Parishioners from St. John's Episcopal Church help out at SHARE as part of Martin Luther King Day activities.

McLean Church Serves the Community on Martin Luther King Day

St. John's Episcopal Church in McLean marked the Martin Luther King Day with service projects to involve all ages. Families prepared snack packs to be delivered to Ronald McDonald House in Washington, D.C. Volunteers helped out at SHARE in McLean, sorting clothing and restocking food shelves. And parishioners knitted and crocheted red hats for newborns, in support of the American Heart Association's Heart Month.

In total, almost 50 parishioners participated.

This is the eighth year that St. John's Missions Committee has organized service projects for MLK Day. The church is located at 6715 Georgetown Pike in McLean.

Apparently it's always cycling weather. Bitter temperatures and slick roads did not keep Fairfax Alliance for Better Bicycling member Ken Lutz of Vienna from riding his bike to the January meeting from work in Falls Church and then to his home afterwards. At the meeting, Lutz indicated he was ready and willing to help advocate for "Safe Towns" — training facilities that are designed to look like mini-towns so that youngsters, in particular, can learn safe riding techniques and habits in a realistic setting.

Promoting Safe Bicycling

BY ANDREA WORKER
THE CONNECTION

At its first monthly meeting of the New Year, the Fairfax Alliance for Better Bicycling (FABB) got right to work, inviting two Fairfax County Traffic Safety Police Officers to attend and expand the dialogue between law enforcement and cyclists in the county.

FABB member Charlie Bobbish introduced Officers PFC Sheila Ayers, and PFC Christina Gaizick and began the conversation by asking them to comment on the "state of traffic safety" in Fairfax County.

Safety of all county residents is a priority, according to Ayers, be they drivers, cyclists or pedestrians, but the officer added that she and her colleague were particularly pleased to be invited to the FABB meeting to gain a better understanding of the concerns of the pedal-powered citizenry and to have an opportunity to discuss safe cycling practices and education.

According to Ayers, statistics show a decrease in cycling-related incidents, with only one fatality recently reported in 2015. Early figures for 2017 indicate 72 reportable bicycle incidents, although the fact that there are no clearly defined categories for bicycle accidents in the statewide reporting system TREDIS (Traffic Records Electronic Data System) and that "reportable" incidents must meet a $1,500 damage or a reportable injury threshold in order to be included in the TREDIS data, left some attendees somewhat in doubt as to the accuracy or usefulness of the information.

Jeff Anderson, president of FABB, Steve Ward, the organization's secretary, and board member Bruce Wright all indicated that advocating for more specific reporting tools might be on the FABB work menu in the future.

SEVERAL QUESTIONS were posed to the officers regarding how to stay safe as a cyclist on the road, and what to do when witnessing or experiencing interaction with aggressive drivers.

Cycling advocacy group hosts county law enforcement reps at monthly meeting.

Sally Smallwood is the Safe Routes to School coordinator for the Fairfax County Public Schools. Smallwood brought the FABB members up to speed on school-related bicycling events and activities and encouraged people to nominate a School Crossing Guard of the Year by the Jan. 26 deadline.

Although the answers did not provide the cyclists with many solutions, Ayers and Gaizick both stressed that the first thing to do was "get out of the way and be safe." Even when the incident is not deemed "reportable," the officers still encouraged the riders to "be the best witness you can be and call it in." Calling in and providing as much detail about the alleged offender is still helpful, and could cause the police to issue a "look out" for the vehicle.

In addition to the presentation and conversation with Ayers and Gaizick, a report by Sally Smallwood, Safe Routes to School coordinator for Fairfax County Public Schools was on the agenda. Smallwood brought the members up to speed on educational events scheduled for Fairfax County schools, a significant donation that would allow for a number of shareable bicycles to be purchased for several elementary and middle schools, and preparation for this year's "Bike to School Day" scheduled for May 18.

Smallwood also wanted to spread the

Iconic Potomac School Statue Vandalized

A statue that has long had a place of honor on the campus of The Potomac School in McLean was damaged on Dec. 21, 2017. Sometime between dusk on the Dec. 21 and 5 a.m. on the Dec. 22, the concrete statue of three llamas in a circle was vandalized, with all three heads forcibly broken off. Two were left on the ground nearby, and the third has not been recovered.

The llama statue, created by noted artist Una Rawnsley Hanbury, has been at Potomac since 1970. Originally located on a campus playground, it served as a climbing and play structure for young children. When the school underwent significant renovation in the early 2000s, the statue was moved to the front of the campus.

Dr. Marjorie Brennan, chair of Potomac's Board of Trustees, notes, "It really is a beloved icon for our community — something that generations of Potomac students remember. On sunny days, it's not unusual to see students sitting on the llamas, reading or chatting. And when Potomac alumni come back to visit the campus, they almost invariably stop to take a photo with the llamas — often perching their own young children up there for the picture. To see something that holds memories and meaning for so many people senselessly destroyed is heartbreaking."

Fairfax County Police are investigating the vandalism, and The Potomac School is offering a $5,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and prosecution of the individual or individuals responsible. Anyone with information is asked to contact Officer A. Block of the Fairfax County Police Department at 703-556-7750.

The Fairfax County Police Department also accepts anonymous tips, providing cash rewards of $100-$1,000 if the information leads to an arrest. Tips can be submitted anonymously through Crime Solvers by visiting www.fairfaxcrimesolvers.org, or text-a-tip by texting "TIP187" plus your message to CRIMES (274637).

What's Wrong with This Picture?

Male, 60 percent; female 40 percent;
less than 2 percent poor; less than 2 percent
African American; less than 2 percent Latino.

If these are the demographics to something, you know it needs to be fixed, no matter what "it" is. Especially something paid for with public dollars.

Male, 60 percent; female 40 percent.

Less than 2 percent poor.

Less than 2 percent African American.

Less than 2 percent Latino.

These are the demographics of this year's freshman class at our Governor's school, Thomas Jefferson High School for Science and Technology, known as TJ.

We also know that there are geographic disparities (some middle schools have many more students admitted than others; some have none).

State Sen. Scott Surovell represents a part of the county that tends to be under represented at Thomas Jefferson, and he is kicking off what no doubt will be a lively discussion by introducing SB787, Governor's Schools; enrollment, which would use both economics and geography to change the admissions dynamics at Jefferson.

EDITORIAL

Summary:

"Requires any academic school Governor's School that has a focus on math, science, and technology and that has an overall enrollment of over 1,000 students to accept for enrollment (i) a sufficient number of students eligible to receive free or reduced price meals such that the total of such students is at least 50 percent of the weighted average of the participating divisions' percentage of such students in the previous school year and (ii) at least five students but no more than 15 students from each middle school in each school division eligible to matriculate students to such Governor's school who have completed at least two full years at such middle school."

The school divisions currently participating in TJHSST are: Arlington County, Fairfax County (includes City of Fairfax), Falls Church City, Loudoun County, Prince William County.

We've said this before, because these demographics have been trending in this direction for more than a decade.

Fairfax County Public Schools has a single elite magnet school, Thomas Jefferson, and TJ is frequently referred to as the top high school in the country. Dramatic disparity in the makeup of admissions at TJ is an indicator of disparity in early identification of students as gifted and talented, of access to advanced classes and enrichment, and in the basic education that the Fairfax County Public school system offers to all of its students.

School leadership can't continue to act like there are things they can't do anything about. Surovell deserves credit for giving an incentive to get started.

Our American Story

To the Editor:

One hundred years ago, my grandparents left eastern Europe to take a chance in making it in America. They were poor, spoke no English, had little formal education and were probably not seen as particularly desirable immigrants.

They worked hard and started small businesses, a laundry and a candy store. Their sons fought in WWII and then they, our parents, got mostly blue-collar jobs. They, in turn worked hard, made sure we studied hard and we all got college educations.

Now, three and four (and beginning five!) generations into our American Story, we are teachers, social workers, engineers, counselors, and business people, working to improve our country and our communities.

Our family story has been repeated millions of times over. It may be your story, too.

All because America saw the value of allowing a large, diverse influx of people who were willing to work hard for the American Dream. The value of continuing that diversity is as true today as it was 100 years ago.

A Matter of Style

BY KENNETH R. "KEN" PLUM
STATE DELEGATE (D-36)

The experiences of the Virginia colonists with King George III taught them a lesson not forgotten even until today. Executive authorities are not to be trusted. Monarchies are likely to try to take away the people's rights and property.

The assertions of the Declaration of Independence were to make it clear that the people of America had sworn off monarchical government. They were not about to replace a king with a president or a government who might try to exert the kind of absolute executive power they had under the king.

Instead, controls were incorporated in the U.S. Constitution as well as state constitutions to keep the executive authority in check. Virginia's limitations on the governor were especially limiting. For example, the governor's term was one year. He could run for re-election more than once, but likewise he could be turned out after just one year.

We have loosened up somewhat in modern times by extending the term to four years, but there is a limitation of one consecutive term. The governor can run for an additional term, but it cannot be consecutive with the first. I think the one-term limitation is unnecessarily restrictive and have voted on more than one time to allow the governor to run for a second consecutive term. One term may keep a governor under control, but it can also limit his or her effectiveness.

Governor Terry McAuliffe was a high-energy, strongly motivated, hard-charging governor whose accomplishments exceeded those of his predecessors. He accepted the fact he had just one term, and he worked energetically to get all he could done in the relatively short four-year term.

He pushed the legislature to get things done, and he did not hesitate to use executive authority when necessary. He was taken to court by the Republicans for restoring citizenship rights to those who had been incarcerated, but he won and restored citizenship rights to 172,000 ex-felons. He brought about a New Virginia Economy of high employment, job growth, and attractiveness to those seeking to locate a company here.

Governor Ralph Northam who served under the shadow of Governor McAuliffe as lieutenant governor was always recognized as being extremely able but without the show of high-energy and flair of the Governor. No one questioned his ability, but it was widely concluded that he would bring a different style to the governorship. Most expected a mild-mannered, cordial leader who would govern more by consensus.

Clearly the styles are different, but there may have been a bit of selling short Governor Northam because of his easy Eastern Shore manner. His inauguration speech as well his first speech to the General Assembly was anything but mild or equivocal. It was as strong and as direct as any that Governor McAuliffe delivered.

Calling upon his background as a physician, he built a hard case for the expansion of health services to the people in need in the Commonwealth. He is as direct as anyone I have heard speak about the need for common-sense gun control measures. He is emphatic in his defense of women's reproductive rights.

We may not have a second term for the governor in Virginia, but we have a governor taking over who is going to continue the policies of the first. The difference in the two will simply be a matter of style.

Talent on Display at Saxon Stage

BY SHANZEH UMERANI
THE CONNECTION

From tales of insanity to those of love, the drama students at Langley High School put their skills to use by directing and putting on their own shows on Friday, Jan. 19. A total of four “one-acts” flowed through the night as the Saxon Stage’s students directed and performed their sets without the help of an adult supervisor or teacher.

Theatre director of the Saxon Stage Valerie Karasek wanted to give this platform a go for her students so that they may be able to experience the responsibility as well as the excitement of all aspects of theatre from costumes to stage management. “[This] was a bit of an experiment,” said Karasek as she watched her students perform their given acts. “We usually do a winter selection of student chosen one-acts, [however] this year we didn’t have as many student directors who had the time to put it on — so we did something a little different,” Karasek explained. The plays consisted of a comedy called “Goldilocks on Trial,” a drama named “Booby Trap,” a love story titled “The Loveliest Afternoon of the Year,” and a thriller captioned “The Insanity of Mary Girard.”

Anneka Noe is an advanced drama student at the Saxon Stage and was the director for the VHSL chosen piece, “The Insanity of Mary Girard.” The act takes place in the year 1790, where Mary Girard has been seemingly imprisoned in an insane asylum due to her husband declaring her insane after figuring out she will have a child of another man. Mary Girard is wary and paranoid of her surroundings due to five “furies” that are fueling the idea of insanity around her, of which Mary eventually gives in to believing. The story is compelling and haunting as you begin to see the small transformations in the character; actress Danielle Generous surprises the audience with a powerful performance acting as the sane turned insane character alongside her castmates Will Baruch (The Warder), Claire Goldhush (Mrs. Lum), Mark Bosset (Stephen Girard), Adam Taffel (Mr. Phillips), Sofia Duque (Polly Kenton), and The Furies (Evelyn Marzol, Jessica Peros,

Drama one students, most of whom are freshman, were part of the first two acts — “Goldilocks on Trial” and “Booby Trap.”

“You get a lot of freedom [doing this],” said Devran Johnson, a freshman at Langley High School and member of the Saxon Stage. Johnson plays the role of Caitlyn in the one-act titled “Booby Trap.” The act revolves around a character called “The Soldier,” played by Aidan Herzig, who finds himself stuck in one place when he mistakenly sat on a landmine. The Soldier evidently knows what is going to happen and starts looking back at his past and wonders how his wife and son back home will take the painful news. “Booby Trap” is a captivating and heart-breaking one act that was beautifully performed by Herzig, Johnson, Michael Hoeymans (Major Harris), Cole Sitalides (Captain Gruss), Cathy (Kaylie Gibbs), Tom (Kathryn Skeen), The Lieutenant (Luke Flaxman), Drill Instructor (Anderson Hauptli), Caitlyn’s Mother (Jenna Khatib), The Corporal (John Colligan), The Professor (Sam Chagoury), Sister Anne (Abby Dickerson), Abby (Julia Sensiba), Molly (Mariana Pava), Mark (Lawson Haynes), Stephanie (Kimmy Tallant), and the Soldier’s Mother (Lily Calderwood).

This series of one-acts allows the students in the Saxon Stage to be themselves and do what they love most. “It’s the most amazing feeling [being on stage]; you get to build a[n] ensemble family and are able to perform and work together,” said Johnson after her performance in “Booby Trap.” The members of the Saxon Stage will be putting on their Spring play of Agatha Christie’s “And Then There Were None,” and tickets are available at www.saxon-stage.com.

Langley High drama students present four “one-acts.”

Actress Danielle Generous plays a paranoid and cautious Mary Girard who is surrounded by five “furies” (Evelyn Marzol, Jessica Peros, Mary Peterson, Rachel Lesan and Samuel Buroker) that are fueling the idea of her mental insanity. This one-act will be recorded and submitted to VHSL (Virginia High School League) in hopes that the Saxon Stage will win State Championships.

She (Jane Gerrard) is peacefully feeding her pigeons on a park bench. The Loveliest Afternoon of the Year cast only has two members, She (Gerrard) and He (Ryan Wilson, not pictured).

Fairfax-Loudoun Site Makes First Cut for Amazon HQ2

A site straddling Fairfax and Loudoun counties is one of the locations that has been selected for further consideration as Amazon's second headquarters. Fewer than 10 percent of the 238 sites proposed for "HQ2" are on the short list of locations that Amazon announced last week.

As part of the northern Virginia proposal, Loudoun and Fairfax counties collaborated with developer Open-Rebees to submit the largest non-developed site on Metro that checks all of the boxes that Amazon and other corporate users want and need. As home to a major backbone of the Internet, a top-notch workforce and Washington Dulles international Airport, the two counties are convinced that northern Virginia has all of the assets needed to merit serious consideration.

"We are very excited that northern Virginia is included on the short list as a potential location for Amazon's second headquarters. Fairfax and Loudoun counties are able to offer a great quality of life coupled with an innovative and business friendly culture for future Amazon corporate neighbors and employees. With our highly educated and talented workforce and a location close to Dulles International Airport and a new Silver Line train station, we hope we will have the opportunity to welcome Amazon HQ2 to Virginia," said Sharon Bulova, chairman of the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors.

Phyllis Randall, the chair of the Loudoun County Board of Supervisors, said, "This is a great example of how a region working together can tell a powerful story. The partnership between Loudoun and Fairfax County on a metro accessible site highlights our commitment to provide the best solution where Amazon and their employees can live, work, learn and play."

Gerald L. Gordon, Ph.D., president and CEO of the Fairfax County Economic Development Authority, noted that Amazon already has chosen Fairfax County for an east coast campus of Amazon Web Services (AWS). "We are excited to learn that Fairfax and Loudoun counties made the short list of sites that Amazon will consider for HQ2," Gordon said. "The Economic Development Authority, Loudoun County and partners stand ready to demonstrate to the company why our combination of business and quality-of-life assets make this a great location for HQ2 in addition to the mission-critical services AWS provides to the private and public sectors."

Buddy Rizer, executive director of Loudoun Economic Development, explained, "The site Amazon is considering is near Loudoun's Data Center Alley – the largest and fastest-growing data center market in the world. It will be more than fitting for an international e-commerce corporation of Amazon's stature to locate its second headquarters here."

Lost in Space

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Not a reference to the iconic television series of my youth, but there was "danger," Ken Lourie, and it wasn't caused by Dr. Zachary Smith nor by "robot," (Robbie) either. And it wasn't a conspiracy. It was simply a confluence of absenteeism by my health care providers. Both my oncologist and internal medicine doctor were absent with leave and yours truly was caught in the crossfire, so to speak. Let me provide some context to help you appreciate my dilemma.

I have chemotherapy every six weeks. Accordingly, I have lab work the Wednesday before the Friday to check for anomalies – anomalies which over the years have occasionally delayed my infusion by up to two weeks waiting for my body to settle. In the early days of treatment, my white blood cell count was crucial; too low and no treatment; too high, it was never too high. No treatment and the cancer was left unchecked. An incredibly stressful occurrence when your treatment is stopped. Whether or not a week or two delay ultimately mattered in checking the cancer, it certainly mattered – emotionally, to the patient. You feel adrift, sort of, which is exactly how I felt during the first two weeks of January.

Typically, what my current lab work presents is my creatinine level and the associated glomerular filtration rate, measuring kidney function/efficiency. After nearly nine years of infused toxicity, I have suffered some collateral damage to a major organ. My oncologist and internal medicine doctor are incredibly sensitive and concerned about this damage. Per these results, every medical decision made concerning me; from prescriptions approved to "normal" internal medicine stuff to whether I get "contrast" when I have my scans and MRIs to what chemotherapy drug I infuse and how frequently its infused, is decided with my kidneys in mind. Nothing happens medically until my kidneys sign off on it, if you know what I mean?

As it happened, my creatinine level for my Jan. 12 infusion was higher than usual. When this measure occurs, I know to call the Infusion Center and ask the head nurse if I should come in for treatment. She will contact my oncologist and with his direction, will advise me what to do, except for this week. My oncologist was away and though another oncologist – whom I've never met – was covering, I'm not really sure she knows enough about my situation. Specifically that I'm a bit of a special case, per my oncologist's own characterization of me, and I've never gone seven weeks, let alone eight weeks without treatment. Delaying my infusion would break a multi-year precedent. In fact, around the holidays when I asked my oncologist if I could extend my infusion interval from six to seven weeks (to accommodate life), he emphatically said "No." Moreover (to complicate a covering physician's decision), my oncologist has also told me that if I were a new patient with creatinine levels as chronically high as mine, he wouldn't/couldn't treat me until those levels reduced.

So not only was I in the middle of an unprecedented one to possibly two-week delay in my infusion, but I also needed an oncologist – who I don't know and who doesn't know me – to decide/make an exception/maybe risk her medical license (if something were to happen to me), to authorize treatment for a patient whose creatinine levels fall outside of protocol, and me not having either of my two primary-care physicians available for consultation. And other than the default emails advising that both were out of town, I had nowhere to go and no one to turn to.

Heck, I might as well have been on another planet, given the limited choices I had.
