Buildings' Repurposing Debated

County considers vacant office space repurposing guidelines; public offers some "good ideas."

> By Andrea Worker The Connection

cross the county, since the end of 2016, an estimated 18 million square feet of office space is deemed functionally vacant. A hearing at the Fairfax County Government Center on Jan. 29 sought to gather public opinion on proposed guidelines which could streamline the application process for repurposing such properties in Suburban Neighborhoods and Low Density Residential Areas.

At the hearing, members of the audience kept steering the conversation away from the specifics of the proposed Plan Amendment 2017-CW-5CP, and more towards the desire to see repurposing include community service and affordable housing potential.

In December, the Board of Supervisors authorized a similar Plan Amendment that addresses the repurposing application process for "activity centers" like Tysons and Merrifield, and in transit station and industrial areas. At that time, they directed staff to consider expanding the guidelines beyond these "activity centers." Outside of these larger, mixed-use and industrial areas, an inventory shows in excess of 607,000 square feet of vacant office space.

OFFICIALS see the guidelines as supporting the county's Economic Success Plan. A Comprehensive Plan Amendment on a siteby-site basis would not be automatically required as long as applicants still meet strict zoning regulations and established Performance Criteria. County planners feel that the shortened application process could encourage owners or developers to make modifications to these properties.

Fred Selden, director of the county's Department of Planning and Zoning, answers questions and listens to comments from the public at a meeting to discuss Plan Amendment 2017-CW-5CP — guidelines designed to streamline the application process to repurpose existing vacant office buildings in suburban and low density residential areas of the county.

Fairfax County Department of Planning and Zoning (DPZ) Director Fred Selden fielded the majority of the questions and comments from the public at the hearing. Selden said that most of the buildings in question were the smaller townhouse style, or two-or-three story buildings that often house small individual businesses. "Doctors, dentists, insurance agents, Realtors, and the like," and the county believes that streamlining the repurpose process could be a real economic boon to a community, adding services and consumers.

The proposal was explained by Aaron Klibaner with the Planning Division who outlined the seven potential repurposing uses that the county identifies in the proposed Plan Amendment: Hotels, Light Industrial, Urban Agriculture, Institutional, Public Facilities, Residential Live/Work, and Retail or other commercial functions, and gave examples of the Performance Criteria that would be applied to applicants seeking to repurpose a property.

"Proposals would be reviewed for factors such as compatibility with the surrounding existing or planned development," said Klibaner. Transportation needs and impacts would also be considered, as well as the site design, impacts on schools, parks, public facilities, historic preservation and environmental considerations. "Those requirements stay the same."

After the explanatory presentation and clarifying questions about the proposal, Klibaner and colleague Meghan D. Van Dam, chief, Policy and Plan Development Branch, asked the audience to divide into two groups to discuss the pros and cons of each usage type "to give adequate consideration to all the potential types and to be sure that all voices are heard," said Van Dam

The audience had other plans.

There was general agreement that the question of what purpose would best suit a particular building could only be answered on a case-by-case basis, although the "Hotel" category seemed to raise the only immediate concern, with an opposition to the transient nature of the occupants being added to a smaller residential environment.

Instead of talking about categories, most in the audience wanted to talk about ways that vacant or under-utilized properties could be redeveloped to meet urgent needs in the community.

Several attendees voiced concerns over the county's critical shortage of affordable housing: "Not just low-income housing, but units that our service providers like our teachers, police, and firefighters can afford." A woman from the Annandale area added that housing for the disabled and mentally challenged is also much needed, and that repurposing buildings could offer "live and work" opportunities for these members of the community.

Day Care and senior centers were also mentioned, as were county-supported or subsidized light industrial businesses that would bring employment opportunities along with economic gains for the county. Tax incentives and public-private partnerships were suggested as ways to encourage owners to repurpose with community needs in mind.

Selden acknowledged that, to date, the county hadn't really given much thought to "these good ideas." He reminded the audience that PA 2017-CW-5CP speaks only to privately owned structures. The county can approve or deny applications and can negotiate and put forth recommendations, but what use the property owner seeks to employ in its repurposing is "their business decision." He did add, however, that all of the comments and suggestions would be considered as the process of the proposed Plan Amendment moved forward.

AT THE END of the two-hour event, an impromptu "straw poll" vote by a show of hands indicated that a majority of those present supported the proposal, but the majority also agreed that the county should look to those structures for their own efforts to meet the needs of their citizens.

Another Planning Commission public hearing is scheduled for March 22. The Plan Amendment is currently on the agenda for the Board of Supervisors on May 1. The public can find more information on the county's website by searching "Repurposing Phase 2," or by contacting Aaron Klibaner at the DPZ at aaron.klibaner@fairfaxcounty.gov.

Free Training In Basic Disaster Response Skills

Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) is a training program administered through the auspices of the county fire and rescue department. The training prepares residents to help themselves, their families and neighbors in the event of a disaster in their community. Through CERT, residents can learn about disaster preparedness and receive training in basic disaster response skills such as fire safety, light search and rescue, and disaster medical operations, according to Fairfax County Fire & Rescue Department.

At this time, the next available CERT Class is scheduled to begin on Monday, Feb. 26 at the The Oaks Community Center 5708 Oak Leather Drive, Burke. There is one session each week on Mondays, 7-10 p.m., that run until April 23. The class is 28 hours in length, plus the final practical exercise. The final exercise is on Saturday, April 28.

CERT training is free of charge and basic gear is provided. The minimum requirements to participate in CERT training at any level is that residents be 16 years of age or older, and either be a Fairfax County resident, or work in the county.

To learn more about CERT, go to www.fairfaxcounty.gov/fire-ems/community-emergency-response-team-cert

Time for Criminal Justice Reform

By John Cook Braddock District Supervisor (R)

airfax County is joining the bipartisan, nationwide movement of Criminal Justice Reform. In 2015 the county introduced its Diversion First program, which provides treatment instead of incarceration for those with mental health challenges or developmental disabilities who come into contact with the criminal justice system for low level offenses. This initiative is just one step in a national movement to make the criminal justice system better serve the American people. Criminal justice reform, broadly speaking, is supported by as diverse range of public officials as U.S. Senators Rand Paul and Kamala Harris. It is well past time for Virginia to dive in as well. Since ancient times society has recognized five purposes to the criminal justice system. One of these is "deterrence," which is the effort to persuade an offender or potential offender not to commit a crime. Another purpose is retribution, which is society exacting punishment to make up for the pain or damage caused by the crime. Incapacitation means removing a criminal from the rest of society so he or she cannot commit more crimes. Rehabilitation refers to changing an offender so he or she does not commit more crimes. Restitution is the payment for damage caused by crime. All of these purposes must be present and well represented for a fair and effective

COMMENTARY

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

criminal justice system

In the United States, our system has focused on long jail sentences for crimes. Jail serves deterrence, retribution, and incapacitation in cases of violent crime. However, it does not serve rehabilitation or restitution particularly well. And, in the case of mentally ill offenders, jail fails to serve deterrence.

When someone with mental illness engages in crime, it is not due to evil intent, but his or her illness. Retribution does not seem fit for someone who is ill and committing crimes. Incapacitation is accomplished, but what we have done is make our local jails expensive substitutes for psychiatric hospitals.

The expense of jail is no small matter. A year in the Fairfax jail costs the taxpayers about $82,000. A year of residential psychiatric treatment costs about $24,000. One year of outpatient treatment costs about $8,200. When someone with a mental illness, who is often of limited wealth, is arrested, this person often spends up to four months in jail awaiting trial for minor crimes (trespassing, disorderly conduct, petty theft) where the final sentence would generally be far less. Someone with regular income would post bond at $500 cash and spend no more than two or three nights in jail. Altogether the government and taxpayers are spending millions of dollars to hold people in jail before they are even convicted. Is this system really helping anyone?

We have learned in the juvenile justice system that incarceration actually creates criminals out of youth who may be only misdirected or who make stupid mistakes. Twenty years ago, our juvenile detention center held 1,509 youth. In 2017 that number fell to 533, which is a 60 percent decrease. In those two decades we learned a great deal about the benefits of jail alternatives for children. Instead of locking these children up, we are reforming, teaching, and mentoring youth and turning them away from crime. And this prevents future crimes from occurring. The same can be said for non-violent crimes by adults. Simply putting people in jail, where they lose their jobs and family contacts, does not necessarily create better citizens when they are released. In the case of mental illness, jail can actually make things worse. There is a better way.

Criminal Justice Reform is not about "going easy" on criminals. It's about finding techniques that stop people from continuing to commit crimes. It's about turning lives around. Oh, and it can save a boatload of money. Violent criminals, murderers, gang members and the like still need long jail sentences. But many other lesser offenders can be turned around into productive, working, self-sufficient citizens. It takes some work, but the payoff is a society with less crime, lower jail costs, and more productive citizens.

Rewarding Highest Achievers

To the Editor:

With all due respect, state Sen. Scott Surovell is looking at the wrong end of the horse (Editorial, "What's Wrong with This Picture" – Connection, Jan. 24). The admissions to Thomas Jefferson High School for Science and Technology should be determined solely based on merit. Gender, ethnicity, race and economic status should be totally ignored.

TJ should provide the most rewarding programs possible to the highest achievers. Senator Surovell should focus on programs to increase the admission scores of African Americans and Latinos. Let's not dilute the potentials of TJ's classes by mandating quotas. The analogy would be to require that a certain percentage of varsity basketball players be white or Asian American, regardless of their abilities. That would be unwise.

David Elmore Great Falls

Incomplete Picture

To the Editor:

Mary Kimm's editorial ("What's Wrong with This Picture?" - Connection, Jan. 24) about the demographics of the Thomas Jefferson High School for Science and Technology (commonly known as TJ) leaves out an important statistic, and that is that 70 percent of its students are Asian, many of whom are first generation Americans. Many of the remaining 30 percent are also first-generation, and have family backgrounds from Iran, Arab and African countries, Russia, and Eastern Europe, or are biracial.

Is the heavily immigrant nature of TJ what's "wrong with this picture"? State Sen. Scott Surovell's SB787 bill's method to increasing enrollment of black and Hispanic students is to impose quotas on middle schools and by economic background. This is a resentment and punishment approach to trying to achieve that goal, and should be rejected as such.

Cindy Gersony Great Falls

How to 'Fix' Disparities

To the Editor

I did not compete in the Olympics, gain admission to Mensa, or play professional sports. Why? Because I didn't qualify for any of those. I understand we cannot qualify for everything. However, Mary Kimm's article, "What's Wrong with This Picture?" (Connection, Jan. 24) presents the idea that non-inclusion in a program "needs to be fixed."

Ms. Kimm indicates that the Fairfax County School System (FCPS) should "fix" its admission policies to its one magnet high school, Thomas Jefferson (TJ), due to "demographic disparities" and we should commend Sen. Scott Surovell for pushing for that change.

The problem with Ms. Kimm's and Sen. Surovell's ideas is they miss the mark on reality for many reasons, some of which are:

- ❖ Forcing demographic balance at TJ for political correctness is as much nonsense as requiring Julliard to admit everyone.
- ❖ Identifying that some minorities and low income students are not represented at TJ student population does not logically reflect a prejudice. It means they did not qualify, pendid.
- ❖ Ignoring the total admission picture does not represent many non-minority students who apply and also do not achieve admission.
- ❖ Disregarding the rigorous qualifications for TJ slants the presented view.

Do Ms. Kimm's and Sen. Surovell's ideas support qualified students being turned away just so non-qualified students be admitted, all for demographic balance? How would Ms. Kimm and Sen. Surovell feel if their jobs were replaced by non-qualified employees?

For improvements in demographic representation, Ms. Kimm and Sen. Survivell should explore reasons why some minorities are not represented.

They probably would find, as many teachers know, emphasis on academic excellence begins at home. Therefore, a better solution to change demographic depiction in school programs is to start at the elementary, through all levels, helping all families make education a priority. That would achieve the overall attitude of striving for excellence, which aids all students in the long run.

An Evening with Eva Schloss

n Wednesday, Feb. 7, Eva Schloss will share her experiences as the childhood friend and step sister of Anne Frank, including accounts of the publishing of Anne's diary.

The presentation will take place at the George Mason University Center For The Arts at 7 p.m. and will be suitable for people of all ages including teenagers. Families of all faiths are invited to attend. This is an opportunity to hear a first-hand account from someone whose life intersected with a historical figure Chabad of Reston-Herndon is a sponsor for the event. Partners for the evening include:

- ❖ The Jewish Federation of Greater Washington
- ❖ JCC of Northern Virginia
- George Mason University
- ❖ Gesher Jewish Day School
- ❖ Washington Jewish Week
- ❖ Fairfax County Public Schools

In 1938, Germany invaded Austria, causing many Jewish families to flee Austria to avoid persecution. Among the emigrants was 8-year-old Eva Geiringer, who with her mother, brother, and father moved first to Belgium and then to Holland, where one of her neighbors was a German Jewish girl of the same age.

The two girls became friends and playmates

(though, as Eva would say many years later, the girl was "much more grown-up and mature than me"). They passed the time by skipping, playing hopscotch and marbles, and drinking lemonade that the girl's mother prepared.

Ultimately, both girls and their families were deported to the Auschwitz concentration camp. Later they would become step sisters.

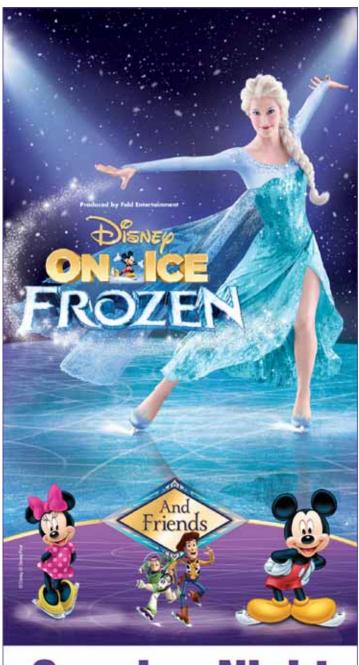

Eva survived her concentration camp experience and made her way to England, where she married Zvi Schloss and raised three daughters. She worked as a studio photographer and ran an antique shop.

Her step-sister did not survive Auschwitz, but kept a diary that did. Her name was Anne Frank.

Since 1985, Eva Schloss has devoted herself to holocaust education and global peace. She has recounted her wartime experiences in more than one thousand speaking engagements. She has written two books and has had a play written about her life. In 1999 she signed the Anne Frank Peace Declaration along with United Nations Secretary General Kofi Annan and the niece of Raoul Wallenberg, who rescued thousands of Jews in Budapest.

Tickets for students are free, $10 for adults and $360 for VIP which includes two tickets to a VIP reception and reserved seating. Reservations can be made at www.chabadrh.org.

Opening Night Tickets $15!

Restrictions, exclusions and additional charges may apply. Subject to availability. No double discounts Excludes premium seats. Market prices subject to change based on supply and demand. Sections may very be purpose, data partnerses and rains feat.

Braddock District Supervisor John Cook (R) speaks at the event.

Give Together Engages Hundreds of Volunteers

he Jewish Community Center of Northern Virginia was Give Together Headquarters on Jan. 15, Dr. Martin Luther King Day, when Volunteer Fairfax welcomed hundreds of volunteers, tall and small, who came enthusiastic and ready to serve.

Service projects planned for the day were designed with young volunteers in mind. They included: making Doggie Chew Toys for Homeward Trails Animal Rescue; creating Valentines for Foster Care to Success (FC2S); assembling Sensory Bags for UCM of Alexandria; making warm fleece scarves for the DC VA Medical Center; and compiling Financial Literacy Classroom Kits for Junior Achievement.

Special guests supporting the event included Supervisor John C. Cook (R-Braddock District), and School Board Members Dalia Palchik (Providence District), Ryan McElveen (At-Large) and Karen Keys-Gamarra (At-Large).

Volunteer Fairfax acknowledges event support from Points of Light and Kaiser Permanente.

Most of all, the volunteer center appreciates the moms and dads who brought their families out on a chilly January day to help local nonprofits. Additional appreciation goes to the event assistants and to the volunteers from schools, clubs, Scout Troops, sororities and business. Special acknowledgement goes to Waples Mill Elementary parent Sara A Holtz who brought her young family to Give Together for the eighth consecutive time.

Join Volunteer Fairfax every year on MLK Day for Give Together. And, save the date for VolunteerFest, another family-friendly event taking place on National Make A Difference Day, on Oct. 27, 2018.

For more information about ways to serve the community, visit www.volunteerfairfax.org.

Space In Which I Wouldn't Get Lost

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

As a follow up to last week's column titled "Lost in Space," I have a few recommendations for the medical profession, oncologists particularly, as it relates to their comings and goings and the effect it might have on their patients, many of whom have been characterized as "terminal," as I was.

Respecting and appreciating the fact that on a good day, our anxiety level is likely off the chart, we need you to work with us, not against us.

And though I can certainly recall how I was encouraged to reach out - either by phone or electronically, whenever we had auestions or concerns. I believe there needs to be an upgrade to that advisory. That 'encouragement' works fine when you're here/on site. However, based on my most recent experience, I need that 'advisory' to work equally fine when you're not here.

Ergo: I want to meet and develop some kind of relationship with the oncologist who will be covering for you when you're absent. I want that oncologist's name, email address and phone number (none of which I had during this most recent experience). I want some assurance/acknowledgment that this oncologist knows who I am, how I'm treated and is familiar with any special circumstances pertaining to my care and feeding. Moreover, I want "t.l.c.,". because I definitely deserve it.

As for the oncologist's goings; on the occasions when, for whatever reason, you're away from your office. I want to know before, not after. I don't want to learn about it by reading a default email saying you're out of the office. Though I appreciate knowing after, it's not good enough. I want to know all the time. In fact, every time you're away, I want to know. Whether or not I have any medical activities (lab work, infusion, scans) planned, I want to know, just in case something unexpected – or even expected, happens.

This would help me to prepare, anticipate, assimilate and coordinate any and all future medical activities so that I could determine in advance, if necessary, an action plan. One that would proactively solve/prevent a problem rather than reacting to one as most recently happened to me. I don't want any more surprises. I don't want to experience any lack of communication at any time. I don't care about how or why. I simply want to know ahead of any potentially complicating circumstances, not behind. I'm already feeling some relief just writing about it.

How can this be implemented? Electronically of course. I don't need any calls. A don't-reply email is fine. I know that system/process works when I want to communicate with you and/or review information which has been posted online. What I want to know next is the doctor's schedule, not hourly, maybe not even daily (although I wouldn't be averse to it), but weekly for sure, electronically in my inbox first thing Monday

Knowing the doctor's availability will help me manage my expectations and minimize my stress. As a cancer patient, I never know what I'll want or when I'll want it. But finding out the easy way (in advance) is certainly preferable to finding out the hard way (during/after).

Medically speaking, I don't want to miss anything nor do I, living forward, want anything to be missed. If you can email an afterappointment summary, you can certainly email me a pre-appointment schedule of when and where my primary care physicians (oncologist and internal medicine) will be Because out of sight unfortunately doesn't mean out of mind, unless I know otherwise.

And that's my goal: to mind my own business and not have to worry about yours.
