethnicity or other reason. It continues to shock me when I see the ugliness of the expression of such prejudices as the recording of this event provided. As the woman to whom the remarks were directed pointed out, it’s abnormal to start a conversation like that with someone you do not know. There really is something wrong with people who are so blinded by their prejudices that they feel compelled to lash out at a person who has done them no wrong. The comments reflect a deep-seated hatred that comes out for reasons only a mental health expert could help discover.

What is particularly troubling these days is the blurring of the line between political convictions and prejudice toward individuals. In our deeply divided political landscape, too often political views become opportunities to demonize people who hold different views. Unfortunately talk radio, social media and some cable news shows tend to invite this destructive phenomenon.

In addition to the repulsiveness I feel about the hateful comments, I was also saddened that social media and news accounts described the scene as a store in Reston, Va. I know from a lot of personal experience the amount of effort that so many people have made over the years to ensure that Reston is an open, welcoming and inclusive community. While I understand why the store did nothing to address the situation, I wish somehow there had been a disclaimer on the video: The woman speaking does not represent the views of the people of Reston.

The situation reminds us that building community is not a one-time occurrence, a workshop, or a feel-good session. Building a community of respect and love is an ongoing process that we work at a little every day. We greet those we meet; we hug each other; we attend each other’s houses of worship; we show respect to others; we speak out against hate and prejudices; we listen to each other. We use appropriate channels to discuss political views, and whether in person or online we stick to the issues and don’t resort to personal attacks.

A display of hateful and ugly prejudice as we have just witnessed must bring us together in mutual support and respect as we want Reston and every other community to display.

FCPS to Propose Increases in Class Sizes

BY MOLLIE REGAN

COMMENTARY

The lead-in for the Fairfax County Public Schools (FCPS) Proposed FY 2018 Budget states the following: “The FCPS FY 2018 (2017-18 school year) budget reflects the school system’s priorities. It’s also a communications tool that informs parents, staff members, students, and community members about our values and goals.”

If that is true, then why is FCPS proposing to balance its FY18 budget by increasing class sizes by 0.5 students in all elementary, middle and high schools?

Large class sizes have a negative impact on students’ ability to learn and succeed, and on teachers’ ability to teach. Large classes burn out good teachers and affect teacher decisions about whether to continue working at a school. Every time a good teacher leaves the employ of FCPS, we forfeit our investment in hiring and training that person.

In many recent meetings about teacher compensation, the School Board has expressed concerns about teacher attrition. In FCPS, we lose about 40 percent of our teachers in their first five years of employment, and we lose many more teachers after their fifth year. Class size is cited — both in FCPS and in a national study — as a top factor in teachers’ decisions to leave the school district.

At this critical time when we already suffer from teacher shortages and large class sizes, FCPS should not be considering additional class size increases as a means to save $14.7 million. There are alternatives that could better address the FY18 budget gap. Some alternatives actually reduce expenses. Others just change budget assumptions.

For example, the School Board could cut $15 million of other expenses with the understanding that in July, it would use the “found money” from the year-end FY 2017 budget review to restore those programs. This is exactly what the board did about six years ago, when Jack Dale was the FCPS superintendent.

Alternatively, FCPS could find $14.7 million by using more realistic assumptions about employee attrition. Every year, FCPS prepares its budget using unrealistically low attrition assumptions, which in turn consistently produce about $30 million/year of “found money” from higher-than-projected teacher attrition during the budget reviews.

Of course, if FCPS made a sustained commitment to reasonable class sizes, it could arguably avoid increasing the costs associated with that teacher attrition. Imagine the cost savings from retaining our teachers. What additional innovations could be used to reduce the expense of endlessly restaffing our classrooms and training a new workforce?

The FCPS Strategic Plan, “Ignite,” affirms its commitment to student success and a caring culture. Seeing “Ignite” in action would mean that our School Board representatives resolve the FCPS financial shortfall without again balancing its budget on the backs of our teachers and students.

Class Size Counts created an online petition asking the School Board not to increase elementary, middle and high school class sizes by 0.5 students across the board as part of the FY 2018 budget. Please sign the petition at <https://www.change.org/p/fairfax-county-public-schools-join-class-size-counts-to-oppose-the-core-academic-class-sizes-in-fcps> and join in the advocacy.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Press Needed More Than Ever

To the Editor:

Dear Members of the Press: We need you now more than ever. Republican Congressmen Jason Chaffetz and Devin Nunes quit their positions as chairmen of Congressional committees rather than have to investigate General Flynn, the Russian interference with our national elections, and the Russian involvement with the Trump administration.

President Trump has fired New York’s U.S. Attorney Preet Bharara, Attorney General Sally Yates and FBI Director James Comey, when they each turned up their investigatory heat. The American public is being given various explanations by various members of the Trump administration as to what’s going on. We need you now more than ever.

Vice President Pence advocates for all of President Trump’s actions.

Attorney General Sessions refuses to recuse himself. The prospect for an Independent prosecutor is tenuous. I hope the Senate Intelligence Committee stays strong. But we need you now more than ever.

The President may call you names. He may call you “fake news” or “the enemy of the people.” But he can’t fire you. Thank goodness for the First Amendment. We need you now more than ever. Don’t let us down.

COMMENTARY

Wishing Everyone a Happy, Fun, and Safe Summer

BY JOHN C. COOK
SUPERVISOR (R-BRADDOCK DISTRICT)

Summer is almost here, and we see our kids growing up, graduating grade levels, and perhaps moving on to college for the next chapter of their lives. We should also use these summer months as an opportunity to gather with friends and family and foster a greater sense of community. Memorial Day weekend, the Fourth of July, and pretty much any other summer weekend are synonymous with grilling, fireworks, and family and neighborhood fun. As someone who loves a nice steak or burger on a summer evening, I know just how important these activities are. Along with the increased heat, however, comes an increased risk of accidental fires. As chair of the Board of Supervisors' Public Safety Committee, I urge you to take appropriate precautions when grilling or using approved fireworks. Doing so can prevent serious injury, and even save a life.

Make sure to place your grill at least 15 feet away from any home, building, or other combustibles to ensure adequate air circulation and contained flames. Propane bottles should be kept away from the house (in a shed if you have one), as even empty tanks present a risk of fire. If you have a balcony on your apartment or condo, don't use a gas or charcoal grill on it. Doing so is against the law. Most importantly, do not place hot ashes in paper or plastic containers. Even if you do not see any embers, they could still be lurking within a pile of ash.

While summer just wouldn't be the same without fireworks, make sure you follow the law when using them, and adhere to important safety tips. Remember, any firework which explodes, emits a flame or sparks higher than 12 feet, or acts as a projectile, is prohibited by Fairfax County. Keep in mind that many people in the county are injured every year due to fireworks, and some are so seriously injured they are left with permanent damage. When using legal fireworks, place them on a flat surface, clear of any combustible material and clear of all buildings. Be sure to keep all bystanders at least 25 feet away from the fireworks, and read the directions provided. Do not permit young children to handle or light fireworks. Light them one at a time, and do not throw them.

Sparklers account for the majority of firework-related injuries. Young children should not use them as they can attain a temperature as high as 1800 degrees Fahrenheit. Finally, ensure fireworks are stored in a cool, dry place. Remember, there are many public fireworks displays that are often very enjoyable and safe.

Having fun during the summer is important, but so is safety. As your neighbor and Braddock District supervisor, I ask you not to allow your holiday weekend or other enjoyable event turn into a tragedy. Take the time to follow proper safety precautions when both grilling and using fireworks, and you can help prevent an unwanted visit from the County's Fire & Rescue Department.

Serving through Dance this Summer

George Mason University Students provide accessible dance education to underserved populations at home and abroad.

While most students will be heading home or on vacation to celebrate the end of the school year, six students from George Mason University will be volunteering their time to give back to the world through dance. In collaboration with Movement Exchange, an organization that unites dance and service globally, these individuals will be attending their long-awaited trip to Panama this May 28 through June 4.

This is George Mason University's second time to Panama with Movement Exchange and during this international dance exchange, participants will be taking and teaching classes with dance majors at the University of Panama, taking a variety of classes from professional Panamanian dancers, and providing free dance education to children at Aldea SOS Orphanage in Panama City and Malambo Orphanage in Arrajain.

Safety in the Water Advice in advance of summer swimming.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL

During the month of May, National Water Safety Month, water safety educators are waging a month-long campaign to educate the public about responsible water practices before the start of summer. The campaign is designed to help prevent drowning and water-related illness and injuries.

"The most important tip from swim experts [is] to have your child in perpetual swim lessons," said Gina Bewersdorf, who owns Goldfish Swim School in Reston. "Situations will always arise in which we or our children are around water, [like] at a friend's pool party, vacation near a lake, or a boating trip, so learning the necessary skills to stay safe is vital. It only takes a second for a child or adult to unsuspectingly fall into a body of water."

Constant adult supervision is the first and best way to prevent accidents in and around water, says Lisa S. Grepps, director, Marketing & Communications, The Association of Pool & Spa Professionals in Alexandria. She also recommends additional safeguards to help prevent children from gaining unsupervised access to a pool or spa or to warn of a child's presence. "But don't get lulled into a false sense of security with barriers and other devices as they are just backups to the primary means of accident prevention which is constant adult supervision," said Grepps.

In addition to learning to swim, Bewersdorf recommends making sure that children are taught water safety skills as well as how to perform CPR on both adults and children. "We recommend a child enroll in swim lessons as early as possible [and] year round, not just during the warmer months. Persistent swim lessons are proven to be incredibly beneficial in order to keep these life-saving skills sharp" she said. "We offer classes as young as four months old in which the parents are constantly with their infants. This gets the child used to simply being in and around water and they learn simple safety skills."

When choosing a pool, check for an on-duty lifeguard. In cases where a lifeguard is not available, look for accessible safety equipment such as a rescue ring or pole.

"We want people to have a safe and fun time swimming and that's why [we] issue permits to all public pool facilities and routinely inspect them to ensure they are being operated in a safe and healthy manner, in accordance with Fairfax County Code," said Martin A. Thompson, Environmental Health supervisor for Fairfax County. "It's also important that swimmers take steps to maximize the health benefits of swimming while minimizing the risk of injury or illness to themselves and others."

Thompson advises adhering to other safety guidelines from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) which include looking to see if the drain at the bottom of the deep end is visible, staying out of the pool if you have diarrhea, covering any open wounds with waterproof bandages, showering before entering the pool and only using flotation devices that are Coast Guard approved.

New To Some, Old News To Others

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

For those of you unfamiliar with my column: in Burke, Springfield, Fairfax, Fairfax Station/Clifton/Lorton, Mount Vernon and Alexandria, welcome aboard the Kenny train. I have been writing a weekly column for Connection Newspapers since December 1997 appearing primarily in our "Tuesday papers," as we call them: Vienna/Oakton, McLean, Great Falls, Reston, Oak Hill/Herndon, Arlington, Chantilly, Centre View and Potomac. The question has persisted among friends and family: Ken he continue to, as my older brother Richard jokes, "churn out this dribble?" Apparently so, if the last 19 and half years are any indication.

Back in the day when I first had to characterize my column for various local yearly Press Association editorial contests (of which I have won nearly a dozen awards), I would write "Everything in general about nothing in particular." A great friend of mine, Edward Faine, himself an accomplished author — of children's and jazz books, and a small press publisher as well, has described my columns as "Thoughtful humor and insightful commentary." Perhaps between these two quotes you'll get a sense of what you're likely to get from my weekly wondering.

And so it continued until June 2009. That's when I published my first column about a diagnostic process which had been ongoing since New Years Day which ultimately lead to a lung cancer diagnosis delivered to "Team Lourie" on Feb. 27, 2009 (you bet you remember the date). That column, entitled "Dying to Find Out, Sort Of," chronicled the process, excruciating as it was/is that one often endures attempting to determine the cause of a medical problem; in my case, a pain in my left-side rib cage which a day or so later, migrated to my right-side and eventually took my breath away — almost literally, especially when inhaling and/or bending over. This difficulty forced me off the couch and into my car for a drive over to the Emergency Room. Once the diagnosis was confirmed, I wrote another column entitled "Dying to Tell You, Sort Of" which detailed the findings of the nearly eight weeks the process took to specify my diagnosis: stage IV, non-small cell lung cancer (NSCLC). Out of the blue, I had become "terminal," as my oncologist described me, and given a "13 month to two-year" prognosis to boot. Surreal, which is a common description offered by many in similar situations, is how one feels after receiving news of this kind, and only begins to tell the tale of the change and evolution in the individual's life living forward into treatment and subsequently beyond into the great unknown.

This 'great unknown' is mostly what I have written about and published ever since; "cancer columns" (original I know) is what I call them. Occasionally, I will write a non-cancer column, one a month or so, depending on my experiences. These columns will address non-cancer issues of the day, ranging from the sublime to the ridiculous. Most recently topics have included the movie "The Exorcist," "Exercising a Demon," paying for things with a credit card: "Credit the Card," reacting to advertising for grass seed and riding mowers: "And So It Begins," and buying in bulk: "Bulky Boy," but never/well, almost never do I write about my wife, Dina; I have been warned.

Though the recurring theme of these columns is cancer, the content is rarely morbid or dare I say, self-indulgent, believe it or not. I try to make fun a very "unfun" set of circumstances. I'm still writing about life; now however, it's life in the cancer lane, a road unlike any I had ever traveled before. Nevertheless, I've gotten through eight years and nearly three months of it relatively incident free, save for a week in the hospital three and a half years ago. And yes, I am still undergoing treatment.

I hope you readers will be semi amused at the slings and arrows of outrageous misfortune upon which my columns are based. Please know: the significance of their content is not that it is me writing them, it is that cancer is being written about.
