Eagle Scout Repairs Greenhouse

At Centreville High, Connor Whalen also fixes panels and door, builds flower bed and benches.

BY STEVE HIBBARD

For his Eagle Scout project, Connor Whalen, 17, of Centreville's Walney Glen community, renovated the special ed greenhouse located behind Centreville High School, which had been vandalized. The project involved fixing the side panels that were missing, fixing the door, making flower beds and building benches.

"I just wanted to help out the community the best I could. I feel really great about it considering it's helping out the special ed program at Centreville High," said Connor, a rising senior at CVHS. "It's going to make an impact and get them outside and help them by enhancing their school and helping them to be able to learn."

Connor, the youngest son of Patti and Kevin Whalen, has three older brothers who are Eagle Scouts: Sean, 26, Matt, 23, and Ryan, 21.

A Boy Scout with Troop 17, affiliated with the Centreville Volunteer Fire Department, Connor got the idea for the project from his varsity football coach, Tommy Lamb, who is also a special ed teacher at CVHS. He spent two months planning the project and organized about 20 Scouts in building new panels, benches, and flower beds — at a cost of around $1,200. The Remington Mulch Co. donated the mulch and top soil and Loew's gave a discount on the landscaping timber for the flower beds and pressure-treated timber for the benches.

The Scouts took three days to complete everything — July 7, 12, 14 — making the flower beds, installing the fences, staining the benches and fixing the panels. On the last day, it was mostly his family members who helped complete everything. His Scoutmaster Kevin Gaughan provided guidance with the project.

All in all, Connor spent about 30 hours planning everything — emailing the District representative, consulting with his Scoutmaster, buying the materials — and then 12 hours to complete the whole project.

"With Connor, he'll be the fourth son of the Whalen family to make his Eagle Scout Project, so we're all proud that on his own initiative he found a meaningful Eagle project to benefit the local community and that he found one benefitting the special education department of the school," said dad Kevin Whalen, who is the assistant scoutmaster. "They were proud of him for finding that project and organizing it and getting his team together and working with Coach Lamb. He got his older brothers together — Sean, Matt, and Ryan — who all achieved their Eagle status and did projects in the Centreville area."

The greenhouse is now finished but Connor still has to complete a few merit badges and meet with the District representatives to go over final details of the project. He hasn't set a date yet for his Eagle Court of Honor.

In addition to Scouts, Connor is active at Centreville High School in football, where he plays outside linebacker, and baseball (outfielder). He also works part-time as a landscaper for Whalen Landscaping, which sponsored the project.

Deliee Leads Centre Ridge Elementary

Will oversee diverse population of 800 students, 90 staff.

BY STEVE HIBBARD
CENTRE VIEW

After working 29 years in education, Charles “Chip” Deliee, 50, of Warrenton took over the principal job at Centre Ridge Elementary in Centreville on July 27, replacing Margo Dias-Pareja who transferred to Fort Belvoir Primary Elementary School.

Deliee will oversee 800 students and about 90 staff at Centre Ridge, which is in the Centreville Pyramid. The school has an ethnic breakdown of 23 percent white students; 37 percent Hispanic; 12 percent Black; and 23 percent Asian based on 2016-17 stats. There are 17 percent percent of students in special education and 54 percent on free or reduced meals.

“It’s a very diverse population. We don’t have a majority so we represent several different countries. About 31 percent are English language learners — with English as their second language. With that, the population comes from a variety of backgrounds, countries and experiences, so we work hard to celebrate that diversity and give everybody the opportunity to celebrate their background and diversity,” he said.

Centre Ridge is a Title 1 school because of the number of free and reduced lunch students, so they focus on school supports to be able to support the families in the community. “We have a large amount of school-based resources — a parent resource center that supports the families in the community and we work with the parent liaisons,” he said.

He added: “Our focus is on the ‘Portrait of the Graduate’ skills and we spend a lot of time on project-based learning for students, communication, collaboration, and teamwork, so within our classrooms, the students spend a lot of time in small groups.”

Some of the special programs at Centre Ridge include a Heritage Night in the spring where the community comes together wearing international costumes and sharing food from their native countries. There’s also RAM Night — Reading and Math Night — as well as a PTA-sponsored Bingo Night and Family Movie Night at the school.

One of his focuses is reaching out to the community to increase the impact on families: “I’m looking more for the school to go into the community instead of asking the community to come to us — looking at having meetings in different areas in the community where I would go out and meet with community members.”

He added: “As a principal, it’s providing the resources for our students and families and staff to allow them to be successful here. That’s the biggest challenge — to make sure everything is in place so everybody can be successful.”

His personal goal as principal is to increase community involvement. He also wants to empower students to feel successful and learn to really love learning.

“And that’s the biggest one — to get our students to love learning every day,” he said. “For the staff, my goal is to be able to provide opportunities for them and resources for them to come together as a school-wide team and be able to build the relationships with their students.”

What he loves most about the job is the people, he said. “I got into teaching originally to work with students and 29 years will continue to seek opportunities to bring the community resources into the school.”

Added David Jagels, principal of Centreville High School: “I have known Chip since he was a teacher and coach at West Springfield High School. Chip has always been kid-centered in all that he does. He has the ability to build strong relationships with everyone he meets. He is emotionally intelligent and compassionate, which will make him a great leader. It is an honor to have him with us in the Centreville pyramid. We have already begun to collaborate and he is already having an impact. I am excited to be working with him.”

Deliee grew up in Burke and graduated from Lake Braddock Secondary. He earned a degree in special education from James Madison University and started his career as a special ed teacher at West Springfield High School where he helped coach boys’ soccer and girls’ basketball.

From there he went to the Fairfax County Central Office, in the Professional Learning and Accountability branch. He then held assistant principal positions at Saratoga and Centre Ridge before taking on the principal job there.

“Being the assistant principal has helped me with the transition and allowed me to start to focus on specific areas that I know we need to continue to develop at the school. It’s really special place and I’m really excited to be the principal because the community and staff are amazing,” he said.

Deliee is married to wife Sharon of 23 years; the couple has three children: Brendan, 22; Kristopher, 20; and Amanda, 16. He also has a brother, Kevin, who teaches at West Springfield with his wife Madeleine.

Schools Provide New Resource for Parents, Students

FCPS Office of the Family and Student Ombudsman up and running.

BY ANDREA WORKER
CENTRE VIEW

The Family and Student Ombudsman is a new position in the Fairfax County Public School (FCPS) system. Last May, announcing the establishment of the office and the selection of then-principal of Pine Spring Elementary School Armando Peri Jr. as the first ombudsman, FCPS Superintendent Scott Brabrand said, “We are committed to providing an unbiased point of contact for all student issues. We believe the creation of this new position will provide families another resource to assist in positive outcomes and resolutions of concerns.”

“Armando will bring a wealth of invaluable experience as both principal and counselor to this role,” Brabrand said.

In addition to a bachelor of arts from Saint Charles Seminary, a Psy.S. in school psychology, and a master of arts in developmental psychology, Peri also brings more than 23 years of experience as an FCPS employee.

Peri has worked as a school psychologist at all levels with the FCPS, and as an educational specialist in the former Office of Minority Student Achievement before his appointment as assistant principal at Parklawn Elementary School, then Irving Middle School, and most recently as principal at Pine Spring before accepting the ombudsman position.

“Actually, I applied for the role,” Peri said. “I truly see how valuable this office can be. As an FCPS par

America Needs Unions

BY DAVID BRODER
PRESIDENT, SEIU VIRGINIA 512

This Labor Day, while some of us attend barbecues or spend quality time with our families, millions of Americans will go to work.

Americans are now working longer hours for lower wages. Despite an increase in our educational attainment, fewer of us have paid sick days, parental leave or employer-based healthcare. Even fewer of us have retirements we can count on.

Unions are a solution to our broken economy.

Working people who form unions with their co-workers earn higher wages, have better health care, have more secure retirements, and are safer on the job.

COMMENTARY The statistics are overwhelming. Working people in unions earn 30 percent more than their non-union counterparts, and are nearly five times more likely to have a guaranteed pension. Women workers who are union members earn nearly $9,000 a year more than their non-union counterparts. For African-American workers, the union differential is also about $9,000, and for Latino workers the yearly advantage is more than $11,000.

Unions have made all the difference in my family's life.

I'm the great-grandson of eastern European Jewish immigrants, who fled anti-Semitic violence, and came to this country with nothing. Thanks to my grandparents' union, my father was able to go to college. Thanks to my mother's teachers union (in which she was a powerful leader), our family never had to choose between seeing a doctor and putting food on the table, and my parents can now retire and live with dignity.

It's no wonder that more people are speaking out, organizing and voting for the rights to form a union.

Across the country, in deeply-conservative states like Oklahoma and West Virginia, union teachers and community allies have successfully mobilized for improvements to our education system, teacher pay and workers' rights.

Here in Virginia in 2016, a bipartisan majority of voters rejected the anti-worker constitutional amendment known as "right to work," while last month, voters in Missouri rejected the state's right-to-work law by a 2:1 margin.

Across the country, 61 percent of Americans support unions, according to a recent Gallup Poll. Young workers are even more supportive, and are joining unions in record numbers, in order to fix a broken economy.

When workers join together to form unions, we all benefit.

Strong unions raise wages, improve health care, and expand retirement security for all workers, union and non-union. Unions have played important roles in the civil rights movement and women's rights movement, and continue today to fight for racial, immigrant and environmental justice.

Here in Northern Virginia, unions have helped lead fights to raise wages, increase mental health funding, create jobs, and ensure health care for up to 400,000 people through Medicaid Expansion.

So, this Labor Day, whether you're enjoying a burger with family and friends or you're hard at work at your job (or maybe your second or third job), I invite you to join us.

Let us all unite together on our jobs, in our communities, and at the polls this November, to demand a better economic future for all people!

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Need Practical Solutions

To the Editor:

In late July, a tragic shooting took place in Toronto, killing two people and injuring 13 others. The shooter was identified as a man named Faisal Hussain, who later committed suicide. According to CBC news, the city has had 228 shootings in 2018 thus far, a 17 percent increase from this time in 2017. And 29 of the shootings in 2018 have been fatal.

It is not just the United States with a festering gun control problem, but Canada and other countries as well. In fact, Canada has the fourth highest gun homicide rate. Needless to say, the most recent tragic incident has reignited the debate on gun violence and stirred the opinions of gun owners and gun control activists. And that's actually a good thing, because discussing this issue can help bring awareness about the dangerous realities of gun violence, and the staggering amount of people, children especially, who are subjected to it. And only through frank discussion can we find practical solutions.

I agree with Toronto Police Chief Mark Saunders who said, "There are some huge benefits that can happen as a result of this if we really are brave enough to have a full-some discussion and not just say, 'Police fix this.'"

I hope the aftermath of these shootings can open doors for citizens and law enforcement officials to come together and create preventive measures to tackle gun violence, before someone can pick up a gun and strike again.

Canoe Journey

In late-July, four Troop 30 Scouts from Centreville and Westfield High School and Stone Middle School spent five days canoeing 53 miles in Adirondack State Park in upstate New York. The Scouts and four adults paddled the 50-plus miles along the historic Racquette River, Upper Lake, and Tupper Lake. Much of the trip was in a wildlife preserve with few signs of civilization and the Scouts planned, packed, paddled and navigated the entire trip through diverse weather conditions from cool pleasant days on flat water to windy lake crossing dealing with waves. The Scouts also had to carry their canoe and gear 1.3 miles around Raquette Falls. Scouts included Marcus Wear, John Simmons, William Torres, and James Torres. Adult advisors were Mike Wear, Sergio Torres, Jeff Paschetag, and Mark Paschetag. Troop 30 is a mid-sized troop chartered by Centreville Presbyterian Church. # Meet FCPS Ombudsman ent for 16 years, if I am still learning and have to do some research for resources on occasion, I'm sure there are parents out there who could use our help in navigating the system from time to time."

So what will the ombudsman bring to FCPS parents, students, teachers and faculty and staff?

"It's important that people understand just what an ombudsman is, and what an ombudsman can and cannot do. In our first encounter with anyone who contacts us, we will first listen carefully and respectfully to their issues, and then make clear what the strengths and the limitations of our office are. In any case, we will always seek to provide information, resources and options," he said.

The International Ombudsman Association lists four key elements in its Standards of Practice: independence, neutrality and impartiality, confidentiality, and informality.

As applied to the new FCPS office, Peri says those four principles mean that his office is a safe place to bring concerns, complaints or issues that will remain as confidential as the parent or student wish them to be.

Unless failure to disclose information could pose an imminent risk or danger to students or others, "we will only share information with the permission of those who ask for our assistance," Peri said. "And no topic is off the table."

The ombudsman does want to make clear that his office does not have the power to make appeal decisions, change policies or take specific actions on behalf of families or students. "We can't do those things or directly advise, but we can help both navigate the system and connect them with the right people. Our goal is to educate and help people find options and make decisions being well-informed."

The office will analyse trends to assist the FCPS in developing future strategies and improve systems and communications, But Peri is adamant that nothing about the Ombudsman's Office is to be a "blame game," but to work in tandem with all involved to secure the best, most positive outcomes. Of course, Peri added, "If we recognize problems through our work, we will help address them, but our number one priority is really to give parents the knowledge to be confidently active in their kids' education."

PERI'S OFFICE is prepared to help with whatever parents or students need. "It doesn't have to be a major issue. Sometimes parents just need help with a form, or information about resources for their children. We are here to help with things like that, as well."

Peri will be assisted by administrative assistant Carla Dallas, who also brings years of FCPS experience to the new venture, including a tenure in the Superintendent's Office.

To get better acquainted with the ombudsman and learn more about the Office of the Family and Student, check out Peri's "Meet the Ombudsman" YouTube video and visit the website at www.fcps.edu/ombudsman. Recah Peri Dallas at 571-423-4014.

Girls on the Run Gains Two New Board Members

Girls on the Run of NOVA has two new members on its board of directors: Chris Holland and Christine Klein.

"Chris and Christine have greatly supported our organization in a number of ways prior to their appointments to our board. They bring experience, expertise and new energy to the table. We are excited to continue to work with them in this new role as we work to inspire every girl across the Northern Virginia region to be strong and confident," said Katey Comerford, GOTR NOVA's executive director.

Klein is currently senior vice president, meetings and business partnerships at the National Defense Industrial Association. She is a past coach for Girls on the Run and currently serves at the chair of Strong Girls Celebration for GOTR NOVA. "The opportunity to be involved and contribute to an organization that promotes a healthy lifestyle and an environment for girls to be strong and confident is extremely gratifying and a pleasure," said Klein.

Holland comes to GOTR NOVA's board as a service area manager for Wegmans Food Markets at the Chantilly store. He also leads the company's community outreach in the Northern Virginia area. Holland has been an active supporter of GOTR NOVA programming in recent years as someone who believes in giving back to one's greater community. Holland said, "I personally and professionally work hard to help families live healthier, better lives. I am excited about the opportunity to further these efforts through my new role with GOTR NOVA."

GOTR NOVA's Fall 2018 season will begin the week of Sept. 24 with registration now open. For more information about the Fall 2018 registration, visit www.gotrnova.org.

Pouncey Honored As Officer of Month.

By Bonnie Hobbs

APO Ed Pouncey was selected as the Sully District Police Station's Officer of the Month for April. He was honored at a recent meeting of the station's Citizens Advisory Committee.

Pouncey

Writing the letter nominating Pouncey for this award was retired 2nd Lt. Boyd Thompson, currently a logistics technician with the station. He said he chose Pouncey because of his "outstanding and dedicated service to the maintenance of the Sully District Station cruiser fleet, over the past three years."

According to Thompson, Pouncey has "faithfully reported to duty every Monday since his retirement — and then comes in additionally every Tuesday and Wednesday, if needed," to assist him on a variety of tasks that are critical to maintaining the police station's vehicle fleet.

"Ed ensures that cars requiring routine service, or in need of repair, make it to Jermantown Garage," wrote Thompson. "And he stays around throughout the day to ensure that any cruiser that has its service completed is returned to service immediately."

Thompson also noted that, in addition to that task, Pouncey performs several other duties. These include tending to camera- and radio-repair issues, traveling throughout the county to do tasks such as trail-bike maintenance at the Newington Facility, and waiting for job repairs which ensure that cruisers do not have to be placed out of service.

"Ed is also counted on by others at Sully to retrieve items, whether at OSB [the Police Department's Operations Support Bureau] Headquarters or even at the airport," wrote Thompson.

"He also is very active in training and routinely signs up for classes at the Criminal Justice Academy. And he even finds time to volunteer for Police Auxiliary-related training [and handle] volunteer requests, on occasion."

"Without hesitation, Ed's commitment leads to excellent cruiser-fleet readiness, on a day-in, day-out basis," continued Thompson. "And this is key to our station maintaining a fleet of ready cruisers with little or no down time."

His assistance allows me to focus on other critical issues, knowing that our fleet is always in good hands."

Counting Pouncey's Auxiliary time prior to becoming a sworn officer, he was recognized in 2017 as having volunteered more than 5,000 hours.

So, wrote Thompson, "It is an honor and a privilege to recognize APO Ed Pouncey for his commitment as the Officer of the Month for April 2018."

Present and Future Danger

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Having recently been infused three weeks after my last treatment, no guarantee given certain lab results, I am now on track to have one more infusion before my Sept. 26 CT scan. The plan is, per my "Progressing But So Am I" column (8/15/18), to triple the amount of medicine I will have received before my next scan. This will compare quite favorably to the one infusion I received prior to my July 25 scan.

Moreover, as I've considered the previous quarter's infusion schedule trying to understand possible reasons for the 10-percent-ish tumor growth which occurred, I've come up with a hopefully plausible explanation. Other than that's what cancer so often does, that is.

As my previous years of scans continued to show "stable," my oncologist and I kept increasing the interval between infusions trying to strike a balance between treating the cause and me living with the effect. Over these years, we've gradually extended those infusion intervals from every three weeks, to every four, to five, to six and most recently to seven-week intervals, all the while maintaining my quarterly CT schedule.

Apparently, we've now struck out, so to speak and for the moment at least, we're in sort of a limbo. (Hopefully the bar isn't set so incredibly low that we can't slide under it.)

As for minimizing the growth, could the solution be as simple as more medicine?

As to what my oncologist thinks of this assessment, I've not mentioned to him as I've only recently theorized it (maybe he knew already and that's what contributed to his suggestion that we follow this course of treatment/action).

We did discuss changing medicines, but he was afraid of the side effects it might cause. We also discussed if he'd had other patients who had experienced tumor growth after a period of stability — like me, who after increasing the frequency of the previously stabilizing drug showed stable once again. He said he had — so, rather than presume all is lost, we've agreed to go forward into the great semi unknown. An "unknown" that will likely end in late September when my next scan's results will be reported.

Now that you know the foundation for this column, let me address the substance behind it. There is a scenario which worries me. It's premature I grant you, but it's difficult to play dumb all the time, especially when it involves cancer/your life.

Still, if I've learned anything from my oncologist, it is that discussing scenarios before the evidence is confirmed is a bit of a fool's errand, so waiting until the actual results are in is better. More accurate anyway.

Despite what I've been told, this patient might not be able to be so patient. Ergo: What if my late September scan shows growth — again? What if, even after tripling the amount of medicine I infuse, the tumors grow, maybe even grow more significantly than ever before?

I'd have to say that development would be a problem and a bit more disappointing than July's scan results. If that result in fact occurs, would that square me at a crossroads? I would think. Would that result obliterate the false sense of security I may have had? Hardly. Cancer patients don't have a sense of security, false or otherwise. We have a sense of inevitability.

Somehow, over the next month, I must find a path forward through this cycle of potentially impending gloom. Right now, nothing has happened. Right now, nothing has been determined. I don't feel any different than before and I don't believe I have any of the symptoms my oncologist has advised me about. I still have an appetite and I'm certainly not losing any weight.

I expect to have one more infusion before this next scan, and to feel the usual post-chemotherapy side effects that I do and then recover and feel as I do today: pretty well. One month, exactly, from the date I'm writing this column, to the date of my next scan and hopefully just a few days later for the results.

What worries me most is, sometimes the human body has a mind of its own, and despite the best of intentions and treatment, it is, to quote my late mother, "Enough already."

Teen Sex Trafficking Hits Close to Home

How vulnerable teens are targeted.

BY WALLICIA GILL
AND BRAD SWANSON

This article first appeared in The Blue View www.blueview.org. It has been slightly edited.

Local experts say that Northern Virginia is a teen sex trafficking hotspot, but most people know very little about this growing crime. A better understanding among the public will help to combat the problem, agree both police and victims advocates

MORE THAN 100 LOCAL VICTIMS A YEAR

According to law enforcement records compiled by the Northern Virginia Human Trafficking Task Force, approximately 500 sex trafficking victims were “identified” – brought to the attention of law enforcement – in northern Virginia in the 4-year period from January 2013 to February 2017. That averages to about 125 sex trafficking victims identified in the area per year. Experts believe that only a small minority of trafficking victims are brought to light, but they don’t have good insight into what the fraction really is. The trend in identifying victims in the region is upward, and experts believe the practice is growing, but some part of the increase may also come from more awareness and better discovery. Of the approximately 140 sex trafficking victims identified in the year from January 2016 to February 2017, the latest data available, most were female, but a significant minority were not. Experts say boys and young men, especially from the LGBTQ community, are as vulnerable to trafficker recruiting as girls and young women – and less likely to come forward. The average age of sex trafficking victims in the USA is 12-to-15 years, but in this area the average appears to be somewhat higher, 15-18. Consequently, only about a third of the total identified last year were technically juveniles, but the average age of the “adult” victims is not available. The ethnic backgrounds of sex trafficked women typically mirror that of the region, and this appears to be the case for this area as well. In broad socioeconomic terms, girls in poverty, dysfunctional families and neighborhoods with more crime appear more susceptible to becoming trafficking victims, although high income and stable family life are no barrier.

“Any victim I have personally met from Northern Virginia is upper income demographic,” said Teresa Hartnett, coordinator of the Trafficking Task Force, which brings together law enforcement agencies, government agencies and nongovernmental organizations in the fight against trafficking. Vulnerability is the key to understanding why girls and young women get trapped into sex trafficking, according to Kay Duffield, who serves both as co-chair of the Victims’ Services Committee of the Trafficking Task Force and executive director of the non-profit Northern Virginia Human Trafficking Initiative. Girls are not kidnapped off the street and bound in chains. The typical pattern is for a girl who is lonely, unhappy, rebellious, adventurous, or some combination, to meet a trafficker, who poses as a friend and over time gains influence through empathy, attention and acceptance. The initial meetings typically happen online or in shopping malls or other public places. The trafficker is patient, waiting for the payoff from a successful recruitment. After winning a girl’s trust, a typical tactic is for the trafficker to break her will by raping her, or staging a gang rape, sometimes filming the episode for blackmail, according to Hartnett. Drugs are another method of control. Also common is threatening harm to family members if the victim comes forward. But some victims are ensnared by emotional dependence, or fear, without strong-arm tactics being necessary. Often the victim keeps up a show of normality — going to school, spending time with her family — while she is being subjected in her unsupervised time to involuntary sex. The average period of being trafficked, is difficult to determine. In some cases, after a few instances, the victim is deemed unsuitable, or the trafficker is caught, or moves on. But in other cases trafficking is a one-way journey and its victims are unable to return.

FORTY PERCENT OF VICTIMS RETURN TO TRAFFICKING

Of the approximately 500 northern Virginia victims identified by police in 2013-17, only about 300 were “recovered” — removed from the trade, reunited with families, or sent to live elsewhere. In other words, this data shows that 40 percent of those identified slipped back into sex trafficking.

The reasons differ in each case, but are often tied to the same factors that led to vulnerability in the first place. Being returned to live in a dysfunctional family and neighborhood doesn’t strengthen a girl’s will to resist the false affection and security of an experienced trafficker. The experience of being trafficked can destroy a young woman or teen’s self-esteem and dignity and skew her ability to function.

“Starting over is very hard,” said Hartnett. “It can get overwhelming, and some survivors lose hope. If they lose momentum going forward, they slip backwards into what’s familiar — and what they have come to think they deserve.” Trafficking victims who are able to recover often take many months or years of counseling and emotional support to regain their autonomy and self-confidence. Traffickers typically are not solo operators but rather are linked and have specialized functions, similar to street level drug distribution, according to Hartnett. Some are adept at recruiting, and then passing the victims to pimps who control one or two victims at a time. But not all trafficking is low-level. Networks operate across state lines moving victims both to take advantage of high demand in a different area and to isolate the victims from potential sources of help.

Gang-led trafficking varies in intensity across the country. In northern Virginia, gangs typically do not practice trafficking as an organized activity although some gang members traffick as individuals, says Duffield.

Not all trafficking is done by third parties. Family members, including drug-addicted parents, sometimes sell their own children to traffickers.

Recent Cases

❖ A Washington, D.C. man was sentenced on Aug. 17, 2018 to 18 years in prison for forcibly sex trafficking a minor.

According to court documents from Eastern District of Virginia, Justin Shayne Robinson, 27, lured the 16-year-old victim to a motel in northern Virginia. Once the minor victim arrived, Robinson directed sexualized photos to be taken of her, and created and posted online advertisements for commercial sex acts with the minor. Robinson and his co-conspirator, Markus Jakeem Plummer, 27, of Woodbridge, then trafficked the minor over a period of roughly a week. Robinson and Plummer took all the proceeds of the minor’s commercial sex acts for their own benefit. Robinson and Plummer used force and surveillance to ensure that the minor continued to see clients and was unable to escape the motel. Robinson used violence to force the victim to continue working for him, including choking her and leaving medically documented bruising on her leg and neck. Co-Conspirator Markus Plummer is scheduled for sentencing on Sept. 28.

❖ On July 20, 2018, a Virginia man was sentenced to 186 months in prison and 10 years of supervised release for multiple crimes related to the prostitution and exploitation of a 15-year-old minor. Abdul Karim Bangura Jr. aka “AJ”, 22, of Triangle, Va. pleaded guilty in August 2017 to all counts of an indictment charging him with sex trafficking of a minor, conspiracy to engage in sex trafficking of a minor, interstate transportation of a minor for the purposes of prostitution, and production of child pornography.

According to admissions made in connection with his plea in the Eastern District of Virginia, Bangura and his co-defendant Christian Hood conspired to recruit a 15-year-old girl to work as a prostitute and to advertise her prostitution services on backpage.com. Bangura also transported the minor to hotels in Virginia, Maryland, and Washington, D.C. for prostitution dates, and he took a portion of the money she made from commercial sex customers. Bangura also used a phone to record a video of himself having sex with the minor. In August 2017, a year ago, Hood was convicted at trial of sex trafficking and conspiracy to engage in sex trafficking of this same minor.

These unrelated cases were brought as part of Project Safe Childhood, a nationwide initiative launched in May 2006 by the Department of Justice to combat the growing epidemic of child sexual exploitation and abuse.

GROWING PROBLEM IN NORTHERN VIRGINIA

From anecdotal evidence, sex trafficking appears to be growing in the region, say experts. They point to two factors. First, the typical buyer of teenaged sex is married, male, with children, and money to spend. That’s a common profile in affluent northern Virginia. Forced sex is sold in a market, and responds to buying pressure like any other. “We need to do something on the demand side,” said Duffield. “Traffickers are going to create that product until demand is gone.”

The second factor explains why areas like Springfield, Dumfries and Tysons are trafficking hotspots: trafficking follows the highways. Traffickers, whether local or interstate, like mobility and the anonymity of travel nodes, as do buyers. Converging highways make for easy contact, fast access to motels, and quick exits. The tangle of major roads in northern Virginia draws in sex trafficking like a neon sign. If someone knows a victim of trafficking, call the National Human Trafficking Hotline at 1-888-373 7888. If danger is imminent, call 911.

New Law To Keep Traffickers in Jail

On June 25, 2018, Gov. Ralph Northam signed human trafficking legislation that adds offenses related to human trafficking to the list of crimes for which bail can be denied, keeping traffickers in jail and better protecting trafficking victims. Locally, Kathleen Murphy (D-34) and Kathy Tran (D-42) were cosponsors.

“Human trafficking is a threat to public safety here in Virginia and across the United States,” said Northam. “This legislation will help us prevent these crimes by making it more difficult for human traffickers to post bail and leave jail to intimidate witnesses or continue their criminal activity.”

“Human trafficking is a dehumanizing crime that robs its victims of their dignity, their identity, and their freedom,” said Attorney General Mark Herring.

While prosecuting traffickers, local law enforcement found that traffickers would pay their own bail and bail out their victims continuing the cycle of abuse and trafficking. This legislation will keep traffickers in jail.

This legislation adds the following offenses that are attributable to human trafficking to the list of crimes for which there is a rebuttable presumption against admission to bail: Taking or detaining a person for the purposes of prostitution or unlawful sexual intercourse; receiving money from procuring or placing a person in a house of prostitution or forced labor; receiving money from the earnings of a prostitute, and commercial sex trafficking, where the alleged victim is a family or household member.
