250 people help raise $120,000 in fundraiser for Fairfax County Library.

With the theme, “The Library Goes Hollywood,” about 250 people attended the 2017 Library Jubilee Gala Fundraiser at the newly remodeled Pohick Regional Library in Burke on Saturday, Oct. 21, 2017. This being the largest fundraiser of the year, the goal was to raise $120,000 for the Fairfax County Library system.

“What we’re hoping to accomplish is that we will raise community support for Fairfax County Public Library for programs and services that provide enrichments to the programs beyond the county support for the library,” said Susan Harman, Executive Director of the Fairfax Library Foundation.

Added Brian Engler, Chair of the Board of Directors for the Fairfax Library Foundation. “The Library Jubilee is our major annual event for fundraising for the Fairfax Library Foundation. We raise funds all year, of course, but this is the one where we really focus on getting a lot of people together who love the library, having a silent auction, raising money through ticket sales and through sponsorships.”

The money goes toward programs and services for the library, which includes scholarships, special presentations like Summer Reading and the Book Club Conference, as well as some 30,000 picture books for under-served preschoolers at the library branches. Other programs include Changing Lives Through Literature, giving first-time juvenile offenders an alternative to formal court action, and Ready to Read Early Literacy Outreach, which brings interactive reading experiences to preschoolers. The newest funding area is the New American Initiative, which raises funds for English Language Learning materials. The night brought together Foundation and Library leadership and staff, elected officials, published authors, business leaders, and library supporters who enjoyed hors d’oeuvres, cocktails, a silent auction, and a jazz trio from Mason Music Productions. Shirley’s Catering and Peterson’s Ice Cream provided the food and sweets.

At the silent auction, guests could bid on winery visits, hotel packages, and passes to Disney World, which were all donated by local businesses to support the library. There was also a photo booth and a visit from Marilyn Monroe.

Shifting Political Battlefield for General Assembly

Solid blue urban areas separated by political beltway from solid red exurbs.

BY MICHAEL LEE POPE
THE CONNECTION

Northern Virginia has more competitive seats than any other part of the commonwealth, a ring of districts that forms a beltway of sorts separating the inner solid blue in Arlington and Alexandria from the solid red in rural and exurban seats in Loudoun and Prince William. That puts Fairfax County squarely in the driver's seat this November, when Democrats hope to pick up seats in an election that has balanced local issues like schools and roads with the ongoing reaction to President Donald Trump. That battle will be won or lost in suburban Northern Virginia, where the Washington suburbs are sprawling into areas that used to be farmland and orchards.

"We have a transportation beltway around D.C. in Northern Virginia, and we also have a competitive political beltway," said Quentin Kidd at Christopher Newport University. "It's the fault line between old Virginia and new Virginia, and it's the trenches of our current political battlefield."

The region has many incumbent delegates who are running unopposed, all Democrats: Mark Keam (D-35), Ken Plum (D-36); David Bulova (D-37); Vivian Watts (D-39); Eileen Filler-Corn (D-41); Mark Sickles (D-43); Paul Krizek (D-44); Mark Levine (D-45); Charniele Herring (D-46); Patrick Hope (D-47); and Rip Sullivan (D-48).

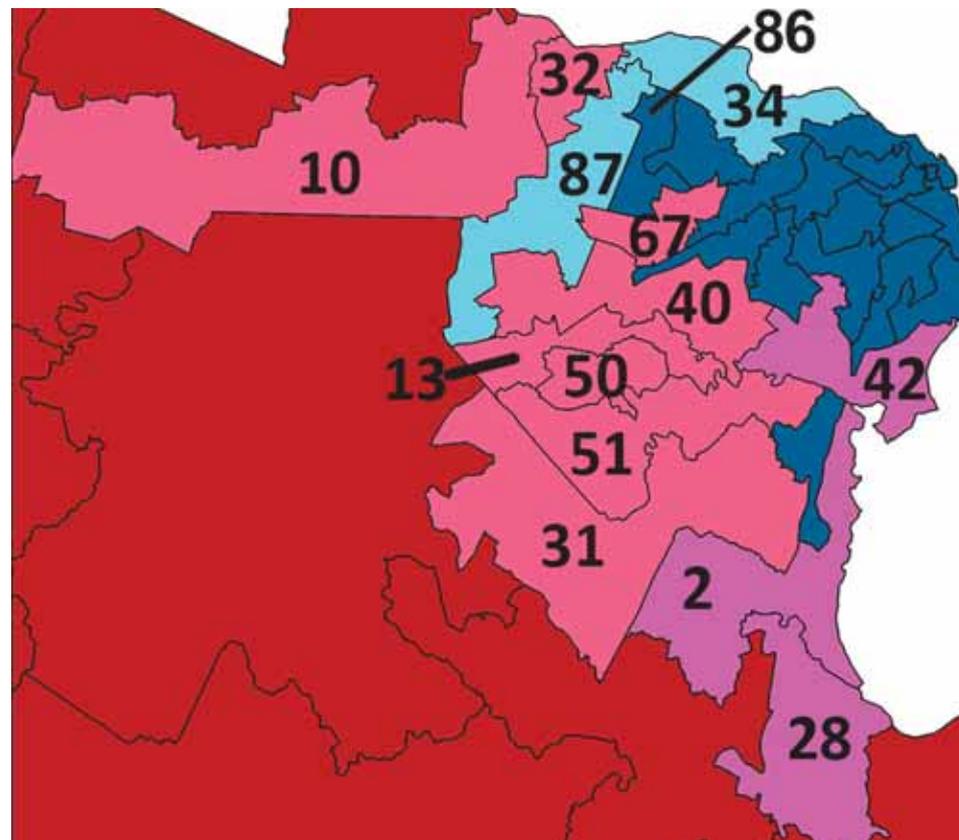

The decision of longtime Del. David Albo (R-42) to step down from public life after more than 20 years in office has created a vacuum that Democrats are eager to fill. Former Labor Department deputy administrator Kathy Tran emerged from a primary back in June, and she's been running hard against Republican Lolita Mancheno-Smoak ever since. Democrats have called attention to Mancheno-Smoak's early support of Donald Trump, whose candidacy she supported back in 2015 shortly after he declared his candidacy by calling Mexican immigrants rapists.

"Sometimes in order to generate change, in order to get new energy to actually feel passionate about a new beginning you need positive disruption," said Mancheno-Smoak in an interview with Connection Newspapers. "I see Trump as a positive disruptor."

Democrats pounced on that remark, issuing a press release in reaction.

"It's no surprise that she would call Donald Trump a positive disruptor as the most recent version of Trumpcare would disrupt access to affordable health care for 32 million people," said Virginia House Caucus spokeswoman Katie Baker in a written statement. "For Kathy Tran, on the other hand, health care is a moral issue."

ASIDE FROM HAVING three of the four open seats on the ballot this year, the region has more Republicans incumbents facing hotly contested races than any other part of the state. The Center for Politics at the University of Virginia identified eight Republicans facing competitive challenges and two Democrats. The incumbent who seems to be facing the strongest challenge is Del. Jim LeMunyon (R-67), who sent out mailers emphasizing his work with Democratic Gov. Terry McAuliffe.

"This is probably the best chance Democrats have of taking out a GOP incumbent," said Geoff Skelley, media relations coordinator at the Center for Politics. "Jim LeMunyon occupies the most Democratic seat held by a Republican in the House of Delegates." He is opposed by Karrie Delaney.

Another Republican incumbent facing a competitive race this year is Del. Tim Hugo (R-40), who serves as the Republican caucus chairman. He's facing Democrat Donte Tanner, who raised more than $350,000 to take on the popular Republican incumbent. That's a huge chunk of change, especially for a first-time candidate running against a longtime incumbent. But it's about half of what Hugo was able to raise. That's only part of the value of incumbency. Hugo, who calls himself the "pothole delegate" for his support of constituent issues, has spent the last decade building goodwill among voters in the district.

"Folks like Tim Hugo have established a name brand and an identity in their districts, and voters generally have a favorable view toward them," said Mark Rozell, at George Mason University. "Democrats are energized, and they are counting on a big anti-Trump vote. But I think you can count on some split ticket voting, and perhaps many of those voters who are going to vote against the Republican at the top of the ticket will still vote for their local guy in the House of Delegates."

REPUBLICAN INCUMBENTS aren't the only General Assembly members facing challenges, though. Del. Kathleen Murphy (D-34) is one of two Democratic incumbents facing a challenge the Center for Politics has ranked as competitive. The seat was held for more than 40 years by Republican Vince Callahan, although it has been held by Republicans and Democrats since he retired a decade ago. The Republican in the race is Cheryl Buford, who struggled to answer questions about her own campaign platform in an interview with Connection Newspapers. She says she wants to reduce regulations, for example, but she couldn't name any specific ones she would spike. She also says she wants to tackle the opioid crisis, although she couldn't name any specific proposals on that either.

"While it will be tough for the GOP to win any seats currently held by Democrats in 2017, this is one of the few such seats with a recent track record of competitiveness," says Skelley. "So I don't think we can entirely count out Buford."

One race that is contested but not necessarily competitive is House District 86, where incumbent freshman Democrat Jennifer Boysko is defending the seat against Republican challenger Linda Schulz.

Two years ago, Democrats were able to flip the seat after the retirement of longtime Republican Del. Tom Rust (R-86), a former mayor of Herndon. Since that time, Boysko has become one of the most outspoken critics of the Republican House leadership, even staging a press conference to denounce how bills with little chance of passing the Courts of Justice were being killed without so much as a hearing. Despite the fact that the seat was held by a Republican for decades, though, the Center for Politics did not race this as a competitive race.

"Tom Rust was a moderate Republican who managed to hold that seat even as it became bluer and bluer," says Geoff Skelley at the University of Virginia Center for Politics. "But now Jennifer Boysko controls it, and there's little reason to think she's in danger."

Who Will Help Dreamers and Refugees?

Individuals, religious groups and other organizations share same goal.

BY SHIRLEY RUHE

The supporters all agree on one thing. As Imam Ali Siddiqui said, “Nobody asked these kids whether they wanted to come to America. They go to school, they work hard, build a career. It will be a loss to send them back.” Figures distributed by The Commonwealth Institute in October 2017 show that if all Virginians who are eligible for Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) became citizens, state and local tax contributions by young Virginians would rise from the current $35 million to $52.9 million a year.

As President Trump’s executive order released Sept. 5 threatens 800,000 DACA recipients with deportation, communities of supporters rally to their defense.

Individuals and groups converge from all directions to provide sanctuary, educational assistance, moral support, employment counseling and sometimes “in your face” advocacy for immigrant assistance. Each group has a plan and a niche but they are all working for the same goal — passage of the Dream Act, which will offer the opportunity for a long, but legal, path to citizenship for undocumented immigrants.

Norma Kacen is part of the Northern Virginia Friends of Refugees, an Arlington-based group, which she co-founded with Wendy Chan in the fall of 2016. “I grew up on Federal Hill in Providence, Rhode Island, an ethnic ghetto. It was a closed world with circles of ghettos — Portuguese, Italian, French, German, Polish,” she said, drawing circles with her finger on the table.

Kacen has recently been up on Capitol Hill as a volunteer lobbyist with the American Association of University Women visiting key senators to urge passage of the Dream Act. “All of the comments were ‘we couldn’t afford it,’ but,” she says, pulling out a talking sheet, “ending DACA and kicking recipients out of the labor force would cost the United States $433.4 billion in GDP and decrease Social Security and Medicare contributions by $24.6 billion over the next decade.” This is according to the Center for American Progress, a self-described progressive independent nonpartisan policy institute.

As of November 2016, 645,000 DACA recipients nationwide are employed, and they pay taxes. Kacen said, “My challenge to the senators was yes, we pay for their education like anyone else who pays taxes.” But most of the senators were unmoved by the arguments. Kacen says it is also important to acknowledge a breakdown of DACA by Congressional districts because “some our representatives only listen to their own constituents.”

Northern Virginia Friends of Refugees was established to combat the anti-Muslim rhetoric and to be a welcoming friend to all refugees. “We didn’t want to duplicate the efforts of others so we partner with other organizations,” she said.

RECENTLY THE GROUP held three advocacy workshops for people supportive of refugees. About 50 people attended one of the workshops at Fairfax Presbyterian Church, Mt. Olivet Presbyterian Church in Arlington and a Muslim site in Fairfax. These workshops are non-partisan with the purpose to teach the skills necessary for effective advocacy.

“I was really delighted and it was extremely heartening that millennials attended. Every organization is trying to figure out what they can do to attract the disengaged millennials,” Kacen said.

The second event, which was held in the spring, brought American professionals together with the often highly skilled immigrants to help the immigrants navigate the workplace. “So we connect the immigrants together with American professionals in their own field to allow the professionals to talk.” Many of the refugees were doctors, architects, engineers and entrepreneurs in their countries and now have low-level jobs in America. The purpose of these life skills programs is to increase connections to help the immigrants reach their potential.

The third focus for this year is a large community event planned for the spring. It would be intended to show the resilience of the immigrants by “focusing on the incredible skills in the cultural arts such as music, arts and fashion. It is to show the capacity to overcome, the triumph of the human spirit,” she said.

Are they making progress? Kacen paused, “It’s hard to say. But ... there are so many people engaged.”

Monica Sarmiento is executive director of Virginia Coalition for Immigrant Right (VACIR), a coalition that began in 2013 with eight organizations, now grown to 16. She says their organization is focused on how to have more comprehensive immigrant reform in Virginia. “Many organizations have their niches demographically or ethnically but we tend to be looking at what we’re doing statewide and collaboratively. The most important emphasis is to push different community representatives at the table — African, Korean, Muslim.”

Sarmiento says since VACIR is a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization they don’t directly lobby but have encouraged people to call their members of Congress, and the 16 organizations who are part of the coalition often engage in advocacy. For instance the Commonwealth Institute has prepared a fact sheet outlining how DREAMers grow our economy with 61 percent opening a bank account, 64.5 percent buying their first car, 97 percent becoming employed or enrolled in school. It adds that young people with DACA status contribute nearly $711 million to Virginia’s economy annually including nearly $35 million in state and local taxes. The conclusion is that ending DACA could reduce Virginia state and local tax revenue by almost $13 million a year.

Members of VACIR include such groups as Legal Aid Justice Center, SEEC, VOCOLAO, NAKASEC, The Commonwealth Institute and Virginia New Majority. These groups have focused on the constituents of two U.S. representatives in Virginia, Scott Taylor (R-2) and Barbara Comstock (R-10), who they are trying to convince “to do the right thing and support a clean Dream Act.”

Sarmiento says the VACIR board had decided for the first time to endorse a clean Dream Act, the first time they had endorsed any legislation. “A clean Dream Act would not have such provisions as mandatory verification (death by 1,000 papers), an increase in ICE agents, increased money for deportation, funding for the border wall, inability to sponsor family members, no pathway to citizenship.”

She says there needs to be a much larger conversation to spotlight the injustices happening now with undocumented immigrants who have already lost their DACA status due to President Trump’s executive order or who will lose their Temporary Protective Status (TPS) if it is not renewed. These people could be deported any day. She says 300,000 of these are from Latin America; 200,000 of these are Salvadoran. Sarmiento was raised in Northern Virginia but her parents emigrated from El Salvador fleeing war. “They were fortunate my grandmother lived here and got her legal status through the Reagan amnesty act so my father got legal status.”

Sumi Yi, Virginia community organizer for National Korean American Service & Education Consortium (NAKASEC), a community-based progressive Asian American and Pacific Islander organization, says their mission is to organize Korean and Asian Americans to achieve social, racial, and economic justice. She points out that out of the cur-

OPINION

Don't Stay Home

Your vote counts this round; nation is watching.

Every year is election year in Virginia. Virginia offers multiple examples that prove every vote counts.

This year, each Virginia voter will vote for Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Attorney General and their member of the House of Delegates. Virginia is one of two Governor's races, and many are watching the Virginia race to as a harbinger of what to expect in 2018.

No matter how you vote, polling shows that the Governor's race could be very close.

EDITORIAL While there are quite a few uncontested races for members of the House of Delegates, several races could also be close, with the outcome likely to depend on turnout.

There is every reason to get out and vote.

Absentee Voting in Person

Voting early if you qualify is a good choice.

There are 19 valid reasons to vote absentee in Virginia, including the possibility that you will be working and commuting to and from home for 11 or more hours between 6 a.m. and 7 p.m. on Election Day. Check the Virginia Department of Elections list to see if you are eligible: elections.virginia.gov/casting-a-ballot/absentee-voting/index.html

There are two ways to vote absentee: in-person and by mail. To vote by mail, you will need to apply for an absentee ballot; if you vote absentee in-person you will fill out the application when you arrive at the in-person absentee location.

See your locality's elections website for more.

Bring Photo ID, There Are Alternatives

Virginia has voter identification requirements; plan to bring photo identification with you to vote, whether absentee or on Election Day.

Any registered voter who does not have one of the required forms of identification can apply for a free Virginia Voter Photo Identification from any general registrar's office in the Commonwealth. Voters applying for the Virginia Voter Photo ID complete the Virginia Voter Photo Identification Card Application, have their picture taken, and sign the digital signature pad.

Among accepted ID: valid Virginia Driver's License or Identification Card; valid Virginia DMV issued Veteran's ID card; valid U.S. Passport; other government-issued photo identification cards issued by the U.S. Government, the Commonwealth of Virginia, or a political subdivision of the Commonwealth; valid college or university student photo identification card from an institution of higher education located in Virginia; valid student ID issued by a public school or private school in Virginia displaying a photo; employee identification card containing a photograph of the voter and issued by an employer of the voter in the ordinary course of the employer's business.

General Election Day, Tuesday, Nov. 7

On Election Day Polls are open from 6 a.m.-7 p.m.

A voter who does not bring an acceptable photo ID to the polls will be offered a provisional ballot.

To find a registration office where you can obtain photo ID, even on the day of an election, visit: vote.elections.virginia.gov/VoterInformation/PublicContactLookup.

Provisional Ballot Process for Voters Who Arrive Without Identification

identification, don't panic or give up. You will be given the opportunity to vote a provisional ballot. After completing the provisional ballot, the individual voting will be given written instructions from the election officials on how to submit a copy of his/her identification so that his/her vote can be counted.

A voter will have until noon on the Friday following the election to deliver a copy of the identification to the local electoral board or to appear in person to apply for a Virginia Voter Photo ID Card. Also by noon on Friday following the election, the voter may appear in-person in the office of the general registrar, in the locality in which the provisional ballot was cast, and apply for a Virginia Voter Photo ID Card. At the completion of the application process, the voter may request a Temporary Identification Document. This document may be provided to the electoral board to suffice the identification requirement.

Top O' the Hill House Restored Silas Burke House to open for public.

THE CONNECTION

Good news for baby boomers: Sunrise, a senior care facility, has completed the full preservation and restoration of Burke's beloved 193-year-old landmark – the Silas Burke House, also known as Top O' the Hill. The house had been owned by Terry Neal and his wife Suzanne "Suzi" Fowler Neal. When Suzi was asked why this house is so important to her, she said, "This is my life, I grew up in Burke, mother loves Burke, mother was born in Burke, Burke is what I know, Burke is what I love, Burke changed a lot."

Terry Neal added, "Burke, as quaint as it is today, you would never know it, but back then it was kind of a resort town for all the big-name people. Like, the politicians would come out of D.C., come over here and they spend the weekend."

The house was passed from the Copperthite family. Suzi's grandfather [William H. Simpson] bought the house in 1925 if I remember the way history is. It has been in her family ever since then. Her family loved it and cared for it and basically opened it up to the community for parties and get-togethers and anniversaries, weddings, whatever the celebration was, they would open the house up. Her parents were married here in 1930; Suzi and I were married here in 2003."

"The passion for the house was strong and so what we've committed to from the beginning with the county was: preserving this house, and not just preserving it but keeping it prominent. So you will notice that Sunrise is building a traditional Sunrise [senior care community] behind the Silas Burke House.

That is intentional to keep it behind. So when you drive up and down Burke Lake Road, what you see as a prominent feature is Burke House. That was so important. In the end, I think what you will have is that the Silas Burke House stays the prominent feature forever in Burke, and you will have this beautiful Sunrise caring for Burke's seniors for the next hundred years," said Sunrise's chief financial officer, Edward Burnett.

A tour through the house started in the kitchen. "This is my mother's favorite room. Grandma always cooked for us. There were 15 of us all here," said Suzi.

During the tour, Andrea Owensby, Sunrise's senior director of interior design, talked about the special interior design considerations, such as keeping certain pieces of furniture and artifacts. "For example, we had refinished the fireplace, it was not functional and in the restoration, we didn't repaint."

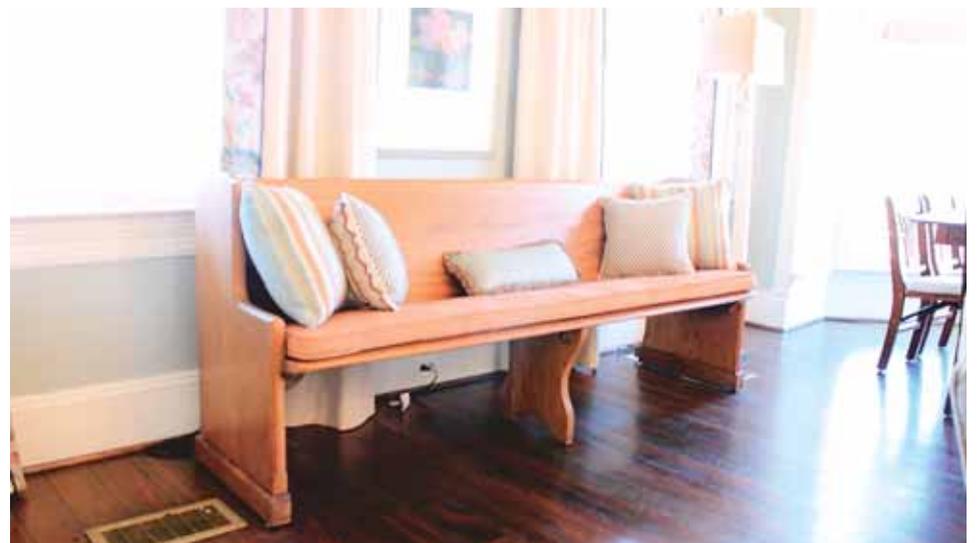

We kept all the original paint on the bricks and just cleaned that up, so the mantel and door frames had the character that an old house naturally would. We did not smooth all that out. It would not be the same house if we did."

According to Burnett, the house will be open for the public to enjoy. "It will be a place for our residents who will be living across to come over and have tea, enjoy an activity and share its history."

Sunrise's new senior living community, located behind the historic home, is set to be completed early next year.

Grandma's stove, still functional, bought from Montgomery Ward.

Helping Raise Childhood Hunger Awareness

As part of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority Incorporated's Childhood Hunger Community Impact Day, the Lambda Kappa Omega Chapter, supported by funds from the Educational and Charitable Foundation (ECF), delivered a total of 1,015 healthy snack packs to United Community Ministries and Lorton Community Action Center to raise awareness about childhood hunger in Fairfax County.

On Oct. 13, more than 60 volunteers gathered at the Providence Community Center to package the items and were able to complete more than 1,000 packs in one hour. Volunteers also listened to Lorton Community Action Center (LCAC) Board President Ron Kowalski and United Community Ministries (UCM) Community Outreach Coordinator Danica Hawkins discuss the impact of childhood hunger in Fairfax County.

By the end of 2017, the Lambda Kappa Omega Chapter will have donated more than 1,900 healthy snack packs to elementary schools, shelter programs and community centers in Fairfax County.

Looking for the Key to Happiness Woodson High presents the musical, 'Pippin.'

BY BONNIE HOBBS
THE CONNECTION

Featuring a cast and crew of 70, Woodson High's Cappies show, the musical comedy "Pippin," will burst upon the stage Nov. 4-11 in the school theater. It tells the story of Pippin, a prince trying to find his own way in the world. But it's also a story within a story.

"We're doing a 1930s soundstage of people filming a movie of 'Pippin,' which is set in Medieval times," said senior Paul Hardin, the student director who created the show's concept. "It chronicles his different adventures on his journey. In other versions, it's been about people doing a play or being in a circus. But I thought of setting it during the classic era of movies in the 1930s."

The sets will show a Hollywood soundstage with director's chairs and a camera on the side, plus a castle with a tower where Pippin lives. In Act II, the castle will spin around to become the home of Pippin's love interest, Catherine. And in certain spots where the story switches from Pippin to the Hollywood actors, the film set's buzzer will sound to signal the change.

"We have a super-talented and dynamic cast that will tell the story well," said Hardin. "Lots of people know the story of

As Pippin, Jack Hopewell (in center) is being persuaded by Sydney Cluff and Nick Daché to find something to make his life extraordinary.

'Pippin,' and I think they'll be intrigued to see our new take on it."

DIRECTOR TERRY HOBSON says the cast works well together to do what's best for the show, and many of the students are in both theater and chorus. She also praised the show's pianist, senior Hunter Browning, saying, "He's an excellent musician and the show wouldn't be where it is, musically, without him. It's deceptively difficult music. At times, there's five-part harmony, and a lot of it is ensemble singing."

Senior Mackenna Gordon choreographed nine of the numbers. "She's very imaginative and used lots of different dance styles,"

To Go

Show times are Nov. 4, 9, 10, 11 at 7:30 p.m.; and Nov. 5 and 11 at 2 p.m. Tickets are $12 at the door or via www.wtwdrama.org; matinees and senior citizens, $5.

said Hobson. "She also utilized the strengths of each cast member." She said audiences will also appreciate the power of the singers. And, she added, "It's obvious that the actors are enjoying what they're doing, so the people seeing them will enjoy it even more."

Portraying Pippin is senior Jack Hopewell. "Pippin's trying to find his purpose in life, as is the actor playing him," said Hopewell. "They believe that'll give their life meaning and happiness and make them remembered. Pippin is King Charlemagne's son, so he thinks he wants to be a soldier. He goes to war with his father, but is horrified at what war is like."

Then, after getting advice from his grandmother, he tries debauchery, but over-indulges and realizes that doesn't make him happy, either. "So he decides to become king and overthrows his father, but ruling is a lot harder than he expected," said Hopewell. "So he leaves for another adventure, during which he meets his love, Catherine, and learns that innocence and a simple, family life are the keys to happiness."

Hopewell says Pippin isn't always the best

SCHOOLS

Fairfax Academy's Korean Class 'Visits' Seoul

Technology brought together students from Fairfax Academy's Korean class in Fairfax County Public Schools, Hylton High School's Korean class in Prince William County Schools, and students on scholarship studying abroad in various locations in Seoul, Korea. The students experienced an hour-long interactive conversation, practice their Korean speaking and listening skills while discussing the NSLI-Y (National Security Language Initiative for Youth) scholarship program in its entirety.

The virtual conference allowed the three students staying (in three different locations) near Seoul, Korea to give first-hand advice and knowledge to students who are applying for the NSLI-Y scholarship so that, like them, they could also have the opportunity to stay with a host family in Korea and immerse themselves in the culture while enhancing their Korean language abilities while learning about a culture they love.

Advice from the students abroad ranged from explaining the challenges and rewards of the program, while also just comparing and contrasting the typical school day and social/family life for them as students in Korea. They ex-person, but "He's young and figuring things out, and his good intentions help me connect with him. And at my age, I can relate to trying to figure out what to do. It's fun to portray his youthful energy and show him growing up as the play progresses."

"Morning Glow" is Hopewell's favorite number because "It's a beautiful song with a wall of sound by Pippin and the ensemble. And it symbolizes rebirth, hope and the start of something new. Audiences will appreciate our talented cast. Everybody brings a special, unique energy to their characters, and people will be impressed by our set."

SENIOR KARLEE SKAGGS plays Catherine. "She's sarcastic, self-aware and tongue-in-cheek, and I love that about her," said Skaggs. "She's a widow with an 8-year-old son played by an actual 8-year-old, Aidan Brennan. She's not the normal love-interest because she's so blunt and sarcastic toward Pippin. At the end of her solo, 'Kind of Woman,' she sings, 'I'm just a plain, everyday, commonplace, come-what-may, average, ordinary girl.' And I love that she equates all those things with being wonderful."

Skaggs said the play's underlying message is that "You don't have to do something extraordinary with your life to lead a fulfilling one. So 'Pippin,' as a whole, equates commonplace with wonderful. And I aspire to be that kind of woman that encompasses goofiness, sarcasm and also maturity and accountability, so that's why I like playing her." Calling this musical's humor dry and slapstick, she said seeing high-school students deliver that kind of comedy adds "a whole, other level of hilarity. This play is both dark and glittery – it pulls at your heartstrings, but you're laughing at the same time."

Freshman Elizabeth Vichness is an ensemble member, an actor (called a player) in the movie and a soldier. "As a player, my character is excited about everything and jumps up and down a lot," she said. "As a soldier, I do some slow-motion stage combat, plus cool dances."

"I like dancing, and lots of the songs are really fun," she continued. "I especially love 'Glory.' It's a haunting number with a lot of minor chords, and all the harmonies stack up on each other, and I really like how that sounds."

Vichness said there are lots of little jokes in the show that the audience will enjoy. And, she added, "The music is pretty upbeat and will get stuck in people's heads."

rent 800,000 DACA 135,000 are Asian-Americans. The current efforts focus on DACA with phone banks, vigils and visits to Virginia legislators urging them to support of the Dream Act. “Representatives Barbara Comstock and Scott Taylor are on the fence about whether to co-sponsor the legislation,” said Yi. NAKASEC is planning a day soon when they will join with other organizations and knock on every door they can find. “Come on; we can do this,” she said.

Yi says that Korea is a land of opportunity with a great educational system. “I can go there now and make a lot of money but what keeps us rooted here is liberty and freedom. In Korea,” she said, “You have to think a certain way. Culturally and value-wise, I’m American.”

Yi takes a moment to reflect on their recent 30-day vigil in front of the White House.

She said they slept on benches, talked to people, got signatures and even did the “DACA dance.”

“The Secret Service told us we were the weirdest demonstrators they had ever seen at the White House; we even had a karaoke night. But we raised a lot of money,” Yi said. “Some people were supportive but others were being really mean. We had kids with us and I could see they were so hurt. I don’t know what’s going to happen but we’re stronger together. We have to do something.”

She declares they’re going to get education and driver’s licenses for everyone in Virginia. “This moment is bigger than all of us.”

SIXTY FOUR PLACES of worship joined together after the election with the announcement of upcoming anti-immigration legislation. Imam Ali Saddiqui, who is part of a transitional leadership team for the group, says Sanctuary DMV (D.C., Maryland, Virginia) includes a number of Protestant churches as well as several synagogues, Catholic churches and his Muslim Institute. One of their actions has been organizing rallies in support of DACA and immigrant rights. “I was just there last week at the Immigration Customs Enforcement (ICE) office in D.C. and at the mayor’s office.” Since there was just a raid where ICE went after 500 undocumented immigrants and 14 were arrested, the group was asking for their release and for the mayor not to cooperate with ICE officials.

In addition, they have been visiting congressional offices in support of the Dream Act and phoning members of Congress. “Actually this is on a party line. Democrats are very supportive and Republicans not.”

He says you hear the argument that immigrants cost the government money and don’t pay taxes. “Let me tell you my own story. I came here from Pakistan on March 23, 1969 originally as an asylee. I looked for a job and started working and paying taxes March 24 and have paid ever since.”

The Rev. Laura Martin, associate pastor for at Rock Spring UCC in Arlington and also a member of DMV Sanctuary, says there are a number of unresolved issues about the concept of offering sanctuary to an immigrant in a church building. “We are trying to come up with a wider definition of sanctuary such as offering solidarity or support for immigrants when they have an order for deportation. So in the spring another member of the congregation and I picked up a woman living in D.C. with her two children in a small apartment with 13 people. We were there to support her for her deportation hearing. The woman had fled El Salvador, which is the murder capital of the world. We took her to Rosslyn to immigration court. All of us had to go through a metal detector including the children, and they took away the food in her purse.”

Martin says 80 different cases were all given the same 11 a.m. time for consideration. “It wasn’t a grand court — it was an institutional setting with low ceilings, bright light and so crowded that people, even with babies, couldn’t sit down. It was very procedural and you heard the same thing dozens of times. They took cases with attorneys first so we had to wait for a long time.”

Martin says somewhere along the way the woman’s heavy ankle bracelet started beeping because the battery was low. “There was nowhere to recharge it so it just kept beeping until we got to Subway for lunch in the late afternoon and she could plug it in.” When it came her turn the bilingual judge asked if the immigrant needed time to get an attorney and postponed her case until August.

Then they had to go to Vienna for a regular ankle bracelet check-in. “They could track where she was.”

Martin said the Sanctuary DMV group is not involved in case management so she doesn’t know what happened at the August court date. “The courts can’t keep up. They are rescheduling out to the end of 2018.”

An excerpt from a poem sent by Martin to the congregation concludes:

“I have known the grandmothers who Smile even though they have left Their country of spices and markets, Have left their open windows with blue curtains Have left the tramping of war, Have left their songs and language, And believed America when we said, “This is the land of the free.””

This is the third article in a series focusing on DACA.

Dishonest and Misinformed

To the Editor:

The appalling absence of fact-checking in “Dire and Urgent” (Opinion, Mary Kimm, September 8-October 4, 2017) reveals ignorance that should be an embarrassment to a “newspaper” and its reporters.

The subtitle alone reveals a lack of knowledge about the subject matter. Even worse, the two United States Senators from Virginia, who were interviewed for the article, demonstrated their own unfamiliarity with the proposed legislation they eagerly condemned. Had they actually read the bill?

In particular, the “Graham-

Cassidy” Senate bill retains almost all the Affordable Care Act taxes “on the wealthiest” in order to fund Medicaid reform. Sen. Kaine asks, “Why go after Medicaid?” Do the Senators fail to understand that “Medicaid as we know it” is unsustainable? Where is their cost analysis of that program? In Virginia alone, the precipitous growth of the state’s Medicaid spending is crowding out funding for public safety and infrastructure. State legislative leaders in Richmond recognize that reform is necessary.

The co-called “threats” to quality of coverage listed in Ms.

Kimm’s final paragraph are simply untrue and misleading. Read the bill. The perverse rhetoric these two Senators use to obstruct the truth should be challenged by intellectually honest and rational reporters.

Until that happens, their remarks contribute nothing constructive to the important discussion on the truly “dire and urgent” need for healthcare reform. Virginians do know the facts, and do comprehend that exigency.

We Should All Kneel

To the Editor:

Let me remind football fans, that their game day traditions are not religious rituals. The National Anthem does not carry the same significance as a crucifix, Quran, or menorah. Choosing to honor your country at the beginning of your sports entertainment is perhaps a commendable choice but nonetheless arbitrary.

No area of life is exempt from the freedoms engendered in the Bill of Rights. Protest and dissent are fundamental to the health of our government.

It ensures our representation as citizens and expresses our values transversely to other members of the society.

No person is under the obligation to stand, gesture, or poise themselves a certain way to have their protest taken seriously. Kneeling during the National Anthem is a way to transmit a sentiment in a highly public manner. The kneelers are no less citizens for acting this way. In fact, their exercise of their rights to free speech, protest, and dissent are the very first amendment to America’s most important document.

Furthermore, the absurd suggestion that service members have ownership rights over an arbitrary starting ritual to a sports game belies an expression of one of America’s most heinous hobbies: the glorification of war. Why should service members be offended at the expression of the rights they say they fought for? I say, again, that it is absurd.

As citizens it would be healthy to engage in actual discourse, instead of censoring the manner in which our opponents are able to express their ideas. The day that Republicans would like to stand still during a Beyonce song as an act of protest for state’s rights, I will welcome it. I ask the same courtesy of them.

Don’t Give Your Power Away: Vote

To the Editor:

We know from the 2016 election what happens when people don’t vote. We are now living through a dystopian presidency with our American values under siege. But this November, Virginia voters have a chance to start righting the ship in statewide elections for Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Attorney General and House of Delegates.

While campaigning in Virginia and New Jersey this week, former President Obama reminded us that if we don’t vote, we give away the power that our Constitution guarantees us. And while the nature (and pace) of our current political discourse can be a source of frustration and fatigue, we can’t afford to be complacent when it comes to elections.

Electing Ralph Northam as Governor is important as a balance against Virginia’s Republican held legislature. The results of the 100 races for Virginia House of Delegates also have the potential to make a significant impact. If Democratic candidates can win in open seats and in some of the 50 other districts where they are challenging incumbents, it could portend a turning of the tide in statehouses across the country, where recent Republican takeovers have resulted in terrible public policy, from school crippling tax cuts to election gerrymandering to union bashing.

Let’s support the Democratic challengers and re-elect incumbents, like delegates Kathleen Murphy in District 34 and Mark Keam in District 35, who have successful track records. We have an opportunity by way of the ballot box to fight for our values and elect officials who share them.

Vote on November 7.

Northam, a Steady Hand for Governor

To the Editor:

Lt. Governor Ralph Northam is the experienced progressive candidate we need to serve as our next Governor to keep moving Virginia forward. He has worked tirelessly alongside Gov. Terry McAuliffe to support veterans, to expand healthcare, to protect civil rights, and to bring jobs to Virginia. McAuliffe and Northam have decreased Virginia’s unemployment rate and have increased Virginia’s per capita personal income.

Northam is able to reach across the aisle – a skill that is sorely needed – while also holding firm to his values. Most importantly, Northam will act as a last line of defense against the very conservative bills that the Republican-led House of Delegates and state Senate often bring to the floor.

In the last legislative session Gov. McAuliffe vetoed 18 proposed bills that included efforts to cut support to Planned Parenthood, impose more requirements on voter registration, restrict absentee voting and expand access to handguns. It was only due to the Governor’s veto pen that we were saved from having these bills become law. Virginia does not need to go down that road again of vaginal ultrasound bills or bathroom bills, laws that would make Virginia a laughing stock and harm efforts to improve our economic development.

Northam is a steady and tested legislator who understands Virginia and who – along with Justin Fairfax and Mark Herring – deserves our vote on November 7.

Weakened Wherewithal

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Say that three times quickly. Heck, say it one-time slowly. And then welcome to my whirled: the world of cancer treatment and survival. A 'whirled' in which, eight years and nearly eight months post diagnosis, I continue to live, breathe and write.

Occasionally it happens, as it is happening now, that some of the most excruciating demands of being a cancer patient, occur simultaneously – or a reasonable facsimile thereof. For me that means 24-hour urine collection, pre-chemotherapy lab work, chemotherapy infusion, CT Scan and then the appointment with my oncologist to discuss all the results; occurring over 13 days – with intermittent days off for good behavior.

Typically; meaning every minute, every hour, every day, every week, etc., maybe not every second, I am thinking about cancer; though I wouldn't say I'm preoccupied (others might). And of course, it's certainly understandable and reasonable to do so when every day over a fortnight, you are waiting – as we say in the sales world – "for the other shoe to drop."

Having endured this cycle over the last eight and a half years with varying regularity, I can honestly say that whatever symptoms have manifested themselves – or not – have never provided any consistent assurance that my life/life expectancy had not changed for the worse. It's not until the appointment with my oncologist occurs – or sooner if he emails me the scan results, that I learn the facts of my case.

All of that being said, as my friend Frank has often said to me: "You're in pretty good shape for the shape you're in." Don't I know it.

However, yes there's always a 'however' in the cancer-patient-surviving-against-all-odds 'whirled,' there are no guarantees. In fact, there are only two guarantees: death and taxes. The former is way too close for comfort and the latter, I'm already taxed to the hilt, emotionally. Somehow, I have to get through because "the alternative is gloomy" to quote Dr. Mobley, the doctor in Miles City who treated Augustus McCray in the epic miniseries, "Lonesome Dove." And so I try not to be gloomy.

However, there's that word again, circumstances/schedules randomly bring down the weight – and wait of my 'whirled.' These 13 days can never pass quickly enough. But that presumes a good result, which one would want to know as soon as possible. But what of a bad result, leading to an exponential increase in anxiety – and fear, ultimately leading to a treatment unknown. That I might not want to know so soon. Not that not knowing serves any point or helps coordinate the next treatment plan, I'm more afraid of hearing something I haven't heard much of since February 2009. To quote my late mother quoting somebody: "No one gets out of this life alive."

That of course is the point of this column, and the effect of having all this cancer stuff happen at the same time. I can take it, generally; as my late father used to say: "KB, I have confidence in you. You have broad shoulders." Nevertheless, I worry about the figurative straw breaking my emotional back. Cancer can do that. It did it to my mother-in-law, Peggy, where over a few days the situation went from bad to worse to finally, the worst.

Somehow, I have to compartmentalize all this negative energy and focus on the positive. And that positive turns out to be an early email from my oncologist basically saying that my lung cancer remains stable. Now we can go to my appointment on Monday "unencumbered," to once gain quote my late father. The pressure is semi off. Talk about relief.

Now maybe I can relax and try not to think about my next infusion, my next scan and my next appointment with the oncologist. There's no harm in trying, right?
