Remembering Reema, 10 Years Later

BY BONNIE HOBBS

Westfield High 2006 grad and Virginia Tech victim Reema-Samaha loved both theater and dance, both of which range from funny to deeply serious and moving. And the 10th annual Remembrance Cabaret in her honor contained all these emotions within skits, songs and dances.

It was held Saturday, June 17, on the Westfield stage where Reema once acted in shows such as “Fiddler on the Roof” and “Arsenic and Old Lace.” And making it even more special was the fact that – as has been the case each year – participating in the cabaret were both Westfield alumni and dancers from Virginia Tech’s Contemporary Dance Ensemble (CDE), with whom Reema used to perform.

However, the emotional highlight of the evening came when the four people who’ve been Westfield’s theater directors joined together at the podium. There, Scott Pafumi, the school’s first theater director – from 2000-2010 – read the senior essay he’d had Reema write, reflecting on her time in Westfield Theater and her hopes for the future. Standing next to him were former Westfield directors Zoe Dillard and Susie Pike and current director Rachel Harrington – who was a Westfield student when Reema was and who also performed in the cabaret.

The event raises money for the Reema J. Samaha Memorial Scholarship Fund, as well as Angel Fund, which supports the safety and wellbeing of youth and school-aged children. And at the end of Saturday’s show, Reema’s father, Joe Samaha, addressed the crowd.

He noted all the work Angel Fund has done in the past decade to make schools safer. And he praised its past president, Lu Ann McNabb, for getting four pieces of legislation passed toward that end, during her tenure. In the past 10 years, said Samaha, “We’ve given about $60,000 in scholarships to Westfield and Herndon high school students and $15,000 to $16,000 to Actively Caring 4 People,” a positive-reinforcement program in schools.

He also expressed gratitude toward CDE and the Westfield theater alumni who've returned every year to honor his daughter, including sisters Ashley and Phoebe Dillard who produce and direct the annual cabaret. Said Samaha: "To all of you who've come back each year and supported us, our heartfelt thanks."

Also speaking was Reema's mother, Mona Samaha. "Besides the hardship of losing Reema, we've learned that love is the essence of life," she said. "And these remembrance events have been so special because they've been full Project Joy will provide an income for Zambian orphans.

BY BONNIE HOBBS

When Don Halterman was the praise and worship director at Centreville Presbyterian Church, he went on a mission trip to Zambia in 2012. And although he returned home to his life here, the orphans he’d met there stayed on his mind.

A musician, he was determined to better their lives in some way. And now, through a new venture called Project Joy — via which these children will perform and sell their original songs — he intends to do just that. But it’ll take some help from others to bring it to fruition, and he’s hoping members of the community will open their hearts and wallets to lend a hand.

“When I went to Zambia, I fell in love with the orphans there and became passionate about helping them,” said Halterman. “And since retiring from my position at Centreville Presbyterian, two-and-a-half years ago, I’ve wanted to start my own music company. But I wanted to do meaningful music that impacts the world — which is my company’s mission statement.”

So he and the three others in the company, Grander Music — Centreville residents Kent Washburn and John Nixon, plus photographer Anders Arestad of Front Royal — looked for artists and organizations to promote, in line with their goal. Their vision statement is “Rite place, right people, write music.”

The orphans gather around Don Halterman and his guitar to learn new music.

Halterman said the word “rite” is used as signifying a sacred spot. “We believe that God put us [the right people] together to do this — write music that can do good and help people,” he said. “What makes the music meaningful is its impact in the world after we create it.”

He returned to Zambia in 2014 and started singing with the orphans there and helping them write songs. “I loved the way they sang so joyfully and passionately,” he said. “Their voices were untrained, but really beautiful.”

The following year, Halterman went back again. Accompanying him was Centreville’s Cathy Baker, a board member of Every Orphan’s Hope (EOH) — a national group that sponsors Zambian orphans and builds villages in Zambia. “I worked with the kids,

Losing One of Our Own

Worst fear of any parent of a teenager, losing a child to violence.

Later this week, when area Muslims celebrate the end of Ramadan, a month of observance and daily fasting at Eid al-Fitr, the surrounding community grieves with them the loss of 17-year-old Nabra Hassanen of Reston.

Nabra was among a group of teenagers who were gathered at the All Dulles Area Muslim Society for an all-night event overnight Saturday during Ramadan, and who were returning to the center after going to eat at a fast food restaurant.

Fairfax County Police report: "At about 3:40 a.m. on Sunday, a group of as many as 15 teenagers was walking and riding bikes on Dranesville Road. The group of teens had been attending an overnight event at a mosque, the All Dulles Area Muslim Society or ADAMS Center, and had left to go to a fast food restaurant. As they were returning to the mosque, some were on the sidewalk and others were on the road itself. Detectives believe [Darwin Martinez Torres, 22, of Sterling] came upon the teens while he was driving. The investigation reveals a teenaged boy on a bike began arguing with Torres. Torres then drove his car onto the curb as the group scattered. Witnesses say Torres caught up with them a short time later in a nearby parking lot and got out of his car armed with a baseball bat and began chasing the group. Torres was able to catch Nabra. His anger over the encounter led to violence when he hit Nabra with a baseball bat. Torres then took Nabra with him in his car to a second location nearby in Loudoun County."

Nabra's body was found in a Loudoun pond. Torres is charged with her murder, which police describe as a road rage incident rather than a hate crime, although more charges could come later.

All parents who have successfully raised children into a teenagers know fear for their safety as they become more independent. We expect our teens to be safe participating in events based at a house of worship. We expect our teens to be safe from violence. Nabra's death means that all of us now have a diminished sense of safety; we all grieve with Nabra's parents, who lost their beautiful and beloved daughter during Ramadan, on Father's Day. We share their horror at what their daughter suffered.

Coming together in support of the Muslim community in vigil, prayers and other support has meant a great deal.

Nabra Hassanen, 17, of Reston was a sophomore at South Lakes High School.

"Basically, the outpouring of support from the Christian community, the Jewish community, Hindu, Sikh, Buddhist, Bahá'í; everyone is comforting to us," Rizwan Jaka of the ADAMS Center told a Connection reporter. "People care so much and it means so much to us."

But we will all feel the loss of Nabra Hassanen, and a loss of sense of safety here, in weeks and years to come.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Beyond Father's Day

To the Editor:

"And remember the time when We took a covenant from the children of Israel: 'You shall worship nothing but Allah and show kindness to parents and to kindred and to the orphans and the poor, and speak to men kindly and observe Prayer, and pay the Zakat:' then you turned away in aversion, except a few of you" (2:84).

The verse above from the Holy Qur'an gives me an even greater appreciation for my father who in Urdu I refer to as Abu. I read this verse and think about how people have misconstrued view of the relationship between Muslim fathers and their daughters as one without love.

As I typed in Father's Day in the Google search engine, I expected a Wikipedia page about the history to show up as the first link. However, I was fascinated to see how many Groupon ad messages appeared with activities to do for the nation-wide celebration. It saddens me that every time a holiday comes and passes through the years some people tend to stray away from the meaning and true purpose of the holiday. These holidays are used as an excuse by marketers to encourage people to go out and pay for a "Father's Day 3 Course Meal" package deal. Families feel the need to spend money on one day due to deeply rooted societal pressures which they believe is necessary to go out and spend. Sure these pressures of going out with the family does have a positive side in that it brings everyone together which can be difficult for some families on any normal day.

But to appreciate fathers on just one day should not satisfy the soul of any child. It is very difficult for me personally to stay upset with my father at any time because I always remind myself of everything he must have to deal with on a daily basis and how he keeps his calm and composure while not mentioning any of it or bothering others with his stresses. It makes any pressures I may be dealing with seem so irrelevant and small.

I look at my dad and sometimes ponder at the fact that once upon a time he was my age and I wonder with amazement at how he has formed such a flawless character throughout his life. When I as a Muslim daughter hear the word "father," I automatically think of someone who can hold down a fort, someone who has leadership qualities, is calm, collected and can recover from any and every situation with ease. A father is someone who only expresses his good strong characteristics in front of others and seems like he never sheds a tear. Ever. He is someone who loves watching gladiator or old western films because he admires and wishes to achieve or relate with those warrior-like traits. A father is someone who does not say much but when he does it means a lot! Every father may not have the qualities I laid out above but these are certainly the ones possessed by my dear father. He is my role model whom I

Celebrating Ramadan

To the Editor:

Currently, Muslims in Northern Virginia and around the world are celebrating the holy month of Ramadan which started on May 27 (10 days earlier than last year) in correlation with the Lunar Calendar. It was in this month that the holy scripture of Islam, the Quran, began to be revealed to the Prophet Muhammad. Muslims fast from dawn to sunset and abstain from food and water for this time. This fast is not just physical in nature but also requires them to shun any wrongdoing or bad habits.

The Holy Quran states: "O ye look up to everyday. Adulthood can be scary at times but when I see my dad I am reminded that at his age and with everything he has gone through, if he can keep his relaxed stature then I sure can too! Fathers will always be there. It takes time for some of us to learn and appreciate that simple fact but at the end of the day we do not realize everything they do since they are the guardian of the household or the captain of the fort and how everyday they get up to keep that fort from falling down.

who believe! Fasting is prescribed for you, as it was prescribed for those before you, so that you may become righteous" (2:184). Therefore, the purpose of Ramadan is not only to abstain from food and drink, but to also practice self-restraint, focus on good deeds that help others and improve one's spirituality, and understand the struggles of those less fortunate who do not have ample food and water available for them. This month will conclude with the Eid-ul-Fitr festival on June 26.

Four-Term Incumbent LeMunyon to Face Former Republican

Karrie Delaney registered as a Republican after being appointed to West Melbourne City Council in Florida.

BY MICHAEL LEE POPE

Karrie Delaney knows a thing or two about Republican politics. Back in 2004, she was appointed to the West Melbourne City Council in Florida. The following year, according to public records in the Sunshine State, she registered as a Republican. But she lost the election that year after she voted higher taxes. Now she's running as a Democrat against four-term incumbent Del. Jim LeMunyon (R-67), and she's hoping her experience working in human services will help her unseat LeMunyon, the co-founder of Sterling Semiconductor. That experience as a former Republican might not hurt either.

"It certainly has given me the ability to see both sides of an issue, and I think that is going to be especially important in this district," said Delaney. "But also that experience in my life taught me a lot about fiscal responsibility, and that's a big part of my platform during this race."

Delaney raised about four times as much money as her two opponents, and she built up a list of endorsements, everyone from Fairfax County Board of Supervisors Chairwoman Sharon Bulova and Sully District Supervisor Kathy Smith to state Sen. Barbara Favola (D-31) and Del. Alfonso Lopez (D-49). She won the primary with 65 percent of the vote. If elected, Delaney says she wants to fight for education funding for Northern Virginia by changing the school funding formula that offers poorer communities more money. She says that formula creates a burden for wealthy areas like Fairfax County, although she acknowledges she does not know how to change the formula. "I think it needs to be recalculated," she said. "The nuance of exactly what the outcome of that would be is going to have to come with a lot more study and information on exactly what that ramification would be in other areas and a much broader discussion than about how we would address those issues."

DEMOCRATS ARE EAGER to take aim at LeMunyon's reputation as a moderate lawmaker, pointing to a voting record that has him voting with Republicans on some of the most conservative issues considered in Richmond. Just this past session, for example, he voted to allow religious-based discrimination against gays. He voted to prohibit local governments from taking any action to restrict enforcement of federal immigration laws. He voted to reinstate the coal employment and production incentive tax credit. And he voted in favor of establishing parental choice education savings accounts. Nevertheless, LeMunyon sees himself as someone who can work across party lines.

"I'm not voting with the Republicans to vote with the Republicans. I'm voting because I think it's in the best interest of the people I represent," said LeMunyon. "I call 'em like I see 'em, and you can find plenty of votes where I voted with the Democrats and was maybe one of just a handful of Republicans or maybe the only one."

During the last two sessions of the General Assembly, LeMunyon had more bills signed into law by the governor than any other member of the legislature, 32 of his bills are now law. One of those was the law that authorized Virginia to become part of the Washington Metrorail Safety Commission Interstate Compact. LeMunyon says the goal was to create an oversight authority to review, approve, oversee and enforce safety measures for the troubled system.

"One of the reasons I'm running again is because, not that we need another bill to do that, but I very much want to be involved in the successful implementation of that bill," he said.

THE DISTRICT, which stretches from South Riding through Chantilly into Penderwood, straddles the county line between western Fairfax and eastern Loudoun. Although the district voted overwhelmingly in favor of Republican Bob McDonnell's 2009 campaign for governor against Democrat Creigh Deeds, voters here started moving to the left in 2012. That's when the President Barack Obama took 53 percent of the vote against Republican challenger Mitt Romney, who lost with 45 percent. Ever since, it's been a solidly blue territory, voting for Democrat Terry McAuliffe for governor in 2013 and Democrat Mark Warner for U.S. Senate in 2014. More recently, the 67th District has become a target for Democrats because it's one of the 17 Republican-held House seats where Donald Trump lost to Hillary Clinton last year.

"It's suburban and exurban Virginia where a lot of these 17 House of Delegates districts are where there's political movement," said Quentin Kidd, political science professor at Christopher Newport University. "You can make a case to voters who might not be hard Democrats or hard Republicans and convince them to vote for you."

Perhaps the most interesting thing about this Republican-held district is not just that it voted in favor of Hillary Clinton against Donald Trump, but the margin of her victory. Clinton won all 19 precincts in the district, most of which with overwhelming margins. She won with 58 percent of the vote, compared to Trump, who took only 36 percent. The only precinct where the vote was marginally close was Stoncroft,

Finding the Right Mentor

A mentor can brighten a young person's future.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL

Tamyka Mason says that she was struggling with academics, finances and time management. She knew that she needed to make a change, but didn't have a source for guidance. Mason discovered the Women in Search of Excellence (WISE) Mentoring Program run by Northern Virginia Community College and her life began to change.

"When I joined WISE, [I] was assigned [a] mentor and learned how to speak about the challenges I was facing and the goals I had," said Mason. "[My mentor] helped me dramatically ... plan for future events."

The upcoming summer months offer teens an opportunity to connect with adults other than parents who can offer guidance through mentorship programs. Finding the right mentoring match can be a life-altering experience, say experts.

"Through supportive relationships with adult mentors, teens can learn how to develop practical goals, identify resources to accomplish goals ... regulate emotions, communicate effectively with others and cope better with stress," said Jerome Short, Ph.D., associate professor of psychology at George Mason University.

The Virginia Mentoring Partnership (VMP) is a source for those who are looking for a mentor or those who want to mentor others. The organization's program managers train mentoring program coordinators and mentors. Their goal is to increase the number and quality of mentoring programs in Virginia. VMP maintains a database where prospective mentors or mentees can plug in a ZIP code and find the closest mentoring program.

"We provide support across the State of Virginia to help align program practices that research shows make high quality mentorship programs," said Betsy Bilharz, Virginia Mentoring Partnership. "We recruit, screen and match mentors with young people using that set of standards."

Recognizing that a mentoring relationship is not usually a relationship of equals is an important aspect of mentorships, says Amy L. Best, Ph.D., professor and chair, Department of Sociology and Anthropology at George Mason University. "There are really two types of mentors: those who provide guidance and willingly share knowledge they have accrued from their experience in the field," she said. "The second type are those who facilitate opportunity, vouching for someone or helping the person with points of contact in their area of interest. Both are important."

THE MENTORING RELATIONSHIP develops best when mentors listen to a young person's concerns and expectations [and] empathize and tailor support and skill building around the teen's needs and with their input, says Short. "The relationship should benefit both the mentor and the teen through expressions of gratitude, a sense of accomplishment, and expectations for future support and success."

Effective mentors are as interested as they are interesting and are forthcoming with accounts of their own struggles and the strategies they used to overcome them, says Best. "The best mentors listen first and then lead. It's not a one size fits all relationship," she said. "The best mentors are concrete in their guidance and work with attainable and flexible goals. [They] don't play favorites, but work to create an ethos of fairness and mutual respect."

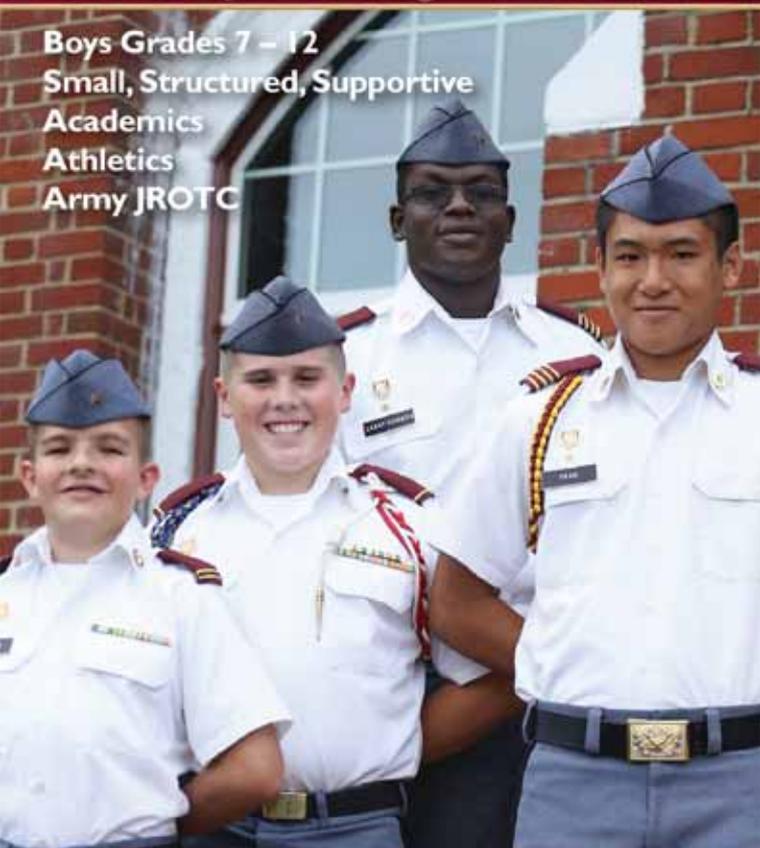

Tykesha R. Myrick works as a financial aid manager at Northern Virginia Community College (NOVA) and is the founder of the WISE program on campus. The program, which targets minority women, pairs students with adult professionals who offer guidance to the students, many of whom are the first in their families to attend college. "The relationships go beyond academic accomplishments and are life changing and life lasting," said Myrick. "The goal is to provide a holistic environment for these young women."

Mentorship programs such as WISE work best when those being mentored are receptive. "The [best] mentees [respect] the mentor's gift of time [and] recognize the importance of learning by listening and ask thoughtful questions, and they are open and responsive to guidance," said Best. "It is equally important to invest not simply in the best and brightest, but those with the smallest glimmer of promise. Good mentors move mountains."

a part of Fairfax County that includes Westfield High School.

Trump couldn't even win in this most Republican of precincts, picking up only 42 percent of the vote compared to Clinton, who took 50 percent. But Democrats are quick to point out that those statistics will not necessarily translate into a string of victories this November.

"In 2013, Terry McAuliffe carried 51 House districts in his election for governor, and he still only won 34 House seats," said Democratic strategist Ben Tribbett. "So just winning up-ballot don't necessarily translate to a victory down-ballot."

ROUNDUPS

Health Department Needs Volunteers

The Health Department is seeking volunteers to participate in its upcoming Point of Dispensing (POD) exercise on Saturday, July 29. From 9-11 a.m. a simulated POD will be operated at Centreville High School, 6001 Union Mill Road, Clifton.

Trained Health Department staff and volunteers will assist actors — POD clients — with filling out a screening form, dispensing faux-medications and answering questions. This exercise is intended to evaluate the Health Department's ability to provide critical services during a disaster, specifically dispensing medication quickly to residents.

Register to participate as an actor by going to www.eventbrite.com/e/fairfax-county-health-department-point-of-dispensing-exercise-tickets-33333277731. For more information, contact Liz Sullivan, training and exercise coordinator, at 703-246-8703.

Free Carseat Inspections

Certified technicians from the Sully District Police Station will perform free, child safety carseat inspections Thursday, June 22, from 5-8:30 p.m., at the station, 4900 Stonecroft Blvd. in Chantilly. No appointment is necessary. But residents should install the child safety seats themselves so technicians may properly inspect and adjust them, as needed. Because of time constraints, only the first 35 vehicles arriving on each date will be inspected. That way, inspectors may have enough time to properly instruct the caregiver on the correct use of the child seat. Call 703-814-7000, ext. 5140, to confirm dates and times.

'Innovation of Flight'

The Steven Udvar-Hazy Center National Air and Space museum hosted its annual "Innovation of Flight," one of two events in which the museum attracts in excess of 15,000 visitors. Pilots were on hand to talk about the aircraft which were on display from 10 a.m. - 3 p.m. on Saturday, June 17. Visitors were allowed to walk on the tarmac on the exterior of the museum grounds which connect to Dulles International Airport. Fairfax County Police department's helicopter was one of many helicopters on display for guests. Two of the crowd favorites were the F-16, and the C-17 which were on display for an up close personal experience for the guests. The C-17 (top) was left open so visitors could walk through and see first-hand how U.S. Military Service members are transported. The highlight of the day for many was seeing a B-2 Stealth Bomber (bottom) do two flyovers above the museum's grounds.

Relatively Speaking

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

If you live long enough, it's quite likely that many of the family members/generations born before you will have predeceased you. Moreover, the family members born before them, two generations-plus behind, are most surely to be geshtorbin (Yiddish for dead) as well. The effect: memory loss. Specifically, the memories lost of a generation of great grandparents – and beyond, you probably never knew or for whom you have extremely limited knowledge; after all, you were an infant when your maternal grandmother died. And when your widowed mother died nearly nine years ago, you lost what may very well have been that final anecdotal connection to your family's history, especially if your Jewish and your grandparents immigrated from Russia, Romania, The Baltic States, etc. before World War II where recorded history of Jews was evidence not documentation.

It just so happens that in my family, in fact, our closest surviving cousins, Ronnie and Gil, who themselves are in their 80s, are alive and extremely well and living with their daughter, Jayne, in Massachusetts. This past weekend, Ronnie and Gil drove eight hours to visit my brother Richard and me. And though we are regularly in touch over the phone, it has been years since we were all together in Washington, D.C. And being in their company, naturally we reminisced – ALL WEEKEND. What spawned this column was a comment Ronnie (a singer/pianist in Boston for 25 years) made in response to a question we asked about whether there was any other musical talent in the family. She said quite matter of factly that my maternal great-grandfather – who I had never met or even heard of before, "was a cantor in Russia – with a beautiful voice" (who never left Russia). "What! I never knew that." I don't recall knowing anything about my great grandparents, maternal or paternal.

You see, Ronnie was there almost at the beginning. She was the first born to my mother's oldest sibling and only sister, my Auntie Lee. My mother was the baby of the family – after two brothers were born. As such, the age difference between my mother and Ronnie was about 14 years, atypical for a niece and an aunt. As a result, Ronnie was witness to lots of family history that I thought might have been lost forever when my mother died in 2008. As a few examples, Ronnie knows who was present at my mother's "Auntie's" house for Passover Cedar in the early 1960s. She knew that "Auntie" was my mother's mother's brother's widow, not my mother's mother's sister. I certainly didn't. She knew that three families/our cousins lived together in this three-story home and all worked together in the family market: Levine's. Still more that I didn't I know.

Another family connection Ronnie and Gil reminded us of was a family line we have in South America. Again, before World War II, one of my maternal grandfather's (Hyman) brother's Simon (Shimon) immigrated to Argentina where to this day exists first (Eduardo) and second cousins (names I'm afraid don't know) I've never met, though Ronnie and Gil have met numerous times in Miami and in Argentina (Ronnie and Gil used to live in South Florida). The more we talked, the more we travelled back in time. But I won't self-indulge myself and bore you any longer. I will try to wrap it up in the next paragraph.

My mother, Celia died in December 2008, my father died in December 2006. With their passing, my brother and I lost – among a million other things, their first-hand, on-site accounts of our Lourie/Blacker history dating back 150 years or so to Russia/Eastern Europe, before any of my relatives immigrated to America. Ronnie, my mother's cherished niece, knows as much about our family history as there is still to know and her husband of nearly 63 years, Gil, knows almost as much. Their visit wasn't just a weekend. It was a lifetime. A weekend of a lifetime for which Richard and I are extraordinarily grateful.

singing songs and helping a couple of them write original songs, and Cathy recorded them,” said Halterman.

One in five Zambian children became orphans after that country’s AIDS epidemic; and in 25 percent of households there — some 625,000 — the primary caregiver is a child. And there’s such widespread poverty in Zambia that it’s extremely difficult for orphans to find a sustainable source of income.

“The Zambian community doesn’t support employment opportunities for the younger generation, so they have to find their own things to do,” said Halterman. “So EOH works on sustainability projects for them, and I’m adding in my project to theirs.” (To see a video about it, go to <https://www.gofundme.com/project-joy>).

Via Project Joy, he plans to produce a full-fledged documentary on the entire process of teaching the children new, original songs, plus dances to their music. Then the goal is to have them perform their songs and dances at various community churches and functions throughout Zambia — but mainly in Lusaka, the capital and most-modernized part of the country.

Don Halterman with some of the orphans.

Project Joy will help Zambian orphans make a living through music.

“These kids have no money or material goods, yet they’re happier and more joyful than anyone in the U.S.,” said Halterman. “It just takes me aback. I believe it’s because of the joy of the Lord — only He can give it to you. We all have joy as humans; but when you connect it with God, it bursts out so other people can see it.”

Ironically, he said, when he was a boy in Sunday School, he remembers saying, “I’ll do anything for God; just don’t send me to Africa to be a missionary.” Said Halterman: “It was just the unknown, so it was scary to me then. So this project is God’s sense of humor.”

Basically, he said, “It’s tough over there. These kids have so little; their parents have either died of AIDS or left them. But I want them to have a sustainable, meaningful life so they can be part of the solution, not the problem.”

EOH supports more than 100

orphans there, and 25 have been identified as having the skills to perform the songs and dances. “We’ll produce seven, original songs — two of them written by one of the orphans and five written by me,” said Halterman. “They’ll have reggae and island rhythms.”

They’ll be recorded as both a CD and a DVD, and people who donate at the Website, www.musicprojectjoy.com, will be able to download them. “It’s all tax-deductible because we teamed up with a nonprofit called PCI — Public Communications Inc. — which will collect the donations and send 100 percent of the money to Project Joy,” said Halterman.

“There are no salaries; but we need to raise $58,000 to help us travel to Zambia, produce the CDs and DVDs and prepare the kids to go out and perform.”

Then the orphans can both sell the CDs and perform for money, which will provide an income for them. On the DVDs, available to contributors, each song will be accompanied by a video.

“We plan to return to Zambia in August, for about two weeks, to do the project,” said Halterman. “The kids are excited about it; they love singing and interacting with others.”

And I did the music tracks to go with their songs.”

He’s hoping people will contribute to the cause at the website because, unlike many other projects, this one will have an immediate, positive impact on the children’s lives. “They could do a concert the week after we leave,” he said. “And this is a way people can help kids in Africa, even if they can’t go there. They can still be an integral part of these orphans’ lives and really make a huge difference.”
