Police To Add Body Cameras

In other business, board hires new county executive and updates environmental priorities.

By Ken Moore The Connection

airfax County police officers from the Mount Vernon and Mason district stations will soon wear body cameras in a three-month pilot program designed to determine if all Fairfax County police officers will wear the cameras in the future.

"We see this as a really wonderful opportunity to better connect our officers on the ground and our folks on the street and make sure that everybody has an opportunity to work together and see how that work goes," said Mount Vernon District Supervisor Dan Storck.

The Ad Hoc Police Practices Review Commission recommended in 2015 that officers be equipped with the cameras, and the Board of Supervisors approved the pilot program at its board meeting on Nov. 21. It will take another few months to get the three-to-six month pilot program up and running.

Braddock District Supervisor John Cook, chairman of the board's public safety committee, expressed concerns about upcoming constraints on the public safety budget. "We are going to have some tough decisions in public safety and we need good data," said Cook.

Fairfax County Police Department will partner with American University to initiate an academic study, which could be extended from 90 days to six months.

"Community advocates will be at the table to help us monitor the deployment of the cameras and how the policy is working," said Col. Edwin C. Roessler Jr., Chief of Police.

"The pilot body worn program is designed to provide the department with the opportunity to review police-community member encounters as they occur, as well as provide an additional degree of safety for our officers as they patrol the streets," according to the Fairfax County Police Department.

The cost of the pilot program is $684,000. Storck asked if all officers from the Mount Vernon station could use the cameras.

"When it comes to evaluating the impacts of body worn cameras, we are still, as a field, in the early days," said Brad Bartholomew, professor at American University.

For studies to be effective, "we must ensure that a group of officers receives the camera and another group does not," he said. "The more you can control, the more you can model, the more believable your results may be."

The study analysis is expected to cover statistics and community member feedback to assess the impacts prior to, during and following the pilot program.

"Officers will be expected to activate the camera during any law enforcement-public encounter related to a call for service, law enforcement action, subject stop, traffic stop, search or police service," according to the police department.

Police and a variety of civic groups worked together on a proposed pilot bodyworn camera policy to address personal privacy rights, transparency and accountability in police-community member contacts. The policy can be modified as needed based on the pilot.

TWO BOARDS, ONE FAIRFAX

The Board of Supervisors and School Board adopted a joint social and racial equity policy called One Fairfax.

The Board of Supervisors joined the School Board by adopting the policy on Tuesday, Nov. 21, one day after the School Board

"I dare say we've spent thousands of hours on this policy and I think it's reached a point when it is time to approve it," said Lee District Supervisor Jeff McKay, adding that he judges this his most important action in the 10 years he has served on the board.

"This goes across all that we do," said Hunter Mill District Supervisor Cathy Hudgins.

The policy identifies 17 areas of focus including housing, education, community and economic development, environment and transportation.

"What we are doing here is not guaranteeing that everybody is going to be successful because that really goes to the individual, but what we can do is ensure that this board and Fairfax County ensure ... that everybody in Fairfax County has an opportunity to succeed," said Chairman Sharon Bulova.

"I believe philosophically at our core, we believe in equity and our community reflects that, and our community wants that," said McKay.

"Far too often, I have found that some people in my community aren't at the table,

Col. Edwin C. Roessler Jr., Chief of Police

John Cook, Braddock Supervisor

but they rely on us to be there at the table for them. And they rely on us to make sure their county government represents them as individuals."

Springfield District Supervisor Pat Herrity had concerns how to measure the efforts or define success.

"From the very beginning of this policy discussion, I've asked several simple questions that I haven't been able to receive an answer for," Herrity said. "I support every one of our residents having equal opportunities to succeed and I believe our county and staff are committed to that as am I. But I can't support a new government bureaucracy for a problem that no one can quantify and for which there are too few definitions or measures of success or impact."

ENVIRONMENTAL PRIORITIES

While addressing deer management and a lack of predators in Fairfax County, Stella Koch said, "They've changed the ecology in Yellowstone [National Park], but I don't think that it is an option here."

The Environment Quality Advisory Council advocates for a full-time wildlife specialist position in Fairfax County to support the deer management program as well as the Canada Geese Management Program.

"That position has been needed for a long time," said Koch. "We have one person doing a significant amount of yeoman's work."

On Nov. 21, Koch presented the environmental quality annual report, highlighting major priorities for 2018, including the need to conduct a countywide survey on the public's view of the "cultural carrying capacity, how people are thinking about deer in this county."

The advisory council also says the Board of Supervisors needs to update its 2003 Outdoor Lighting Ordinance and needs to implement a lighting work group. "Since 2003 there have been a lot of changes in technology and also an increase in density in this county," said Koch.

"The increasing density of development in Fairfax County will invariably lead to more instances of 'light trespass,' where lights on one property affect another property," according to the environmental report.

Koch also advocated for increasing the Stormwater Service District rate by one-quarter penny, from a rate of 3 cents per $100 assessed real estate value to 3.25 cents per $100.

"As you know, there is an endless backlog of infrastructure that needs replacements," she said. "We're making great progress and it's slow and steady, but we definitely need more funding."

"I use this as a model for how we can track major issues," said Bulova, praising the structure and quality of the EQAC report.

"When you open the annual report, the first thing [you see] is the recommendations. We think that is important, it is what this annual report basically drives us toward," said Koch.

Other priorities include funding of $263,000 required for the Fairfax County Park Authority's natural resource mapping efforts and additional technology.

The public will have an opportunity to give both EQAC and the Board of Supervisors feedback in a public hearing scheduled for Jan. 10, 2018 at 7:30 p.m. at the Fairfax County Government Center, 12000 Government Center Parkway.

To read the report, see www.fairfaxcounty.gov/dpz/eqac/report2017/.

THE $250,000 MAN

Bryan Hill will be Fairfax County's next county executive, effective Jan. 2, 2018.

"Selecting a county executive is the most important hire the Board of Supervisors undertakes," said Penny Gross, vice chairman and Mason District supervisor. "Mr. Hill brings impressive leadership, management, communications and budget experience to Fairfax County."

"I believe this is the fifth county executive for me and the fourth search," said Gross.

Hill, currently the James City County, Va. administrator and clerk to its Board of Supervisors, will replace Fairfax County Executive Edward L. Long, who retired in September

"While [James City County] is a smaller jurisdiction, many of the issues are the same," said Bulova. "We are very, very excited to welcome Bryan Hill to Team Fairfax."

Hill will earn $250,000 per year.

Hill has been the James City County administrator since 2014, and previously served seven years as the deputy county administrator with Beaufort County, S.C. Pre-Rolling Road is in a residential portion of Springfield, with houses and on-street parking to contend with when it gets widened.

Delegate-elect Kathy Tran (D-42) talks to residents with her daughter Elise in hand.

Rolling Road Widening Takes On New Elements

By Mike Salmon
The Connection

he Rolling Road widening project has been on the books since 1988 but it took one step closer to being underway, as Virginia Department of Transportation (VDOT) officials met with area residents and public officials on Nov. 30 to iron out details that are not settled.

One big detail that is being looked at is the utilities — above ground or underground?

Utility relocation is priced at $9 million if they remain above ground and $18 million if they are put underground, and both ways have their pros and cons. Virginia Senator George Barker (D-39) is working a deal with Dominion Power, Fairfax County and the Commonwealth of Virginia to put them underground, but it's still not final. "We will pursue this the best we can," he said.

ANOTHER ELEMENT of the project that's being looked at is the stormwater management ponds, and the decision there is above ground vs underground also. With the above ground ponds, four houses will be taken, said John Maddox, an engineer contracted with VDOT for the project.

And then there's the shared use path that will run alongside the roadway. Under normal VDOT protocol, road projects include paths on both sides of the road, but with the tight corridor of Rolling Road between the Fairfax County Parkway and Old Keene Mill Road, the path might be limited to one side of the road.

That's okay with Jen Brown, a member of the Fairfax Advocates for Better Bicycling (FABB) that was at the meeting to monitor the situation. "[FABB] would like to have a shared use path on both sides, but one is good," she said. Allison Richter, the VDOT Transportation and Land Use Director, was happy with the compromise since 70 percent of the residents at a past meeting said the path was important.

And so goes the planning stages for this stretch of road that butts up to homeowners backyards through most of the $51.6 million project, and impacts not only the Springfield residents in that area but also the residents to the south that go through this corridor when heading to Fairfax or the Capital Beltway.

David and Jillian King's backyard butts up to the project limits, and they've been to several meetings, including one "five or six years ago they had it, but then lost the funding," David King said.

"Certainly there's issues with the road,"

Rolling Road is in a residential portion of Springfield between Old Keene Mill Road and the Fairfax County Parkway.

added Jillian, pointing out the danger of the Rolling Road-Greeley Boulevard intersection where there are accidents frequently.

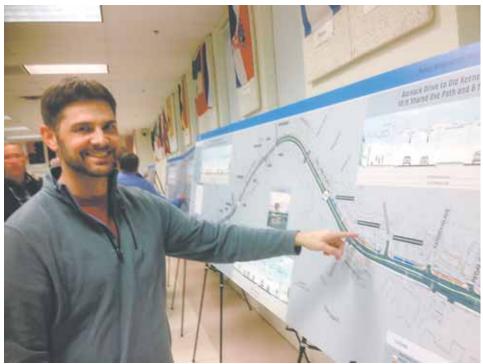

PHASE I OF THE PROJECT is due to start in 2019 at the Old Keene Mill Road intersection, but the actual guts of the project on Rolling Road won't start until 2023.

The cross section in the brochure included a parking lane since there are some houses that face the road. In the package that was handed out was a comment sheet, with questions about preferred width of the shared use path, and space for suggestions. These comment sheets must be postmarked by Dec. 11.

It was announced that Delegate-elect Kathy Tran (D-42) would not make it to the meeting because she was at a delegate introduction class in Richmond, but she showed up towards the end with baby Elise in tow. Tran lives off Rolling Road but not in the project zone. She was in elementary school when the project was first discussed and now has four children. "That's how long the project's been going," she said.

The next meeting is a Public Information Hearing that is scheduled in late January 2018.

David King's backyard is close to Rolling Road.

COUNTY'S FIRST TENANT RESIDENT CURATOR

The county extended its first lease through the Resident Curator program to a Coast Guard officer.

The county's Resident Curator Program is designed to preserve historic properties by offering long-term leases to qualified tenants who will rehabilitate and maintain the historic houses. A curator can be a private citizen, a nonprofit entity, or a for-profit entity, according to county documents.

"It is really a wonderful opportunity and a great pleasure to be the first of what I think will be a number of properties in Fairfax County ..." said Storck, "to bring back to life housing which is old and historic and meaningful to all of us."

The Board of Supervisors approved the lease of the historic Stempson House at 7520 Furnace Road in Lorton to Steven J.

The Stempson House gets its historic significance from its association with the Occoquan Workhouse and Reformatory and the Women's Suffrage movement of the early 1900s, according to Resident Curator Program documents.

The United States purchased the land in 1910 to construct the prison. "In 1937, amongst the Lorton Reformatory orchard trees, prisoners constructed a residence for a prison officer. It is likely that prisoners constructed the house, under the direction of prison engineers, using bricks manufactured at the prison brick kiln. Ultimately, the residence was converted for use by the prison security office."

The 1,500 square-foot-house is described as a "vernacular style residence with Colonial Revival style elements."

Other applications are pending for the Turner Farm House, 10609 Georgetown Pike, in Great Falls and the Ellmore Farmhouse on West Ox Road in Herndon. The county intends to continue its programs at the Ash Grove in Tysons, Lahey Lost Valley in Vienna, and Hannah P. Clark (Enyedi) House in Lorton.

Give Locally in Fairfax County

Holidays are for giving; many choices to help.

he holidays are about giving, and giving thanks. The holidays are about children and family. The holidays are about sharing, about joy. The holidays are about being thankful and about faith and appreciation. The holidays are about alleviating suffering for others.

Northern Virginia is among EDITORIAL the wealthiest areas in the country. Many if not most of us go through our daily and seasonal routines without encountering evidence of the needy families among

In Fairfax County, more than 52,000 (28 percent) of FCPS students are are poor enough to receive free or subsidized meals.

The median family income in Fairfax County rose to $129,800. But among families with children, 6 percent have income below the poverty level. That's $20,420 for a family of three. That's about $1,700 a month. Median rent in Fairfax County is $1,747, meaning the cost for half the rentals is more than that.

These are children living in families who may be on the brink of homelessness, families who must choose between medical bills, car repair, heat and food. Some of these are children who may not be sure that they will have a meal between the meals they get in school.

School holidays can bring uncertainty and hunger — a far cry from the celebrations, gifts and plenty that we associate with the holidays.

Hundreds of homeless students attend the public schools, and their needs are greater.

Many nonprofits in the county need your help to provide a holiday meal for Thanksgiving or Christmas, to provide children with gifts.

There are literally hundreds, probably thousands, of ways to give locally this season. Here are a few ideas.

By John C. Cook Supervisor (R-Braddock District)

he holidays are a time for cel ebration. And as our teenag ers progress through high school, there are a series of celebratory events – prom, graduation, the last football game or track meet, etc. How families celebrate at home is their own business. But when others outside the home are involved, it can become the community's interest. That is the case with serving alcohol to minors.

If you are holding parties for youth outside of your family in your home, or allowing your children to do so, and alcohol is being served to youth under the age of 21, then you are breaking the law. More importantly, you are endangering young lives.

Please stop. If you don't, the county will stop you. At my motion, the Board of Supervisors unanimously directed our Police Department to arrest parents who host for minors parties where alcohol is served. We care about our kids.

The adolescent brain is still developing its ability to engage in reasoned thought. When alcohol is introduced, the brain's reasoning capability is further reduced. This is why youth who drink alcohol are even more susceptible to risky behaviors and peer pressure.

At its worst, teen drinking can result in drunk driving, assault, drug use, teen pregnancy, injury, or even death. When parents provide youth with alcohol, they are directly endangering the lives of those youth who drink.

Serving alcohol to youth is also a missed opportunity to set a good example.

ve no

The 2016 Fairfax County Youth Survey shows that 93 percent of teens do not drink alcohol when their parents clearly conveyed their belief that it was very wrong to drink underage. But when teens thought their parents were ok with underage drinking, then 53 percent did drink

Our kids may not listen to us, but they do watch us and learn from us. We should all be positive role models for the youth in our community, both in our homes and outside.

Why do some parents serve alcohol to their children's friends? Some believe it strengthens their bonds to their own children. Others believe it will make their kids more popular. Some may believe it makes them (as parents) more popular with kids. Others believe that kids will drink anyway, so it would be better if they did so under some sort of supervision

To be blunt, none of these reasons is a good reason. There are far more constructive ways to be popular than to serve alcohol, and adults, especially parents, have an additional responsibility to be good role models.

I strongly support the parents' organization "Parents Who Host Lost the Most." Parents who serve alcohol to other kids need to be held accountable.

Every year some youth in our county die needlessly, or are badly injured or otherwise subject to harmful results, due to drinking alcohol. Let's join together to help our kids stay safe. And for those who don't wish to join us, please know our police department will be out looking for you. Don't serve alcohol to minors.

Firefighters Demonstrate Holiday Spirit

Over the weekend, Fairfax County Fire & Rescue Department crews were dispatched for a citizen who fell from a ladder while installing Christmas lights around the outside of the home. The citizen was transported to an area hospital for treatment of non-life threatening injuries received as a result of the fall.

After the patient was transported from the scene, the crew from Tower Ladder 440, Fairfax Center, decided to complete the task of placing the rest of the lights around the home. In the spirit of the holiday season, they felt it important that the patient and family not have to worry about trying to finish getting their Christmas lights up.

Public Information Meeting

Thursday, December 14, 2017 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

Robert E. Lee High School, Cafeteria 6540 Franconia Road Springfield, VA 22150

If the event is cancelled due to inclement weather, the alternate date will be Wednesday, January 10, 2018.

Find out about plans to extend Frontier Drive from its southern terminus at Franconia-Springfield Parkway to Loisdale Road in order to relieve congestion and improve access to the Franconia-Springfield Metro station, the Springfield Mall and Town Center area, and the General Services Administration (GSA) warehouse on Springfield Center Drive.

The project will include a four-lane divided roadway (combination of new construction and improvements to existing Springfield Center Drive) with on-road bicycle facilities, as well as a shared-use path on one side and a sidewalk on the other side. The project will also include braided ramps at the Frontier Drive/Franconia-Springfield Parkway interchange, improvements to the Franconia-Springfield Metro station circulatory road, and Franconia-Springfield Metro station parking garage access improvements.

Stop by between 6:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. to view displays and learn more about the project and its preliminary design. Project staff will be available to answer your questions.

Review project information at the VDOT project website (www.virginiadot.org/projects), at the information meeting, or during business hours at VDOT's Northern Virginia District Office at 4975 Alliance Drive in Fairfax. Please call ahead at 703-259-1794 or TTY/TDD 711 to ensure appropriate personnel are available to answer your questions.

Give your written comments at the meeting, or submit them by December 27, 2017 to Mr. Zamir Mirza, Virginia Department of Transportation, 4975 Alliance Drive, Fairfax, VA 22030, or email meetingcomments@VDOT.virginia.gov. Please reference "Frontier Drive Extension" in the subject line.

s Terrance Puller surveys boxes wrapped in holiday paper and filled with tubes of toothpaste, sticks of deodorant and other self-care toiletries, he says he can feel his heart well up with gratitude. The packages were part of a donation drive to benefit So Others Might Eat (SOME), a local nonprofit organization with a mission to provide services to the poor and homeless. Puller, who is now both a

SOME employee and volunteer, reminisces about a period in his life when he was a recipient of such generosity.

Five years ago,

Puller says he was alone, homeless and deep in an alcohol and crack cocaine-induced haze. He would later recall that he was so staggeringly intoxicated one holiday season that he would miss an opportunity to say goodbye to his dying mother. What he did receive that year however, was life chang-

"I was able to come into the shelter and get treatment, food and eventually a job," said Puller. "I volunteer my time because ... being here reminds me of my story and makes me grateful. It keeps me uplifted, less depressed and clean and sober."

Mounting research validates Puller's assertion. "Giving of our talents and time is an important way to improve our well-being," said Carolyn Lorente, professor of psychology at Northern Virginia Community College. "What many of my colleagues are looking into is the connection between volunteerism and sense of self. It turns out that when we give to others, it not only helps those we are assisting but also boosts our sense of agency, gives us a sense of purpose and belonging and informs our sense of identity."

During the holidays, which are often emotionally charged, a focus on helping others can lead to feelings of gratitude and happiness, says psychologist Jerome Short, Ph.D. In fact, he points to a 2010 study published in the journal Clinical Psychology Review, which shows a link between benevolence and contentment.

"Kind acts increase personal happiness because we naturally empathize with others and take pride in our ability to make

New Clubhouse and Snack Bar Greet Burke Golfers

By Mike Salmon
The Connection

he golfing experience at Burke Lake was ratcheted up a notch when officials cut the ribbon on a new pro shop Saturday, Dec.

2. Supervisor Pat Herrity (R-Springfield) didn't reminisce about riding his bike to the course as he was growing up in the area — a common opener for supervisors at ribbon cuttings lately — but praised the new addition nonetheless. "I think people are going to enjoy it for a long time to come," he said.

Gus Johnson was heading out for nine holes as the sun was sinking late in the day. One of the best things about the Burke Lake course is that it's a par-three course and can be played quickly compared to some longer courses around the county. "The other one [clubhouse] was pretty pathetic, the course itself is always nice," he said.

The opening of the clubhouse is the final part of the $6.6 million redevelopment project that was funded by voter-approved park bonds in 2008 and 2012, according to county information. Inside the 4,000 square foot building there are four offices, a pro shop, a full kitchen, and a snack bar with indoor and outdoor seating. Everything is Americans with Disabilities Act compliant.

"That's the one main reason we did this, to make it accessible," said Eric Inman of the Fairfax County Park Authority.

The full kitchen expands their food choices and enables them to serve beer on tap, both of which can be accessed by patrons at the driving range as well, expanding the attraction for the whole facility. "This building helps support the driving range," added Inman. The driving range hours go until 11 p.m. now and new food choices include pizza, steak and cheese sandwiches and burgers.

The marketing department is getting the word out about the new facilities with ads, a video for the Golf Channel, and "a post-card to 50,000 residents," said Roberta Korzen, the golf marketing specialist.

As Herrity arrived to cut the ribbon, he looked at the spot where the old clubhouse was and there was nothing but a new field of grass and no sign of the 1970s-era clubhouse. "Unbelievable," Herrity said. That spot will be the new putting green and the old putting green will be turned into a practice chipping facility. The former clubhouse didn't offer some of the new features that the "business realities we faced for parks and golf courses in the county," he said. "It's better for our users and the Park Authority as a whole," Thompson said.

County zoning official Pete Murphy listens to the speeches.

Sensory Friendly Santa Event at Springfield Town Center

50 people with all spectrums of special needs have their photos taken with Santa.

or the first time, Springfield Town Center hosted a Sensory Friendly Santa event for about 50 people with sensory, physical, and developmental needs on Sunday, Dec. 3, 2017. This event allowed families with children with all spectrums of special needs to experience a Santa visit in a comforting environment prior to regular mall hours. There were also tables set up for coloring and playing with Play-Doh.

"We've just made some small changes like dimming the lights, turning off the mall music and eliminating the wait in line in order to make it easier for these children to enjoy their visit with Santa," said Kimberly Baldy, Marketing Director with Springfield Town Center.

Baldy said the target audience is children with autism and Down Syndrome or any child who has a limited attention span, doesn't do well in crowds, or has some behavioral disabilities. She added that this week alone there are 375 Sensory Friendly Santa events throughout the country. The mall partnered with Autism Speaks and Cherry Hill Programs, which executed the photos and provided the Santa during the others smile and feel good," he said.

Acts of Kindness Can Boost Wellbeing

Even for those who haven't experienced levels of need such as Puller's, acts of altruism can have a positive effect on one's mood. An example is Jennifer Carter, a senior at Marymount University in Arlington, who spent last weekend in the center of a crowded auditorium on the university's campus frantically tying strips of fleece cloth. Along with nearly 300 other volunteers, she was making blankets for newborn babies for an organization called HOPE, a nondenominational crisis pregnancy center in Fairfax County.

"When these new mothers leave the hospitals it's usually with a thin cotton blanket," she said. "A lot of times, the things that they're missing are warm blankets for the babies. It feels good to be able to give these mothers something that many people take for granted. It makes you realize how fortunate you are."

Short points to a 2016 study from the University of California at Riverside which shows that volunteerism can lead to gratitude and happiness.

"Grateful people pay more attention to the cost, effort, and value of helping acts than the average person does," he said. "They are better at coping with life stress because they trust others to help them and then reach out and accept help."

Christabel Sampson experienced this metamorphosis first hand when she relocated to the Washington, D.C. area and was unable to find a job. She had mounting bills, but no income. Her financial outlook spiraled further downward and she became homeless. She moved into a shelter run by Interfaith Works, a nonprofit organization in Montgomery County Maryland that works to meet the needs of the poor. Through the organization's job training program, she was able to gain skills training, clothing and shelter. As a result of the services she received, Sampson says she found a job. Now she volunteers her time to helping others at Interfaith Works and has even become a member of the organization's board of directors.

"The experience of being homeless and now helping other women definitely made me stronger," said Sampson. "Sometimes even a spoken word can be said to help someone to a better place. I have empathy because I have been there."

When there is no food in the refrigerator, no electricity nor heat, these are hardships that they can keep hidden from their peers. But, when that same child can't afford to pay for the band field trip, a pair of glasses, a chorus outfit or a new pair of shoes, these are indignities that are evident to their classmates. Alice's Kids pays for these relatively inexpensive items in the hopes of preserving the dignity of the child. Alice's Kids helps children from all over the Mount Vernon area through small acts of kindness.

24 Hour Emergency Tree Service

Context of Having Written

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

I don't want to self-indulge too much about last week's column but, sometimes in my unexpressed desire to fulfill my writing obligation/not let me cancer/cancer treatment affect my schedule, I write my column under less-than-ideal circumstances.

Post chemotherapy/(last week) - the immediate week after, is about as challenging as it gets for me. I'm a bit irritable. I'm a bit out of sync/unable to focus. I'm somewhat impatient. My hands are shaky. My eyes are "squinty." I'm hungry yet I can't eat. My selfediting skills are below average - more than usual. And finally, my reading comprehension is mostly lost in the toxic haze. Still, I'm determined to make my deadline.

Not that any of the preceding paragraph is an excuse. It's more of an explanation as to why a column written with the best of intentions may have missed the mark in tone and substance. Though I've not received any feedback as yet confirming my sense of what I had written last week; nevertheless, my feeling upon submitting it to editorial was that I had wavered a bit. Unfortunately, I didn't have the balance emotionally or the ability physically to assess its content. I apologize in arrears for attempting to maintain its regularity.

And to that point, specifically to that word, that's what my attitude as a cancer patient has been about: regularity. Doing the things that I regularly/normally/typically do without deviating from my norm. Because for me, deviating from my norm, living/doing outside of my box – within reason, would be – to me anyway, reinforcing the negative that is most definitely a cancer diagnosis. A diagnosis with which I have long ago made my peace, made my choices and moreover, made my it goal to face the present/future with a positive attitude infused with as much self-effacing good humor as possible. It's nothing I really did intentionally, it is simply who I am: my father's son, with inherited sensibilities to live my life thinking the glass is half full, until it's not.

And so far, nearly nine years into a "13 month to two-year" prognosis, I'm living proof that either whatever I'm doing is working (and there's a bit more to the story) or I'm an incredibly lucky act of kindness for which there's no quantifiable explanation. Regardless, I'm not the least bit inclined to look a gift horse in the mouth and/or deny the possibility that my tumors are necrotic (dead). I'm very happy to accept the inexplicable fact that, statistically speaking, $I^\prime m$ an official anomaly: a stage IV, non-small cell lung cancer survivor.

However, since I'm not one to presume facts not yet in evidence, I'm still infused every six weeks, scanned quarterly and seen by my oncologist every three months. I don't for a second believe that somehow, after being diagnosed with a "terminal disease" in late February 2009, that life goes merrily along without consequences. Not that I'm a fatalist -Rebecca, I'm merely evaluating/introspecting/compartmentalizing and allocating precious emotional resources so I can live my life as I'm accustomed to doing. And what I'm most accustomed to doing, especially dating back to December 1997, is writing a weekly column for Connection Newspapers. Though the columns published previous to June '09 were not "cancer" columns, as we call them, they were nonetheless written with the same passion and nonsensical prose as my "cancer" columns are. So, generally speaking, I am able, as my brother Richard says, "to churn out the dribble."

Still, writing is not like reading. Though a similar commitment is needed, writing requires a bit more effort. And it's been an effort I've sustained before, after and during my lung cancer diagnosis. Some weeks are harder than others. Last week was difficult. This week not so much.

Perhaps you agree?

Kenny Lourie is an Advertising Representative for The Potomac Almanac & The Connection Newspapers.
