Resource Center Joins DoMore24

Centreville Labor Resource Center challenges the community to raise $5,000 for new computers and training programs for workers in 24 hours, on June 8. Go to the Centreville Immigration Forum website for details, or check www.DoMore24.org/npos/centreville-labor-resource-center

DoMore24 is sponsored by United Way of the National Capitol Area, and gives prizes throughout the 24 hours for "most money raised" or "most individual donations received" or "most selfies posted."

Centreville Labor Resource Center is now nearly 6 years old, and needs to step into the 21st century with programs to train workers in new skills. Workers need new skills to meet the demands of employers, and to improve their English ability. Approximately 85 percent of workers at the center are new immigrants, and others are long-time American residents. The center programs are offered at no cost to members or to employers, and the nonprofit Centreville Immigration Forum raises funds to provide this community service. This past year Center staff mediated 1,097 jobs between workers and employers, ensuring that both parties were in agreement on job details and fair wages to be paid. Moreover, the Center served about 300 members last year through our job placement services, and even more through community outreach, classes and special events.

Go to Domore24 online, to donate. Donations of $24 or more will help CLRC win prizes, and gifts will be multiplied many times over. <https://domore24.org/npos/centreville-labor-resource-center>

‘Emotional Journey and Exciting New Show’

Encore presents
“That’s Life”
at NOVA.

By BONNIE HOBBS

Take creative choreography, talented dancers, upbeat music and mix well. The result is Encore’s upcoming show, “That’s Life.” It takes the stage Saturday, June 10, at 8 p.m., and Sunday, June 11, at 3:30 p.m.

Performances are in NOVA’s Richard Ernst Theater, 8333 Little River Turnpike, Annandale. Tickets are $19-26 at the door or via www.Encore-tap.org. For more information, call 703-222-5511.

“We have an exciting show filled with wonderful, new dance numbers,” said Director/Choreographer Raynor van der Merwe. “It’s a dance review, and I chose music that talks about love, life and relationships and the journeys we take.”

There are 25 dancers — two dozen girls and one boy — and, said van der Merwe, “They’ve been a total inspiration to me, this year. They’ve embraced everything that was thrown at them. They’ve worked so hard and came with such open minds and open hearts that they’ve really grown.”

The show begins with the iconic song, “That’s Life,” and ends with the appropriately titled, “Big Finish.” And in between, said van der Merwe, “The music takes you through an emotional journey. The audience will really enjoy the diversity of rhythm and music. The finale features the dance company’s two, graduating seniors, Jenna Frisby and Claire Griese. I’m super proud of them, and they have beautiful singing voices.”

Frisby, an 18-year-old senior at Centreville High, has been dancing since age 3. “I love performing — just getting onstage and sharing my hard work,” she said. “I’m in my 10th season with Encore, and it’s taught me dedication because I’ve had to give up a lot to manage my schedule. I dance about 25 hours a week, so it’s hard to balance that with schoolwork.”

But she has no regrets because of her love of dance. In this show, she said, each number flows into the next. Her favorite is “You Can’t Stop the Beat” from the musical, “Hairspray,” because “It’s a really high-energy, jazz number with the full company. And each [ability] level of dancer wears a different color dress — either bright orange, pink or green.”

Frisby said the audience will love the show’s variety of dance styles, plus both the fast and slow songs. In the fall, she’ll attend Baylor University to major in communications and journalism. “I’ve been with Encore for so long, it’s really hard to leave,” she said. “But I’m excited to see what the next chapter of my life will be.”

Griese, a Chantilly High senior, is headed to Oklahoma City University to eventually major in dance. She’s been an Encore member for seven years. “It’s taught me a lot about responsibility and following through with my commitments in life,” she said. “I also have better time-management skills because of this, so it’s about more than just dancing. At this age, kids don’t always understand the importance of putting a lot of hard work into what you want to do.”

Her favorite number in this show is “Cry Me a River” by Michael Bublé’s. “It’s the best to dance to and I love this music,” said Griese. “I’ve always bugged Raynor about putting in this song; and, this year, I told her, ‘It’s time.’ So one day, she started choreographing it in class and we all loved it.”

It’s a contemporary number with a jazz feel, but more intense, said Griese. “I like changing it up and doing something like that,” she said. “We wear two-piece, turquoise dresses with beading, and some girls will dance with silky, blue fabric. It’s really cool, and we’re excited to see how the lighting looks with it onstage.”

Overall, she said, “We have a lot of new dances and choreography this year, so people familiar with our shows will see something different. And in the finale, Jenna and I will sing on top of big platforms while other girls are spinning us around.”

Also in the show is Chantilly sophomore Rithika Ashok, who’s also danced since age 3 and has been with Encore since she was 8. “My mom is a dance teacher so, from a young age, it was instilled in me,” she said. “But I enjoy dancing; after being at school, with all the stress, I can lose myself in dance.”

In the upcoming show, Ashok especially likes the song, “Too Darn Hot,” a fast-paced, stylistic number with a jazz dance. “We wear black-and-red velvet dresses for it,” she said. “I really like fast songs, and this is an upbeat one that gets the audience going.”

“Cut, Print” is another of her favorites. “It’s a lyrical jazz dance, and we wear flowy white dresses and dance with pink fabric as we’re entering the stage,” said Ashok. She, too, said this new production should be a hit with the audience. “It’s a really good representation of Broadway-style numbers and is the closest you can get to Broadway here,” she said. “The whole show is upbeat and good for all ages, and everyone will enjoy it.”

Encore’s new show, “That’s Life,” takes the stage June 10-11 at NOVA.

Zany, Fast-Paced Show Celebrates Differences

Chantilly High presents children's play, "Imagine If."

BY BONNIE HOBBS

Aidan is a 6-year-old boy with an imaginary friend, Ralph. Trouble is, no one else believes he's real — not even Aidan's mom or sister Nadia — until they all end up in Ralph's imaginary world.

That's the premise of Chantilly High's upcoming children's show, "Imagine If." The curtain rises Friday, June 2, at 7 p.m.; Saturday, June 3, at 2 and 7 p.m.; and Sunday, June 4, at 2 p.m. Tickets are $5 at the door or via www.chantillyhsdrama.com.

This original comedy was written by Chantilly Theater Director Shannon Khatcheressian. "I wrote it four years ago about my son Aidan, so it's funny watching the show now and seeing how much my own kids have grown and changed since then," she said. "Ironically, my daughter Nadia has grown into the character I wrote for her when she was 3 months old."

The play features a cast and crew of 75 Drama I and II students; and, said Khatcheressian, "I'm excited about this group of kids. We have a lot of new faces this year, in both the cast and crew, and they've worked very hard together. They've honed their acting craft and abilities and have established a great sense of comedic timing. And all that makes for a fast-paced, zany show."

She said the story revolves around "accepting others even though they're different — and celebrating those differences. The best part about this show is that every family member will be able to relate to a character onstage, enjoy themselves and, hopefully, get a nice reminder about what's truly important in life — our families, friends and relationships."

Portraying Aidan is sophomore Jared Belsky. "At the beginning, he's pretty timid and shy, but relaxed and open with his best friend, Ralph," said Belsky. "He's more confident with Ralph than when he's at school. But since Ralph is imaginary, he gets picked on for talking to someone that no one else thinks is real."

Making matters worse, whenever Ralph does something crazy, Aidan is blamed for it. So eventually, Ralph invites him to his world to meet his friends there and have an adventure. But humans aren't allowed in Ralph's world, so Aidan has to be disguised so the other imaginary friends won't catch him.

"It's a lot of fun playing Aidan because he's young, so I get to play off his childish innocence," said Belsky. "And I interact with all these extreme, wacky characters because Aidan is fascinated by them."

As for the play, he said, "We have a really good cast — everyone's very talented — and it's enjoyable for both kids and adults. Everyone's going to have a good time." It's fun being in a children's show, said Belsky, because "The actors aren't as stressed, so we're having a good time onstage. And since it's over-the-top, no one's embarrassed to make a fool of themselves."

Sophomore Shreya Surapaneni plays Aidan's best buddy, Dylan. "She's a really wacky, goofy troublemaker and loves goofing around with Aidan," said Surapaneni. "She's spontaneous and super-silly, but is afraid he's going to grow up and forget about her."

She said this role allows her to bring out her inner child. "Things I can't do as me, I can do as her — like dance whenever I want — and it's not weird," said Surapaneni. "In a children's play, you get to do all these silly things that make you and all the kids laugh. And it makes me happy to see them enjoying themselves."

Surapaneni said the audience "will love the good friendship between Aidan and Dylan, and how one's like, 'Let's do this,' and the other's like, 'No, we can't.' And the costumes are wacky and hilarious to look at. Without the actors even saying a line, people will just see them and start giggling."

Freshman Piper Read is in charge of costumes and is having a great time creating them. "We either put them together out of things we already had or ordered them for the show," she said. "There are a lot of fun, bright colors on these crazy, imaginary characters. They're things that children would imagine, because that's the goal of the show."

For example, she said, Princess Ice Cream will wear a waffle-cone skirt and an ice-cream shirt with sprinkles. Other characters include a mermaid, a dragon and an alien. And one girl — who's both girly and a tomboy — will wear a Washington Nationals jersey and baseball-themed hair bow with a tutu and red leggings.

"People will really like being in a child's world," said Read. "It's all bright and colorful, and I think they'll like the costumes, too, as well as the plot. It's fun to be in an imaginary world for an hour and a half."

THE SHOW'S production manager is junior Caroline Woodson, and she's been guiding the production team of underclassmen to make sure all the costumes, props and makeup are ready. "There are a lot of fun props for this show," she said. "We ordered a few hundred flowers because each audience member will get one at the start of Act Two. Then, when prompted, they'll hold them up and become a flower field — and the actors will search among them for particular colors."

In addition, said Woodson, "We're building an enormous boulder out of wood, papier mâché and chicken wire. And we're also finding cool lamps and comforters for Aidan's bedroom. The set even has a slide and will be super-bright and colorful. The scenes take place in Aidan's school, bedroom and under his bed — which is where the imaginary world, the Land of Fun Friends, is."

The makeup will also be creative and inventive, said Woodson. "Some of the imaginary friends will be covered in polka dots," she said. "The alien will have crazy-colored face paint and lipstick, and one fun friend will have his face made up like a dog."

She's enjoyed getting to know all the underclassmen and teaching them because, she said, "They'll all be in charge of these things one day."

Regarding the show, said Woodson, "It's really cool because the kids will love the imaginary things coming to life on stage. And the parents will get all the jokes, too, just like the children, so everyone will enjoy it."

Police Practices Improve, Citizens Demand More

Board cites progress on Police Practices improvements, but some citizens demand more.

BY ANDREA WORKER
CENTRE VIEW

John Lovaas admitted that he was a bit of a skeptic. Speaking at the May 22 meeting to update Fairfax County residents on the Ad Hoc Police Practices Review Commission's recommendations, the Restonian acknowledged that he hadn't been expecting all that much to come from the 32-member commission established by Board of Supervisors Chairman Sharon Bulova — in spite of the fact that Lovaas had actually been chosen as an alternate representative.

"But I am more and more impressed by what's coming out of the implementation stage," said Lovaas.

Lovaas may now be cautiously optimistic, but the meeting that highlighted progress, also subjected its panelists to criticism, shouts, protest signs, and a dose of expressed disbelief from many in the small, but vocal audience.

To provide the update and take questions from the audience were Bulova; Supervisor John Cook (R-Braddock); Police Chief Edwin Roessler, Jr.; Richard Schott, independent police auditor; Adrian Steel, Ad Hoc Commission vice chair; Shirley Ginwright, Communities of Trust chair; and Supervisor John Cook (R-Braddock), as chair of the board's Public Safety Committee, co-hosted a public forum updating citizens on the recommendations made by the Ad Hoc Police Practices Review Commission.

David Rohrer, deputy county executive for public safety.

Bulova opened the session at the Government Center by announcing that the board had already approved and implemented or put in motion 172 of the 202 recommendations that the commission presented in its final report on Oct. 20, 2016. "I am proud ... that in the first year 88 percent of the recommendations have been approved," said Bulova, stressing that the board had taken the commission's findings seriously, and worked in collaboration with the Sheriff's Office, as well, to ensure the best possible results.

TWO NEW FORMS of independent oversight for the Fairfax County Police Department (FCPD) were established because of the Ad Hoc Commission. The supervisors recently named nine members — chosen from more than 140 applicants — to the Civilian Review Panel, to be chaired by Steel. In addition to the Review Panel, Schott has been named as the independent police auditor, to report directly to the Board of Supervisors.

The Civilian Panel will have the authority to review completed FCPD internal administrative investigations regarding civilian complaints against an officer. They may hold meetings to inform the public on how investigations were conducted. They may review complaints of harassment or discrimination, reckless endangerment of a detainee, or serious violations of Fairfax County or police procedures, and misuse of authority, as part of their duties.

The independent police auditor will handle the cases of police use-of-force that result in serious injury or death.

The Ad Hoc Commission, made up of private citizens and members of the law enforcement, legal, and academic communities, as well as members of the media and public relations arena, divided their review responsibilities into five categories: Use-of-force, independent oversight, mental health and crisis intervention training (CIT), communications, and diversity and recruiting.

Cook chairs the board's Public Safety Committee, and had the task of bringing the recommendations to the committee and seeing that they were "worked through, not just rubber stamped one way or the other."

The majority of the recommendations — 34 percent — came from the use-of-force sub-committee. Even though review of police practices had been on-going before, the impetus for the establishment of the Ad Hoc Commission itself came after the 2013 fatal shooting of John Geer of Springfield, by then Fairfax County Patrolman Adam Torres, while Geer stood unarmed in his own doorway.

After Geer's death, with no information being made available to the public, several community groups formed and petitioned for reforms and more accountability from county law enforcement agencies. In early

Remembering on Memorial Day 2017

On Memorial Day, we remember all of those who have died in military service, more than 400,000 in World War II, more than 30,000 in Korea, more than 50,000 in Vietnam.

As many as 620,000 soldiers died in the Civil War, stunningly about 2 percent of the population at that time. To compare, while more than 2.5 million soldiers have served in Iraq and Afghanistan, that number is still less than one percent of the U.S. population.

Since Sept. 11, 2001, more than 6,880 U.S. military service men and women have died in support of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

On Memorial Day, there are many ways to remember the fallen, including a visit to Arlington National Cemetery, or many other local commemorations. But at a minimum, wherever you are, you can observe a moment of silence at 12:01 p.m. along with Iraq and Afghanistan Veterans of America (IAVA), or you can set your own moment at some point during the day.

More than 52,000 U.S. military service members have been wounded in action, although that number is likely to be revised upward. In 2013, the military confirmed traumatic brain injury in more than 220,000 of the more than 2.5 million troops who have served in Iraq and Afghanistan. The long-term consequences of many of these injuries, including mental health consequences, are unknown, but they will require a national commitment to excellence in health care and services for both active duty military personnel and veterans. Virginia's U.S. Senators Mark Warner and Tim Kaine continue to advocate for better service from the Veterans Administration.

Cuts proposed to health care, food assistance and other aspects of the social safety net in the proposed budget would disproportionately harm veterans.

EVERY YEAR around Memorial Day, this newspaper names the local men and women who have died in military service since Sept. 11, 2001.

Marcus D. Prince, 22, of Norfolk, Virginia died April 26, 2016 in Juffir, Bahrain. Prince was a U.S. Navy civilian who was supporting Operation Inherent Resolve.

After Sept. 11, 2001, Cahir decided to leave his career as a journalist and join the Marine Corps. Project Sticker Shock on June 12

BY VALERIE NGUYEN
CENTREVILLE HIGH SCHOOL

It's prom/graduation season with summer break a few weeks away, and high school members of the Youth Council of the Unified Prevention Coalition of Fairfax County want youth and adults to know the Virginia laws to prevent underage drinking. They'll be taking part in another Project Sticker Shock event June 12 in the Annandale and Herndon areas.

Adolescents and full-time college students most often use substances for the first time during June or July, according to the U.S. Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration's National Survey on Drug Use and Health. So now is a great time to remind everyone of laws to protect underage youth.

The Project Sticker Shock community awareness program is designed to prevent people 21 and older from purchasing alcohol and providing it to underage individuals. Participants visit partnering stores and place stickers with a warning message about the penalties for providing alcohol to anyone under 21 and using a fake ID to purchase alcohol.

In December, I participated in a Project Sticker Shock in the Centreville area. This was my first time doing this, so I wasn't sure what to expect. I was quite nervous going into the stores as this was a new concept with me.

Thankfully, I went with Ms. Amanda Pusey (a health prevention specialist from the Fairfax-Falls Church Community Services Board), and we met up with some other youth members from the Grace Community Center's Youth Council who also were enthusiastic on limiting alcohol and raising awareness for mental health as well.

in the event, along with other adult volunteers.

It was really fun to see other teens my age involved in something so vital to our community. We all started with a large roll of stickers provided by the Virginia ABC education unit. I was unsure if we would ever use up all of the stickers as it was quite a ton, but we managed sure enough to use up all the rolls sticking the stickers on various beer containers warning buyers to not buy alcohol for those underage and the consequences of giving alcohol to teens.

I had a really great time meeting with new like-minded teens who had the same mission statement. It was fun to have a competition to see who could put the most stickers on the most amounts of containers! Who knew just sticking stickers all over (my childhood dream) could be so much fun? While at the same time knowing that I was a small part in a huge impact in my community hopefully one day ending alcohol abuse once and for all.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Vote in Primary

To the Editor:

The Virginia gubernatorial primary is coming up on June 13, and my choice for the Republican nominee is Ed Gillespie.

Ed knows what Virginia needs to start growing again. He's putting forward policies to cut Virginians' taxes, restore faith in our government, improve how our state government operates, boost job creation, and support small businesses.

Looking beyond the June primary, Ed is the candidate best positioned to win in November because he has demonstrated a commitment to serving as governor for all Virginians. He's running a positive, issues-based campaign of which we can all be proud.

Out on the trail, I've often heard Ed talk about how he we get our economy growing again. He believes that with all of valuable resources, Virginia should be in the top five states when it comes to economic growth — not the bottom five. His policies will make that vision a reality.

I am confident that together we can make Virginia the best state to do business. Ed Gillespie has my vote, and I hope you'll support him, too.

Worthy of Condemnation

To the Editor:

The barbaric attack against innocent civilian lives in Manchester is worthy of condemnation.

Around 10:30 p.m. on Monday, May 22, thousands of excited children and their parents were just leaving the Manchester Arena, having spent the last few hours at the concert. They were just out with their loved ones having a good time. It was at that moment lives changed forever. A blast in the walkway between Manchester Arena and Victoria Station went off claiming the lives of 22, and injuring countless others. As Ahmadi Muslims, we extend our condolences to the British people and stand with them in mourning their loss.

While some may claim that the perpetrators have acted in the name of Islam, nothing could be farther from reality. The irony is all the more apparent as the holy and peaceful month of Ramadan is less than a week away. Instead of preparing for

'A Day to Remember'

Students with special needs enjoy their own Day Prom.

BY ASHLEY CLAIRE SIMPSON

More than 16 years ago, Poplar Tree Elementary School's then special education teacher, Chris Pascarella, had a vision of her students' upcoming high school experience. She just couldn't accept the reality that the students before her, who loved music and moving to all kinds of rhythms, might not get to experience a high school prom. Pascarella felt that they deserved a signature dance where they could make some lifelong memories. So, she organized a small prom specifically for high school students with special needs.

Since the early 2000s, this prom, with each year's theme being "A Day to Remember," has grown into an annual springtime event that brings hundreds of students together from schools across Fairfax County Public Schools (FCPS). This May, 336 high school students were able to experience the 16th Annual Day Prom — all with the help of 205 teachers and general education student volunteers.

"When I taught special needs students at Poplar Tree, I knew they loved music," Pascarella said. "When they were old enough to be going to high school, I started organizing a small dance for the special needs students at Herndon High School and two other schools. At first, we had the event at the Hyatt in Reston, but we've since outgrown that space. It grew from three schools, to now students in special ed programs from 18 schools."

Day Prom, hosted at the Waterford in Fair Oaks, has become an annual event that students anticipate for much of the academic year. The annual dance has gotten so large that organizers had to break the event into two days. This year, the two dances took place from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Wednesday, May 17, and the again on Wednesday, May 24.

"Of course, it's so rewarding to see Day Prom come together every year," said Pascarella. "The students start asking about it at the beginning of every school year."

Although this prom is not an official FCPS event, its execution takes the collaboration and cooperation of special needs teachers and Parent Teacher Student Associations (PTSA's) from each school that participates. The Waterford donates the space to hold the event, and the deejay contributes his time and service free of charge. The rest of it is up to teachers and parents to make sure these students get the prom they look forward to every year, even getting creative where necessary.

"In previous years, many of the schools used to send the students in limos," Pascarella said. "Many schools now use the FCPS buses. Some schools fund-raise, and some PTSA's make donations in order to collect money for food, transportation, and everything else."

The morning of Wednesday, May 24, students from nine high schools arrived at the Waterford — Chantilly, Herndon, Lake Braddock, Lee, Oakton, Robinson, Stuart,

Students from Westfield High School gather outside their school for the buses to take them to the Day Prom.

Westfield and Woodson.

Girls stepped off the school buses in vibrant dresses, and the young men entered the Waterford in button-down shirts, suit jackets, and, many in ties. Before they entered the ballroom, with a wide wooden dance floor surrounded by round tables for taking breaks and eating lunch, teachers and student volunteers pinned boutonnières to the boys' suit jackets and slid corsages onto the girls' wrists.

David Raich, a special education teacher at Westfield High School, arrived at the dance with two busloads of students. He said the energy among his students was nothing short of electric.

"They look forward to their prom," Raich said. "They talk about it all year. And, we as teachers spend classroom time preparing them for meeting new people from other schools, for dancing, and we review the proper manners for the event. Before the dance starts, some of the female teachers will do hair and makeup for some of the students. Male teachers will help tie and fasten the ties. It's really like Christmas for them. They get off the bus with big smiles. It's really good for self-esteem."

Teachers and case managers from special needs programs attend the dance as both chaperones and as part of a support system for their students.

Speech pathologists Erin Andreani and Stacy Pete, both from Lee High School, came to the dance prepared to help their students exercise communication skills.

"If we see one of our students needing an intervention as they try to communicate with any of the other students here, we're here to step in and help them facilitate a conversation," said Andreani, who also works at West Springfield. "Being here allows us to see how our kids are reaching their communication goals outside the classroom. And, for the kids here who do go to the general ed prom with their own school, Day Prom is great preparation."

Pete enjoys being at Day Prom both to see her students demonstrate what they've learned in the classroom, and to witness them enjoying themselves in a typical social setting.

"We like to see our kids out in the community, and, in this case, getting to have a prom of their own," Pete said. "They don't have to miss out on fun things. Here, they get to enjoy what everyone, including the gen ed kids, does."

Even though their time at the Day Prom was a work day for school staff members, the teachers said there is no way that Day Prom can compare even remotely to a regular day in the classroom.

"For most of these kids, a late night prom would just be too much," said Marianne McKeon, a career preparation teacher at Robinson. "Here, they get to experience a semi-formal dance. They all love music so you get to see their little walls come down. This is a day they can be with their buddies, having a good time, without us hovering."

Just like any classic high school dance, teachers stood at the edge of the dance floor nodding to the beat of both today's hits and more classic party songs like the "YMCA" and "The Cupid Shuffle." At this prom, some teachers and student volunteers were on the dance floor, making sure that everyone, even the students in wheelchairs, could lose themselves in the cheerful music.

After 16 years of Day Prom, Pascarella said that planning for it has almost become second nature to her. Booking venues and designating tasks to different groups of teachers is practically reflexive to her. What she will never get used to, or take for granted, is the feeling she gets from seeing all the students soaking in everything at their own prom.

"They are just so happy," Pascarella said, watching some of the students skip from the room where their photos were taken, into the ballroom. "I have no doubt that when I retire, someone else will take over. This event has become too important. Every year, without fail, both parents and students start talking about it in September, and everyone involved is excited to start the planning process in winter."

Students from nine high schools — Chantilly, Herndon, Lake Braddock, Lee, Oakton, Robinson, Stuart, Westfield and Woodson — take to the dance floor.

Police Practices Under Public Scrutiny

2015 protests demanding “Justice for John Geer” were held outside police headquarters and the county government center.

The public did not learn the name of the officer involved in the shooting, or many of the relevant details until 17 months after the incident, when the information was released by a court order. The demand for more transparency did not fade away. In March of 2015, Bulova received the board’s support to create the Ad Hoc Commission with the mission to “review FCPD policies and practices related to critical incidents, use-of-force training policies, threat assessments, as well as those within the Internal Affairs Division.”

While insisting that avoiding any loss of life during police-public interaction had always been the guiding standard, at the meeting Cook said that one result of the commission’s efforts was a re-commitment to the “Sanctity of Life” philosophy. Cook referenced revisions made to FCPD policies. Last updated in 2013, revised General Order 540 on the subject of the use-of-force by county law enforcement personnel took effect on March 31 of this year. The order will be reviewed again in January of 2019, to determine its effectiveness and make any additional revisions if necessary.

Roessler also made mention of the revised policies, explaining that a number of policies had been consolidated into “one concise document” to clarify the appropriate actions to be taken while carrying out their duties, and the proper reporting required after the use of force by county police officers.

WITH 52 ADVISEMENTS, the communications sub-committee of the commission came in second, targeting the transparency complaints and addressing the timeline gap between a use-of-force event and the public’s access to the details.

Roessler announced the establishment of a Public Affairs Bureau within the FCPD. The chief also mentioned pages on the FCPD’s website where information on use-of-force incidents are made available, including links to press conferences and briefings by Roessler and other officials.

Shirley Ginwright is the chair of the Fairfax County Communities of Trust Committee (COTC), a diverse citizen group “focused on strengthening and building positive relationships between public safety agencies and the communities they serve.” Since its inception in December, 2014, COTC has been looking for ways to connect law enforcement with the residents they serve. They have a particular interest in programs that focus on the county’s youth, and cutting off the “supply” of youngsters in the school-to-prison pipeline. Ginwright invited the audience to attend the COTC’s upcoming “Public Safety Day” on June 3 in Lorton.

Despite the numerous high notes in the one-year Ad Hoc Police Practices Review Commission’s report card, things got heated during the public commentary session. Caycee Utley, lead organizer with Showing up for Racial Justice (SURJ) Northern Virginia, castigated all of the panelists over the death of 37-year-old Natasha McKenna, diagnosed with schizophrenia, bipolar disorder and depression from the age of 14. The 5’ 4,” 130-pound African-American McKenna, in custody at the Fairfax Adult Detention Center on an outstanding warrant for attacking a police officer, was tasered multiple times when sheriff’s deputies tried to put her in a wheeled restraint chair. At the time, McKenna was handcuffed behind her back, shackled around the legs with a bobble strap connecting the restraints, and had a spit mask placed over her face.

McKenna went into cardiac arrest shortly after being tasered. She was revived, but died five days later when it was determined that she had no brain activity, and life support was discontinued.

“Whose side are you on?” shouted several members of the SURJ group, waving their posters and pointing to an empty seat with a sign reading “Natasha McKenna” placed upon it.

“We don’t want to be on sides,” answered Cook.

The new police internal auditor, Schott, added, “This is what I have been hired to address.”

Both Roessler and Bulova tried to explain that the case of McKenna and some of the others being referenced by the SURJ supporters were not within their direct purview, citing that the Sheriff’s Office does not report to the Board of Supervisors.

“So nobody protects us from them?” Utley replied. “What pressures have you put on the sheriff?”

Attendee Jenifer Hitchcock “couldn’t understand how they cleared the deputies” involved in McKenna’s death.

AT ONE POINT during the public comment phase, Cook refused to respond to “people yelling out of turn” and Bulova threatened to adjourn the meeting.

After Utley said, “There can’t be any trust until there is justice,” Bulova invited her to “talk personally” after the meeting.

Several of the citizen speakers described the Civilian Review Panel and the police auditor as “toothless” — lacking in the power to do anything. “Smoke and mirrors,” said Mary Tracy of Alexandria. “The county has a long way to go on this. What about body cams? The Department of Justice was offering $1 million grants, but we made no efforts to get them.”

Several of the panelists explained that the auditor is prohibited under Virginia Law from investigating or conducting interviews. Citizens responded that they were willing to help the board get those changes made at the General Assembly, “just show us what to do. Support us.”

Kofi Annan, president of the Fairfax NAACP, took a more conciliatory approach in his remarks, calling the work done so far “a good start,” but he challenged the county to look into the disparity in the treatment of blacks versus whites within the legal system and in detention. Annan called for measures to track such information and make it easily available to the public.

George Becerra of Burke, a community advocate and familiar face at public meetings on diverse issues around the county, asked a different kind of question of the panelists. He glanced around the large auditorium, then, pointing to the small numbers in attendance, Becerra asked “How will you change your outreach efforts?”

In response, Ginwright with Communities of Trust referred again to her organization’s Public Safety Days campaigns. After the meeting, Becerra expressed his disappointment with the answer. He acknowledged that citizens were equally responsible for informing themselves and in becoming engaged, but said that the information is often hard to find and overwhelming. With so many media relations personnel and staffers, Becerra thinks just a bit more of the work should fall on the county’s side of the fence.

“During campaigns, politicians find a way to bombard your email with information and requests for donations and support.” Becerra wants to know why something similar can’t be done for these important issues and meetings. “There’s maybe 40 people here tonight. Forty people out of a population of 1.1 million. That’s a lot of voices going unheard.”

Price Points — In the Wrong Direction

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Not that I need a pound bag of M&Ms to weigh 16 actual ounces (it's now down to 10.70 oz.) or a half gallon of ice cream to weigh 64 ounces (rather than the 48 oz. it currently is) or the "family" size bag of Utz potato chips to measure more than its current/meager/non-typical-family size of 9.5 ounces (down from 14 ounces that I remember), nevertheless, I do need to feel the love, and right now I don't. I sort of understand price points and the business models ingrained to retain customer loyalty (price matters more than size, generally), but I am hard-pressed to ignore the fact that even though I'm spending the same amount of money as I always have, I'm not getting anywhere near the same amount of product as I always have.

Not that the few items I've listed here are staples (well, maybe not to you they aren't), or the necessary building blocks of a healthy diet, they are pieces to a puzzle which characterizes some of my eating habits — and probably some of yours, too. After all, we are all victims of advertising messages which bombard us 24-7, on television, on radio, in print and on devices. In a way, we're all sitting ducks targeted to quack accordingly because some entity/marketing strategist knows who we are, what we're doing and when we're doing it. It's not exactly "Big Brother," but it's a bit more than "Little Sister."

My brother, Richard and I grew up in the 50s. We ate cookies, candy and snack cakes until the cows came home, and we didn't even live on a farm. Quite the opposite, we lived in suburbia, seven miles from Boston, according to the sign on Rte. 9. We ate dessert after breakfast, lunch and dinner and a few times in between: after school and before bedtime. Why? Because my mother had been non-stop advertised-to about the importance of calcium and the best way for children to get calcium was to drink eight glasses of milk per day to "build strong bones and healthy bodies." And the only way to get us boys to drink that much milk was to feed us something for which milk was a kind of elixir: cookies, cakes, snack cakes, etc. So we ate and drink to our hearts content, but more importantly, we ate and drank to the development of our bones and bodies. And so it continues to this day, sort of, mostly. As my sister-in-law, Vanessa says and then laughs after listening to Richard and I talk about our dessert issues: "Boy, your mother did some job on you two."

I'm exaggerating, a bit, with respect to our current daily consumption. I mean, who could keep up that pace? Moreover, given certain age/weight/cancer realities (particularly concerning yours truly), it would be totally, extraordinarily irresponsible to continue to snack-cake and cookie our way through the day. Still, the urge to splurge seems hard-wired into our brains and when the moment is right, it might not be Cialis that we always think of. (Do you remember the Seinfeld episode when George was determined to combine sex and eating and brought a sandwich to bed? For the record, the thought has never crossed my mind.)

I imagine as you've read this column you've developed a sense that given the Lourie's long-standing — and sitting commitment to such hedonistic pursuits, pennies, nickels, dimes or quarters on the dollar are unlikely to dissuade either one of us from our Santa-like appointed rounds.

Still, we're not idiots. We're aware of the effects on our bodies if we devolve into the snack cake eating machines of our youth/adolescence. We're not getting any younger nor are we likely getting any thinner or healthier. I'd like to think we've gotten smarter and more respectful of what foods go in and by association what money goes out.

But as difficult as it is to turn an ocean liner around after it's headed out to sea, so too is it difficult for yours truly to care less about what I've spent my entire life caring more about: desert/sweets. However, I do anticipate a reaction to this most recent size reduction. As my mother, Celia, used to say: "It's enough already."

this month of spiritual elevation by focusing on good deeds and prayers, terror groups such as ISIS continue to disgrace themselves and Islam.

The Holy Quran states, "Whosoever killed a person ... It shall be as if he killed all mankind (5:33).

The Holy Prophet Muhammad (saw) counted the "killing of a soul" among the four "major sins" (Nasai).

The Khalifah of the Ahmadiyya Muslim Community, Hadhrat Mirza Masroor Ahmad, stated, "... those who seek to justify their hateful acts in the name of Islam are serving only to defame it in the worst possible way."

The Ahmadiyya Muslim Youth Association USA (AMYA USA) challenges radicalization and extremists' claim on Islam by showing through words and deed the true essence of Islam. The Muslim Writers Guild of America, an auxiliary of AMYA USA, published nearly 400 pieces in U.S. newsprint media in 2016 presenting the true teachings of Islam. In that same time span, AMYA USA has fed upwards of 170,000 people and collected 5,000 units of blood in service of our fellow Americans.
