'The Many Shades of the Blues'

The annual Columbia Pike Blues Festival on Saturday, June 17 features blues to New Orleans jazz, R&B and hip hop with Bettye LaVette, a three-time Grammy nominee, as headliner. This year's event "strives to show its attendees the many shades of the blues." Wide-eyed babies in carriages sit alongside rows of bring-your-own folding lawn chairs while an occasional attendee jumps up to dance along. Fresh funnel cakes hot out of the oil are sprinkled with powdered sugar while African kabobs with Nigerian spices (suya) send smoke spiraling into the air. A dog waits patiently, but unsuccessfully, for his own wine-tasting bowl. A children's area offers face painting, a moon bounce and story telling. The festival is produced by the Columbia Pike Revitalization Organization.

Arlington Public Schools looks to hybrid options for capacity needs, but local parents say it's time for a new high school.

BY VERNON MILES
THE CONNECTION

Arlington Public Schools needs 1,300 more high school seats to meet the projected enrollment of over 30,000 students. As the School Board plans for the new high school seats, the main decision is whether to expand the existing facilities or build an entirely new school.

At a School Board meeting on June 15, the School Board considered four options for expanding high school seats by 2022. The first option was to add a 1,300-seat high school to Kenmore Middle School. Two other options involved adding a high school to Arlington Tech with the career center as a program within that school, or adding a new high school to the Education Center site.

The preferred proposal put forward by staff was a hybrid option, to split the capacity needs between Arlington Tech and the Education Center.

Renovation of the Education Center building would include 500 to 600 new seats, while renovation and additions at the career center could add 700 to 800 new seats. According to Arlington Public Schools staff, the hybrid option allows APS to use land already owned by the school system. With the aim of opening by 2022 with under $103.5 million spent, the hybrid option is the one most calculated to come in on time and under budget.

But parents at the School Board meetings expressed concerns about the narrow scope of the hybrid option.

"Anything less than a comprehensive neighborhood school won't address the full issues with our population expansion," said Andrew Greenwood. "The hybrid option [is a] Band-Aid."

Many of the parents at the School Board meeting urged the board to consider a new high school.

"I'm here to support a fourth comprehensive high school in Arlington Heights," said Dr. Christine Stalwart. "We're wasting time and money with cramming option seats into

Arlingtonians Gather To Help ‘Sister District’

Fundraising for candidate from Newport News.

BY EDEN BROWN
THE CONNECTION

Del. Rip Sullivan (D-48) stood in Gail Harrison’s living room in Arlington on Thursday night and took in the scene: 25 Virginia residents, mostly Arlingtonians, had gathered to raise money for Zack Wittkamp, a businessman from Newport News who thinks he can beat David Yancey (R-94) this fall.

Sullivan told the group he was excited by the recent primaries, the voter turnout, and the unity the Democrats were showing, particularly against the backdrop of the close Republican gubernatorial primary between Corey Stewart and Ed Gillespie. He told the group there was also a newly announced Libertarian candidate for governor. But what excited him most was the numbers of small “pop up” fundraisers and political meetings he was seeing, and interest in state politics and local issues, really for the first time in his career as a delegate.

Much of the political activity has been sponsored by organizations like WofAVA, “We of Action Virginia,” which has a program to “adopt a district” to help win races in swing districts. Blue Virginia is another of the organizations, which, along with Sister District, hopes to see the Virginia House of Delegates get to a majority of 51 Democrat-held seats — or more — this fall.

“Prior to the primaries or caucuses, we had 78 new Democratic candidates (not including our 34 incumbents or candidates challenging incumbents): among whom there were 42 women, 19 people of color, six LGBT, and 15 millennials,” he said. “That is a first.” He provided a scene setter for what the chessboard looks like after the primaries last week: “We are running Democrats in 89 of the 100 seats (this includes 34 incumbents), and challenging 55 of the 66 Republican-held seats. Our new candidates (non-incumbents) include 28 woman, 11 people of color, five LGBT, and 11 millennials. Those numbers will change slightly when we know what happens in House District 2, where we have a recount,” he said.

Sullivan said he was not surprised to see Northern Virginians reaching out to support a race in Newport News. He was delighted Virginia General Assembly politics was getting attention. “Northern Virginia residents should care about races outside of their own districts because the road to 51 leads through western Fairfax, Prince William, Loudoun, Richmond, Newport News, Norfolk, Virginia Beach, Blacksburg, and other more rural parts of the state. We need folks to help out all around the state to help us get to 51,” said Sullivan.

Wittkamp noted that he is not a “millennial,” since he just turned 40, as he took the floor from Sullivan. He told the group he and his wife had weighed running for office before November 2016, but it wasn’t until the day Donald Trump was elected that he realized he had to run sooner than he had planned. When Barack Obama closed his presidency with the appeal to every American to remain hopeful and involved, and said if they didn’t like the way government operated, they should run for office, Wittkamp said he thought the president was talking to him. He looked at his wife Allie, and she nodded, and off they went to start running for the House of Delegates seat.

Wittkamp said he was further motivated about his race in a district that is not their own. While he knows the Democrats must win big all over Virginia to effect change, not everyone is able to look beyond their own backyard. Northern Virginians who help him win in November can expect to see him work hard on issues that have an impact on everyone in the state. Climate change may raise the water levels in the Tidewater area five feet, but the same water will be flooding Alexandria. Medicaid expansion will affect the health of all Virginians, just as lack of Medicaid dollars means all Virginians have to pay more to support those who won’t get federal dollars, either through city programs or non-governmental organizations. Relying on antiquated job infrastructure like coal mining does a disservice to all Virginians because of the need to break out of the cycle of dead-end exploitation of finite natural resources, not perpetuate it, he said. Wittkamp told the crowd he is not a politician by profession so he is learning as he goes, but he is listening, taking notes, and making appeals to finance his campaign, which doesn’t have the advantage of big GOP funds like Yancey’s campaign. He has already reached out to the African-American community in Newport News, which comprises about 23 percent of the population, and told the group he feels very much at home in that community and believes he can represent all communities in his district effectively. His donors are like the men and women sitting in Gail Harrison’s home: retirees, contractors, teachers, small business owners, and parents like him. Wittkamp will spend the summer listening to the residents of his area and calling for support.

Wittkamp said his priorities for his district are economic improvement, particularly seeking new business opportunities based on innovative technology, giving constituents a better wage earning potential; education, and the environment.

Wittkamp thanked the group for caring

Help Locate Homicide Suspect

The Arlington County Police Department is seeking the public's assistance in locating Daejon Tyrie Jones, 23, of Woodbridge. Jones is suspect in a homicide in the Nauck neighborhood. Jones is described as a black male, approximately 5'9" tall and weighing 190 pounds.

Daejon Tyrie Jones

Adonis Wright, 35, of Washington, D.C. to George Washington University Hospital where he succumbed to his injuries. The initial investigation revealed that this shooting resulted from a dispute that took place between known individuals. The suspect, Daejon Tyrie Jones, fled the scene prior to police arrival.

Jones is considered armed and dangerous. Anyone with information on his whereabouts should call 911 immediately and not approach the suspect. If anyone has additional information regarding this investigation, contact Detective S. Bertollini of the Arlington County Police Department's Homicide/Robbery Unit at 703-228-4243 or Sbertollini@arlingtonva.us. Information may also be provided anonymously through the Arlington County Crime Solvers hotline at 1-866-411-TIPS (8477).

At approximately 11:20 p.m. on June 16, police responded to the 2400 block of S. Lowell Street for the report of a shooting. Arriving officers located one male victim suffering from a gunshot wound and began performing life-saving measures. Arlington County Fire Department medics transported

Board Approves Trail Improvements

Two of Arlington's bike trails are about to see safety improvements. The County Board authorized $2 million at its June 17 meeting for safety improvements to the Washington and Old Dominion Trail (W&OD) and the Custis Trail. The project will improve three intersections along the W&OD and intersections on the Custis Trail where it runs along Lee Highway. The improvements primarily consist of high visibility crosswalks, ADA-compliant ramps, improved trail alignment and upgraded pedestrian signals.

The upgrades were originally proposed in the 2010 Arlington County Shared Use Trail Study. The total cost of the improvements is $2.1 million. Federal grants will provide funding for $1.4 million career center sites when you don't know if students will want to attend that."

Stalwart also expressed concerns that APS still hadn't released information concerning what types of programs would be utilized at the site. During the staff presentation, a few potential program possibilities were put forward for the new school. Both of the new facilities could be focused on "Early College" programs.

The Education Center facility could also be part of an expanded International Baccalaureate program, while the Arlington Tech expansion could be a complete high school with the career center as a program within that school.

"Tonight we're hearing that 'we're doing exciting things there,' but as a taxpayer and parent of three young children, that's not acceptable to me," said Stalwart. "Abandon the hybrid plan, build a fourth comprehensive neighborhood high school."

The School Board will vote for a high school seat option at its June 29 meeting.

Proposed Options

For Greater High School Capacities

❖ Option A: Kenmore Site

Kenmore Middle School remains with building added for a 1,300 seat High School

❖ Option B: Career Center Site

Arlington Tech remains and Career Center's capacity increases for 1,300 seat high school

❖ Option C: Education Center Site

New building expanding Washington-Lee with 1,300 new seats

❖ Option D: Hybrid of Education Center Site and Career Center Site

Renovation of Education Center Building to include approximately 500-600 seats

Renovation/Addition at Career Center site to include approximately 700-800 seats

Potential Programs

Under the Hybrid Option for the expanded Education Center and Career Center facilities.

Prayers for Peace and Unity

During Mass Sunday celebrating the solemnity of Corpus Christi at Saint Mary Catholic Church in Alexandria, Bishop Michael F. Burbidge of the Diocese of Arlington offered prayers for peace and unity following last week's shooting at a charity baseball practice. In his homily, Bishop made a plea to all, including elected officials and the media:

Allow me to begin by conveying our prayers and gratitude to our fathers as we honor them on this special day. At this Mass, we also remember our fathers who have died and pray for their eternal happiness.

The horrific event of this past Wednesday here in Alexandria was indeed a sad day for our nation and reminded us of the great unrest in our world. We pray for Rep. Scalise and the others injured as well as for their family members. We thank God for those who offer their service for our protection and for those who attend to our medical care in our time of need. And with faith, we entrust the person responsible for the tragic situation to God's divine mercy.

As we celebrate the Solemnity of the Most Holy Body and Blood of Christ, we are ever aware of the Lord's great love for us which is fully and perfectly revealed in the Holy Eucharist. How providential that after Mass we will carry Jesus, the Source of our unity and peace, in a Eucharistic procession on these streets in Alexandria that only recently witnessed severe violence.

I believe our Eucharistic Procession provides important lessons for our world, nation and all of us to embrace especially at this time. Here is what is at the heart of the procession: Jesus leads and we follow. Is this not the reality we have forgotten in so many ways? If we allow the Truth of His Gospel to lead and guide us, we will be on the right path. It demands that we spend our lives loving and serving God and one another. It mandates a reverence for the sacredness of all human life. It requires us to heed the teaching of Moses who reminded the Israelites in our First Reading that we cannot rely on our own resources and power. We must turn to the Lord our God to guide and sustain us, the One alone who satisfies our hunger and quenches our thirst. Another powerful reminder that our Eucharistic Procession provides is that we do not walk through this life alone. We will walk together in faith, as brothers and sisters united in Christ Jesus. As Saint Paul said today, "We, though many, are one body for we all partake of the one loaf." Therefore, nothing can separate or divide us. Our world and nation need such witness of unity from us who are followers of Christ and it must be reflected in our homes, workplaces, schools and communities. Such unity is made visible when we recognize and respect the dignity of each and every person; when we are willing to listen to others and discuss our points of disagreement in a civil manner; and when we let go of bitterness and forgive those who have offended us. Today, with the faithful in the Diocese of Arlington and all people of good will, I respectfully make a plea to all our elected official to reflect the unity for which we long. We need you to work together for the common good; to uphold truth, peace and justice; to find common ground; to be respectful of each other even in the midst of debate; and to let go of harsh words and severe rhetoric. We also hope and pray that all in the media will do the same. Imagine how different the world and our nation would be if our motto was the words of St. Paul: "Let us make our aim to work for peace and to strengthen one another."

Finally, a procession reminds us that life on earth is merely that: a procession, a journey. We all must strive daily, with God's grace, to reach the same final destination; heaven. So as we continue this earthly journey, may we always remember: Jesus leads and we follow as members of God's holy family, as brothers and sisters in united in Christ the One whose body and blood we about to receive and who says: "Whoever eats this bread and drinks this cup will live forever and ever." Amen.

House Paint and Risk Takers at McLean Project for the Arts

At “Strictly Painting 11” exhibit.

BY EDEN BROWN
THE CONNECTION

If 1446 Chain Bridge Road were not in a strip mall next to the Giant supermarket in McLean, but down some sandy road to the beach in East Hampton, New York or Easton, Md., then one could imagine it this way: “The McLean Project for the Arts inhabits a new summer home it has decorated with stunning modern canvasses by risk taking painters. The other night, guests milled about the home, sipping wine and admiring the art, which simmered with the sophistication of nearby New York or Richmond.”

The show, called “Strictly Painting 11,” features Arlington and Washington, D.C. artists as well as Charlottesville area painters. Some of the paintings in the show are rich with color; some rely more on design and limit the color to grey, black, and white. All of the exhibited work makes one want to “meet the people who live in this summer home” — the painters — and those who created this oasis of modern art squeezed in between a Turkish restaurant and the CVS.

At the opening reception for the show on June 15, people came in to sip wine and do just that. This juried biennial exhibition of the work of artists from the mid-Atlantic region explores the medium of painting. The juror who elected the entries is Anne Reeve, assistant curator at Glenstone, a private museum near Washington, D.C. devoted to modern and contemporary art.

One artist, Sally Kauffman, stood in front of her oil on canvas painting called “On and On,” a vibrant scene at the outdoor concert series in Washington, D.C. last summer. She did a series of three paintings showing people outdoors at the concert, talking and taking in the music — it’s a loud, boisterous canvas that reminds one of the Bal du Moulin de la Galette or the Dejeuner des Sue Grace, an Arlington painter, with Jen Lillis and Nancy Sauser, executive director of the McLean Project for the Arts.

Canotiers by Renoir, so full of life and color that you can hear the conversation and laughter.

It’s not impressionist at all but a blend of abstract and representational art. Two of the series were purchased by the city of Washington for its art in public spaces program.

At the show, visitors can treat themselves to modern art reminiscent of the fundamental life objects of Claes Oldenburg, the reclaimed house paint can lids, “The Colors of Our Lives” by Steven Dobbin, actually soothing to look at — and the eggs on toast with ketchup bottle, “Match Enemy” by Jenny Walton.

Sue Grace of Arlington had a painting selected for the juried show, with the title, “Injury and Pardon.”

Like many of Grace’s paintings, it has a muted palette of colors, and looking at it makes one feel allowed in on an intimate moment of emotion. Grace says, “In this painting I was looking at the notion of forgiveness: how that word gets framed. For me, painting is a fascinating battleground where abstraction combats the figurative.” Grace has been painting full time for 10 years: reemerging after an earlier art career and raising a family.

Nancy Sauser, the MPA executive director, said most of the work she shows is from the mid-Atlantic region. The summer exhibit was physically set up by Jen Lillis who is the gallery manager and did the lighting for the show in its new, temporary space, while renovations on the MPA take place. The show will be open to the public through Aug. 12.

McLean Project for the Arts is located at 1446 Chain Bridge Road, McLean. Its hours are Mondays-Thursdays, 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m., and Fridays-Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Email info@mpaart.org or call 703-790-1953.

Seniors Praised for Volunteerism and Leadership

County Board Chairman Jay Fisette recognized Arlington seniors (55+) for their volunteerism and leadership during a recognition luncheon, hosted recently at The Jefferson retirement community.

Fisette revealed that in a year’s time, seniors contributed 18,000 volunteer hours which was worth $430,000.

Marilyn Marton, chair of the Arlington Senior Council (ASC), emceed the event which was attended by ASC members, senior center advisory committee members plus the 55+ travel committee, Arlington Alliance and others. Jane Rudolph, director of the Department of Parks and Recreation (DPR) installed the 2017-18 ASC officers which included Marilyn Marton, chair, John Gunning, vice chair, Sue Lang, treasurer and Andrea Vojtko, secretary.

Jennifer Collins, 55+ Unit Manager, Office of Senior Adult Programs, presented the first Fran DeSilva award for advocacy to Andrea Walker and outstanding leadership awards to Marge Corletti and AnneMarie Pittman. Collins recognized Laura Lazour, retiring DPR Sports and Recreation division chief, and expressed appreciation for her years of support for senior programs.

Finding the Right Mentor

A mentor can brighten a young person's future.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL

Tamyka Mason says that she was struggling with academics, finances and time management. She knew that she needed to make a change, but didn't have a source for guidance. Mason discovered the Women in Search of Excellence (WISE) Mentoring Program run by Northern Virginia Community College and her life began to change.

"When I joined WISE, [I] was assigned [a] mentor and learned how to speak about the challenges I was facing and the goals I had," said Mason. "[My mentor] helped me dramatically ... plan for future events."

The upcoming summer months offer teens an opportunity to connect with adults other than parents who can offer guidance through mentorship programs. Finding the right mentoring match can be a life-altering experience, say experts.

"Through supportive relationships with adult mentors, teens can learn how to develop practical goals, identify resources to accomplish goals ... regulate emotions, communicate effectively with others and cope better with stress," said Jerome Short, Ph.D., associate professor of psychology at George Mason University.

The Virginia Mentoring Partnership (VMP) is a source for those who are looking for a mentor or those who want to mentor others. The organization's program managers train mentoring program coordinators and mentors. Their goal is to increase the number and quality of mentoring programs in Virginia. VMP maintains a database where prospective mentors or mentees can plug in a ZIP code and find the closest mentoring program.

"We provide support across the State of Virginia to help align program practices that research shows make high quality mentorship programs," said Betsy Bilharz, Virginia Mentoring Partnership. "We recruit, screen and match mentors with young people using that set of standards."

Recognizing that a mentoring relationship is not usually a relationship of equals is an important aspect of mentorships, says Amy L. Best, Ph.D., professor and chair, Department of Sociology and Anthropology at George Mason University. "There are really two types of mentors: those who provide guidance and willingly share knowledge they have accrued from their experience in the field," she said. "The second type are those who facilitate opportunity, vouching for someone or helping the person with points of contact in their area of interest. Both are important."

THE MENTORING RELATIONSHIP develops best when mentors listen to a young person's concerns and expectations [and] empathize and tailor support and skill building around the teen's needs and with their input, says Short. "The relationship should benefit both the mentor and the teen through expressions of gratitude, a sense of accomplishment, and expectations for future support and success."

Effective mentors are as interested as they are interesting and are forthcoming with accounts of their own struggles and the strategies they used to overcome them, says Best. "The best mentors listen first and then lead. It's not a one size fits all relationship," she said. "The best mentors are concrete in their guidance and work with attainable and flexible goals. [They] don't play favorites, but work to create an ethos of fairness and mutual respect."

Tykesha R. Myrick works as a financial aid manager at Northern Virginia Community College (NOVA) and is the founder of the WISE program on campus. The program, which targets minority women, pairs students with adult professionals who offer guidance to the students, many of whom are the first in their families to attend college. "The relationships go beyond academic accomplishments and are life changing and life lasting," said Myrick. "The goal is to provide a holistic environment for these young women."

Mentorship programs such as WISE work best when those being mentored are receptive. "The [best] mentees [respect] the mentor's gift of time [and] recognize the importance of learning by listening and ask thoughtful questions, and they are open and responsive to guidance," said Best. "It is equally important to invest not simply in the best and brightest, but those with the smallest glimmer of promise. Good mentors move mountains."

NEWS BRIEFS

De la Pava Honored

Arlington County Treasurer Carla de la Pava received the President's Award at the 2017 Treasurers' Association of Virginia (TAV) annual conference in Virginia Beach. De la Pava was commended for providing excellent service to the citizens of Arlington County and for her contributions to the association. Stafford County Treasurer Laura M. Rudy, outgoing TAV President, presented the award to de la Pava, "In appreciation and recognition of her leadership and years of dedicated service to the Treasurers' Association of Virginia."

De la Pava was elected treasurer of Arlington County in 2014. Prior to being elected treasurer, she served as chief deputy treasurer for six years. She is the first female and first Hispanic to be elected treasurer in Arlington. One measure of a Treasurer's Office's effectiveness is the tax delinquency rate, which in Arlington in 2016 was an all-time low of 0.24 percent and is recognized as the lowest in Virginia.

New ART and STAR Fares

The County Board has approved fare increases for Arlington Transit (ART) and Specialized Transportation for Arlington Residents (STAR), the county's transit service for people with disabilities. The new fares will take effect on June 25.

ART fares

The ART adult fare will increase from $1.75 to $2 and the ART discount fare for seniors, students and people with disabilities will increase from $0.85 to $1.

The adult fare increase matches a recent fare increase for Metrobus that goes into effect this summer. ART fares have tracked with Metrobus rates to help keep bus fares uniform across the region.

The fare increase will also help offset increases in ART's operating expenses. The base fare for ART was last increased in July 2014, by $0.25. Since then, ART has continued to grow – with the addition of two new routes and with system ridership increasing by 10 percent through the fiscal year ending June 2016.

STAR fares

STAR Zone 1 fare will increase from $3.50 to $4, the STAR Zone 2 fare will increase from $5 to $5.50 and the Zone 3 fare will increase from $9 to $9.50.

The increases will keep the Zone 1 fare at double the ART adult fare, while also helping to offset increases in STAR operating expenses.

Other fare changes include extending the iRide half-fare program to elementary school students, and allowing personal care attendants to ride ART for free when accompanying a MetroAccess rider.

Arlington middle and high school students are able to ride ART at half-fare through the iRide program, while children up to age 6 ride free on ART. Some parents had asked why they must pay full-fare for their younger children while their older children ride at half-fare. Extending iRide to elementary school students would correct this situation.

Arlington Honors 2017 Women of Vision

Arlington will honor three women – Jacqueline (Jackie) Snelling, Jennifer Nycz-Conner and Patricia Funegra — as the county's 2017 Women of Vision at an award ceremony Tuesday, June 27. The women are being recognized by the county's Commission on the Status of Women for their outstanding commitment and leadership in the community.

The commission also will honor Dr. Emma Violand-Sanchez with a Lifetime Achievement Award. Violand-Sanchez has been an active community member and civic leader in Arlington for decades. She served on the Arlington School Board and is the founder and past president of the Dream Project, Inc.

The celebration will take place at 7 p.m. on June 27 at Arlington Economic Development's offices, 1100 North Glebe Road, Suite 1500, Arlington.

Tickets are not required, but a $25 donation per person is requested. For more information on the Women of Vision Awards, at <https://commissions.arlingtonva.us/>

ABOUT THE 2017 Arlington County Women of Vision:

❖ Jacqueline (Jackie) Snelling — Government

A public servant in Arlington for many years, Snelling worked closely with school officials in the 1990s to address capacity issues, producing the first space guidelines for construction of schools in Arlington, ensuring that equitable space was given to all schools. Following the Sept. 9, 2011 attack on the Pentagon, she worked to establish a public preparedness program that tapped into Arlington's volunteers. Her work in this area eventually resulted in the formation of the Emergency Planning Advisory Commission.

❖ Jennifer Nycz-Conner — Business

As editor at large for the Washington Business Journal, Nycz-Conner often covers issues affecting women. She has worked with the journal's Women Who Mean Business program to recognize top female executives in the region.

❖ Patricia Funegra — Nonprofit

Founder and CEO of the non-profit La Cocina VA, whose mission is to "use food as the agent for social and economic change generating workforce and economic development," Funegra empowers women by teaching them employable skills, while also addressing hunger and nutrition issues in the Hispanic community. She has established corporate partnerships to help with career placement for those in the program. She was featured as one of the Fifty Under Fifty Innovative Leaders Transforming DC's Food System. She was invited to participate in a presidential roundtable addressing the challenges and successes of Women Entrepreneurs.

The Commission on the Status of Women works to advance initiatives and policies that empower women, and serves as a community advocate and resource on the social and economic interests of all Arlington women. The commission is an Arlington County Board advisory group and members are appointed by the County Board.

attendants of MetroAccess users would enable more MetroAccess and STAR users to meet their travel needs using ART. More people with disabilities would be able to ride ART if an aide could assist them to and from bus stops and with transferring between routes. Riders would also benefit from using ART because they do not have to book a STAR ride a day or more in advance.

Land Exchange Effort Ends

The U.S. Army has informed Arlington County that it will no longer pursue a land exchange with the county. The Army has said it will use the entire former Navy Annex site, along Columbia Pike, to expand Arlington National Cemetery.

The Army's decision means it intends to retain all federal land at the former Navy Annex. It also will acquire for the cemetery about five acres of public land now owned by Arlington County and more than seven acres of public land now owned by the Commonwealth of Virginia that support the existing transportation network. The Army originally had proposed, and Arlington had worked for years to achieve, a land exchange agreement. The agreement would have provided Arlington with land south of a realigned Columbia Pike that the county had hoped to use to meet a variety of public facility needs.

The realigned Southgate Road will carry traffic coming to and from Joint Base Myer Henderson Hall. The Realigned Columbia Pike will be rebuilt in a manner consistent with the county's Columbia Pike Multimodal Project, as a four-lane roadway with a sidewalk and a shared-use path, improved landscaping, enhanced lighting and undergrounding of utilities.

Arlington National Cemetery is projected to run out of burial space in the early 2040s. The roadway realignment and the land that will be acquired from Arlington County and the Commonwealth will provide 38 more acres of contiguous burial space to accommodate approximately 50,000 more burial spaces, extending the closure date of the cemetery until the mid-2050s, based on the current demand and interment rates.

Police to Conduct Sobriety Checkpoint

On Friday, June 23, the Arlington County Police Department will conduct a sobriety checkpoint. This enforcement effort is in support of the U.S. Department of Transportation's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) National campaign to combat drunk driving drunk driving by combining high-visibility enforcement with heightened public awareness through advertising and publicity.

Officers will stop all vehicles passing through the checkpoint and ask to see the licenses of drivers. Any driver suspected of operating a vehicle while under the influence of drugs or alcohol will be directed to a safe area off the roadway for further observation and possible testing.

The maximum penalty in Virginia for the first conviction for driving under the influence is 12 months in jail, a $2,500 fine and a 12-month suspension of driving privileges.

Additional Video On Assault Suspect

On June 20, Arlington County Police released surveillance video (see video at www.youtube.com/watch?v=X1F0TOIYT0o) capturing the suspect reentering the residential building in the 1500 block of Key Boulevard on Sunday, May 7, 2017 following the sexual assault. After entering the building, the suspect was captured on earlier released surveillance video in the elevator of the building.

Police continue to investigate leads in this case and ask that anyone with information on the identity of the suspect or details surrounding this investigation call 703-228-5050. Information can also be reported anonymously to Arlington County Crime Solvers at 1-866-411-TIPS. Crime Solvers tips leading to the arrest of the suspect may be eligible for a cash reward.

Relatively Speaking

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

If you live long enough, it's quite likely that many of the family members/generations born before you will have predeceased you. Moreover, the family members born before them, two generations-plus behind, are most surely to be geshtorbin (Yiddish for dead) as well. The effect: memory loss. Specifically, the memories lost of a generation of great grandparents – and beyond, you probably never knew or for whom you have extremely limited knowledge; after all, you were an infant when your maternal grandmother died. And when your widowed mother died nearly nine years ago, you lost what may very well have been that final anecdotal connection to your family's history, especially if your Jewish and your grandparents immigrated from Russia, Romania, The Baltic States, etc. before World War II where recorded history of Jews was evidence not documentation.

It just so happens that in my family, in fact, our closest surviving cousins, Ronnie and Gil, who themselves are in their 80s, are alive and extremely well and living with their daughter, Jayne, in Massachusetts. This past weekend, Ronnie and Gil drove eight hours to visit my brother Richard and me. And though we are regularly in touch over the phone, it has been years since we were all together in Washington, D.C. And being in their company, naturally we reminisced – ALL WEEKEND. What spawned this column was a comment Ronnie (a singer/pianist in Boston for 25 years) made in response to a question we asked about whether there was any other musical talent in the family. She said quite matter of factly that my maternal great-grandfather – who I had never met or even heard of before, "was a cantor in Russia – with a beautiful voice" (who never left Russia). "What! I never knew that." I don't recall knowing anything about my great grandparents, maternal or paternal.

You see, Ronnie was there almost at the beginning. She was the first born to my mother's oldest sibling and only sister, my Auntie Lee. My mother was the baby of the family – after two brothers were born. As such, the age difference between my mother and Ronnie was about 14 years, atypical for a niece and an aunt. As a result, Ronnie was witness to lots of family history that I thought might have been lost forever when my mother died in 2008. As a few examples, Ronnie knows who was present at my mother's "Auntie's" house for Passover Cedar in the early 1960s. She knew that "Auntie" was my mother's mother's brother's widow, not my mother's mother's sister. I certainly didn't. She knew that three families/our cousins lived together in this three-story home and all worked together in the family market: Levine's. Still more that I didn't I know.

Another family connection Ronnie and Gil reminded us of was a family line we have in South America. Again, before World War II, one of my maternal grandfather's (Hyman) brother's Simon (Shimon) immigrated to Argentina where to this day exists first (Eduardo) and second cousins (names I'm afraid don't know) I've never met, though Ronnie and Gil have met numerous times in Miami and in Argentina (Ronnie and Gil used to live in South Florida). The more we talked, the more we travelled back in time. But I won't self-indulge myself and bore you any longer. I will try to wrap it up in the next paragraph.

My mother, Celia died in December 2008, my father died in December 2006. With their passing, my brother and I lost – among a million other things, their first-hand, on-site accounts of our Lourie/Blacker history dating back 150 years or so to Russia/Eastern Europe, before any of my relatives immigrated to America. Ronnie, my mother's cherished niece, knows as much about our family history as there is still to know and her husband of nearly 63 years, Gil, knows almost as much. Their visit wasn't just a weekend. It was a lifetime. A weekend of a lifetime for which Richard and I are extraordinarily grateful.
