Virginians Are Split on Arming Teachers

Reflecting geographic differences.

BY SAFFEYA AHMED
CAPITAL NEWS SERVICE

Virginians are divided on whether they would support legislation to train school teachers and administrators to be armed on school grounds, according to a poll conducted at Virginia Commonwealth University.

"It was almost split right down the middle," said Robyn McDougle, director for the Center for Public Policy in VCU's L. Douglas Wilder School of Government and Public Affairs, which conducted the study.

The 2018-19 Winter Public Policy Poll asked a random sample of 805 adult Virginians: "Would you favor or oppose a state law allowing localities to train teachers and administrators to be armed in schools?"

About 47 percent of Virginians are strongly or somewhat in favor of such training while 49 percent are strongly or somewhat opposed, the poll found. The survey's margin of error was 3.45 percentage points.

Republicans were far more likely than Democrats to favor the legislation. A little more than half of white people responded that they would support training teachers and administrators to carry weapons, compared with 34 percent of minorities. Residents of western Virginia supported arming teachers more than any other region in the state, with 63 percent strongly or somewhat favoring the proposed legislation.

McDougle said the results show that "the commonwealth is still very much a split state around the importance of Second Amendment rights." She said Virginia is "not a state where we're one side or the other — it's still a hotly debated topic."

The idea of arming school teachers most recently circulated after the 2018 mass shooting at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Fla. The shooting killed 17 and injured 17 others. In 2018 alone, there were at least 24 school shootings resulting in 113 deaths, according to research conducted by Education Week.

Arming teachers and administrative staff at schools is not an idea unknown to Virginia. In August, Lee County, in southwestern Virginia, approved a plan to arm teachers in an effort to increase security. Attorney General Mark Herring denounced Lee County's plan as illegal.

"But when Parkland happened ... the coach was shot while he was trying to protect his students," Brian Austin, superintendent of Lee County Public Schools, told NPR. "We had the incident in Indiana, where the young teacher was trying to defend his students and got shot. And some school boards started issuing buckets of rocks and bats. And we thought we could do better than that."

In addition to arming teachers, the poll also asked Virginians if they supported people carrying firearms at large public assemblies — such as concerts, protests or festivals. Sixty-two percent said they would favor maintaining public safety, even if it meant restricting people from carrying guns.

Dozens Brave Snow, Ice to Protest Gun Violence

Forty hearty souls and two snowmen protested in front of the NRA headquarters in Fairfax on Monday, Jan. 14. Neither snow, rain, heat nor ice has stopped this monthly vigil which began seven years ago immediately following the massacre at Sandy Hook, Dec 14, 2012. The vigil is held the 14th of each month in memory of the victims of Sandy Hook and of all the victims of gun violence. It will continue until there are common sense changes like universal background checks, banning bump stocks and keeping guns out of the hands of domestic abusers.

Next vigil—Valentines Day, Feb. 14, 2019. Sponsored by: Reston Herndon Alliance to End Gun Violence, Concerned Citizens Against Gun Violence, Brady Campaign Northern Virginia, Virginia Coalition for Gun Violence Prevention and Coalition to Stop Gun Violence.

Faculty Members Lobby Legislators on Higher Education

Focus on reform, plus money for salary increases, boosting tuition assistance and increasing student access to higher education.

BY EMILY HOLTER
AND MADISON MANSKE
CAPITAL NEWS SERVICE

Faculty members from colleges and universities across Virginia converged on the Capitol on Thursday, Jan. 10, urging legislators to provide more funding for higher education and ensure affordable college degrees for future generations of students.

Higher Education Advocacy Day drew professors like Brian Turner who chairs the political science department at Randolph-Macon College. He noted that the State Council of Higher Education for Virginia has developed a plan to guide the colleges and universities in the commonwealth.

"The Virginia Plan for Higher Education's goal for Virginia is to be the best-educated state by 2030," Turner said.

To make that a reality, faculty members asked members of the General Assembly to allocate money for salary increases, boost tuition assistance and increase student access to higher education.

In December, Gov. Ralph Northam proposed amending the state budget by giving $1 billion to higher education, including increasing tuition aid. Many public institutions in Virginia are hoping that with higher salaries, they will be able to offer a higher-quality education to students.

Low salaries make it hard to compete for prominent faculty members with other well-known institutions, Turner said.

As a group, Virginia's college and university faculty members said they support a bill by Del. David Bulova, (D-Fairfax) to increase transparency and ensure gifts that public institutions receive are subject to the Freedom of Information Act.

Turner said House Bill 2386 would help ensure that donations enhance the curriculum and provide more accountability on how institutions spend their money.

Speaking with delegates and senators, some faculty members also expressed their concerns over Title IX policies. Some have questions about legislation sponsored by Del. Joseph Lindsey, D-Norfolk, pertaining to accusations of sexual violence on campus.

Lindsey has introduced two bills (HB 1830 and HB 1831) that would allow students to have attorneys present at any campus disciplinary hearing or sexual assault hearing.

Another higher education issue is a bill proposed by Del. Lashrecse Aird, D-Petersburg, that would prohibit public colleges and universities from asking student applicants about their criminal history. Under HB 2471, schools could not "deny admission to any applicant on the basis of any criminal history information."

"Your criminal history should not be deterring you from being able to pursue education. And in my bill, there's a line that says this is really about the application," Aird said. "If they do get admitted and let's say, for some instance, you have a student that wants to live in on-campus housing, the institution can then request their criminal history."

In making the rounds at Capitol Square, participants in Higher Education Advocacy Day spoke with Sen. Richard Stuart, R-Fredericksburg, about his bill to give students a voice on tuition increases.

Under SB 1204, "No increase of undergraduate tuition or mandatory fees approved by a governing board of a public institution of higher education shall take effect unless such increase receives an affirmative vote of at least two-thirds of undergraduate students enrolled in such institution."

Faculty members fear that would make it impossible to raise tuition.

"I don't think you could round up two-thirds of the student body to vote for free beer," Turner said.

Pay Attention, State Legislature Not Gridlocked

Thousands of bills considered over 45 days could have a big impact on your life, for better or for worse.

A week is already completed in the short (45-day) session of the Virginia General Assembly, and so many important things are in the works, in danger of happening or not happening, that no one can have a clear view of it all.

An example: The Senate Courts of Justice Committee voted for a bill 8-6 that would bar the execution of people with serious mental illnesses. Possibly you didn't realize that it is legal to execute someone with serious mental illness, because it makes no sense. But this bill failed last year.

Another success for the moment: increasing the minimum wage to $15 over several years also cleared Senate committee.

Last week's editorial, a long legislative wish list, <http://www.connectionnewspapers.com/news/2019/jan/08/opinion-editorial-wish-list-things-session-general/> still omitted many important actions, despite its length. One in particular made it into some editions and not others: To establish equal rights for LGBT Virginians, especially in housing and public employment.

Here are a few more important items:

The Virginia State Conference NAACP Criminal Justice Committee supports the passage of the following bills that are up for debate in this legislative session:

- ❖ HB 1651 - Raises grand larceny limit from $500 to $750 (Del Hayes)

- ❖ HB 1642 - Increases data collection on use of solitary confinement (Del Hope)

- ❖ SB 1013 - Repeals suspension of drivers licences for not paying fines (Sen Stanley; Del Kory)

- ❖ SB 1053 and HB 1745 - Makes juvenile offenders sentenced to life automatically eligible for parole after serving 25 years. (Sen Marsden; Del Lindsey)

- ❖ HB 2616 - Raises the minimum age a child can be tried as an adult from 14 to 16 (Del Guzman) (And this is still far too low.)

- ❖ SB 1551, HB 1685, HB 1873 and HB 1688 - Limits the scope of what School Resource Officers can get involved, prohibits students from being charged with disorderly conduct, and mandates data collection of use of force against students. (Sen Surovell, Del Schuyler T. VanValkenburg, Del Bourne; Del Mullin)

- ❖ SB 997 - Decriminalizes simple marijuana possession. (Sen Ebbin)

- ❖ SB 1008 - Bans mechanical devices designed to increase rate of bullets firing. (Sen Ebbin)

- ❖ SB 1013 - Repeals the requirement that the driver's license of a person convicted of any violation of the law who fails or refuses to provide payment of fines be suspended. (Sen Stanley)

- ❖ SB 1034 - Prohibits any person who is not a licensed firearms dealer from purchasing more than one handgun in a 30-day period. (Sen Locke)

- ❖ HB 1991 - Labels violent hate groups as domestic terrorists (Del Price)

- ❖ HB 2472 - Adds gender, disability, gender identity, and sexual orientation to the categories of victims whose intentional selection for a hate crime results in a higher criminal penalty for the offense. (Del. Kenneth R. Plum)

General Assembly Agenda

BY KENNETH R. "KEN" PLUM
STATE DELEGATE (D-36)

COMMENTARY

In a recent social media post, I indicated that the annual General Assembly session would be underway very soon. AutoCorrect changed the text to be "underwater very soon." My son alerted me to the change, and I made what I thought was a correction. As the General Assembly session has gotten underway I am starting to wonder if AutoCorrect knew something that I am now coming to realize: The General Assembly may well be underwater! The session is scheduled to go until Feb. 22. Meeting five days a week means 38 actual days for work on more than 2,000 bills and resolutions. While I have highlighted big issues like redistricting reform, preventing gun violence and ERA ratification, there are many more issues large and small that make up the agenda for the session.

Virginia has always conformed its income tax policies to the federal system. With the massive changes that have been made in federal tax law, the General Assembly will wrestle with what we will do in Virginia. There will be an effort to resolve the issue early in the session to accommodate taxpayers who want to file their returns early. Part of the tax policy debate will be making the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC) refundable as promoted by the Governor in a bill that I have introduced. The purpose would be to allow persons of low income to keep more of the money they earn and be more self-supporting.

As a Dillon Rule State meaning local governments have only the powers granted to them by the state, dozens of bills, called local bills, are introduced to extend powers some of which are very minor to a particular locality. Another group of bills is called housekeeping to make corrections or clarifications to legislation that passed in previous sessions. All these bills are important but add to the workload of a session.

Challenging environmental issues will be coming before the legislature many of which relate to energy. There are proposals to increase the required uses of alternative and renewable fuels. Cleaning up from the past use of fossil fuels and the resulting growth in coal ash ponds will be taken up.

There is strong need to deal with the degradation of water quality in the Chesapeake Bay area. The Tidewater area is subject to recurrent flooding coming about with climate change that needs addressing now rather than later.

There are many bills dealing with criminal justice reform including bills intended to reduce the school to prison pipeline. The Governor has announced his support of decriminalizing possession of small quantities of marijuana. A bill that has been introduced would allow casino and sports gambling.

There will be a number of dog and cat bills that include high levels of emotion from interested parties. Being able to limit dogs running across the properties of land owners is a big concern in rural areas.

To review all the bills on the agenda of the General Assembly go to <http://lis.virginia.gov>

If you have not done so already, let me know your positions on issues by going to my website (www.kenplum.com). Click on Legislative Session Survey.

Photos are Recognized from First Hike on New Year's

Fairfax County Park Authority also named Brian W. Knight the Judges' Choice Winner. Judges felt that his photo of fiancée Christy Wahle striking a pose at Scott's Run Nature Preserve perfectly captured the spirit of the annual First Hike initiative.

Hundreds of people rang in the new year by taking a hike on Fairfax County Park Authority trails. Nearly 280 of them submitted photos for this year's contest – more than triple that of last year. This year's contest was expanded to encourage more park-goers to get outside and explore Fairfax County parks and trails. Photo eligibility was expanded from five trails to the entire Park Authority trail system and voting was expanded to include more than just Facebook users. Both winners will receive a four-month RECenter pass valued at up to $300.

Theatre Global Classroom Held at Robinson Secondary

School's drama department connects with partner program in China.

The Fairfax County Public Schools Theatre Program partnered with Chinese collaborators in the first Theatre Global Classroom Project which was held at Robinson Secondary School on Dec. 21.

"How do we create a space for students to build meaningful relationships within the Global Community? Robinson Secondary School's Middle School Drama Department in conjunction with the FCPS Global Classroom says we can accomplish this through the power of theatre," says theatre teacher Amy Hard. On Friday, Dec. 21 at Robinson Secondary School, Theatre and Chinese language students were invited to attend an interactive presentation introducing the partnership between the Robinson middle school theatre students, Luther Jackson Middle School, and students from China. Tara Taylor, FCPS Education Specialist for Theatre and Dance took charge of this project. The project was taught by FCPS Theatre teachers Amy Hard from Robinson and Stacey Jones from Luther Jackson. The Theatre Arts Program Director of the partner program in China, Near West Group, is Mike Ludwick; he visited Robinson Secondary to share his personal and professional experiences about working in China as an educator, entertainer, and entrepreneur with the students.

Students were given the opportunity to collaborate with peers from around the world with The Global Classroom Project. They worked on authentic tasks and challenges through a variety of learning activities. The students were able to develop the knowledge, skills, and behaviors to be able to engage in collective action towards issues on the local, national, and global level. The partnership with Near West provides a pathway through theatre education for students in Fairfax and China to demonstrate these learning outcomes.

The students, teachers, and community members who were invited explored connections and collaborations between East and West using the power of theatre education. Throughout the day, students practiced fully immersive, improvisational, and interactive ensemble building movement exercises that were led by Amy Hard. Hard wanted the students to explore team building and creating a common group energy to devise original theatre.

A focus of this project will be devised theatre which is performance art that is originally created through the sharing of collective stories and personal responses.

"We are thrilled to give our theatre students the opportunity to authentically create meaningful and honest art inspired by real human connections. It's our version of the 2019 pen-pal model, but in the end these artists walk away with relationships, community, and art. The collaboration over space, time, and cultures is an extraordinary gift that we are honored to be a part of," notes Hard. "Theatre is a place that naturally invites stories and cultivates personal relationships while providing a safe space for self-expression and collaboration." Students were able to discover and appreciate the commonalities and differences of being a teenager in China and the United States through their process of creating an original piece."

IMAGE COURTESY OF PARTNERSHIP FOR DRUG-FREE KIDS

E-cigarettes come in a variety of forms.

How to Talk About Vaping

Approaching conversation about dangers of e-cigarettes.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL

Jessica DeBoer's 13-year-old son just returned to school after a six-day suspension because he was caught vaping in the boys bathroom of his elite private school. Until she received a call from one of the school's administrators, DeBoer was not familiar with the practice and never dreamed her son would partake in it.

"Now I feel like I might have been naive considering how widespread it seems to be," she said. "My son told me that many of the kids in his school have tried vaping and some even do it regularly."

Vaping is the use of e-cigarettes to inhale and exhale an aerosol, often referred to as vapor, which is produced by an e-cigarette or similar device. The term is used because e-cigarettes produce an aerosol that consists of fine particles, many of which contain varying amounts of toxic chemicals.

For parents like DeBoer, keeping the line of communication open is a key weapon in keeping kids away from e-cigarettes, says therapist Lisa Baguio, LCSW. "Before talking with your teen about vaping, or any sensitive issue for that matter, educate yourself and make sure you know what you're talking about," she said. "Kids know more than we give them credit for. Be prepared with unrefutable facts and scientific evidence because you can guarantee yourself that your kids will have their own set of facts, which are often false."

Once you have those facts, be prepared to share them during a conversation with your teen. "It's important that parents are open and honest with their children," said child psychologist Laurie Jones, Psy.D. "You first have to tell them your expectations. For example, 'In our family, we have zero tolerance for e-cigarette or tobacco use of any kind.' You then should explain the dangers and risks involved and make sure that your teen knows that this is not your just opinion, but proven hazards."

A teen might be less likely to engage in vaping if they can connect it to negative consequences that affect them personally, advised marriage and family counselor Joyce McCarry, M.A. "One thing that teens value is their image among their peer group," she said. "If vaping a substance causes bad breath, that will deter a teen from using it. If getting caught vaping means that they are kicked off a sports team, that will be a deterrent."

A parent's best tactic is creating an environment where one's teen feels comfortable sharing information about vaping and working with them collaboratively to find ways to avoid it, says McCarry. "You want your child to let you know if they're vaping or have friends who are doing it," she said. "You can also let them know that if they're ever in a situation where they're being offered an e-cigarette, real cigarettes or drugs or anything dangerous, that they can call you and you will pick them up immediately with no questions asked."

"You also want you to give your child a way to get out of a risky social situation without feeling embarrassed," continued McCarry. "I have a patient whose parents tell him to text them a numerical code whenever he's in a precarious situation with friends. The parents know to call his cell phone and tell him that there's a family emergency and he needs to come home right away. This gives the child an excuse to leave without feeling embarrassed or like he'll be ridiculed for not engaging in risky behavior."

Karen Lynn Fountain said stuffed teddy bears are big for Valentine's too.

Valentine's Roses Come Early in Burke

The red rose is the flower of choice at Flowers 'n' Ferns in Burke

BY MIKE SALMON
THE CONNECTION

In the flower world, Valentine's Day is like Black Friday is for retail. Romance is in the air, and the red rose is the flower of choice. Karen Lynn Fountain at Flowers 'n' Ferns in Burke knows the routine at her shop on Old Keene Mill Road.

"We're in here early, hopefully everything is delivered by 4 p.m.," Fountain said.

In order to get the 5,000 roses she sells ready for the big day, Fountain starts the process in early January, filling order boxes and getting all the support equipment in place to make the arrangements. This year, she's featuring the Valentine's Day Grand Slam, an arrangement with a dozen red roses, a balloon, chocolates and a teddy bear.

It all starts with the rose though, and she orders from a middle man that gets them from four growers in Ecuador and Columbia. Fountain is a local and likes to keep as much of her business in the United States but the climate in February is what it is. Sourcing things from a tropical environment is sometimes necessary. "Red is still the favorite," she said. The best red rose for Fountain is the "Freedom Rose," and it has the most petals and shelf life, but other reds she uses are the "Black Magic" rose and the "Cherry Lane."

One customer gets the "Yellow Bikini" roses every year, so Fountain makes sure she has some of those on hand in February too. Orchids and tulips are also favorites on Valentine's.

According to the Society of American Florists based in Old Town, Alexandria, a 2018 study by researchers at Harvard, Rutgers and Texas A&M called "Impact of Flowers on Perceived Stress Among Women," that found by adding flowers to indoor environments results in a statistically significant and meaningful reduction in stress.

Around Flowers 'n' Ferns, there is the stress factor for everyone in the family. "We also have a lot of men that come in or call and say, my wife or girlfriend had an awful day, so I want to get them something to cheer them up," said Fountain.

Paperwork starts to pile up.

It all started in 1975 at Flowers 'n' Ferns when Fountain's family bought Springfield

Florist on Backlick Road. Then they opened Flowers 'n' Ferns in Burke and combined the two when highway construction changed the Backlick Road store's configuration.

Last Memorial Day weekend, Fountain's father passed away. He was a big part of the business, so they will need to bring an additional employee for this year's Valentine's Day.

There aren't many flower shops in the area but the grocery stores do have flower sections that offer roses too. Fountain looks to keep the long stems in stock though, and the better roses with the long stems are in the first cut off a plant. "Ours are the longer stem, we get the first or the second cut off the rose bush," she said.

Ordering ahead of time is the best, but that doesn't happen all the time, and more times than not people come in on the way home on Valentine's Day and pick up a bouquet, so they do run out. "We've had that happen over the years," she said.

Every year it's more than husbands buying for wives: sisters buying for each other, high school sweethearts, couples, and pets. "I think Valentine's Day is all ages," Fountain said.

Advocates Seek Laws to Help Immigrants Drive, Study

BY SAFFEYA AHMED
CAPITAL NEWS SERVICE

Immigrant rights advocates urged legislators Wednesday, Jan. 9, to provide driving privileges, wage theft protection and in-state tuition to immigrants who reside in Virginia without documentation.

The Virginia Coalition for Immigrant Rights — composed of more than 20 immigrant justice organizations — laid out its legislative agenda on behalf of the state's estimated 270,000 residents without legal permission to live in the U.S.

Some advocates, including Haziel Andrade of the Virginia Intercollegiate Immigrant Alliance, shared personal stories about why issues such as college tuition and the ability to drive affect Virginia's immigrant communities.

"As I share part of my story," Andrade said, "I'd like anyone listening to look at me as a human being, not by my immigration status."

Andrade arrived in the U.S. from Colombia at 3 years old. Currently a temporary resident under the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals program, she studies computer science at Virginia Commonwealth University. Andrade asked legislators to let Virginians lacking proper documentation pay in-state tuition rates.

"Now more than ever, I'm being targeted because of my immigration status. And I feel as though no one cares about my education," Andrade said. "What makes my education any different from any other Virginian student?"

Of the 270,000 Virginians residing in the U.S. without permission, at least 12,000 were minors who qualified for DACA in 2017, according to U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services. But not everyone believes DACA recipients should receive in-state tuition.

Steve Yoo, campaign coordinator for The National Korean American Service & Education Consortium, spoke about his experiences as an immigrant illegally residing in the U.S.

Ira Mehlman, media director with the Federation for American Immigration Reform, called subsidizing tuition for those living in the U.S. illegally a "zero-sum game."

"Money that is given to subsidize college educations for people who are in the country illegally is money that is not given to someone else," Mehlman said. He said the Virginia Coalition for Immigrant Rights wants "to allocate scarce public resources to benefit a group of people who are in the country illegally, and it's coming at the expense of other people who need those benefits."

BESIDES IN-STATE TUITION, members of the coalition discussed the need for legal permission to drive a motor vehicle. Elena Camacho told her story in Spanish, translated by VACIR Executive Director Monica Sarmiento.

"The first example I'll list is an undocumented friend I have who has a special needs son," Camacho said. "She needs to drive her son to and from the doctor's office. ... She has this daily need, but she isn't able to fulfill it."

But Mehlman said driving privileges are just that — a privilege.

"The idea that you are in the country illegally — you have no legal right to be here — [and] you should be awarded the privilege of driving ... it simply doesn't make much sense," Mehlman said. "The state of Virginia should not be facilitating people violating federal immigration law."

Camacho described driving as a need, not a want.

"The ability to have driving privileges is absolutely essential," Sarmiento translated. "Some people see a basic necessity as being able to have food, to have health care. Driving privileges should be seen in that particular way because it is an access to all those avenues."

What To Right About

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Today, Jan. 12, 2019 is National Glazed Donut Day and the day after my most recent post-scan appointment with my oncologist. A day when, if I'm lucky – as I have been for the past 10 years – my world will change for the better (donut consumption notwithstanding). However, the 'world' to which I refer is one fraught with danger and offers no more guarantees than I've been accustomed to.

To invoke the late, great Rod Serling: I am now entering "The Immunotherapy Zone."

Yes, a brand new – for me – treatment protocol: new drug, new side effects, new frequency, new lifestyle/fewer hassles (potentially), and most importantly: shrinkage (possibly), of my tumors, especially my "Adams Apple" tumor, as I've come to nickname the mass just below my Adams Apple (which is sort of bothering me, if you want to know the truth).

The nature of cancer treatment as I've experienced it – and learned from my oncologist is – if the drug is working, you continue it until it isn't (sounds simple I know). When it stops working, you change as the cancer has figured out the drug's intent. (Cancer cells are smart that way.)

Generally speaking, the cancer drug doesn't start working (shrinking, stabilizing) after it has stopped working (growth). Over my nearly 10 years, I have switched drugs upwards of a dozen times.

Now, I am switching again: to Opdivo, an immunotherapy drug, a class of drugs that didn't even exist a decade or so ago when I was first diagnosed, and one that has only been approved for the treatment of lung cancer since 2015. A drug that, to quote the television advertisement: "offers a chance at longer life."

And so, Team Lourie, two-thirds of it anyway, made the decision to switch and fight. Starting this Friday, I will be infused into the great unknown.

From what my oncologist explained yesterday, aside from the possible benefits, Opdivo has some potentially unpleasant side effects. However, continuing with my present infusion drug, Alimta, now that there's been some growth, is also likely to produce some unpleasant side effects: growth and movement.

And more growth/movement is the worst side effect, relatively and comparatively speaking. So we chose a definite over a maybe. If we continue with Alimta, there will be growth – definitely (that's how cancer works). If we opt for Opdivo, maybe there won't be growth, and maybe there might even be some shrinkage (the good kind).

As for lifestyle changes, there are, according to my oncologist, some quality of life improvements as well, or at least, more weeks in the month when potentially I'll be less impacted by my disease/treatment. Which along with my quality of life has always been a concern of my oncologist.

And, without getting into the details, I'm ready for a change.

Combined with the possibility of tumor shrinkage and fewer/different side effects (some patients report few side effects from Opdivo), I wouldn't say switching to an immunotherapy drug was enticing/a "no-brainer," but it does offer an alternative of sorts. And given where I've been treated from and where I'll be treated now, I am ready for something different.

Changing drugs is always a risk though; it could improve my life or it could make matters worse, a 'worse' from which quite frankly I might not recover (do you remember my yo-yo down-the-stairs visual from a few columns ago?). And I am familiar, unfortunately, with some less-than-encouraging accounts of patients not faring so well.

I just hope there's not a hole in my thinking. Oh wait. That's a hole in my donut. No worries. I'm happy to buy the donut and I never complain about the hole. That's the trade-off. I'm hoping, given the potential benefit of Opdivo, I can likewise live/trade-off with side effects.

My philosophy has always been to take the good with the bad – and vice versa, and after almost 10 years of rolling with the punches, I see no reason to change now.
