From Amazon to Shutdown

BY ANDREA WORKER
THE CONNECTION

“I’ve been wrong before, so who knows? But I don’t think we will see a government shutdown over this budget and the border wall.”

That was U.S. Sen. Tim Kaine’s opinion at a roundtable discussion with his colleague U.S. Sen. Mark Warner. The event was hosted by the Northern Virginia Chamber of Commerce, held at the Arlington campus of George Mason University, and moderated by NBC4 News Northern Virginia Bureau Chief, Julie Carey.

The question of a possible government shutdown with its disproportionate effect on Northern Virginia was one that the audience of area businesses, nonprofits and local government representatives were anxious to hear.

“There are two bipartisan options on the table for the President to choose from,” added Kaine, and if neither is to his liking, Kaine said that Congress could still move forward and “kick the can” with one or more Continuing Resolutions. “We can write the checks two months at a time.”

Warner agrees, while noting the situation is somewhat better than it has been during past similar circumstances.

“There are seven appropriation bills ready for signing,” he said. “Seventy-five percent of the needs are already funded through the regular rules of order.”

Border security is the last piece, with the president threatening the shutdown if Congress doesn’t provide him with the $5 billion he’s asking to build the border wall. “We’re still waiting for that check from Mexico [that Trump keeps promising],” Warner joked.

Warner is not opposed to spending on border security. He just doesn’t see the value in massive spending on a wall or fence that would also require maintenance and manning. Spending on drones and other proven technologies would garner his support, “and would be more effective and cost a lot less now and in the future.”

The same applies when it comes to defense spending, which the senators say that the President wants to increase. “Virginia would certainly benefit from more defense spending,” said Kaine, but he doesn’t think it’s really a good idea or the right answer.

WARNER WORRIES that this administration is going all in “to buy the best of 20th century stuff” instead of focusing on what’s needed to fight the “real battles of today.”

Both men see that fight as cyber wars and attacks of misinformation — “taking place daily” declared Warner — and the surpassing of the United States in technology and trade by China, Russia and others. None of these “real, modern threats” will be won by the addition of another battleship or even more troops.

U.S. Senators Mark Warner and Tim Kaine and NBC4 News Virginia Bureau Chief Julie Carey trade questions and answers at a discussion hosted by the Northern Virginia Chamber of Commerce.

Calling the government’s lack of preparedness and outdated networks and devices “stupid on steroids,” Warner gave examples of continuing purchases of devices without even the most basic of safeguards. “We are literally adding to our own vulnerability.”

Warner will be pushing for a cohesive “cyber strategy” going forward and thinks that Virginia could become the Cyber Capital, since no one else has yet laid claim to that title and role.

WHAT ABOUT the addition of Amazon in the senator’s own backyard?

“It’s a game-changer for the region,” in Warner’s view, praising Gov. Ralph Northam and the many others who worked on the deal to make it possible. Warner also sees the Amazon addition as another building block to the growth of a local economy that he says has continued to experience “real weakness” and a “level of vulnerability” post-sequestration. He also hopes that Amazon and the support services that will follow in its wake will help stem the decline of millennials in the region.

Risking what he said might be considered a “little bit of heresy to say with an Arlington crowd,” Warner has his fingers crossed, and will do what he can to encourage some “down-state” job benefits from those support services.

Kaine noted that the Amazon move, while fairly well accepted throughout the Commonwealth, received a resounding 90 percent approval rating from Virginians in the Appalachians.

“They see the connection with our shared successes.”

Fairfax County Supervisor Jeff McKay (D-Lee) meets with U.S. Sen. Mark Warner after the discussion. McKay says he agrees that the Amazon deal was an affirmation of Virginia and its workforce. The supervisor also said he and the board were willing to participate in any way necessary to continue the press for affordable housing and to invest in workforce development.

Both Kaine and Warner agree that the arrival of Amazon poses challenges, but provides the best opportunity to add impetus to working on two of the region’s biggest problems: affordable housing and workforce development.

Kaine sees Amazon’s choice of Virginia as one of their new headquarters as an affirmation of the workforce quality that the state can offer, but warns that it is critical to work toward producing that workforce, rather than allowing local companies to merely “cannibalize each others’ best workers.”

Work has already begun to update and re-write the “Higher Education Act” and Virginia is the chair of that taskforce. Kaine says there is plenty that can be done at the federal level to encourage employers to “treat their employees like the assets they say they are” with tax incentives, changes to accounting rules, re-do’s of laws that hinder continuing education, and more emphasis on all forms of education, not just four-year college schooling.

On the subject of affordable housing, both men have ideas that they will support.

Kaine believes that Congress can assist by expanding the Low-income Housing Tax Credit. “It’s already a good program” and is a good place to start, rather than trying to “recreate the wheel,” but admits that to date, it’s been a tough sell.

Warner called for a regional housing authority to tackle the issue. The state already has a housing development division and will soon have millions to develop housing initiatives as part of the Amazon deal, but to deal with the problem locally requires local thinking and collaboration in his view.

QUESTIONS ABOUT METRO, transportation and infrastructure were also on the table.

Working together, Virginia, Maryland and the District helped the rail service gain its first dedicated revenue stream this year, but the additional federal $150 million per year is not guaranteed year over year. Kaine and Warner are hopeful, with a Democrat-controlled House to be seated in January, but it’s still but something to count on, “but if we can get the $150 million again, we’ll take the money and run,” said Warner.

The two senators lamented the fact that the anticipated “Infrastructure Bill” is nowhere in sight, with Warner going to so far as to label the Trump Plan “a scam extraordinaire, a shell game ... stealing money from the highways departments and projects” and leaving them unable to repair the country’s crumbling infrastructure. With a “builder President in the White House,” Warner thought that infrastructure work would have been easy for both sides of the aisle and all levels of the government to connect, but sees nothing of consequence taking place.

And the last question that Carey posed to the senators? After the midterm elections, would they now categorize Virginia as a “Blue State?”

Warner wouldn’t say specifically, but he does think that the Northern Virginia delegation to the General Assembly being all Democrats will be a benefit.

Kaine still sees Virginia as “battleground trending Blue,” but if the GOP “keeps putting up cultural warriors and ideologues as their candidates, if that’s the match up — we’re Blue.”

OPINION

Merry Christmas

“Truly I tell you, whatever you did for one of the least of these brothers and sisters of mine, you did for me.”

The pages of the Connection Newspapers (including the Alexandria Gazette Packet, the Mount Vernon Gazette, the Potomac Almanac and the Centre View) have been full of holiday spirit, beginning before Thanksgiving. Group and individual efforts to help the needy, holiday parades, Santa arriving by boat, Santa arriving by horse-drawn carriage, Santa arriving by tractor-pulled hayride, Santa arriving at the Malls, tree lightings, Menorah lightings, stories of giving, secular celebrations, religious celebrations. Shopping locally. Giving locally.

Christmas is about the birth of Jesus Christ. Whether you believe the Christmas story literally or in spirit, you know it is the story of joy, hope and love, with the promise of redemption.

It is also about embracing the teachings of Jesus: to love thy neighbor as thyself; to help the needy; to feed the hungry and clothe the poor; to care for those who are sick; to invite and welcome strangers; to treat others as you would have them treat you.

Matthew 7:12:

“So in everything, do to others what you would have them do to you, for this sums up the Law and the Prophets.”

Matthew 25:35-40:

“For I was hungry and you gave me something to eat, I was thirsty and you gave me something to drink, I was a stranger and you invited me in, I needed clothes and you clothed me, I was sick and you looked after me, I was in prison and you came to visit me.”

“Then the righteous will answer him, ‘Lord, when did we see you hungry and feed you, or thirsty and give you something to drink? When did we see you a stranger and invite you in, or needing clothes and clothe you? When did we see you sick or in prison and go to visit you?’

Sharing Holiday Spirit

“Truly I tell you, whatever you did for one of the least of these brothers and sisters of mine, you did for me.”

SO LET US SHARE the verse relating the birth of Jesus from the Bible, Luke 2: 4-19:

“And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judaea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem; (because he was of the house and lineage of David.) To be taxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child. And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered. And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

“And there were in the same country, shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

“For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

“And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

“And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us. And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger. And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child. And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.”

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Successful Holiday Adoption Program

To the Editor:

Homestretch is a place where homeless parents with children go to turn their crises into opportunities. We work with our families to ensure each parent acquires skills and education, reduces debt, repairs credit, builds savings and restores health; and provide services for their children to ensure they are safe, happy and flourishing in school.

As a way of rewarding these families for their hard work, each family gets “adopted” for the holidays. They receive a full Thanksgiving meal, and at Christmas they get a bounty of gifts based on wish lists that they provide. This holiday adoption program is a wonderful blessing for the children but it also assures the parents that their hard work is leading to a far better life down the line.

Holiday adopters are local individuals, churches, businesses or civic groups who choose to do this as their way of supporting Homestretch.

For a mother escaping domestic violence or human trafficking, to see her children cared for in this way at Christmas by a group of caring strangers can be a pro-

Advice from Professors

Sharing things they wish they could tell their prospective students.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL

Many high school seniors will spend their holiday break working on college applications or making visits to prospective university campuses. As the excitement builds over the new collegiate experience that lies ahead, local professors offer advice on the things they wish they could share with new college students.

Avoid seeing college as simply a means to end or a pathway to a career and instead take advantage of the multitude of learning experiences available to students. From football games and art exhibitions to student debates and faculty recitals, there are opportunities gain a vast amount of knowledge in four years. Use that time to discover one's interests, says Vincent Intondi, Ph.D., professor of history at Montgomery College. "Do not come to college simply for financial gain," he said. "Study what you are most passionate about. Study what you love. The jobs will be there."

In an effort to encourage students to move outside of their comfort zone, Linda Gulyn suggests that they, "Learn, have new experiences, but do well academically," she said. "Socialize and engage in activities across your major or regular crowd."

Asking questions in class is advice that David S. Torain II, Ph.D., professor of mathematics and statistics at Montgomery College would offer new students.

"Read and always do your homework," said David S. Torain II, Ph.D., professor of mathematics and statistics at Montgomery College. "If you read slowly, don't sweat it, just read," he said. "If you get bored, break your reading in to short sessions, but come back to it. If you can't make sense of it all, make sense of as much of it as you can, then talk to a classmate and ask a question in class."

Use college as an opportunity to build skills that will be necessary after college, says Jerome Short, Ph. D. "Students should choose courses and experiences to build their oral and written communication skills to better express themselves persuasively and concisely," he said.

Practice self-care and recognize stress and anxiety that a new college experience might bring. When those feelings arise, avoid negative coping mechanisms and instead focus on those which are healthy, advises Short. "College is a time to dramatically grow your brain," he said. "Scientific research shows that exercise grows brain cells, learning connects cells, and sleep consolidates memories in cells. Do plenty of each of them every day."

For some professors, one of the best parts of their job is getting to know and share knowledge with their students even on subjects that are not related to the course, says

"Do not come to college simply for financial gain, Study what you are most passionate about. Study what you love."

— Vincent Intondi, Ph.D., professor of history, Montgomery College.

Joanne Bagshaw, PhD, professor of psychology at Montgomery College. "Get to know your professors, and make sure they get to know you," she said. "Visit your professors during office hours and use the time to ask questions about the course and even chat about topics interesting to you."

Lorton Intersection Looked at for Change

Traffic addressed at Lorton Road and Silverbrook.

At the Lorton and Silverbrook Road intersection, it's not surprising when a car gets in the thru-lane and cuts over to turn on Silverbrook at the last minute. When the rush hour traffic backs up turning right on Lorton Road, some drivers do this illegally.

"That's the road rage issue," said Dale Johnson, a South County Federation member who attended the Lorton Road-Silverbrook Road Intersection Improvements meeting on Dec. 12. Fairfax County Department of Transportation held this meeting to highlight the four options on the table, and gather input. According to the Fairfax County Department of Transportation project description, "the study identifies intersection improvements that enhance the intersection operations and increase capacity, specifically through Silverbrook Road's southbound left-turn movement and Lorton Road's westbound right-turn movement. In addition, the goal of the study is to address any safety or operational deficiencies found through the existing conditions analysis, and address any other modes of transportation needs."

The idea to look at this intersection was first brought up in 2012 when they looked at the traffic on Lorton Road. "This kind of opened the door for this study," said Ryan Knight, a FCDOT traffic engineer. The options include adding a turn lane from Lorton Road to Silverbrook Road; overlapping the signal pattern; adding a median island with a freeflow lane; and implementing dual right turn lanes. These options had a definite traffic engineering ring to them and even after Knight's explanation, they were complicated.

Through analysis and traffic counts, Alternative 4 seemed to get the best score on the scoring system. This alternative is currently priced at $1.2 million and would involve dual turn lanes from Lorton Road to Silverbrook, and three left turn lanes from Silverbrook Road to Lorton Road, which goes to I-95.

The "no build," option was also part of the study. "If we don't do anything, the intersection will be an LOS F," said Knight. LOS is Level of Service and F is the lowest grade.

Although the increased traffic through this intersection can't be attributed to a new development or apartment complex, one of the attendees said it was due to the cut through traffic using Lorton Road to Route 123 going to Prince William County. Knight was looking at the bigger picture. "We're trying to fix a problem that's a network problem," he said.

The intersection is in the Mount Vernon District under Supervisor Dan Storck. "For this community around here, it is a big deal," he said. "As it's gotten busier, the turn lanes have gotten more crowded," he said.

"This is all before Amazon," one audience member joked.

The study will be done in 2019, but beyond that, there is no funding or start date in place. "We don't have that at this point," said Knight.

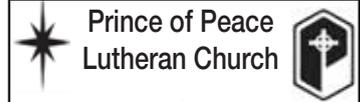

The deadline for comments on this project is Jan. 9, 2019.

VIDEO SCREENSHOTS BY JON ROETMAN/THE CONNECTION

South County junior Will Wilson scored the Stallions' final six points at the free-throw line during an overtime win against West Potomac on Dec. 14.

Stallions Finding Their Way as Defending Champs

South County beats West Potomac in overtime.

BY JON ROETMAN
 THE CONNECTION

With a two-point lead and just 1.3 seconds remaining in overtime, South County head coach Mike Robinson responded with equal parts disappointment and disbelief when one of his players failed to hit the rim while intentionally trying to miss a free throw – a violation that gave possession to West Potomac with no time running coming off the clock.

South County senior Noah Bullock, right, looks to inbound the ball against West Potomac 7-footer Jonas Munson on Dec. 14.

Moments later, Robinson paced with frustration in front of the Stallion bench when one of his players committed a foul, giving the Wolverines a chance to tie the score at the free-throw line with less than one second remaining.

When the final buzzer sounded, the South County boys' basketball team had crawled out of an early 9-0 hole, overcame a 13-point second half deficit and defeated previously unbeaten West Potomac 61-59 in overtime on Dec. 14 in Lorton.

After the game, Robinson said he was proud of his team for the win, but there was a lesson to be learned for the defending state champion Stallions.

"Guys, they think because they have a lot of talent that they can just come out and it will be easy for them," Robinson said. "They don't understand that they're hunted right now. Until they understand that ... there are going to be a lot of games like this until we get our act together from the start."

Last season, South County became the third consecutive Fairfax County team to win the 6A state championship, joining Westfield and Woodson. This year, the Stallions, who return some talented players from last year's championship squad, are learning what it is like to play with a target on their backs.

"Every team gives us their best every game," said South County junior Will Wilson, who scored the team's final six points against West Potomac at the free-throw line. "We've just got to learn that every team is going to do that, so we have to come out hard."

South County trailed 39-26 early in the third quarter after West Potomac standout guard Daryl Mackey Jr. knocked down a pair of 3-pointers to start the second half.

But thanks to eight third-quarter points from Donovan Myles and some clutch fourth-quarter buckets from Andre Speight, the Stallions battled their way back. South County took its first lead when Speight came up with a steal and scored late in the fourth, giving South County a 55-53 advantage.

A 3-pointer by West Potomac's Ethan Payne tied the score at 58 and sent the game to overtime. The Wolverines, who were without Mackey after the senior suffered a second-half ankle injury, managed just one point in the extra period.

"We've just got to get the energy up faster," Wilson said. "We can't wait until the second half to start playing hard. [West Potomac] came out hard and we didn't come out as hard, we came out kind of lackadaisical."

Wilson finished with 12 points. Speight led South County with 17 points and Myles added 10.

Seniors Noah Bullock and Jake Latta, and juniors Xa'Vian Myles and Cody Kellem also return for South County.

South County followed the win over West Potomac with a 60-53 victory over Oakton the following night. The Stallions entered Tuesday's matchup with Hayfield with a 5-2 record, with both losses coming during a trip to Utah.

South County will travel to face Woodson at 7:30 p.m. on Jan. 4.

"You're always proud that you win," Robinson said. "A win is a win, whether it's [by] a half a point or 40 points. We just have to get better as a team."

Stepping Back From the Precipice

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Not so bad, even though it's been nearly 10 years on the cancer trail – and two columns, recently, courting my imminent demise.

The appointment with the otolaryngologist to assess the presumptive damage/my decline was instead wonderfully uplifting: “nothing worrisome in the throat.” What symptoms I was experiencing (basically seasonal-type cold and flu to go along with a scratchy and extremely hoarse voice) had nothing to do with cancer and more so to do with the time of the year.

Meaning I wasn't going to die as a result; just sneeze, cough and so forth like everyone else, which as I've been told, repeatedly, I'm not.

Cancer patients might not have the benefit of doubt or delay like the rest of you. Time may not be of the essence, but one never knows. Cancer cells sort of have a mind/process of their own.

It's not so much a lesson learned as it has been a lesson reminded.

My oncologist has frequently advised me that should a new symptom appear and persist for two to three weeks, I should email him and alert him to my status/situation. I might have been a week or so late this time, but fortunately not too many dollars short.

My oncologist responded immediately as did my primary care physician. Each doctor making arrangements for me within a matter of hours: a face-to-face appointment with my internal medicine doctor – which led to the referral for the otolaryngologist (who called to schedule an appointment before I even got a chance to); and a referral as well by my oncologist for a CT scan of my neck.

Having now been examined and results interpreted, I am glad to report that as scared as I have been for the past two columns, my symptoms were not indicative of my lung cancer progressing. Rather it was more indicative of a cancer patient being stupid and stubborn.

Not wanting to ever believe that my life hangs in the balance and could be severely endangered by my neglect, I tend to go about my health-related business as I would guess the rest of you who are healthy and not cancer-diagnosed: I wait out the symptoms and try not to go negative.

As has been said recently – to me, nothing could be less appropriate given my stage IV, lung cancer. Being negative might actually save my life.

The reality is: I am compromised and subject to risks and complications many of you are not. My immune system has likely been weakened by this most recent every-three-week infusion interval recommended to shrink a relatively new tumor – and in so treating, hopefully will not have allowed any existing cancer cells to trigger and mutate and cause even more trouble.

After all, cancer is likely in control here and giving them an inch, so to speak, has never been part of our plan.

Even though my cancer had already metastasized in 2009, its movement seems to have been confined to my lungs and amazingly has remained there ever since. Still, if I've finally learned anything with this most recent scare, it is that I can't turn a blind eye or a deaf ear, metaphorically writing, to common sense or doctor's orders.

I'm not supposed to wait for the ambulance, if you know what I mean? I'm supposed to be smarter than that and act like my life matters: making arrangements much sooner rather than way later. Denying, pretending and hoping that new symptoms are benign because many other people experience them is, for a cancer patient, as foolish as it gets.

The last, and I mean the absolute last thing a cancer patient should think is that they are like everybody else. They are not. We are not. I am not.

You get it, Kenny?
