County Honors Lord & Lady Fairfax

Every year since 1984, two individuals from each of the nine Fairfax County magisterial districts, as well as two from the at-large “domain” of Board of Supervisors Chairman Sharon Bulova are honored for their service to their communities or for particular acts of heroism. For their dedication, these community caretakers are named Lord and Lady Fairfax for the year.

The 2017 honorees were feted at a reception at the County Government Center on the morning of June 6. Following this gathering, the Lords and Ladies were escorted into the board auditorium where their accomplishments were publically acknowledged and each received a certificate declaring their status.

The Lords and Ladies will be making a few more appearances during their reigns, including at the signature celebration for Fairfax County’s 275th anniversary, which will take place in the area surrounding the Historic Fairfax Courthouse in central Fairfax, on by his ancestor, the 6th Lord Fairfax of Cameron.

In announcing the visit by Lord and Lady Fairfax (the originals), Bulova laughed that the noble guests seemed a bit confused by the fact that there were more peers in Virginia whom they would be meeting. “Only here in Fairfax,” she told him. “We’re special.”

Lord Fairfax: John J. “Jeff” Lisanick is a former client at New Hope Housing’s Eleanor U. Kennedy Shelter. Desiring to give back to the homeless community, he joined the Consumer Advisory Council (CAC) as an original member in 2012. Since being elected chair of the CAC in 2013, he has been a member of the Governing Board with a goal of preventing and ending homelessness. Lisanick took his passion to end homelessness to a new level in July 2015 when he was hired by New Hope Housing as the residential coordinator of the same shelter in which he was once a client. He now serves as the coordinator of residential services, overseeing seven different sites.

Lady Fairfax: Jane Miscavage has been an asset to both Fairfax County Public Schools and the community at large. In 2007, she began serving as a founder and manager of the Food Allergy Support Group of Northern Virginia, where she helped over 400 families access up-to-date allergy research and health care professionals. Her commitment to children and families continued through her service to #IamFCPS, a grassroots organization that advocated for a fully funded 2017 FCPS budget, and later, as the Vote Yes Meals Tax Campaign Manager. Currently, Miscavage continues to

'I Moved Here and It's Been Life-Changing'

Special financing arrangement makes workforce housing a reality.

BY BONNIE HOBBS

Dignitaries and VIPs were all smiles last week when they cut the ribbon for the official grand opening of Residences at the Government Center. A 270-unit apartment complex in Fair Oaks, it provides workforce housing for people who otherwise couldn't afford to live in Fairfax County.

But perhaps no one was happier than Dawne Sherman, a mental-health counselor who works for the county and just moved into an efficiency apartment there. She doesn't make anywhere near the average median income (AMI) for county residents – which, in 2015, was $113,208 – but she now has a place of her own.

"I moved here six weeks ago and it's been life-changing," she said. "In the two years before, I lived with my parents — and I'm a grown woman. I have a tough job and my pay is pretty modest. But now, I have a 540-square-foot studio apartment and I love it. It has everything, and I'm truly grateful. I come home after a long, stressful day at work and don't have a long commute. I have a beautiful and green place to live, here in the county."

What sets the Residences apart from other apartment complexes is the special financing structure that made its construction possible, as well as its lower-than-average rents. It's geared specifically for those making 50-60 percent of the county AMI, such as teachers, public-safety personnel and service-industry employees. This equates to about $44,000 for a family of two, at or below 50-percent AMI, and $53,000 for that same family, earning up to 60-percent AMI.

Some 54 units are earmarked for those making 50-percent AMI, and 216 units are for those earning 60-percent AMI. So, for example, at 50-percent AMI, one person making between $27,840 and $38,650 could rent a one-bedroom apartment for $928/month. At 60-percent AMI, a person earning between $34,050 and $46,380 could rent that same apartment for $1,135. The complex contains studio plus one-, two- and three-bedroom units, and pets are allowed.

So, said county Board of Supervisors Chairman Sharon Bulova, "It's pretty affordable for someone raising a family and with a lower income. This is beautiful, inside and out, and is a very innovative way of providing housing this affordable for folks in the workforce."

into the Residences, is also delighted about it because she needs help getting around and her apartment is accessible. "I have a scooter, a walker and a cane, and I can ride my scooter into my house," she said. "This is accessible for me in the bathroom, the kitchen cabinets are lower and the stove controls are in the front, so I can reach them."

The four-story, smoke-free, environmentally friendly apartments were also built to EarthCraft standards for sustainable and energy-efficient living. They're on some nine acres along Monument Drive, on the county Government Center's perimeter, and back up to woods.

Besides being across from the Fairfax Corner shopping center, the complex's amenities include an outdoor pool, tot lot, fitness center, outdoor lounge with grilling area, clubroom with Wi-Fi and billiards, community room with couches and a smart TV, business center, parking garage and connections to trails.

Paradigm Construction Co. was the general contractor, and last Monday's (June 5) official grand opening came two years after the project's groundbreaking. But it only reached fruition because of cooperation among a variety of entities.

The project's developer, Jefferson Apartment Group, was able to lease the land from the county, and federal low-income tax credits were obtained. A public-private partnership was formed between the county, its Redevelopment and Housing Authority (FCRHA), Jefferson, and Stratford Capital Group. In June 2014, it became the first project of its kind in Virginia to structure its financing via a combination of both 9-percent and 4-percent tax-credit allocations from the Virginia Housing Development Authority (VHDA), plus tax-exempt bonds from the FCRHA and other financing sources.

"Not doing this through tax dollars is a creative mechanism for making housing available," said Bulova. "This was built with $13 million in tax-exempt bonds at no cost to local residents. And because it's privately owned, it'll generate tax revenue for the county."

Also pleased with the building's appearance, she said, "You can't really tell it's affordable housing because it's attractive and blends into the surrounding community. And the county and developer also did a wonderful job of preserving the wooded area. It's a place where people want to live and live next to."

Noting that many people who work in the county currently have long commutes from elsewhere to and from their jobs, Bulova said, "This has been a long time coming for those who want to live and work in Fairfax County. Young people, entry-level professionals and low-income individuals can now live near where they work."

Jefferson will manage and maintain the complex, but the county will have oversight, since it owns the property. And Bulova said she hopes the county can do partnership-projects similar to this one in the future. "Fairfax County is a leader in finding creative ways to leverage our resources," she said. "This will serve as a model and exemplify smart growth, going forward."

U.S. Rep. Gerry Connolly (D-11) said those who make this county's economy successful need affordable places to live while working here. Doing so, he said, reduces traffic congestion, promotes diversity and improves everyone's quality of life.

"When I became Board of Supervisors chairman in 2003, we made affordable housing our priority," he said. "We dedicated one penny from the tax rate — nearly $171 million between FY 2006 and FY 2016 — to affordable housing." He also supported the Residences and praised the work of Paula Sampson, then head of Housing and Community Development for the county, and her team, in making it a reality. After all, said Connolly, "Affordable housing is a practical matter and also a matter of our values as a community."

At the federal level, he said, the president's budget would eliminate programs to prevent homelessness and tax credits for affordable housing. "We're going to fight those efforts in Congress," said

Fairfax County Retired Educators Award Scholarships

Aspiring educators from county high schools receive awards.

Fairfax County Retired Educators held its annual Scholarship Luncheon on June 8 to celebrate eight high school scholarship award recipients. Fairfax County Retired Educators (FCRE) annually award qualified high school students, who wish to pursue a career in education, with $2,000 scholarships. This year, a record number of eight students received scholarships from the FCRE.

"In this day and age when educators struggle to do the job they love, we need these bright stars to go into our profession. If such qualified young people continue to go into our chosen profession, the future of education is in good hands," Director of Ford Scholarships Phyllis Rittman said according to the FCRE press release.

Genevieve Brent, a graduate of Hayfield High School, is the recipient of the Mary O. Amber Trust Scholarship and will be attending the University of Pittsburgh in the fall. Brent has maintained over a 4.0 grade point average in high school and has worked as an active leader in Capital Area Peer Tutoring Association (CAPTA), a non profit that works to develop peer driven writing and learning centers in the Washington, D.C.,

Unattended Cooking Causes Fire

Units from Fairfax County Fire and Rescue and the Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority Fire and Rescue Department (Dulles Airport) were dispatched on Wednesday, June 7, at approximately 7:28 p.m. for a reported garden apartment fire in the 5100 block of Woodmere Drive in the Sully Station area of Fairfax County.

Units arrived on scene to find heavy smoke showing from the hallway of a three-story garden apartment building. Firefighters entered the apartment to find fire in the kitchen area. The fire was contained and then extinguished. The fire did not extend to any other apartment units.

Two occupants reside in the apartment but were not home at the time of the fire. The fire was reported by the adult occupant when she returned home and discovered smoke upon attempting to enter her apartment. There was one smoke alarm in the apartment and unknown if it activated. Fire investigators determined that the fire started in the kitchen of the apartment. The fire is accidental in nature and was caused by an unattended pan of oil left on the heating element of the

Fundamental Freedom to Choose to Marry

Virginia is historically slow in extending rights.

In 1967, Virginia was one of 16 states that banned interracial marriage and had criminal penalties for violators. Mildred Jeter, an African-American woman, and Richard Loving, a white man, were married in 1958, were convicted and banished from living in Virginia for 25 years to avoid serving a one-year prison sentence. On June 12, 1967, the U.S. Supreme Court, in Loving v. Virginia, overturned the convictions of Mildred and Richard Loving, declaring the ban on interracial marriage unconstitutional.

Chief Justice Earl Warren wrote the opinion: "Marriage is one of the 'basic civil rights of man,' fundamental to our very existence and survival. ... To deny this fundamental freedom on so unsupportable a basis as the racial classifications embodied in these statutes, classifications so directly subversive of the principle of equality at the heart of the Fourteenth Amendment, is surely to deprive all the State's citizens of liberty without due process of law. The Fourteenth Amendment requires that the freedom of choice to marry not be restricted by invidious racial discriminations. Under our Constitution, the freedom to marry, or not marry, a person of another race resides with the individual, and cannot be infringed by the State."

This week, Gov. Terry McAuliffe celebrated

Loving Day, June 12, with a new state historical marker to commemorate the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in the landmark case. The dedication marked the 50th anniversary of the 1967 ruling that overturned all state laws restricting interracial marriage. The ceremony was held at the former site of the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, where the case was heard before it reached the U.S. Supreme Court. The Lovings' story is told in a movie of the same name.

On Valentine's Day, 2014, Judge Arenda Wright Allen, ruled that Virginia's ban on same-sex marriage is unconstitutional. In the opening of her order, Allen quotes Mildred Loving in a statement she made in 2007 on the 40th anniversary of Loving v. Virginia:

"We made a commitment to each other in our love and lives, and now had the legal commitment, called marriage, to match. Isn't that what marriage is? ... Today's young people realize that if someone loves someone they have a right to marry. Surrounded as I am now by wonderful children and grandchildren, not a day goes by that I don't think of Richard and our love, our right to marry, and how much it meant to me to have that freedom to marry the person precious to me, even if others thought he was the 'wrong kind of person' for me to marry. I believe all Americans, no matter their race, no matter their sex, no matter their sexual orientation, should have that same freedom to marry. Government has no business imposing some people's religious beliefs over others. ... I support the freedom to marry for all. That's what Loving, and loving, are all about."

Judge Allen's written decision begins:

"A spirited and controversial debate is underway regarding who may enjoy the right to marry in the United States of America. America has pursued a journey to make and keep our citizens free. This journey has never been easy, and at times has been painful and poignant. The ultimate exercise of our freedom is choice. Our Declaration of Independence recognizes that 'all men' are created equal. Surely this means all of us. While ever-vigilant for the wisdom that can come from the voices of our voting public, our courts have never long tolerated the perpetuation of laws rooted in unlawful prejudice. One of the judiciary's noblest endeavors is to scrutinize laws that emerge from such roots. 'Plaintiffs assert that the restriction on their freedom to choose to marry the person they love infringes on the rights to due process and equal protection guaranteed to them under the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution. These challenges are well-taken. ...

"The Court is compelled to conclude that Virginia's Marriage Laws unconstitutionally deny Virginia's gay and lesbian citizens the fundamental freedom to choose to marry."

Adapted from an editorial published by Connection Newspapers in February 2014.

Government has no business imposing some people's religious beliefs over others.

WheelHouse Yoga Expands in Clifton

Studio opens a new space named "Treehouse."

BY ERIN MURPHY
CENTRE VIEW

The strength of the community in Clifton can be felt just walking down Main Street, the lights of the Clifton Café sparkling and the charming antique stores beckoning. Stepping into the WheelHouse Mind Body Studio, just off Main Street, is no different. "Friendly, helpful, non-judgmental. It's like coming home," patron Art Spenard said of the WheelHouse community.

"Alyson and Kelly have really brought me out of my shell. I could have easily been a hermit. The community is fantastic, five out of five," Clifton resident Larry Robertson said.

WheelHouse owners Alyson Pollard and Kelly Layfield opened the studio in 2015, and officially opened their second space on June 1, 2017.

"What inspired us to open the second space is in order to share more. There's been a few times when we've been very cozy in here, and the opportunity presented itself. The vision has grown, and now we have the opportunity to reach more people as the community grows. It's a special niche," Pollard said.

Above the hustle and bustle of the street, on the second floor of the building sits the new studio space named the "Treehouse." The purpose of the space is to practice slower yoga and host relaxing classes, allowing practitioners to enjoy the peaceful view of the treetops through the windows.

THE FIRST FLOOR will host more fitness-based classes, in addition to a growing fitness boutique. Pollard and Layfield are partnering with the fitness-clothing brand Alyson Pollard and Kelly Layfield cut the ribbon to the new WheelHouse second floor studio space, which will be put to use for more relaxing and slower yoga classes.

"Energie Goods" among other fitness brands.

Pollard and Layfield have known each other for nearly 10 years. Both ran small businesses from their homes prior to opening the WheelHouse studio. Pollard worked as a certified personal trainer, and has also worked with special needs students in Fairfax County Public Schools. Layfield taught Pilates in small studios, and Golds Gyms in Lorton and Woodbridge. Her fusion classes, called INFIT, are a combination of Pilates, Yoga and Barre.

"We really hope our practitioners find a place of serenity and relaxation that they can come to. This is a very stressed out area, and we want to give them a place to come and relax for just that hour. To just focus on your breath and mind-body connection,"

Practitioners wrote on the fogged up windows after class in the new second floor studio.

according to Pollard and Layfield.

Sallie Spenard is a professional equestrian, and has been attending WheelHouse classes for almost a year.

"It's helped me with my balance, muscle control and strength," Spenard said. "I've learned how to handle stress better, and just to how analyze my body more." Her husband, Art Spenard, said he also learned how to be present in the moment by attending Yen and slow-flow yoga classes.

"I had heard that yoga was excellent for flexibility, and I golf," Art Spenard said. "It also helped me learn to be a lot more calm not just for golf, but for life in general. I know how to manage stress better."

POLLARD AND LAYFIELD strive to get to know each and every one of their students, and hope their students get a sense of the strong community.

"I want my practitioners to feel that in the physical space they are free of judgment, and also in the space within their heart and mind to be free of judgment of themselves; creating that pure space of acceptance. We want them to feel tremendously loved and connected," Pollard said.

Connected is what Clifton resident Larry Robertson praises WheelHouse for giving him ever since he started attending classes a year ago. "I've learned how to breathe, how to stretch, how to exercise but for me the socializing part has been amazing. I've really gotten out of my comfort zone," Robertson said. "Alyson and Kelly say it and it's true, there is no judgment here. The community is just amazing."

Centreville Immigration Forum Named 'One of the Best' Nonprofits

The Catalogue for Philanthropy: Greater Washington has selected the Centreville Immigration Forum (CIF) to be part of the Class of 2017-18. CIF has undergone an extensive review process to meet the Catalogue's standards.

Founded in 2007, the mission of the Centreville Immigration Forum is to implement sustainable programs that provide immigrants in need with the means to improve their lives and become more integrated into the community; improve communication and cooperation among all groups serving immigrants; and build community recognition of our strength in diversity.

Since 2011, the organization has operated the Centreville Labor Resource Center, 5944

Centreville Crest Lane, where homeowners and contractors looking for help can hire workers for the day.

This year the Catalogue celebrates its 15th anniversary.

Since its inception, it has raised $38 million for nonprofits in the region. Reviewers helped select 76 charities to feature in the 2017-18 print edition. Centreville Immigration Forum is one of 34 of which are new to the Catalogue this year. "People want to know where to give and they need trusted information. Based on our in-depth review, we believe that the Centreville Immigration Forum is one of the best community-based nonprofits in the region," according to Barbara Harman, founder and president of the Catalogue for Philanthropy.

Patio Ready for Summer? The latest trends for entertaining alfresco.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL

The warm days and nights of summer lend themselves to outdoor entertaining. From colorful pillows and cozy throws to textured fabrics and jewel-toned tableware, local designers offer ideas for creating a festive space for an alfresco soiree.

Consider the way an outdoor space will look when it's viewed from inside your home, says Madeline Fairbanks, product development director, Country Casual Teak.

"Choose fabrics that coordinate and accent the colors used indoors to create a seamless transition between the spaces," she said. "Add texture with fabrics, from gauzy sheers to the heaviest brocades, to bring the textures of indoor upholstery outdoors. An added plus is that they help hide dirt and stains."

The transition from a home's interior to its exterior should be fluid, advises Jim Rill of Rill Architects. "It shouldn't just be an outdoor patio, but an extension of the indoor spaces," he said.

Rill suggests using outdoor walls, fireplaces and trellises to create a sense of scale and comfort. "For instance, stone walls, hedges, pools and ponds help give an out-tive gathering," he said.

Have a few key pieces for hosting, whether you entertain weekly or just once a year, recommends Fairbanks. "Keep a bar cart near an entrance for wheeling refreshments to guests, or an outdoor sideboard near a dining area for easy buffet-style service," she said.

For chilly nights, drape throws on the outdoor seating for guests, advises Martz. "With the popularity of fire pits, add comfortable seating with indoor-outdoor cushions around them to enhance the experience," he said.

Workforce Housing

Connolly. "But meanwhile, Fairfax is a model for the rest of the country. Since 2004, we're the only jurisdiction in Metropolitan Washington, D.C., that's reduced its homeless population by 40 percent."

Supervisor John Cook (R-Braddock), who also helped move this project forward, called affordable housing "probably the most vexing problem facing local governments."

By partnering, we were able to get it done, and it's a pleasure to have it in my district."

"We've been waiting a long time [for this]," said Supervisor Cathy Hudgins (D-Hunter Mill), on the county's committee to Prevent and End Homelessness. "But it would take 31,360 more affordable units to be built before everyone within this AMI could move into affordable housing. We're losing workers and businesses because people can't afford to live here." She then urged residents to participate in the county's Strategic Housing Plan "so they'll understand and support addressing this need."

Steve Wilson, president of Stratford Capital, one of the project's development partners, said its financial structure benefited everyone. "A 2015 GMU study said that, between 2011-23, about 60,000 lower-income households will move into Northern Virginia — and 30,000 of them will be renters," he said. With such a great need then for affordable housing, he added, "Only 18 out of 270 units are left at the Residences. That's about 2-1/2 times the normal, absorption rate, so the pent-up demand for this type of housing is significant."

Greg Lamb, Jefferson's executive vice president, said his firm normally builds market-rate housing. "We were selected for this in 2008 and then the recession happened," he said. "But the county didn't give up, and we were so grateful to be one of the partners."

"This project was complicated, but Paradigm Construction didn't cut any corners, did a beautiful job and built a quality project," he continued. "We're very proud and look forward to being property owners here for a long time."

SULLY DISTRICT

Lord Fairfax: Michael Frey, an involved member of the Sully community, initially served as an aide to other supervisors and then as the first Sully District supervisor in 1992. He has also coached youth sports for Southwest Youth Association and is involved with their Sports Park project. He presently serves as chair of the Dulles Suburban Advisory Group and on the boards of the Historic Centreville Society and the Fairfax County Historical Society. He recently joined the Board of the Friends of the Fairfax County Animal Shelter, which was named after him in recognition of his lifelong commitment to animals' issues.

Lady Fairfax: Trudy Harsh uses her personal experience to improve the community. As the president of the board of directors of the Brain Foundation, she was driven to establish the organization stemming from a tragic experience: her daughter had surgery for a brain tumor when she was 8 years old, which left her delayed emotionally and physically. The Brain Foundation provides affordable housing to many, most commonly those suffering from serious brain diseases. Since 2003, the Brain Foundation has created permanent housing for 36 individuals. Recently, she was awarded the Good Neighbor Award by The National Association of Realtors, and Washingtonian of the Year in 2010 by the Washingtonian magazine.

Metz Honored

BY BONNIE HOBBS

Sgt. Brad Metz was selected as the Officer of the Month for April for the Sully District Police Station. He was honored at the May 10 meeting of the station's Citizens Advisory Committee.

Usually, the recipient of this honor is nominated by a single person — most commonly, his or her supervisor. But Metz was nominated by the station's entire evening shift "A" squad. In the official write-up, Lt. Trafton Parr explained why.

"In December 2016, the second lieutenant for the evening shift 'A' squad went on light duty due to an injury," wrote Parr. "But Sgt. Metz rose to the occasion and assumed the many roles and duties that both supervisors fill until the second lieutenant's return to full duty in early April of this year."

During this period, said Parr, Metz had to multitask many issues, including staffing shortages, squad training, employee personal matters, routine Internal Affairs cases at the supervisory level, and citizen complaints — all while responding to a number of high priority, as well as routine, calls.

"Metz has an easygoing personality and demeanor that makes him very approachable," wrote Parr. "His open-door policy reflects his likeable nature and, in turn, motivates his subordinate patrol officers to perform at a higher level. Whenever Metz requests volunteers for an undesirable assignment, there are always squad members willing to step up and assume the task."

Parr said Metz has also been an "excellent role model and mentor" to the officers of the evening shift "A" squad. "He utilizes training videos to better prepare his squad for multiple, high-risk situations," wrote Parr. "He distributes current case law and other pertinent information to prepare his squad mentally for situations that may arise."

Furthermore, continued Parr, "Metz's management style allows senior patrol officers to handle routine issues that normally do not require the involvement of a supervisor. He also assists officers in preparing for advancement and developing in their police careers."

"It is a pleasure having Sgt. Metz serving in the Sully District on the evening shift 'A' squad, and he is well-deserving of the recognition as Officer of the Month."

Spontaneous Confusion

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Since I have some alone-time; just me and the cats, I thought I'd try to write my next column a few weeks ahead and take a bit of the time-sensitive deadline pressure off. Not that meeting my weekly commitment has been too much of a problem over the years (nearly 20 in fact), still, I thought I'd put pen to paper, literally, and see what comes out.

So far what has come out is that I'm having creative difficulty writing something that's to be published two weeks hence. It seems/feels that writing in the present about something to be published in the future is awkward, sort of. It's somewhere between wishful thinking and a prediction. Neither of which is characteristic of who I am or how I think. I guess my writing nature is that I like to react to reality and then address it in print, rather than anticipate it and then respond to it. Typically I prefer to be current in my thinking and honest in my prose. Apparently, I have nothing else to share so trying to explain that void is the semi point of this column.

And I suppose, without being too self-indulgent, that if a stage IV cancer patient — yours truly, who shares everything with you regular readers; highs, lows and in-betweens, has nothing of particular interest to share, perhaps it's because I'm experiencing a comparatively easy fortnight between 24-hour urine collection, pre-chemotherapy lab work, every-five-week infusions, and quarterly scans followed by my quarterly face-to-face appointment with my oncologist, so I have minimal cancer-related business to preoccupy my life. It's almost as if I'm unencumbered by my underlying problem: non-small cell lung cancer. And I have to admit, it's a heck of a feeling to not have my conscious and unconscious minding my business and reminding me that I have an incurable form of cancer. Which of course I never need reminding of; as opposed to ending a sentence with a preposition which obviously I do need to be reminded of.

Getting back to the substance — if you can even call it that, of this column: my difficulty writing weeks ahead of publication. What's puzzling about this difficulty is how uncharacteristic of my personality it is. I am not spontaneous. I rarely do anything spur of the moment other than getting off the couch, changing the channel on the television, switching radio stations in the car, deciding what to wear, eating/drinking/going to the bathroom and/or miscellaneous other household-type duties and responsibilities. Yet the problem I'm experiencing now — related to my June 14 column, is that since I'm not being spontaneous, I'm unable to create?

How can that be a problem? That's who I am all the time. I do everything in advance — of consequence, that is. Maybe I'm making too much out of nothing? (Oh, really.) Maybe I'm simply stuck in my head and need to get out of my own way. Not that I make mountains out of mole hills but sometimes, and I've told by my oncologist that I can blame my having cancer for everything, I might not think so clearly and get bogged down emotionally. Ergo, I will lay the blame for this column and it's lack of substance, on having "terminal" cancer.

Cancer doesn't work in mysterious ways (well, perhaps it does to researchers), it works in destructive ways: physically, mentally and spiritually. Logical becomes illogical — and vice versa; rational becomes irrational — and vice versa; and manageable becomes unmanageable — and vice versa. For cancer patients/survivors, expecting that one's life will go merrily along is totally unrealistic. Expecting the unexpected is the path of least resistance.

This week's column/dilemma is simply another example/reminder of how cancer intrudes and deludes and affects those of us who naively thought we would be unaffected.
