Reston District Station Commander Capt. Ronald Manzo addressed the Reston Association Board and members during the meeting on Thursday, Sept. 28, about crime activity. Though traffic is typically the No. 1 concern for the station, he reported an increase in thefts of property from parked cars in the area as well as gunshot complaints.

Donation Day in Reston

Tall Oaks resident Peter Trelogan and his fiancée Jan Ayton pitched in with the donations at Tall Oaks Assisted Living of Reston's donation day on Friday, Sept. 22 to assist victims of Hurricane Irma. TAD Relocation and Transitional Transport helped collect the furniture and clothing and all the items will be distributed through the services of the Salvation Army and the American Red Cross.

Sridhar Ganesan, Reston Association Board at-large director and treasurer, discussed the latest draft of the association's proposed 2018 budget, which proposes a $14 reduction in annual assessments for its members, during a community meeting on Sept. 14.

Carol Nahorniak, president of the Friends of Reston for Community Projects, advocated for the Reston Association to finance improvements for the Walker Nature Center during a community meeting on the association's 2018 budget on Sept. 14.

The Reston Association Board of Directors is considering lowering the association's annual assessment rate from $692 to $678 per household in 2018.

Sridhar Ganesan, an at-large director and treasurer of the board, presented a proposed budget to the community during a meeting on Thursday, Sept. 14.

Membership to the RA is required for all residential property owners in Reston, and they are billed annually for the assessment. The potential $14 reduction diverges from the previous board's budget discussions last fall, which resulted in a $35 increase from $657 in 2016 to $692 in 2017.

Last year's jump could have been higher, as the association was approved to operate at assessment levels of $720 per household, but the board voted to use $550,000 of operating surplus to lower the actual charge to its members.

"No decisions have been made," Ganesan said during the meeting. "None of this has been decided."

Though the association anticipates reduced revenues in 2018, it also anticipates lower expenses, according to Ganesan.

While the approved 2017 budget projected a total revenue of $17.7 million, staff are now projecting the actual total to be approximately $160,000 lower at $17.5 million, according to Ganesan. However, the difference between approved 2017 expenses — $15.4 million — and actual 2017 expenses are also projected to be approximately $380,000 lower at $15 million.

This was accomplished because of an effort to lower the association's operating costs by 5 percent from mid-2017 to the end of 2018, according to Ganesan. To continue progress towards the goal, the association plans to reduce its legal costs; levels of compensation and benefits for its employees; and other overhead administrative expenses, according to Ganesan.

In 2018, the employee share of the association's health insurance benefit is proposed to rise from 5 percent to 10 percent and retirement benefits are proposed to lower, according to Ganesan.

A pool of funding to reward employees for high performance instead of automatic, annual salary increases has also been allocated in the proposed budget.

"The third thing that the staff has been toying with is, instead of dealing with annual increases, can we look at merit-based performances as one way to compensate people who are performing really well," Ganesan said.

The association plans to ditch legal consultants and rely more on in-house counsel, which it will need to hire, to reduce legal fees in 2018 by $325,000.

"Legal fees is something that jumped out," Ganesan said. "This has been a matter of public discussion a lot."

The association had $688,462 in legal expenses in 2016, according to a public draft of the RA's 2016 Form 990, Return of Organization Exempt from Income Tax, which is to be filed to the IRS. Two of the association's highest-paid contractors provided legal services in 2016: Chadwick Washington of Fairfax was paid $424,966 and Reston law firm Odin, Feldman and Pittleman was paid $237,299, according to the form.

The pool for members subject to assessment fees is also projected to continue to grow.

There are currently 20,668 dwellings subject to annual association assessment fees, according to Ganesan. The association expects that number to rise by 429 in 2018 when two new developments are opened: Sunrise Square Sekas Homes and The Vine luxury apartments.

"We are clearly getting more people, and, from a staff perspective, they will continue to focus as the new developments come in terms of bringing them into the RA fold," Ganesan said.

However, the association has a goal of increasing its non-assessment revenues by 10 percent in 2018. How it will accomplish this is still up for consideration by the board.

Fixing the Lake House Losses

The association is projecting an operating deficit of $10,903 in 2018 if no changes are made to the operations of the controversial Lake House property, according to Ganesan.

The association took out a $2.65 million loan to acquire the property and will make principal payments of $182,800 until July 2025, when a balloon payment of $1.57 million is due, which the association could handle by paying the balance using reserve funds or through refinancing, according to Ganesan.

"Something for us to think about: Paying off the loan will lower the assessments from $678 to $669 immediately," Ganesan said.

The RA began enrolling elementary and middle school students for its "RA Fit Kids" after-school program in May of last year, which has been operating out of the Lake House below its 50-spot capacity.

It is projected that if the association were to scrap the after-school program and use the Lake House exclusively for corporate rentals, it would yield a net profit of $132,582 instead of losses, according to Ganesan.

COMMENTARY

Too Close for Comfort

BY KENNETH R. "KEN" PLUM
STATE DELEGATE (D-36)

For many years, I have been involved in various demonstrations and vigils to bring attention to the sobering facts about gun violence in our society. I have always been astonished at the number of people taking part in these events who have personal stories to tell about the way gun violence has affected their lives. There are parents involved in working to end gun violence whose children were either killed or wounded in the massacre at Virginia Tech. Parents of children who were murdered at Sandy Hook Elementary School travel the country telling their stories and campaigning for commonsense gun safety laws. Former Congresswoman Gabby Giffords who survived being shot in the head campaigns against gun violence even though her wounds slow her down. Ask your friends or neighbors if they know anyone whose life was changed because of gun violence — you may be surprised at the numbers who say yes.

My involvement in the movement to end gun violence grows out of my service as an elected official who believes that my actions need to reflect my belief that the government has a responsibility as stated in our founding documents to protect life and liberty. I am also greatly concerned with the individuals and organizations who continue to distort our history and the meaning of our Constitution to try to make the case that gun rights are absolute even though there are qualifiers on all our other rights in the Constitution. The appeal that the right to bear arms is a protection of all our other rights presents a frightening prospect for our future with the extremism that has become so commonplace.

Last week an incident reminded me that any one of us could without any notice become more aware of the dangers of gun violence than we could ever imagine. One of our children was on the way to a meeting in an office building when it became necessary to turn around because the building was ringed with police cars. Had the meeting been an hour earlier our child would have been among those evacuated because an active shooter was on the loose. Some of those removed from the building were the children in its day care center.

For unknown reasons, the shooter decided to shoot only himself and not harm others. It is uncomfortable to realize had the timing or his motivation been different how many others would have suffered the trauma of gun violence. Now his family and acquaintances bear the pain.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reports that there are nearly 43,000 suicides per year and almost exactly half those occur with firearms. Public service announcements attempt to educate people who have depressed family members or friends to keep firearms out of their easy reach. There is no time to reconsider or to seek help on personal

RA Director: 'Hold The Line At 13'

BY ERIC CARR

Since April, the Reston Association Board of Directors has worked with the county to build a constructive relationship and to build trust. We are working together for the betterment of Reston, and we are seeing progress — slow, but definite — on many fronts.

Land use has been our No. 1 topic of conversation with the county, including and especially the county's proposed density increase. Our approach since April has been to encourage more conversation with the community and more time to deliberate and understand the impact of the proposal. Once the hearings are complete, and once the county has an opportunity to revise — or postpone — its proposal, RA intends to take an official position on the matter and present that position to the county.

Commendably, the county granted our request to delay enacting the proposed density change and instead to hold an additional community hearing. As we hoped, this enabled Restonians to get engaged on this critical issue, to understand the extreme gravity of the proposal, and to make their voices heard. On Monday, Sept. 25, we saw that result, and it was impressive and gratifying. I feel our constructive approach has merit, and I want to continue the conversation with the county.

Make no mistake, though. My feelings on the proposal itself are clear. We need to hold the line at 13.

Reston is a planned community. The roads, schools, parks, pools, paths, courts and housing were mapped out with attention to detail and a focus on a livable community. When they

Volunteering Keeps 70-Year-Old Former CEO Young

Finding the right volunteer opportunity.

BY ROB PAINE
RSVP NORTHERN VIRGINIA

RSVP Northern Virginia volunteer Ken Kozloff moves through the pool at Providence Recreation Center encouraging the child with special needs he is teaching to swim, to “stroke, breathe, and kick.”

Kozloff high-fives his students at the end of each lap and asks, “Are you having a good time?” All the while he is keeping an eye on two other volunteers he is mentoring during a Fairfax County Park Authority Adapted Aquatics class.

Kozloff will continue to do this for about 90 minutes on a Sunday morning without much of a break. Sometimes he lifts students half his weight into the air so they can experience the joy of splashing into the pool. One would never guess that the former INOVA Alexandria Hospital CEO turned 70 years old in August. “I don’t feel 70, I feel like 25,” he said.

Kozloff donates more than 40 hours of his time each month as an RSVP Northern Virginia volunteer, helping autistic children learn how to swim, mentoring economically disadvantaged citizens to manage their finances, and directing other volunteers at large events for RSVP, including the Northern Virginia Senior Olympics in September.

RSVP (Retired and Senior Volunteer Program) is the region’s largest volunteer network for people 55 and older and provides individualized support to seniors seeking service opportunities in and around Fairfax County, Arlington County and the City of Alexandria.

When he is not volunteering for other organizations, he is a volunteer engagement leader for RSVP, acting as a nonprofit evangelist of sorts, spreading the word on why RSVP is such a great program. “What’s unique about RSVP is the approach it takes to new volunteers, helping them to find what they’re looking to do, not where we are looking to place them,” he said.

RSVP asks each prospective volunteer, “How can we help you find that volunteer opportunity that is going to mean something to you?” Kozloff said. He has been with RSVP for over a year and a half.

Five years ago, he began volunteering with the Fairfax County Park Authority’s Adaptive Aquatics program, teaching children on the autism spectrum to swim. He later added another afternoon of classes at Spring Hill Recreation Center in McLean, teaching special needs adults to swim, including those with neurological issues or physical impairments. The park authority honored Kozloff in 2015 as the Adaptive Aquatics Outstanding Volunteer of the Year.

He then started working with Our Daily Bread (now called BritePaths) where he has volunteered for four years as a financial mentor. He is also a volunteer classroom instructor with Junior Achievement in Fairfax. He teaches business principles to elementary, middle, and high school students. He also teaches students with special needs in this program.

In an eight-day span in September, the RSVP volunteer managed volunteers at several community projects including the NVSO’s indoor track meet in Arlington and its swimming championships in Sterling and a gardening project at River Farm in Alexandria.

“I love to help others,” Kozloff said. “I enjoy volunteering with RSVP, not only for what I do as a volunteer, but also for the social aspect of working with other people.” During the senior Olympics he managed anywhere from 10 to 30 volunteers at the different events.

WHAT SEPARATES RSVP from other volunteer organizations is its leadership and the approach it takes, treating each volunteer as an individual, according to Kozloff. As an engagement leader, Kozloff tells prospective volunteers: "We are going to show you things and talk to you about specific opportunities that you can relate to."

RSVP offers an array of opportunities for volunteers including providing rides, support and meals to older neighbors, assisting local veterans in need and helping prepare communities for disasters. RSVP also recruits volunteers for various community events.

RSVP volunteers enjoy flexible schedules, free accident and liability insurance while serving, optional mileage and meal reimbursement and are invited to volunteer group projects and social gatherings.

"The big thing that I get out of volunteering is the satisfaction of helping others," he said. "I love to help others, find out what their goals are and help them achieve them, whether it is teaching an autistic child to swim from one side of the pool to the other, or teaching a stroke patient who would like to learn to swim again."

He also enjoys working with other volunteers and letting them know how important it is to make other people feel good. He tells them that they will feel twice as good because they are helping people.

"Ken is one of our most active volunteers and a great example of what it means to stay active after retirement," said Nadia Hoonan, program manager for RSVP Northern Virginia. "He truly exemplifies the diversity of opportunities that our program offers, from leading a variety of service projects for our volunteers to cleaning up garden grounds at American Horticultural Society. No task is too small for Ken. We want more volunteers like Ken to be willing to be on the front lines of volunteering in Northern Virginia and share their lifetime experience to make a great impact in our community," Hoonan said.

RSVP has several upcoming opportunities during which those interested can learn more about the program including orientations at the Fairfax Regional Library, Oct. 10 and at the Beatley Central Library in Alexandria, Oct. 25. RSVP will hold a special meet and greet event for current and prospective volunteers at Huntley Meadows Park, Oct. 13.

Those interested in learning more about RSVP or in signing up for any of these events should contact RSVP Northern Virginia Volunteer Specialist Carly Hubicki at 703-403-5360, email Hubicki at chubicki@volunteerfairfax.org or visit the RSVP website at rsvpnova.org.

The Last DACA Clinic

Applications for renewals must be filed by Oct. 5.

BY SHIRLEY RUHE
THE CONNECTION

A sign outside Annandale United Methodist Church on Saturday, Sept. 23 read, "Welcome - Just Neighbors DACA Clinic." What the sign didn't say is that this would be the final DACA Clinic.

U.S. Attorney General Jeff Sessions announced President Donald Trump's Executive Order on Sept. 5 repealing Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA). Current DACA recipients with a work permit due to expire before March 5 can apply for a two-year renewal but no new first-time DACA applications can be filed.

DACA is a program that allows individuals meeting certain requirements, who either entered the country illegally as children or remained, to receive a renewable two-year deferred action from deportation and be eligible for a work permit. However, a DACA permit is only a temporary protection and not a path to legal citizenship.

Erin McKenney, director of Just Neighbors Ministry, says 12 people were preregistered for Saturday's clinic with some walk-ins. Immigration attorneys would review the required paperwork to minimize errors and the possibility of missing the deadline. McKenney observes there haven't been a lot of people at the clinics recently. She speculates that maybe they are filling out the paperwork themselves. "I hope so." She says when they had "know your rights" clinics early this year, a lot of the people who first came out for the clinics were later afraid they would be identified and people stopped coming. They were worried that their families were unprotected.

McKinney added, "In general the immigrants feel let down by the repeal. They feel they are as American as anyone and have never known any other country."

Tori Andrea-Babington, an immigration lawyer with Just Neighbors and director of Legal Services for Northern Virginia Family Services, says about half of the applications are being processed by the United States Customs and Immigration Service (USCIS) "super fast and about half are taking about six months. I think there has been a serious effort to turn them around quickly."

The immigration lawyers stood outside a room of eight tables where applicants worked through a pile of papers. The lawyers will review the paperwork before it is sent to USCIS.

McKinney calls the lawyers her "bullpen." She said, "They are the saviors," and added, "we don't send anything forward that we think won't be approved. That just puts the applicant in jeopardy."

McKenney estimates there have been about 2,000 people with DACA permits in Northern Virginia since President Obama established the program by Executive Order on June 15, 2012. The Executive Order was issued after several failed attempts by Congress to pass permanent immigration

Erin McKenney, executive director of Just Neighbors, says, since 2012, there have been around 2,000 people with DACA status in Northern Virginia. Over 50 percent of their clients are from Fairfax with 16 percent in Arlington and others in Loudoun, Alexandria and Prince William.

A DACA applicant begins the process of a two-year renewal of her DACA status on Saturday, Sept. 23. Applications for renewals must be filed by Oct. 5 to be considered.

legislation referred to as the DREAM Act bill. There were an estimated 800,000 individuals enrolled in the DACA program nation-wide as of September 2017.

A MOTHER SITS along the wall of the reception area with her 10-year old and 4-year-old daughters who translate for her. The mother is illegal, having come to the United States in 2005. Her two youngest daughters were born in the U.S. and therefore are U.S. citizens. They are waiting for the 17-year-old daughter to finish her DACA renewal application. The oldest daughter joins them in the lobby and said, "I'm kind of upset. I don't remember much about El Salvador, and my friends whose work permits expire after March 5 won't be able to get a renewal." They will be eligible for deportation.

To be eligible for DACA, a recipient must have come to the U.S. before their 16th birthday and prior to June 2007 and have been living continuously in the U.S. since June 15, 2007. They must have been under the age of 31 on June 15, 2012 and with no lawful status at that time. They must have completed high school or a GED, have been honorably discharged from the armed forces or be enrolled in school. They cannot have been convicted of a felony or serious misdemeanor.

Just Neighbors Ministry Inc. is a non-profit organization providing legal services to low-income immigrants in Northern Virginia, focusing on humanitarian cases. Fifty-eight percent of their clients live in Fairfax with 16 percent in Arlington and others in Alexandria, Prince William and Loudoun. Eighteen percent of their cases are for DACA. They have moved to a new location at 7630 Little River Turnpike in Annandale.

This is the first part of a series focusing on DACA.

Just Neighbors Ministry held its last DACA Clinic at the Annandale United Methodist Church on Sept. 23. DACA was repealed on Sept. 5.

Zoning Amendment Under Scrutiny

The Lake House is also used for camp programming during school breaks in the winter and summer. If these were to be continued with the corporate rentals, the association is projected to yield a net profit of $119,368, according to Ganesan.

After discussion and testimony from one parent whose child participates in the after-school program during a meeting on Thursday, Sept. 28, the board voted to continue using the space for camps but to end its after-school programming in 2018 in favor of having more time to offer the space for corporate rentals.

Member Feedback

The RA Board adopts a biennial budget to direct the organization's spending every two years. The first public hearing on the proposed 2018-2019 budget will be on Oct. 26 during a regular board meeting. A second hearing is scheduled on Oct. 30 during a special meeting of the board. The board will vote on the budget and assessment rate on Nov. 16 during a regular board meeting.

Members can also provide feedback by email to RABudget@reston.org, or by mail to Reston Association, ATTN: RA Budget Suggestions, 12001 Sunrise Valley Drive, Reston, VA 20191. Members are encouraged to describe their ideas in detail.

Board Seat Filled

During the Sept. 28 meeting, the board also voted to appoint John Bowman to fill the at-large seat that was vacated by Ray Wedell on Sept. 1. Bowman will finish Wedell's term, which expires in April 2018.

The board decided between four candidates who applied for the position when the RA issued a call for candidates on Sept. 7: Bowman, who ran for positions on the RA Board in 2008 and 2015; Ven Iyer, who ran for an open at-large seat during the 2017 spring election that was won by Eric Carr and was also considered for Eve Thompson's at-large seat when she resigned in June but was passed over for Sridhar Ganesan; Moira Callaghan, vice president of the Reston Citizens Association; and John Pinkman, co-founder of Rescue Reston and a member of its board of directors.

Bowman is currently chair of the RA Multimodal Transportation Advisory Committee was a past member and vice chair of the RA Transportation Advisory Committee. Bowman was a past member of the Reston Citizens Association Board of Directors; founding member of the Reston 20/20 Committee; alternate representative to the Fairfax County Reston Master Plan Special Study Task Force; and principal and founding member of the Reston South Park and Ride Neighbors.

Unified in Opposing PRC Zoning Amendment

While the board will wait to take a formal position on the county's proposal to increase the density of Reston, board members were unanimous in their opposition to the amendment.

The proposed amendment would alter the zoning regulations by changing the density cap in Reston for areas that are zoned Planned Residential Community (PRC) District. The current cap for these areas, which the majority of Reston is zoned, is set to an average of 13 people per acre. The Fairfax County Department of Planning and Zoning is recommending raising the cap to an average of 16 people per acre.

The amendment would also increase the maximum number of dwelling units per acre for PRC zoned land. The maximum number is currently 50 dwelling units per acre.

Each director who was present made statements at the end of the public portion of the Sept. 28 meeting before going into executive session. The board members either fully supported holding the density cap at 13 or expressed significant hesitation in increasing the density without first expanding infrastructure before the amendment is approved.

did the math, taking into account all of these amenities and features, they came up with 13 people per acre. We're approaching that number, and looking around our town, I'd say they were right on target. Reston is built out and complete, just as it was planned to be from the start. But now, of course, it's more than full because that plan did not envision the explosive growth along the Toll Road, a fact that only heightens the need for more infrastructure, schools and recreational facilities.

Reston is a marvel of community planning, and 13 people per acre is a core element of that marvel. Raising that number in isolation — that is, without adding parks, schools and roads — wrecks the model, plain and simple.

Finally, a cautionary note. Keeping the density at 13 helps to save us from golf course redevelopment. At 16, however, both courses can be turned into residential areas at the expense of open, green space. Now, the county promises us it won't ever let that happen. But once upon a time, the county promised us that 13 was the right number.

The county also says that if we raise this density limit, it will address infrastructure. Just like the Soapstone Connector they promised to build by 2014. Any changes to the density limit MUST be accompanied by changes in infrastructure. We need to see this happen together.

The county needs to earn our trust through actions, not words. If they are serious about addressing infrastructure needs, I need to see that happen first. Then we can talk about the density limit.

Until that time, we need to stand vigilant, and stand together. We need to hold the line at 13.

Eric Carr is an At-Large Director of the Reston Association Board of Directors.

Everytown for Gun Safety reports its research shows that on an average day 93 Americans are killed with guns with seven of those being children. How much more uncomfortable do we need to become before the public insists that commonsense gun safety laws are passed?

A Question Which Begs What Answer

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Twice recently, in print, I have been asked the same question. Once on an evaluation of a previous doctor appointment, and within the last week, on a pre-registration form for an oral surgeon.

The question: “How is your health?” “Excellent.” “Good.” Fair.” “Poor.” The two times I saw this question, I snickered. I mean, I have cancer: Stage IV, non-small cell lung cancer in fact, the terminal kind.

And even though I’ve lived way beyond my original “13 month to two-year” prognosis, (eight and a half years and counting, always counting), I’m still undergoing treatment. I see my oncologist every three months. I’m not in remission. My tumors, so far as I’ve been told, are not necrotic (dead). I’m still scheduling CT Scans, brain MRIs and PET Scans quarterly, semi-annually and yearly, respectively. And while amazingly thrilled to be still alive, my fate turns on the results of any one of these diagnostic scans so I wonder aloud: how is my health?

In the two most recent opportunities (I’ve had others) to answer this question, I have erred on the side of reality (my reality) and answered “Poor.” Whether I’m up and about or down and out, cancer is sort of the definition of ‘poor,’ isn’t it? Let’s be honest: who wants to receive a diagnosis of cancer, regardless of type and/or stage. Moreover, it’s hardly the gift that keeps on giving. Quite the opposite. It’s like the houseguest who never leaves. It’s always there and the more it’s around, the worse it’s likely to get.

As much as one tries, a cancer diagnosis is hard to forget. Whether you’re still undergoing treatment as I am, or have been told you’re cancer-free/in remission/N.E.D. (no evidence of disease), the prospect of a life unaltered by the experience is unrealistic, especially so when questions are asked pertaining to your health. It’s not as if you become stigmatized by your cancer diagnosis and/or medical history, but you do become a lifetime member of a club you’d rather not have joined (the more serious and exact opposite of a feeling expressed by Groucho Marx when he so famously joked that he wouldn’t want to belong to a club that would have him as a member). If only it were that simple – and funny.

A straight forward question about one’s health which requires a thoughtful and honest answer. Yet, an answer which somehow must, in my opinion, educate the asker. I’m not a normal respondent (no comments from the peanut gallery). I’m a cancer patient/survivor. Presumably, my immune system is somewhat compromised. What’s good for the goose is probably not good for this gander. My life expectancy is all fouled up. Cancer is likely in control.

As much as I want to delude myself otherwise, the writing, if not necessarily on the walls, is certainly in multiple books and journals. And not that there aren’t exceptions to every rule (my survival is proof of that), generally speaking, a cancer diagnosis “spells trouble with a capital ‘T,’” if I may invoke the late actor, Robert Preston, from his career-defining role as Harold Hill in the 1962 movie, “The Music Man.” Still, life is going on, and not too badly, I may add. But on any given day ...

I suppose the solution then is an asterisk. But how does one add an asterisk to a standardized form. And given the evolving nature of our almost-entirely inhumane (non-human) electronic contact, where does one go/what does one say, to separate and be heard. I want to be treated equally, but as a cancer patient, I’m not. I’m different. If there’s a box for that, I’ll gladly check it. I want the best outcome, naturally. But not giving me the opportunity to properly define myself/my circumstances doesn’t help either one of us. And does even less for the next respondent.

Challenges Remain for Police Reform

Including communications and body cameras.

BY PHILLIP NIEDZIELSKI-EICHNER

Oct. 8 will be the second anniversary of the 2015 release of the Ad Hoc Police Practices Review Commission Final Report. The catalyst for the Ad Hoc Commission's formation by the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors was the August 2013 shooting death of John Geer. The commission was charged with assessing the Police Department's performance against national best practices.

GUEST EDITORIAL

The commission made more than 200 recommendations for transforming an excellent Police Department into one that is "best in class" and for strengthening the public's trust and confidence in the department.

I served as commission member and as the chairman of Use of Force Subcommittee. I am also a member of a loosely configured Implementation Committee, a group of former commission members dedicated to helping to see that our recommendations are effectively implemented.

I commend both the Board of Supervisors (BOS) and Police Department for their progress implementing the commission's recommendations. Significant reforms are underway that when fully realized will generate increased accountability and public confidence. Major reforms already in place include:

- ❖ forming the Office of the Independent Police Auditor to determine the thoroughness, completeness, accuracy, objectivity and impartiality of investigations of death or serious injury cases.
- ❖ convening a Civilian Review Panel to review civilian complaints regarding "abuse of authority" or "serious misconduct" by a police officer;
- ❖ creating "Diversion First," which offers alternatives to incarceration for people with mental illness or developmental disabilities; and
- ❖ recrafting the Use of Force General Order to enshrine sanctity of human life as an organizing principle, with de-escalation as the strategy of first resort when confronted with a threat rather than the use of deadly force.

WHILE MUCH HAS BEEN accomplished, more is work is needed. For example, the commission advocated in strong terms for information-sharing reform to promote timeliness, completeness and transparency. In this regard, a revised Police Department Communication Policy is still in process.

The commission also called for all officers to be outfitted with body worn cameras, contingent on the enactment of laws, policies and procedures that protect individual privacy. These cameras are to complement the dashboard cameras now mounted in each Fairfax patrol vehicle.

While a potential aid to criminal prosecution, the body-worn camera's equally important contribution is to foster greater transparency and the accountability of all parties during the interactions of the police with the public. As the American Civil Liberties Union noted in an October 2014 report, body-worn cameras "[have] the potential to be a win-win, helping protect the public against police misconduct, and at the same time helping protect police against false accusations of abuse."

While the county leadership has committed to deploying this technology, its approach has been appropriately methodical. Key considerations are operational, privacy, data security and cost. For example, the supervisors have approved a pilot project that will deploy cameras in two of the county's nine magisterial districts and the department is currently evaluating proposals from prospective suppliers.

THIS PILOT PROJECT needs to generate answers to following questions, among others: the county needs to establish when cameras will be running and how will the public know the cameras are on? When can biometric technology – such as facial recognition – be used? How will the video footage be secured from hackers? Who will have access to the data and under what procedures?

How will the massive amount of video data be stored and for how long? As the county understands and appreciates, the cost of deploying body-worn cameras is not in the cameras themselves, but the storage of the massive amount of data that is generated. As reported by the Center for Digital Government and Government Technology magazine, "When it comes to [body-worn cameras], data storage is the 800-pound gorilla in the room. Video ... is a data hog."

This reality generates cost-driven data-retention policy considerations. How long should non-evidentiary video be maintained? Some police departments say it should be 60-90 days, others say less or more. With regard to evidentiary data used in criminal prosecutions, the Virginia Commonwealth requires that evidence be stored for 99 years.

Finally, who controls access to the data? This question is becoming an increasingly significant issue nationally. Protecting evidence chain-of-custody for purposes of criminal prosecution is a necessary but not sufficient role to warrant the cost and the data protection risks inherent in the deployment of body-worn cameras. The real return-on-investment is the potential for influencing the behavior, through greater transparency and accountability, of all parties in a law-enforcement engagement.

The drive to use this technology is inexorable. A recent CATO Institute/YouGov poll found that 92 percent of the public supports the use of body-worn cameras. Implicit in this level of support are high public expectations that this technology will make a difference in law enforcement practices. Heightened expectations alone should give our policymakers pause, particularly when we know that no technology deployment is free of all mistakes and errors. The only thing worse in today's context than not collecting the data during a controversial use-of-force incident, is for the public to learn that video data under the Police Department's control is missing.

We should therefore challenge the assumption that video-camera data must be maintained under the sole access control of the Police Department. Options that should be given explicit consideration by the Board of Supervisors, Police Department and Commonwealth's Attorney include assigning video data access control to the Independent Police Auditor or alternatively assigning this role to a board composed of the Police Chief, Independent Auditor and Commonwealth's Attorney.

On this second anniversary of the Ad Hoc Policy Review Commission Report, the county and Police Department have many accomplishments to be proud of with regard to implementing the commission's recommendations.

Quality-driven change is hard; some changes are especially difficult. Body-worn camera deployment is one that requires careful study and diligent attention to complex legal and operational details. I commend the county for taking the appropriate measured response to meeting this recommendation and, especially with regard the matter of access to video data, challenge the conventional wisdom that access control to such data must be under the sole purview of the Police Department.

Phillip A. Niedzielski-Eichner is a member of the Fairfax County Planning Commission, served on the Ad Hoc Police Practices Review Commission and a former member of the Fairfax County School Board.

The League of Women Voters of Virginia Holds Workshops

On Friday, Sept. 22, the League of Women Voters of Virginia (LWVVA) held Workshops in Fredericksburg, Va. attended by new and long-time members from among the 14 local leagues in the state. The Workshops' objective was to help these members discover ways to engage with the League and to enhance League impacts in communities. Among the subjects covered were voter engagement through

VOTE411.org and election-related activities, the LWV-VA's engagement with state legislators through the weekly Women's Legislative Round Tables during the Virginia General Assembly, and engaging with local governing bodies through Observer Corps.

LWV-VA, a non-partisan political organization, encourages participation in government and works to increase understanding of major public policy issues. Visit www.lwv-va.org.
