Fairfax Teen Honors Navajo Code Talkers

Young Marine SgtMaj Lauren Loria, national Young Marine of the year, 17, of Fairfax, performed a wreath laying ceremony in Window Rock, Ariz. to honor WWII heroes – The Navajo Code Talkers.

More than 100 Young Marines from across the country traveled to Window Rock for the annual National Navajo Code Talkers Day on Tuesday, Aug. 14, 2018. The event recognizes the Navajo men who joined the U.S. Marine Corps during World War II as communication specialists and developed an unbreakable code using their native language.

Members of the Young Marines, a national youth organization, began attending Navajo Code Talkers Day in 2006. To date, more than 1,500 Young Marines have experienced the event. The Young Marines are asked to share their experience with their history classes, which means that thousands of kids who might not have otherwise known about the Code Talkers will be touched by their participation.

“The Young Marines have become important participants in this special day,” said Brenda McNulty, Young Marines’ organizer of the event. “The Navajo veterans are more than just WWII heroes. They are dear friends to the Young Marines. Our partnership with the Code Talkers and their descendants has strengthened year after year.”

While onsite for three days, the Young Marines did community service by cleaning and weeding the Navajo Nation Zoo, and cleaning graffiti off the red rocks on Window Rock peak. On Navajo Code Talkers Day, the Young Marines escort the Navajo veterans, march in the parade, and perform a wreath laying ceremony.

SCHOOL NOTES

Area Schools Honored as Unified Champion Schools

For their commitment to inclusion, four Fairfax County public schools have been named Unified Champion Schools by Special Olympics International. Students and staff members were praised for working to make their communities more inclusive of individuals with intellectual disabilities. FCPS’ Unified Champion Schools are Bush Hill Elementary School, Frost Middle School, Lee High School, and Robinson Secondary School. Only six schools in Virginia were named Unified Champion Schools.

“Your school community has shown impressive determination and is helping us move towards our collective goal of creating a truly ‘Unified Generation’ of young people who embrace differences and lead social change,” said Special Olympics International chairman Timothy Shriver and regional president and managing director Marc Edenzon. “You are literally redefining the future as you make your communities more inclusive of people with intellectual disabilities, and in doing so, making the world a more accepting place for all.”

A Special Olympics Unified Champion School has an inclusive school climate and exudes a sense of collaboration, engagement, and respect for all members of the student body and staff. Schools demonstrate their commitment to inclusion by meeting ten standards of excellence. The primary activities within these standards include: Special Olympics Unified Sports (where students with and without disabilities train and compete as teammates), Inclusive Youth Leadership, and Whole-School Engagement.

Teen Sex Trafficking Hits Close to Home

How vulnerable teens are targeted.

BY WALLICIA GILL
AND BRAD SWANSON

This article first appeared in The Blue View www.blueview.org. It has been slightly edited.

Kay Duffield

Teresa Hartnett

Local experts say that Northern Virginia is a teen sex trafficking hotspot, but most people know very little about this growing crime. A better understanding among the public will help to combat the problem, agree both police and victims advocates.

MORE THAN 100 LOCAL VICTIMS A YEAR

According to law enforcement records compiled by the Northern Virginia Human Trafficking Task Force, approximately 500 sex trafficking victims were “identified” – brought to the attention of law enforcement – in northern Virginia in the 4-year period from January 2013 to February 2017.

That averages to about 125 sex trafficking victims identified in the area per year. Experts believe that only a small minority of trafficking victims are brought to light, but they don’t have good insight into what the fraction really is. The trend in identifying victims in the region is upward, and experts believe the practice is growing, but some part of the increase may also come from more awareness and better discovery.

Of the approximately 140 sex trafficking victims identified in the year from January 2016 to February 2017, the latest data available, most were female, but a significant minority were not. Experts say boys and young men, especially from the LGBTQ community, are as vulnerable to trafficker recruiting as girls and young women – and less likely to come forward.

The average age of sex trafficking victims in the USA is 12-to-15 years, but in this area the average appears to be somewhat higher, 15-18. Consequently, only about a third of the total identified last year were technically juveniles, but the average age of the “adult” victims is not available.

The ethnic backgrounds of sex trafficked women typically mirror that of the region, and this appears to be the case for this area as well. In broad socioeconomic terms, girls in poverty, dysfunctional families and neighborhoods with more crime appear more susceptible to becoming trafficking victims, although high income and stable family life are no barrier.

“Any victim I have personally met from Northern Virginia is upper income demographic,” said Teresa Hartnett, coordinator of the Trafficking Task Force, which brings together law enforcement agencies, government agencies and nongovernmental organizations in the fight against trafficking.

Vulnerability is the key to understanding why girls and young women get trapped into sex trafficking, according to Kay Duffield, who serves both as co-chair of the Victims’ Services Committee of the Trafficking Task Force and executive director of the non-profit Northern Virginia Human Trafficking Initiative. Girls are not kidnapped off the street and bound in chains. The typical pattern is for a girl who is lonely, unhappy, rebellious, adventurous, or some combination, to meet a trafficker, who poses as a friend and over time gains influence through empathy, attention and acceptance. The initial meetings typically happen online or in shopping malls or other public places. The trafficker is patient, waiting for the payoff from a successful recruitment.

After winning a girl’s trust, a typical tactic is for the trafficker to break her will by raping her, or staging a gang rape, sometimes filming the episode for blackmail, according to Hartnett. Drugs are another method of control. Also common is threatening harm to family members if the victim comes forward. But some victims are ensnared by emotional dependence, or fear, without strong-arm tactics being necessary. Often the victim keeps up a show of normality — going to school, spending time with her family — while she is being subjected in her unsupervised time to involuntary sex.

The average period of being trafficked, is difficult to determine. In some cases, after a few instances, the victim is deemed unsuitable, or the trafficker is caught, or moves on. But in other cases trafficking is a one-way journey and its victims are unable to return.

FORTY PERCENT OF VICTIMS RETURN TO TRAFFICKING

Of the approximately 500 northern Virginia victims identified by police in 2013-17, only about 300 were “recovered” — removed from the trade, reunited with families, or sent to live elsewhere. In other words, this data shows that 40 percent of those identified slipped back into sex trafficking.

The reasons differ in each case, but are often tied to the same factors that led to vulnerability in the first place. Being returned to live in a dysfunctional family and neighborhood doesn’t strengthen a girl’s will to resist the false affection and security of an experienced trafficker.

The experience of being trafficked can destroy a young woman or teen’s self-esteem and dignity and skew her ability to function.

“Starting over is very hard,” said Hartnett. “It can get overwhelming, and some survivors lose hope. If they lose momentum going forward, they slip backwards into what’s familiar — and what they have come to think they deserve.”

Trafficking victims who are able to recover often take many months or years of counseling and emotional support to regain their autonomy and self-confidence.

Traffickers typically are not solo operators but rather are linked and have specialized functions, similar to street level drug distribution, according to Hartnett. Some are adept at recruiting, and then passing the victims to pimps who control one or two victims at a time. But not all trafficking is low-level. Networks operate across state lines moving victims both to take advantage of high demand in a different area and to isolate the victims from potential sources of help.

Gang-led trafficking varies in intensity across the country. In northern Virginia, gangs typically do not practice trafficking as an organized activity although some gang members traffic as individuals, says Duffield.

Not all trafficking is done by third parties. Family members, including drug-addicted parents, sometimes sell their own children to traffickers.

GROWING PROBLEM IN NORTHERN VIRGINIA

From anecdotal evidence, sex trafficking appears to be growing in the region, say experts. They point to two factors. First, the typical buyer of teenaged sex is married, male, with children, and money to spend. That’s a common profile in affluent northern Virginia.

Forced sex is sold in a market, and responds to buying pressure like any other.

“We need to do something on the demand side,” said Duffield. “Traffickers are going to create that product until demand is gone.”

The second factor explains why areas like Springfield, Dumfries and Tysons are trafficking hotspots: trafficking follows the highways. Traffickers, whether local or interstate, like mobility and the anonymity of travel nodes, as do buyers. Converging highways make for easy contact, fast access to motels, and quick exits. The tangle of major roads in northern Virginia draws in sex trafficking like a neon sign.

If someone knows a victim of trafficking, call the National Human Trafficking Hotline at 1-888-373 7888. If danger is imminent, call 911.

New Law To Keep Traffickers in Jail

On June 25, 2018, Gov. Ralph Northam signed human trafficking legislation that adds offenses related to human trafficking to the list of crimes for which bail can be denied, keeping traffickers in jail and better protecting trafficking victims. Locally, Kathleen Murphy (D-34) and Kathy Tran (D-42) were cosponsors.

“Human trafficking is a threat to public safety here in Virginia and across the United States,” said Northam. “This legislation will help us prevent these crimes by making it more difficult for human traffickers to post bail and leave jail to intimidate witnesses or continue their criminal activity.”

“Human trafficking is a dehumanizing crime that robs its victims of their dignity, their identity, and their freedom,” said Attorney General Mark Herring.

While prosecuting traffickers, local law enforcement found that traffickers would pay their own bail and bail out their victims continuing the cycle of abuse and trafficking. This legislation will keep traffickers in jail.

This legislation adds the following offenses that are attributable to human trafficking to the list of crimes for which there is a rebuttable presumption against admission to bail: Taking or detaining a person for the purposes of prostitution or unlawful sexual intercourse; receiving money from procuring or placing a person in a house of prostitution or forced labor, receiving money from the earnings of a prostitute, and commercial sex trafficking, where the alleged victim is a family or household member.

Recent Cases

❖ A Washington, D.C. man was sentenced on Aug. 17, 2018 to 18 years in prison for forcibly sex trafficking a minor.

According to court documents from Eastern District of Virginia, Justin Shayne Robinson, 27, lured the 16-year-old victim to a motel in northern Virginia. Once the minor victim arrived, Robinson directed sexualized photos to be taken of her, and created and posted online advertisements for commercial sex acts with the minor. Robinson and his co-conspirator, Markus Jakeem Plummer, 27, of Woodbridge, then trafficked the minor over a period of roughly a week. Robinson and Plummer took all the proceeds of the minor’s commercial sex acts for their own benefit. Robinson and Plummer used force and surveillance to ensure that the minor continued to see clients and was unable to escape the motel. Robinson used violence to force the victim to continue working for him, including choking her and leaving medically documented bruising on her leg and neck. Co-Conspirator Markus Plummer is scheduled for sentencing on Sept. 28.

❖ On July 20, 2018, a Virginia man was sentenced to 186 months in prison and 10 years of supervised release for multiple crimes related to the prostitution and exploitation of a 15-year-old minor. Abdul Karim Bangura Jr. aka “AJ”, 22, of Triangle, Va. pleaded guilty in August 2017 to all counts of an indictment charging him with sex trafficking of a minor, conspiracy to engage in sex trafficking of a minor, interstate transportation of a minor for the purposes of prostitution, and production of child pornography.

According to admissions made in connection with his plea in the Eastern District of Virginia, Bangura and his co-defendant Christian Hood conspired to recruit a 15-year-old girl to work as a prostitute and to advertise her prostitution services on Backpage.com. Bangura also transported the minor to hotels in Virginia, Maryland, and Washington, D.C. for prostitution dates, and he took a portion of the money she made from commercial sex customers. Bangura also used a phone to record a video of himself having sex with the minor. In August 2017, a year ago, Hood was convicted at trial of sex trafficking and conspiracy to engage in sex trafficking of this same minor.

These unrelated cases were brought as part of Project Safe Childhood, a nationwide initiative launched in May 2006 by the Department of Justice to combat the growing epidemic of child sexual exploitation and abuse.

OPINION

America Needs Unions

BY DAVID BRODER
PRESIDENT,
SEIU VIRGINIA 512

Broder

This Labor Day, while some of us attend barbecues or spend quality time with our families, millions of Americans will go to work.

Americans are now working longer hours for lower wages. Despite an increase in our educational attainment, fewer of us have paid sick days, parental leave or employer-based healthcare. Even fewer of us have retirements we can count on.

Unions are a solution to our broken economy. Working people who form unions with their co-workers earn higher wages, have better health care, have more secure retirements, and are safer on the job.

The statistics are overwhelming. Working people in unions earn 30 percent more than their non-union counterparts, and are nearly five times more likely to have a guaranteed pension.

Women workers who are union members earn nearly $9,000 a year more than their non-union counterparts. For African-American workers, the union differential is also about $9,000, and for Latino workers the yearly advantage is more than $11,000.

Unions have made all the difference in my family's life.

I'm the great-grandson of eastern European Jewish immigrants, who fled anti-Semitic violence, and came to this country with nothing. Thanks to my grandparents' union, my father was able to go to college. Thanks to my mother's teachers union (in which she was a powerful leader), our family never had to choose between seeing a doctor and putting food on the table, and my parents can now retire and live with dignity.

It's no wonder that more people are speaking out, organizing and voting for the rights to form a union.

Across the country, in deeply-conservative states like Oklahoma and West Virginia, union teachers and community allies have successfully mobilized for improvements to our education system, teacher pay and workers' rights.

Here in Virginia in 2016, a bipartisan majority of voters rejected the anti-worker constitutional amendment known as "right to work," while last month, voters in Missouri rejected the state's right-to-work law by a 2:1 margin.

Across the country, 61 percent of Americans support unions, according to a recent Gallup Poll. Young workers are even more supportive, and are joining unions in record numbers, in order to fix a broken economy.

When workers join together to form unions, we all benefit.

Strong unions raise wages, improve health care, and expand retirement security for all workers, union and non-union. Unions have played important roles in the civil rights movement and women's rights movement, and continue today to fight for racial, immigrant and environmental justice.

Here in Northern Virginia, unions have helped lead fights to raise wages, increase mental health funding, create jobs, and ensure health care for up to 400,000 people through Medicaid Expansion.

So, this Labor Day, whether you're enjoying a burger with family and friends or you're hard at work at your job (or maybe your second or third job), I invite you to join us.

Let us all unite together on our jobs, in our communities, and at the polls this November, to demand a better economic future for all people!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Time to Fix Rigged Voting Districts

To the Editor:

Our society doesn't allow citizens to choose juries for their own court cases, or scientists to pick their own peer-review committees, and we shouldn't let legislators cherry-pick their own voters. Letting legislators draw their own voting districts is a serious fox-guarding-the-henhouse problem because possibly as much as party politics, personal career interests drive legislators to lock in their seats by gerrymandering.

To correct racial gerrymandering in our House of Delegates voting districts, Governor Northam has called a special session of the Virginia legislature. But Virginia legislators have a poor track record for correcting gerrymandered voting maps. In 2015, a federal court had to appoint a special master to remedy a similar situation because our legislators couldn't adequately resolve it.

Now, in 2018, the Governor should reach across party lines to endorse Senator Emmett Hanger's proposed redistricting commission. This independent, bi-partisan commission would have less interest in rigging elections for our legislators and more interest in bringing Virginia's voting districts into compliance with the Voting Rights Act. It would also provide a pilot study in preparation for permanent reforms to Virginia's redistricting process needed for 2021, when all voting districts will be redrawn using data from the 2020 U.S. census.

Defending and appealing multiple racial and political gerrymandering court cases continues to cost Virginians millions in tax dollars, and we're still left with rigged voting districts. It's time to find a better solution to the old fox/hen house problem.

Majority Wants a Secure Border

To the Editor:

It's the cliched language which grates: "breaking up families," "shocked the conscience," "from their mothers' arms" ("Isolating the Children," Connection, Aug. 22-28). Not one to pass up an opportunity to make political capital instead of offering practical solutions, Del. Ken Plum (D-36) inveighs against separation from their presumed parents of children entering the United States illegally. The sincerity here is a tad suspect since we recall nothing of this censure when separation was practiced, to a degree, by the previous administration. I suspect the vast majority of illegal immigrants know that their entry is illegal.

Unfortunate as they are, children who have made it here across considerable land expanse under uncomfortable conditions can probably tolerate clean beds, tasty meals, TV, and recreational facilities while their illegal parents are being detained. It is incontestable that the vast majority of Americans want a secure border. Del. Plum offers no solutions to an insecure-border problem. Practical suggestions in place of overwrought language would be welcome.

Oft-stated administration policy is controlled legal immigration. What otherwise: open borders, abolition of ICE?

FCEDA President/CEO Gerald Gordon to Retire

Gordon will take university post in South Carolina, depart at end of 2018.

Gerald L. Gordon, Ph.D., whose work as leader of the Fairfax County Economic Development Authority to build and diversify the county's business community and economy helped to lead its transformation into a top business location, announced Monday, Aug. 27 that he will retire at the end of this calendar year. Gordon lives in Burke.

Starting in January, Gordon will serve as a fellow in the College of Charleston's Joseph P. Riley Center for Livable Communities, where he will be working with faculty, staff and students to support the economic and cultural vibrancy of the City of Charleston, S.C. He also will teach in the college's Master of Public Administration program. Additionally, Gordon will be consulting with institutions in northern Virginia and will serve on a local board.

Gordon has been with the FCEDA since 1983 and has led it since 1987, during which time office space in Fairfax County grew from 32 million square feet to more than 117 million, making it the second-largest suburban office market in the nation. Fairfax County is home to 10 Fortune 500 headquarters, and also many top companies in a broad set of industry sectors, including information technology, aerospace and defense, cybersecurity, data analytics, financial services and personalized medicine.

At the same time, jobs in the county grew from 243,000 to more than 600,000. As a result, the real estate tax rate has decreased from $1.47 to $1.15.

The FCEDA is led by a seven-member Commission (board) appointed by the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors. Fairfax County Board Chairman Sharon Bulova and FCEDA Chairwoman Catherine Lange congratulated Gordon for his work on behalf of the county.

"Throughout the past 30 years Jerry Gordon has been on the leading edge for moving Fairfax County into the world-class business location it is today," Bulova said. "No one is a fiercer advocate for Fairfax County and I will personally miss working with him."

Gerald Gordon

"Throughout the past 30 years Jerry Gordon has been on the leading edge for moving Fairfax County into the world-class business location it is today."

— Sharon Bulova, Fairfax County Board Chairman

Gordon holds a bachelor's degree from The Citadel, a master's degree from The George Washington University, and a doctorate in international economics from The Catholic University of America. He is the author of 13 books on strategic planning and economic development. His most recent book is "Understanding Community Economic Growth and Decline: Strategies for Sustainable Development" (Routledge Press, 2018).

In the last decade Gordon has chaired the boards of the Fairfax Symphony Orchestra, the Arts Council of Fairfax County, the Board of Governors of the Tower Club, the Foundation for Fairfax County Public Schools and the George Mason University Honors College. He also has served on the board of the International Economic Development Council, of which he is a Fellow Member and Honorary Life Member.

The FCEDA Commission will lead a search for Gordon's successor.

Labor Day Car Show in Fairfax.

 THE CONNECTION

Labor Day is the time for one, last fling before summer ends – and in the City of Fairfax, that means the 19th annual Clifton Lions Club car show. Jointly sponsored by the City and the Club, it's set for Monday, Sept. 3, from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Vehicles galore will line University Drive between Armstrong Street and Sager Avenue and will also be displayed in the SunTrust Bank parking lot at 4020 University Drive. (From 6 a.m.-4 p.m., University Drive in that area will be closed to traffic).

The show features nearly every kind of vehicle imaginable, including antique cars from the 1920s and '30s, classic and custom cars, hot rods from the 1940s and '50s, muscle cars like Corvettes and Mustangs, foreign cars such as Bentleys, and even trucks and motorcycles.

"We expect at least 315 cars and we're hoping for 400," said event organizer Jim Chesley, of the Clifton Lions Club. "It all depends on the weather; however, it is rain or shine."

More than 6,000 people attended last year's event, and the festivities include food, music by deejay Gary Aspesi, vendor booths and raffles. Most of all, though, the car show raises money for two, worthy causes. Entry and parking are free, but tax-deductible donations are accepted – with proceeds mainly benefiting the Northern Virginia Therapeutic Riding Program (www.NVTRP.org) and Inova Hospital System's Life with Cancer (www.lifewithcancer.org).

"We give a minimum of $10,000 to each of these charities," said Chesley. But that's not all. Proceeds also benefit several local charities – the Fairfax County Police Family Trust Fund for survivors of officers killed in the line of duty, plus American Legion Post 177 of Fairfax, The Lamb Center, Fairfax Fire Station 3, Kena Shriners, Masonic Acacia Lodge of Clifton, and City of Fairfax Police.

"We typically give each of these groups $500," said Chesley. "It's really phenomenal. To date, we've raised over $400,000 for charity since the show's inception in 2000. Everything we've raised has gone back to the community, except for the year we gave $30,000 to the Hurricane Katrina victims."

He said 100 percent of the event's earnings go directly to the charities. "There are no administrative costs – we're all volunteers," said Chesley.

Even the proceeds from the Clifton Lions Club food sales that day go to the many charities the club supports. Volunteers will also collect donations at Sager Avenue and University Drive and at University Drive and Armstrong Street.

"Cars have been one of my passions for 60 years – even as a little kid," said Chesley. "I always enjoyed rebuilding them and going to shows. People appreciate beautiful cars, and so if I can use my passion to make money for people who need it, there's nothing better."

People may register vehicles for the show at www.labordaycarshow.org or at Fire Station 3 at 4081 University Drive, the day of the event, from 6 a.m.-noon. Coffee and doughnuts, plus information about the two main charities, will be available at the registration desk.

New ALDI Opens in Fair Lakes Shopping Center

Customers and staff celebrate grand opening.

BY CARLYN KRANKING
THE CONNECTION

Not long after sunrise, more than 100 customers lined up outside the new ALDI at the Fair Lakes Shopping Center on Thursday, Aug. 23. It was the store's grand opening, and in addition to celebrating with a ribbon-cutting ceremony, the first 100 attendees received gift cards and hoped to be the lucky few who earned $100 "Golden Tickets."

Among these early risers was Ashley Kirchmyer, a loyal ALDI customer who lives just down the street from the new store. She said she appreciates the convenience of having an ALDI so near to her home.

"Having something so close allows me to get the food I need for my family before work even starts," Kirchmyer said.

This store is ALDI's seventh location in Fairfax County and is part of a $3.4 billion investment to reach 2,500 stores across the country by 2022. It's the second store in Fairfax for ALDI District Manager Kendra Bitner, who said she is excited about every new store.

"I enjoy working for a company that has the best interest of the customer in mind," Bitner said. "I feel like we're really here to make people's lives easier. I get a lot of customers that really are thankful for what ALDI can provide to them and their family, which is definitely rewarding."

ALDI seeks to provide customers with high-quality products for low prices. In addition to saving money, ALDI aims to save customers time with its limited product range and simple store layout that Bitner said "guides the customer through the store."

As a result, customers demonstrate loyalty to ALDI. Besides getting up early to go to the grand opening, Fairfax resident Rita Carroll demonstrated this loyalty by continuing to shop at ALDI even after she moved.

"ALDI is a great store. We used to go to ALDI when we lived in Georgia, and now we go to the one in Chantilly," Carroll said. She reached into her shopping cart and picked up a jar of coconut oil. "I would challenge anyone to be able to find cold pressed coconut oil for $4.99 anywhere in the state of Virginia. Deals like this you can get from ALDI."

Customers lined up outside the new ALDI in preparation for the ribbon-cutting and grand opening.

Remembering the Great War at the Fairfax Museum

BY TERESA CARANDANG

The changes wrought by the First World War on the United States are presented by the traveling National Archive exhibit, “Over Here: Americans at Home in World War I.” The exhibit will be at the Fairfax Museum until the end of September.

When President Woodrow Wilson addressed U.S. Congress to ask them to declare war on Germany, he recognized the “many months of fiery trial and sacrifice ahead of us,” but argued that, “the right is more precious than peace, and we shall fight for the things which we have always carried nearest our hearts — for democracy.”

A few days later, Congress formally declared war on Germany on April 6, 1917. Millions of men were sent to fight the war in Europe, leaving the women to take on the jobs the men left behind. It was at this time Victory Gardens were first introduced. Families were encouraged to grow fruits, vegetables and herbs in their backyards and in parks to increase food production. Liberty bonds were promoted by the Federal Reserve to help finance the war. All these events and more were recorded and are part of the vast collection of the National Archives and Records Administration.

The exhibit includes photographs, posters and film excerpts. The exhibit is divided into three sections: (1) Mobilizing the Nation. This highlights the participation of women who manned the “home front” with most of the men away at war; (2) Stirring Patriotic Passions presents how the government and other patriotic organizations used photographs of events and posters to encourage patriotism and volunteerism; and (3) Policing Enemies at Home which shows anti-German sentiments and striking against those who showed disloyalty.

The Fairfax Museum also has a permanent exhibit on the second floor about the history of Fairfax. This comprehensive exhibit includes more contemporary references including a feature about Kjell N. Lindgren (M.D.), a NASA Astronaut who grew up in Fairfax.

The Fairfax Museum and Visitor Center is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. Originally built as a two-story school house in 1873, it was called the

Alzheimer's Conference to Be Held in Fairfax

The Alzheimer's Foundation of America's (AFA) national Educating America Tour will visit Fairfax on Thursday, Sept. 27, for a free Alzheimer's and caregiver educational conference. The conference is open to family and professional caregivers, individuals living with Alzheimer's disease and the general public, and will be held at the Waterford at Fair Oaks, located at 12025 Lee Jackson Memorial Highway, in Fairfax, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The conference is designed to connect people with information about Alzheimer's disease, brain health, healthy aging and caregiving, as well as to give them a place to have their questions answered. Guests will hear from dementia and caregiving experts who will share their research, services and stories and teach attendees about dementia, practical steps on how to be a better caregiver, and improving quality of life for those with Alzheimer's disease.

"Knowledge is a powerful tool. We want to equip as many people as possible with important information that will help them," said Charles J. Fuschillo, Jr., AFA's president and chief executive officer. "With more than 140,000 people in Virginia living with the disease, and many more serving as caregivers, we aim to help individuals understand Alzheimer's disease and improve their quality of life through education and empowerment."

THE KEYNOTE SPEAKER will be Dr. Peter Davies, director of the Litwin-Zucker Center for Alzheimer's Disease & Memory Disorders at the Feinstein Institute for Medical Research. Davies is also a professor of pathology and neuroscience at the Donald and Barbara Zucker School of Medicine at Hofstra/Norwell. For more than 35 years, Davies' research has been focused on the biochemistry of Alzheimer's disease, with a specific interest in the development of new treatments and diagnostic tests for Alzheimer's disease. He will provide an update on Alzheimer's disease research, its symptoms, and the steps researchers are taking to find a better treatment and cure.

The next session will be a panel discussion on long-term care strategies and options. Learn the different types of care plans available, and their benefits. Find out how to ensure a better quality of life for loved ones by providing dependable and affordable care.

There will also be a discussion in the five pillars of brain health, led by Sarah Lenz Lock, senior vice president of Policy, Research and International for AARP. She is also the executive director of the Global Council on Brain Health. Lock will educate people about how to improve and maintain brain health as they get older while reducing risks.

THE CONFERENCE will conclude with a session on tips to improve a difficult caregiving day. Led by Lindsey Vajpeyi, BA, ADC/MC, director of education and outreach for the Insight Memory Care Center, the session will offer strategies to help caregivers reduce their stress and improve their health, while providing the best possible care for their loved ones.

Free, confidential memory screenings will be conducted throughout the day.

Using the Libraries for Successful School Year

Fairfax County Public Libraries provided a few suggestions for using the libraries to help students succeed this school year.

- ❖ Get support and guidance from library staff. Library staff are trained to help students find legitimate information sources online including historical newspapers, speeches, reference databases, trusted websites and more.

- ❖ Use the library branches to read and study. There are reading nooks, tables and chairs, quiet study rooms and small group study rooms.

- ❖ Take advantage of free online tutoring sessions with a Virginia certified teacher.

- ❖ Free homework help research.fairfaxcounty.gov/c.php?g=758032&p=5455538 is available 24/7 through the library. Among the online resources, there's live homework help with a teacher through Credo Reference, a service for students in grades 3-12.

- ❖ Students can also sign up for GIVE tutoring in multiple branches throughout the academic year.

- ❖ The library also has a variety of Online Resources separately tailored for Grades K-8, and for Grades 9-12.

- ❖ Writing a paper? Check out "Crediting Online Resources" to find the correct way to properly cite your sources.

- ❖ And then there's "Homework Related Websites" categorized by subject.

- ❖ Whether you're studying classics, history or current events, the library has over 2.2 million items in its collection including digital material and print material. Use library resources to prep for fall SATS AND ACTS. Several different online sources offer test preparation for SAT, AP, ACT and SOL exams. Visit Learning Express to get started.

- ❖ Access free Wi-Fi and computers.

Girls on the Run Gains Two New Board Members

Girls on the Run of NOVA has two new members on its board of directors: Chris Holland and Christine Klein.

"Chris and Christine have greatly supported our organization in a number of ways prior to their appointments to our board. They bring experience, expertise and new energy to the table. We are excited to continue to work with them in this new role as we work to inspire every girl across the Northern Virginia region to be strong and confident," said Katey Comerford, GOTR NOVA's executive director.

Klein is currently senior vice president, meetings and business partnerships at the National Defense Industrial Association. She is a past coach for Girls on the Run and currently serves at the chair of Strong Girls Celebration for GOTR NOVA. "The opportunity to be involved and contribute to an organization that promotes a healthy lifestyle and an environment for girls to be strong and confident is extremely gratifying and a pleasure," said Klein.

Holland comes to GOTR NOVA's board as a service area manager for Wegmans Food Markets at the Chantilly store. He also leads the company's community outreach in the Northern Virginia area. Holland has been an active supporter of GOTR NOVA programming in recent years as someone who believes in giving back to one's greater community. Holland said, "I personally and professionally work hard to help families live healthier, better lives. I am excited about the opportunity to further these efforts through my new role with GOTR NOVA."

Car Show

When it comes to food, Lions Club members will be grilling and selling hot dogs and hamburgers, and Rita's Italian Ice will have a table next to them. In addition, restaurants in Old Town Fairfax will be open, and discount coupons for some of them will be available via www.fairfaxva.gov, at the car-show Website, www.labordaycarshow.org, at the information desk at the fire station and in the event program.

They must do so, Sept. 3, to vie for a $100 gift card to that restaurant. Photos must include the names of the restaurant and dish. Fairfax's Economic Development Authority will select the winning photo and post it that week. A flyer with a map of the participating restaurants will be handed out at the car show.

A total of 26 trophies will be awarded, with judging done in front of the fire station. The participants will vote on the top 20 cars, plus Best of Show. There'll also be Mayor's and Lions' Choice trophies, one each for Best Motorcycle and Best Truck and a Buddy Morrisette Memorial Trophy chosen by his family. "Buddy died in December 2016, but he helped me with this show for years," said Chesley. The first 250 show vehicles will also receive dash plaques.

"People put a lot of work into their cars to get them ready to show," explained Chesley. "It takes a great deal of time cleaning, polishing and making them look just perfect. The vehicle owners come from West Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia to show their cars to an appreciative crowd. And as far as I know, this is the only car show on Labor Day within 150 miles."

In addition, attendees may purchase small replicas of the special, NASCAR, Life with Cancer car that raced last year in the Soldier 400 in Dover, Del. Made by Lionel, they'll be for sale for $10 at the registration table.

Pleased to again bring the car show to Fairfax, Chesley said, "From the mayor [David Meyer] down, City of Fairfax staff has bent over backwards to help us out. And that includes former City Councilman Jeff Greenfield, my point of contact in the City."

When the event first began, said Chesley, "It was just 25 cars and probably 25 spectators – just my car buddies. I never in my wildest dreams envisioned that this show would last so long or raise so much money for charity. But we couldn't do it without all the different groups who volunteer to help, like the Shriners, Masons, Clifton Lions and the City of Fairfax."

For show and vendor information contact, contact Chesley at 703-830-2129, go to www.labordaycarshow.org or email jcchesley@aol.com.

"This gives people the chance to see mechanical wonders from their past," he said. "Those in their 50s and 60s see something they either had or wanted to have. We also have new cars, plus exotic cars like Ferraris and PT. Cruisers and other vehicles that people have customized."

Present and Future Danger

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Having recently been infused three weeks after my last treatment, no guarantee given certain lab results, I am now on track to have one more infusion before my Sept. 26 CT scan. The plan is, per my "Progressing But So Am I" column (8/15/18), to triple the amount of medicine I will have received before my next scan. This will compare quite favorably to the one infusion I received prior to my July 25 scan.

Moreover, as I've considered the previous quarter's infusion schedule trying to understand possible reasons for the 10-percent-ish tumor growth which occurred, I've come up with a hopefully plausible explanation. Other than that's what cancer so often does, that is.

As my previous years of scans continued to show "stable," my oncologist and I kept increasing the interval between infusions trying to strike a balance between treating the cause and me living with the effect. Over these years, we've gradually extended those infusion intervals from every three weeks, to every four, to five, to six and most recently to seven-week intervals, all the while maintaining my quarterly CT schedule.

Apparently, we've now struck out, so to speak and for the moment at least, we're in sort of a limbo. (Hopefully the bar isn't set so incredibly low that we can't slide under it.)

As for minimizing the growth, could the solution be as simple as more medicine?

As to what my oncologist thinks of this assessment, I've not mentioned to him as I've only recently theorized it (maybe he knew already and that's what contributed to his suggestion that we follow this course of treatment/action).

We did discuss changing medicines, but he was afraid of the side effects it might cause. We also discussed if he'd had other patients who had experienced tumor growth after a period of stability — like me, who after increasing the frequency of the previously stabilizing drug showed stable once again. He said he had — so, rather than presume all is lost, we've agreed to go forward into the great semi unknown. An "unknown" that will likely end in late September when my next scan's results will be reported.

Now that you know the foundation for this column, let me address the substance behind it. There is a scenario which worries me. It's premature I grant you, but it's difficult to play dumb all the time, especially when it involves cancer/your life.

Still, if I've learned anything from my oncologist, it is that discussing scenarios before the evidence is confirmed is a bit of a fool's errand, so waiting until the actual results are in is better. More accurate anyway.

Despite what I've been told, this patient might not be able to be so patient. Ergo: What if my late September scan shows growth — again? What if, even after tripling the amount of medicine I infuse, the tumors grow, maybe even grow more significantly than ever before?

I'd have to say that development would be a problem and a bit more disappointing than July's scan results. If that result in fact occurs, would that square me at a crossroads? I would think. Would that result obliterate the false sense of security I may have had? Hardly. Cancer patients don't have a sense of security, false or otherwise. We have a sense of inevitability.

Somehow, over the next month, I must find a path forward through this cycle of potentially impending gloom. Right now, nothing has happened. Right now, nothing has been determined. I don't feel any different than before and I don't believe I have any of the symptoms my oncologist has advised me about. I still have an appetite and I'm certainly not losing any weight.

I expect to have one more infusion before this next scan, and to feel the usual post-chemotherapy side effects that I do and then recover and feel as I do today: pretty well. One month, exactly, from the date I'm writing this column, to the date of my next scan and hopefully just a few days later for the results.

What worries me most is, sometimes the human body has a mind of its own, and despite the best of intentions and treatment, it is, to quote my late mother, "Enough already."
