Fairfax County Celebrates 275th Anniversary

Fairfax County celebrated its 275th Anniversary on Saturday, June 17, 2017, in the area surrounding the Historic Fairfax Courthouse and the Judicial Center grounds in the City of Fairfax. More than 80 historical organizations, attractions, re-enactment units, and booths were present to showcase the county's neighborhoods, sites, and history. The day included historically themed activities, live music, antique vehicles from the Police and Fire Departments, and re-enactors and living history demonstrations. It also included the Lord and Lady Fairfax Awards Program, talks on topics in the Courthouse, Virginia's WWI/WWII Anniversary Mobile, Historic Courthouse Tours, a Revolutionary War memorial plaque dedication ceremony, petting zoo, and more.

The special guests who came all the way from England were Nicholas Fairfax, the 14th Lord Fairfax of Cameron, and his wife Annabel. Nicholas is the direct descendant of Thomas Fairfax, the sixth Lord Fairfax of Cameron, from whom the county gets its name.

GRADUATION 2017

‘Remember to Dream of Something Better’

Fairfax High Class of 2017 graduates.

BY BONNIE HOBBS
THE CONNECTION

Fairfax High’s graduation was last Thursday, June 15, in the school’s field house. But before the newly minted grads headed outside to begin the next chapter of their lives, they received some words of wisdom.

“It is such an awesome day,” said Principal Dave Goldfarb. “On this one day, we honor four years of your work.” Noting how their parents have been there for them on their “journey through life,” he said so has the school staff. “We’ve supported you and have been your coaches, confidants, role models, mentors and more, and we are so proud of you,” said Goldfarb.

“Grads, you sit here now with doors wide open to new adventures,” he said. “You’ve learned the skills that will help you, including using your words.” He then highlighted four words – ‘or,’ ‘but,’ ‘and’ and ‘yet’ – that can each change a sentence’s meaning, depending on how they’re used.

“Many people use ‘or’ to frame choices or reality for you,” said Goldfarb. ‘Or’ can polarize situations, as in, ‘You’re either with us or against us.’ But life is more multiple choice, so don’t let ‘or’ imprison you; there are many shades of gray. ‘Or’ can mean many options and different perspectives.”

He said ‘but’ completely changes the direction or impact of a sentence. “It exudes negativity in the way you present ideas and throws shade on the entire message,” explained Goldfarb. “But if ‘but’ is a villain in the world of speaking, ‘and’ is a hero. It connects phrases, maintains balance, keeps possibilities open and signals positive intent and alternate choices.”

As for ‘yet,’ he said it has “transformative powers – the ability to preserve hope. So keep it handy and ready for use. Don’t let anyone shut down your dreams and tell you what you can and can’t do.”

“Class of 2017, when you feel like your possibilities are limited, your tomorrows will bring your opportunities and surprises that you can’t see now,” continued Goldfarb. “As you go forth, remember, communication is critical to your ability to move forward. You are the listeners and speakers of the future, and we wish you well.”

This year’s graduating class contained 86 honor grads – students with a 4.0 or higher GPA. And one of them, Ebenezer Sampong, gave the graduate address. “Seniors, look at yourself – where you were, where you are and where you will be,” he said. “As we leave the path of childhood, remember to dream – not only at night, but during the day – of something beyond, something better, something higher.

“Out there is our future, our destiny, our fate,” he continued. “Just beyond those doors is the real world; it’s time for the birds to fly. And whatever you do, keep moving forward; and remember, you are not alone. We all have someone cheering us on.”

Sampong then urged his classmates to “have the courage to act. We each have a talent, a skill, a worth, and no one can take that away from us.” He thanked the parents, teachers and school staff for helping them all grow and thanked the Class of 2017 for its “kindness, brilliance and smiles.” Now that they’re graduating seniors, he said, “For this fleeting moment, we are giants.”

Next, awards were presented to four noteworthy members of the Senior Class. Sydney Suarez received the Outstanding Senior Award; Charlie Flynn, Service Award; Emily Deivert, Faculty Award; and Eve Boggs, Fairfax Award. Then, after the diplomas were handed out and the seniors tossed their caps into the air in celebration, they headed out into the sunshine toward the rest of their lives.

Once-Hidden Life Gets a Fresh Start

Former Mayor Scott Silverthorne shares his story.

BY BONNIE HOBBS
THE CONNECTION

Like all human beings, Scott Silverthorne is flawed. But unlike many others, he's determined to change his ways for the better.

Granted, it may be tougher for him since – after spending half his life as an elected official – he's still in the glare of a public spotlight. Yet now that he's a private citizen, he has the time – and, more important, the drive – to focus on the work ahead of him.

The last three months have been the hardest of Silverthorne's life. After being considered no less than a hometown hero for his decades of public service to the City of Fairfax, he found himself behind bars. Caught in a police sting last August, he was talked into bringing crystal meth to what was supposed to be a sexual encounter between fellow gay men.

Later convicted on a drug-distribution charge, he was jailed just a few blocks from the City Hall where, for years, he proudly represented Fairfax as a councilman and mayor. However, his failing never involved dealing drugs but, rather, becoming addicted to them.

"I screwed up," said Silverthorne. "I pled guilty in March, after long consultations with my attorney, Brian Drummond. I understand the law, however nuanced it may be. But I'm not a drug dealer, nor have I ever been." As a gay man, he said, "I wasn't fully comfortable with who I was, so drugs – specifically, crystal meth – were a coping mechanism. My biggest mistake was ever trying it."

ON JUNE 9, he was sentenced to the three months in jail he'd already served, placed on three years' probation and released. Now, with the support of family and friends, he's rebuilding his life, and the only newspaper he's speaking with about his situation is the Fairfax Connection.

"It was so frustrating for me, the past year, to stay underground and out of the public eye over this issue," said Silverthorne. "People were asking in public meetings and on social media why I wasn't making any public statements. Under strict guidance from my attorney, I couldn't. But now I want to share my story with anyone who cares, in hopes that it will help with my healing and the healing of the community."

Noting that he's lost friends to crystal-meth addiction, he said getting arrested "probably saved my life." But the circumstances of his arrest, and the aftermath, troubled him. "I always wanted to take responsibility for my personal shortcomings and for what I did – but not for what I didn't do," he explained. "The story's sensationalism grew over the months following my arrest. Of course, it also centered around sex – which was grossly exaggerated. I was not charged with a sex crime."

From the very beginning, Silverthorne cooperated with the Fairfax County police and, indeed, was initially released on personal recognizance. So, he said, "I was disappointed in their press conference [about the incident]. They misrepresented the amount of meth as 2 grams, but their own lab report came back as less than a gram."

Furthermore, he said, "I think the police had an obligation to tell the truth; they greatly embellished the amount of the meth and the sordid details about sex. The county law-enforcement community had had a bad year, coming off the killing of the unarmed John Geer and the taser death of Natasha McKenna, a female inmate in the county jail."

OPINION

Losing One of Our Own

Worst fear of any parent of a teenager, losing a child to violence.

Later this week, when area Muslims celebrate the end of Ramadan, a month of observance and daily fasting at Eid al-Fitr, the surrounding community grieves with them the loss of 17-year-old Nabra Hassanen of Reston.

Nabra was among a group of teenagers who were gathered at the All Dulles Area Muslim Society for an all-night event overnight Saturday during Ramadan, and who were returning to the center after going to eat at a fast food restaurant.

Fairfax County Police report: "At about 3:40 a.m. on Sunday, a group of as many as 15 teenagers was walking and riding bikes on Dranesville Road. The group of teens had been attending an overnight event at a mosque, the All Dulles Area Muslim Society or ADAMS Center, and had left to go to a fast food restaurant. As they were returning to the mosque, some were on the sidewalk and others were on the road itself. Detectives believe [Darwin Martinez Torres, 22, of Sterling] came upon the teens while he was driving. The investigation reveals a teenaged boy on a bike began arguing with Torres. Torres then drove his car onto the curb as the group scattered. Witnesses say Torres caught up with them a short time later in a nearby parking lot and got out of his car armed with a baseball bat and began chasing the group. Torres was able to catch Nabra. His anger over the encounter led to violence when he hit Nabra with a baseball bat. Torres then took Nabra with him in his car to a second location nearby in Loudoun County."

Nabra's body was found in a Loudoun pond. Torres is charged with her murder, which police describe as a road rage incident rather than a hate crime, although more charges could come later.

All parents who have successfully raised children into a teenagers know fear for their safety as they become more independent. We expect our teens to be safe participating in events based at a house of worship. We expect our teens to be safe from violence. Nabra's death means that all of us now have a diminished sense of safety; we all grieve with Nabra's parents, who lost their beautiful and beloved daughter during Ramadan, on Father's Day. We share their horror at what their daughter suffered.

Coming together in support of the Muslim community in vigil, prayers and other support has meant a great deal.

Nabra Hassanen, 17, of Reston was a sophomore at South Lakes High School.

"Basically, the outpouring of support from the Christian community, the Jewish community, Hindu, Sikh, Buddhist, Bahá'í; everyone is comforting to us," Rizwan Jaka of the ADAMS Center told a Connection reporter. "People care so much and it means so much to us."

But we will all feel the loss of Nabra Hassanen, and a loss of sense of safety here, in weeks and years to come.

November General Elections

BY KENNETH R. "KEN" PLUM
STATE DELEGATE (D-36)

With the conclusion of the political party primaries last week the general election is now teed up for Nov. 7. There were some surprises coming out of the Democratic and Republican primaries. Lt. Gov. Ralph Northam easily won the Democratic primary to be the nominee for governor even though there was discussion beforehand that polls indicated a tight race. Polling for primaries is notorious for being inaccurate because with a typically light turnout the universe of potential voters is almost impossible to determine. Former one-term U.S. Rep. Tom Perriello has a great deal to offer and will hopefully stay on the scene for future opportunities. Although the term "establishment" was grossly over-used in describing Ralph Northam, his service in the state senate plus his active role as lieutenant governor made him well known and greatly admired throughout the state.

Justin Fairfax gained everyone's admiration after a primary loss to Attorney General Mark Herring four years ago led to his active campaigning during the interim time making him well known for this primary. He was also well known for his work as an attorney. If you review the areas where Ralph Northam did well and compare them with where Justin Fairfax was strongest, you create a strong statewide team that will be nearly impossible to defeat. Attorney General Mark Herring was not challenged in a primary and will be on the ballot to succeed himself in November. There is no one-term limitation with the attorney general and the lieutenant governor as there is with the governor.

The greatest surprise of the primaries may have been on the Republican side to pick a candidate for governor. Ed Gillespie who has been mentioned for years as the next Republican governor of Virginia barely got through the primary with a shockingly strong showing by Corey Stewart who is known for his anti-immigrant work in Prince William County and for campaigning with a Confederate flag. He has the distinction of being so over the top that he was fired by the Trump campaign. Turnout was especially low in the Republican primary, and Stewart was just over a percentage point in taking out Gillespie. It will be interesting to see if the folks who voted for Stewart will vote in the general election or decide to stay home.

The Republican primary for lieutenant governor was a slug-fest between two state senators with Jill Vogel winning after a mud-slinging campaign that left neither candidate looking good.

All 100 seats for the House of Delegates are up for election this fall with a record number of contested elections.

Historically it has been difficult to recruit candidates to run for the House of Delegates, but events of the past year have brought forth more candidates than ever before. There was a record number 27 seats where the candidates were determined by the primary because there was so much interest in running. Democrats will certainly pick up seats in the House of Delegates getting closer to shifting or sharing power in that legislative body.

While I am uncontested in my race for the House of Delegates you can still expect to see me campaigning. It is a good way to stay in touch with constituents and to increase turn-out for the statewide elections. Expect a busy fall of campaigning leading up to the fall elections in Virginia that will send a signal to the nation as to the public's reaction to national events.

Gov. Terry McAuliffe signing Del. Eileen Filler-Corn's (D-41) bill, HB 2257

McAuliffe Signs Filler-Corn's Consent Education Bill into Law

On Friday, June 9, Gov. Terry McAuliffe signed Del. Eileen Filler-Corn's (D-41) bill, HB 2257 at the State Capitol in Richmond.

HB 2257 builds upon Filler-Corn's legislation from 2016 (now a law), which requires any high school family life education curriculum offered by a local school division to incorporate age-appropriate elements of effective and evidence-based programs on the prevention of dating violence, domestic abuse, sexual harassment, and sexual violence. This legislation codifies that the law and meaning of consent may be taught in high school family life education.

"HB 2257 has been a multi-year process for me building on my healthy relationship education bill passed and signed last year," said Filler-Corn. "My goal for this bill, as it relates to the law and meaning of consent to be taught in FLE, has been education and prevention," she added.

The bill will take effect July 1, 2017.

Woodson Graduates State Champions

Boys' basketball, lacrosse win state titles; 2017 class receives more Ivy League acceptances than previous three classes combined.

BY THOMAS KENDZIORA
THE CONNECTION

When W.T. Woodson High School Principal Scott Poole stood before the Cavaliers' graduating class on Wednesday, he contemplated what it meant to be a champion.

Several of his students were crowned champions on the field this year. The boys' basketball team, for instance, won its first-ever state title in March, and Poole expressed how honored he felt to receive a championship ring. Other Cavaliers were champions in theatre, arts or academics. Still other students have championed causes or candidates. This word can take many forms.

"There are hundreds of champions of all kinds sitting in front of me," Poole said, "and the staff, as well as your parents, are proud of the champions that you have become."

Ryan Hilliard, who coached Woodson's boys' lacrosse team to its first state championship in 17 years earlier this month, also feels the pride that comes with the "champion" label, but he said he's even more proud of the players whose accomplishments will always be remembered.

"Every time they drive by the building, they'll be able to see 2017 in front of the building, state champs," Hilliard said. "That's something they'll always have."

Woodson beat South County, with whom the Cavaliers had split two previous games this spring, for the title on June 10. For the 10 Woodson seniors whose career ended on the highest note, Wednesday's commencement was a little extra special.

"Walking across that stage ... knowing that people know they're state champions, I think that definitely means something to them," Hilliard said.

Five-hundred forty eight students graduated from Woodson on Wednesday afternoon at EagleBank Arena. It was the culmination of four years together; by student speaker Hailey Wingo's math, they spent 2,761,920 hours in high school.

THIS GROUP certainly made the most of those hours.

The 2017 class received more Ivy League acceptances than Woodson's previous three classes combined. The graduates have earned over $12 million in scholarships. As Poole said, the group features all sorts of champions.

"In 20 years, I can't wait to read the newspaper and see my classmates' names," Wingo said. "I can't wait to see a Broadway play and recognize a face onstage. I can't wait to be able to brag, 'I went to high school with them.'"

Students processed in at 2 p.m., and diplomas were handed out an hour later. There was one award still to be given, however: The School Award, which is the highest honor Woodson faculty can present to a student.

Emily Cabrera, who spent her time at Woodson balancing tennis, tutoring and technology club with her academics, was the class's recipient. Minutes after she was recognized on stage, her mother stepped to the podium as guest speaker.

Beth Cabrera is a senior scholar at George Mason's Center for the Advancement of Well-Being and the author of "Beyond Happy: Women, Work, and Well-Being." In her speech, she presented three tips for all graduates to hold dear: be grateful, be social by connecting with others, and be a giver by helping others.

"Your happiness does not depend on what happens to you," she emphasized. Even after the highs of a state championship or the lows of a college rejection, Cabrera explained, one's happiness levels will eventually even out. As a result, those levels are impacted more by small choices made throughout the day.

Dr. Daniel Dominich, executive director of the American Association of School Administrators, is the keynote speaker for the ceremony.

THE THRILL of graduating might not last, then, but the memories along the way will. This senior class made plenty in nearly 3 million hours together, and even as the now-graduates part ways for this summer and beyond, they'll take these memories with them. The 2017 basketball and lacrosse state championship banners aren't going away, either.

"Here's to the friendships forged, the connections cherished, and the lessons learned," Wingo said. "Here's to us."

The Woodson band performed the processional music as graduates streamed in, and later performed the national anthem.

Students place their hands over their hearts as the color guard presents the colors during the ceremony.

Finding the Right Mentor

A mentor can brighten a young person's future.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL

Tamyka Mason says that she was struggling with academics, finances and time management. She knew that she needed to make a change, but didn't have a source for guidance. Mason discovered the Women in Search of Excellence (WISE) Mentoring Program run by Northern Virginia Community College and her life began to change.

"When I joined WISE, [I] was assigned [a] mentor and learned how to speak about the challenges I was facing and the goals I had," said Mason. "[My mentor] helped me dramatically ... plan for future events."

The upcoming summer months offer teens an opportunity to connect with adults other than parents who can offer guidance through mentorship programs. Finding the right mentoring match can be a life-altering experience, say experts.

"Through supportive relationships with adult mentors, teens can learn how to develop practical goals, identify resources to accomplish goals ... regulate emotions, communicate effectively with others and cope better with stress," said Jerome Short, Ph.D., associate professor of psychology at George Mason University.

The Virginia Mentoring Partnership (VMP) is a source for those who are looking for a mentor or those who want to mentor others. The organization's program managers train mentoring program coordinators and mentors. Their goal is to increase the number and quality of mentoring programs in Virginia. VMP maintains a database where prospective mentors or mentees can plug in a ZIP code and find the closest mentoring program.

"We provide support across the State of Virginia to help align program practices that research shows make high quality mentorship programs," said Betsy Bilharz, Virginia Mentoring Partnership. "We recruit, screen and match mentors with young people using that set of standards."

Recognizing that a mentoring relationship is not usually a relationship of equals is an important aspect of mentorships, says Amy L. Best, Ph.D., professor and chair, Department of Sociology and Anthropology at George Mason University. "There are really two types of mentors: those who provide guidance and willingly share knowledge they have accrued from their experience in the field," she said. "The second type are those who facilitate opportunity, vouching for someone or helping the person with points of contact in their area of interest. Both are important."

THE MENTORING RELATIONSHIP develops best when mentors listen to a young person's concerns and expectations [and] empathize and tailor support and skill building around the teen's needs and with their input, says Short. "The relationship should benefit both the mentor and the teen through expressions of gratitude, a sense of accomplishment, and expectations for future support and success."

Effective mentors are as interested as they are interesting and are forthcoming with accounts of their own struggles and the strategies they used to overcome them, says Best. "The best mentors listen first and then lead. It's not a one size fits all relationship," she said. "The best mentors are concrete in their guidance and work with attainable and flexible goals. [They] don't play favorites, but work to create an ethos of fairness and mutual respect."

Tykesha R. Myrick works as a financial aid manager at Northern Virginia Community College (NOVA) and is the founder of the WISE program on campus. The program, which targets minority women, pairs students with adult professionals who offer guidance to the students, many of whom are the first in their families to attend college. "The relationships go beyond academic accomplishments and are life changing and life lasting," said Myrick. "The goal is to provide a holistic environment for these young women."

Mentorship programs such as WISE work best when those being mentored are receptive. "The [best] mentees [respect] the mentor's gift of time [and] recognize the importance of learning by listening and ask thoughtful questions, and they are open and responsive to guidance," said Best. "It is equally important to invest not simply in the best and brightest, but those with the smallest glimmer of promise. Good mentors move mountains."

GRADUATION 2017

'Some of the Finest Rams' Sent into the World

Robinson Secondary graduates reminded on power of positive attitude.

BY ALEX PENA
THE CONNECTION

Students, along with their friends and families, filled Eagle Bank Arena Thursday morning for Robinson Secondary School's graduation ceremony for the class of 2017.

The Robinson Symphonic Band played as the graduating students took their seats, which was followed up with a performance of the National Anthem, formally marking the beginning of the graduation ceremony.

Two members of the SGA Executive Council, Claire Buckholz and Heather Thomas, were the first speakers. Buckholz welcomed the families and thanked them for their support of the graduating class, which led to a warm round of applause. Thomas introduced the distinguished guests that were on stage including Robinson Secondary principal, Matthew Eline.

"His genuine interest and concern for the potential of each student has not gone overlooked," said Thomas. "We are sincerely grateful for his efforts."

Eline discussed how last year he had given the senior class a book on attitude. He highlighted five different points from the book including spreading positive energy, believing you can achieve your goals, being unafraid to take risks and more.

"A positive attitude can never be taken away from you," he said.

After this he acknowledged the staff members that were Robinson Secondary graduates themselves, students with 4.0 GPAs, and IB Diploma candidates.

"When I look at the class of 2017, I'm positive, because I know we're sending some of our finest Rams out into the world," Eline said as he closed out his speech. "I am proud of you, class of 2017."

mine who would be the student speaker at graduation. The winner was Gillian Hersh. She warmly reflected on her time at Robinson. Hersh told a story about how she started a countdown timer on her phone the first day of high school, and how that countdown is coming to an end.

"Our paths may be different, but our paths will be the same. We will all have a Lake Braddock graduate working for us one day," she quipped, which was met with a bout of laughter from the audience.

After a rendition of "Take Me Home" was sung by the Robinson Singers and Select Women's Ensemble, Donald Warter of the Senior Class Council introduced the Commencement Speaker, Bryan Hazard.

Hazard, coach of the state champion wrestling team at Robinson, spoke about a number of the great memories the staff had with the graduating class. He pondered as to where the time had gone from when parents brought their child to their first day of school, to the present where they have accomplished so much.

"The world renowned poet Kanye West once said in his song 'Homecoming:' you reach for the stars so if you fall, you land on a cloud," said Hazard. "And you guys definitely reach for the stars."

SGA Executive Council member Nam

Graduating senior Matthew Oakley waves to his friends and family in the crowd.

"When I look at the class of 2017, I'm positive, because I know we're sending some of our finest Rams out into the world,"

— Matthew Eline, Robinson Secondary School principal

Hyun Kim expressed her gratitude for the teachers at Robinson, asking them to stand and be recognized. Senior Class Principal Scot Turner took over the microphone to present the faculty award, the winner of which is voted on by the Robinson faculty. The award goes to someone who represents Robinson with honor and distinction, and the winner was none other than Nam Hyun Kim.

Students line up to walk across the stage and receive their diplomas.

The class of 2017 throws their graduation caps into the air to celebrate the end of the ceremony.

Silverthorne Focuses on Rebuilding His Life

So, said Silverthorne, “They were looking for a way to finally get something right. They thought they landed a big fish; but in reality, they arrested a drug user, not a drug dealer. I have great respect for the rank-and-file law-enforcement officers, but have lost respect for the Fairfax County police brass due to the handling of my case. After my close, working relationship with Fairfax City police, I believe our team in the City runs circles around the county police.”

After pleading guilty in March, he was immediately incarcerated until his sentencing. He was in solitary confinement, his first week, and then held in protective custody with two other men, for the duration.

“I spent most of my time in jail reflecting, reading 15 novels and sleeping,” said Silverthorne. “In truth, it was terribly boring for someone like me who’s used to being so active and among a lot of people.” In many ways, he said, the residential, drug-rehabilitation center he voluntarily placed himself in last summer was “a much tougher experience” because he was forced to attend drug-treatment programs every day from 7 a.m.-9 p.m.

“One of the things I learned during those five-and-a-half weeks in rehab was that the issue was not so much drug abuse, but psychology,” said Silverthorne. “Why do we make the decisions that lead us down the path of drug abuse? And, without question, being gay had led me to internalize issues surrounding that. I spent the first half of my life hiding the fact that I was gay, and the second half hiding my drug use.”

He said no one knew that he was abusing drugs – not his family, his closest friends and, most especially, members of City Council. “I was disheartened that some citizens accused them of covering for me,” said Silverthorne. “The reality was, if they had known, they would have kicked my butt. Every City Council member was shocked and amazed that I was leading this lifestyle.”

According to drug-rehabilitation professionals, meth use is rampant in the gay community. And in many ways, said Silverthorne, “After my first use, my brain was rewired. Meth is three times as strong as cocaine, as measured in the units of dopamine released in the brain.”

IN HIS CASE, he was a binge user. “I didn’t use every day or every week; but when I did, I’d often use for three days in a row – and then not again for a month,” he said. “While I’m not proud of what I did, this was a personal failing, not a professional one. I never used drugs when I was being a substitute teacher or conducting City business.”

When people first found out about his drug use, said Silverthorne, they were “shocked and angry. But now they realize I’m human and have taken responsibility for my mistakes. In jail, I tried my best to think about my future – righting my wrong and rebuilding my life – which is made more complicated by my felony conviction. But I had a hard time focusing on my future because of the uncertainty surrounding my sentencing. However, my planning will really begin in earnest, now that I’m free.”

He considered relocating and starting fresh elsewhere. “But the majority of the Fairfax community has continued to embrace me and has surprisingly welcomed me back with open arms,” he said. “So I really don’t know what the future holds for me. The literally hundreds and hundreds of letters I received in jail sustained me. I knew from them that people care about me and want me to succeed in the future.”

“If I wasn’t mayor, I’m not sure this sting ever would have happened,” continued Silverthorne. “But it’s probably the best thing because I’m now on the path to recovery. I’m going to get a sponsor and continue going to NA [Narcotics Anonymous] meetings. I’ll also reach out to people to thank them for their love and support. I was embarrassed that I had a problem; but once I came clean and admitted it, it was liberating.”

Saying he’s “terribly sorry for the suffering I put my family, friends and hometown through, over the past 10 months,” he’s also grateful for the opportunity he was given. “I want to thank my community for believing in me, supporting me and giving me the highest honor of my life – to serve as both a Council member and mayor of our great City,” said Silverthorne.

“I remain optimistic that my future may be even more fulfilling and exciting than my past,” he added. “While I never say ‘never,’ I have no intention to seek public office again because I want to explore what other opportunities may exist for me. Time will tell, but I’m hopeful that, over the next few years, I will again earn people’s trust and respect.”

“I remain optimistic that my future may be even more fulfilling and exciting than my past.”

— Scott Silverthorne

A Lamb Center guest receiving a dental exam at the free, onsite clinic.

Free Dental Clinic Opens

The Lamb Center is providing free oral healthcare to area homeless.

The Lamb Center (TLC), a day-time drop-in shelter serving poor and homeless individuals in central Fairfax County, announces the opening of a free dental clinic located onsite at 3160 Campbell Drive in Fairfax City.

Before The Lamb Center began introducing dental services in late March, too often, the only free oral health service available was an emergency extraction. Today, TLC guests working with a case manager can receive exams, x-rays, simple restorations and root canals at no charge. Beginning in August, cleanings and preventive services will be offered thanks to a partnership with the Northern Virginia Community College Dental Hygienist Program.

The dental clinic is a natural outgrowth of The Lamb Center's commitment to caring for the whole person. Living in the woods or on the streets is not conducive to good oral hygiene. Mouth and gum infections can contribute to serious health issues, including heart disease. Compounding health challenges, poor dental health can impact self-esteem. "Your smile betrays your economic wellbeing. Imagine trying to get a job with broken or missing teeth," said clinic coordinator, Sharon Jones, a retired psychiatric nurse and TLC board member.

Apprehension about seeing a dentist is not uncommon, but it's worse for a person living on the street. They might be ashamed of their poor hygiene or scared of receiving bad news about treatments they can't afford. "Having the clinic onsite, we are able to listen to our guests' fears and take the time to reassure them," said TLC Senior Case Manager Deb Haynes.

The dental clinic is supported by a growing network of volunteer dentists who share TLC's commitment to offering hope and dignity to poor and homeless individuals.

Oral healthcare professionals interested in supporting the dental clinic should contact The Lamb Center's Executive Director, John MacPherson at 703-691-3178.

In addition to dental services, TLC provides hot meals, showers, case management, pastoral care, and access to medical and psychiatric nurse practitioners. Visit www.thelambcenter.org.

Relatively Speaking

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

If you live long enough, it's quite likely that many of the family members/generations born before you will have predeceased you. Moreover, the family members born before them, two generations-plus behind, are most surely to be geshtorbin (Yiddish for dead) as well. The effect: memory loss. Specifically, the memories lost of a generation of great grandparents – and beyond, you probably never knew or for whom you have extremely limited knowledge; after all, you were an infant when your maternal grandmother died. And when your widowed mother died nearly nine years ago, you lost what may very well have been that final anecdotal connection to your family's history, especially if your Jewish and your grandparents immigrated from Russia, Romania, The Baltic States, etc. before World War II where recorded history of Jews was evidence not documentation.

It just so happens that in my family, in fact, our closest surviving cousins, Ronnie and Gil, who themselves are in their 80s, are alive and extremely well and living with their daughter, Jayne, in Massachusetts. This past weekend, Ronnie and Gil drove eight hours to visit my brother Richard and me. And though we are regularly in touch over the phone, it has been years since we were all together in Washington, D.C. And being in their company, naturally we reminisced – ALL WEEKEND. What spawned this column was a comment Ronnie (a singer/pianist in Boston for 25 years) made in response to a question we asked about whether there was any other musical talent in the family. She said quite matter of factly that my maternal great-grandfather – who I had never met or even heard of before, “was a cantor in Russia – with a beautiful voice” (who never left Russia). “What! I never knew that.” I don't recall knowing anything about my great grandparents, maternal or paternal.

You see, Ronnie was there almost at the beginning. She was the first born to my mother's oldest sibling and only sister, my Auntie Lee. My mother was the baby of the family – after two brothers were born. As such, the age difference between my mother and Ronnie was about 14 years, atypical for a niece and an aunt. As a result, Ronnie was witness to lots of family history that I thought might have been lost forever when my mother died in 2008. As a few examples, Ronnie knows who was present at my mother's “Auntie's” house for Passover Cedar in the early 1960s. She knew that “Auntie” was my mother's mother's brother's widow, not my mother's mother's sister. I certainly didn't. She knew that three families/our cousins lived together in this three-story home and all worked together in the family market: Levine's. Still more that I didn't I know.

Another family connection Ronnie and Gil reminded us of was a family line we have in South America. Again, before World War II, one of my maternal grandfather's (Hyman) brother's Simon (Shimon) immigrated to Argentina where to this day exists first (Eduardo) and second cousins (names I'm afraid don't know) I've never met, though Ronnie and Gil have met numerous times in Miami and in Argentina (Ronnie and Gil used to live in South Florida). The more we talked, the more we travelled back in time. But I won't self-indulge myself and bore you any longer. I will try to wrap it up in the next paragraph.

My mother, Celia died in December 2008, my father died in December 2006. With their passing, my brother and I lost – among a million other things, their first-hand, on-site accounts of our Lourie/Blacker history dating back 150 years or so to Russia/Eastern Europe, before any of my relatives immigrated to America. Ronnie, my mother's cherished niece, knows as much about our family history as there is still to know and her husband of nearly 63 years, Gil, knows almost as much. Their visit wasn't just a weekend. It was a lifetime. A weekend of a lifetime for which Richard and I are extraordinarily grateful.
