Westfield's 'Rock of Ages' receives 24 Cappies nominations.

BY BONNIE HOBBS
THE CONNECTION

The performances have been given, the critics have written their reviews and the ballots have been cast for the 2019 Cappies, honoring the best in high-school theater. And Westfield High's "Rock of Ages" garnered a whopping 24 nominations.

The 20th annual Cappies Gala for the National Capital Area will be held Monday, May 27, at 7 p.m., in The Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. And since one of Westfield's two dozen nominations was the coveted, Best Musical nod, its actors will get to perform a scene from the show during the gala.

Westfield's other nominations are as follows:

Lead Actress in a Musical: Keeley Rogers;
Supporting Actor in a Musical: Harry Schlatter;

Comic Actor in a Musical: Alan Gutierrez-Urista;

Beverly D'Andrea, Julia Tucker and Oscar Lazo each received individual nods for Andy Mays Rising Critic. Grace Jenkins, Lizzy Maisel and Sarah Bourgeois were each nominated for Maryland Theater Guide

Returning Critic, and Westfield's whole critic team received a nod for Critic Team.

"We are honored to receive the nominations and recognition the Cappies organization bestowed on our program this year," said Westfield Theater Boosters Vice President Carol Cutler. "And it clearly reflects the depth of talent at Westfield."

She also stressed that the 24 nominations were divided equally among three areas. "Seven nominations were earned in the Cappies Critic categories, recognizing our critics' tireless work throughout the entire, school year as individuals (Rising and Returning Critics) and as a team," said Cutler.

"Rock of Ages' also captured amazing, non-performing categories, such as Stage Management, Stage Crew, Sets, Lighting, Special Effects, Costumes, Hair/Makeup and Publicity/Marketing," she continued. "And the show's cast members shined, too, in the performing categories, such as Lead Actress, Male Vocalist, Supporting Actor, Comedic Actor, Featured Actress, Featured Actor, Female Dancer and Ensemble."

In the past, said Cutler, Westfield has not been as widely recognized with non-performing nominations, as "It is difficult to capture how much effort and work goes on behind the scenes. For those categories, the

Most people just think of the Centreville McDonald's on Fort Drive as a place for burgers and fries. But those lucky enough to be here in January 1997 also know it as the site of one of the most extraordinary events in Centreville's history – the exhuming of the remains of six Civil War soldiers.

"It was one of the most amazing days in my career of 24 years on the Board of Supervisors," said former Sully District Supervisor Michael Frey. "It was so exciting and so much fun."

He was addressing the 80 or so people who came to that McDonald's parking lot, Saturday morning, May 18, 2019 for a special ceremony commemorating that time and the unveiling of a historic marker. Attendees included local residents, history buffs, relic hunters and the event's organizer – the Bull Run Civil War Round Table (BRCWRT) – which meets monthly at the Centreville Regional Library.

Frey recounted several, important events in Centreville's history – including George Washington staying here as a young surveyor, the devastation caused by the Civil War, and Lee Highway becoming the first paved road in Fairfax County. "Centreville is an example of the evolution of an American community," he said. "And people appreciate that we've preserved its history."

Kevin Ambrose, of the Northern Virginia Relic Hunters Assn. (NVRHA), found the first grave in 1994, but no one investigated further until the rest were discovered, 2-1/2 years later, just prior to construction of the McDonald's. It had to move to its current site because its old restaurant was demolished for construction of the Routes 28/

LOCAL HISTORIAN and NVRHA member Dalton Rector – who was later instrumental in helping determine the soldiers' identities – said they "were found in what's now the drive-through lane for fast-food pickup."

The astonishing discovery led to a three-day archaeological excavation, beginning Jan. 30, 1997, under the direction of world-renowned, forensic anthropologist Doug Owsley of the Smithsonian Institution. Skeletons and historic artifacts from the gravesites were measured, cataloged and removed.

"So many people came to see the dig," said Frey. "Union Mill Elementary Principal Brenda Spratt brought classes here to watch, and people parked on both sides of Route 28 and crossed the road to see. I actually got to go into one of the graves and work with Dr. Owsley. That soldier was exposed from the waist up, but there were buttons and bits of clothing. One soldier had his boots intact and some wore the coats of Union soldiers. Spending three hours next to Dr. Owsley is something I will never forget. And I thank you for coming out today to show your passion for history and love of community."

The soldiers were from Companies G and H of the 1st Massachusetts Volunteer Regiment, which sustained heavy casualties during the Battle of Blackburn's Ford. They died on or shortly after July 18, 1861, three days before the Battle of First Manassas – considered the first battle of the Civil War.

"The heat was oppressive, and water was scarce; the soldiers drank from puddles in the road," said the BRCWRT's James Lewis. "The Massachusetts unit was in a five-hour battle with the Confederate soldiers. The next day, Union forces retrieved their dead and buried some of them in the area, likely marking their graves with wooden crosses."

The war raged on and, that fall, said Lewis, 40,000 Confederates "encamped in Centreville for the winter. They cut down all the trees and burned every stick they could find – including the markers on the makeshift graves – for warmth."

Fast forward to May 7, 1994, and Ambrose was relic-hunting at that site, popular with his group because of its history. "My metal detector picked up a faint, iron reading – which was coffin nails," he told the crowd on Saturday. "I dug about 18 inches down and found little bones – toes

Looking on the Sunny Side

BY KENNETH R. "KEN" PLUM
STATE DELEGATE (D-36)

COMMENTARY

Following the daily news coming out of our Nation's Capital is enough to leave anyone despondent. The backing away from long-sought freedoms against discrimination and oppression to a seeming lack of concern about the health of our planet and its people to a rise in hateful speech and behavior punctuated by the concentration of wealth in the hands of a few at the expense of the many contribute to the feeling of desperation on the part of many who share values very different than those holding positions of power today. Add to the very real concerns about the direction of our country the plight of millions around the world and one can become very depressed.

I remind myself regularly that it is important to remember that behind all the dark clouds there is a sunny side. While my examples of the sunny side will be from our community over the last couple of days, the sunshine of care and compassion shines in different ways and intensities throughout the world every day. We sometimes have to clean the lenses through which we view our community and the world to gain a clearer perspective of where we are and where we are headed.

Just last weekend Jane and I spent an evening with the caring and compassionate people in our community who raise money and work through FISH (Friendly, Immediate, Sympathetic Help) to help those who are down on their luck pay their utility bills and rent, fill prescriptions, and learn to manage their finances. A golf tournament today with Kids R First along with the volunteer help of many will provide funding to ensure that thousands of children in our region start school with book bags filled with needed school supplies. Students in South Lakes High School (SLHS) who do not have enough to eat at their homes can get food through the SLHS Food Pantry on school days and for the weekends.

Days in a homeless shelter can no doubt seem bleak despite the best efforts of volunteers to make them seem otherwise, but nothing can replace the burst of sunshine that comes from Cornerstones and all its supporters who work mightily to end homelessness in our community. I spent an evening recently with the volunteers of Britepaths who are doing the same kind of work in other areas of our region bringing hope to many.

I spend time monthly with volunteers from Moms Demand Action, Brady Campaign, and other groups working to end gun violence. Their commonsense approach to the public health crisis of gun violence will pay off. I continue to be impressed with the determination and hard work of the Herndon-Reston Indivisibles who are devoted to the election of caring candidates to office and to bring focus on bad public policies.

I am honored to be in public office to observe and participate in the hard work of citizens who bring sunshine where it is needed. I have listed just a few examples. Join with us and pull back the shades to let the sunshine in. Let me know at kenplum@aol.com if you are looking for ways to become involved.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Protecting Minors from Political Groups

To the Editor:

It is undeniable that a conservative resurgence is currently active in America and concentrating efforts on a women's right to privacy and abortion. Although media focus is on Georgia and Alabama, the recent protest activity by D.C. Area Anti-Abortion Advocacy (a.k.a. DC4A) occurring outside of D.C. area middle and high schools, including James Madison High School, is a prime example of how quasi-political interest groups are affecting our community. Pro-Life activism is protected through civil rights and liberties within the United States and public high schools; students can organize clubs, write academic and newspaper arguments, invite speakers, and hold discussions to convey their beliefs on abortion. But, the protestors from DC4A are different; the adult volunteers shout through bull-horns at students exiting school, hold up photos of severed fetuses, and approach students to video their responses on why they want to "kill babies." Then DC4A posts these videos onto their Facebook and Youtube to rile members by saying that the students "insult the murdered babies." I call upon the Virginia General Assembly to make it illegal for non-school entities to share identity even if the video camera itself is not on campus grounds.

Skincare after 55

Adjusting the regimen for senior skin as one ages.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL

From fine lines to age spots, normal changes in the skin are inevitable as it matures. Skincare after 50 doesn't need to involve plastic surgery or products with a high price tag. There are simple options for treating the conditions that appear as one ages.

"Everyone ages differently, but you may notice your skin is drier and thinner and starting to look like paper," said dermatologist Shelly Hall, M.D. "You may notice that you're developing more age spots wrinkles and creases. Your skin might be blotchier and irritated easily. You also might notice that your skins heals more slowly."

One of the top recommendations for aging skincare is sunscreen. "For most of us, skin gets more fragile as we age. That's why it's essential for seniors to take extra care and protect themselves from the sun," said Susan Yohe, gerontology nurse for the Fairfax County Health Department. "In addition to using a high-SPF sunscreen, we also recommend long, loose fitting clothing that covers the skin, and a wide-brimmed hat when outside. This will help keep you safe and preserve your skin."

"Wear sunglasses to reduce lines around eyes," added Hall. "Slather on sunscreen that offers broad-spectrum protection and stay out of the sun between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. It's so important because the sun can age your skin prematurely. Indoor tanning and sun lamps expose your skins to UV rays which can also make your skin age faster."

Watch for skin cancer that can occur because of too much exposure to the sun, warns Hall. "Everyone should see a dermatologist for a skin care exam at some point."

Wash your face twice a day, but avoid using soap, suggest Hall. "Use warm water and a mild cleaner, but don't scrub."

"Vitamin A cream can reduce fine wrinkles," said Hall. "It also helps with rough skin and hyper-pigmentation or discoloration that comes with aging and overexposure to the sun. Products that contain Vitamin C can lead to healthy skin and may reverse the negative effects of aging."

Getting adequate sleep promotes healthy skin, says Hall. "It gives our body and skin time to refresh and renew."

Diet and lifestyle also play a role in the way one's skin ages. Eliminating smoking, decreasing alcohol consumption and eating fresh fruits and vegetables and foods rich in Omega-3 offer the nutrients necessary for healthy, glowing skin, says Sara Ducey, professor of Nutrition at Montgomery College.

"Water is especially important for keeping skin hydrated," she said.

"Fish is particularly important, especially fatty fish that are rich in Omega-3 fatty acids like salmon and tuna. Berries are great for the skin because they help keep inflammation down.

Green, leafy vegetables especially parsley and lettuces offer tremendous nutrition."

A simple and holistic approach is the foundation of skincare, advises Hall.

"The bottom line is maintaining a healthy lifestyle, eating a healthy diet and practicing sun protection," she said.

– and two, parallel bones – legs. Digging again, I found a 5-inch-thick wafer, with bluish-gray cloth and a line of eagle buttons, and what I thought were ribs and underwear.”

“A soldier had been buried in a pine box, and the ground had collapsed on him and compressed it into a wafer,” continued Ambrose. “I told my friend that I was digging with, and he laughed, saying it was a trash heap with chicken bones. I dug again, and a skull with all its teeth rolled out.”

Ambrose then covered the site with tin cans and trash so others wouldn't dig there and notched a nearby tree so he could find it again. “I felt bad for disturbing a grave, but I didn't want the soldier bulldozed, so I notified Fairfax County,” he said. Red tape and paperwork ensued and, 2-1/2 years later, the land sold and McDonald's planned to build there.

“Luckily, Dr. Owsley was available to come here,” he said. By then, leaves and pine needles had camouflaged the spot but, using his metal detector, Ambrose found it. “They excavated and the bones came up,” he said. “Owsley used his probe and found five more graves in a row. The whole community became involved in this mass effort, and I dug beside Owsley and Mike Johnson, [the county Park Authority's senior archaeologist], for three days.”

Ambrose said the skeletons were well-preserved and the graves were shallow because the original diggers hit shale and couldn't dig deeper. “The big question was, ‘Who are these guys?’” he said. “They all had standard, Union buttons, plus shoulder buttons most Civil War uniforms didn't have.

BONNIE HOBBS/CENTRE VIEW

One soldier wore a canvas-topped, baseball shoe, so we thought it was a city unit. One had a musket ball in his pocket, and they'd died of bullet wounds.”

The Smithsonian's forensic analysis revealed they'd eaten a seafood diet so were, perhaps, from New England. It also showed most were 23 or younger, the youngest just 16-18. “Dalton Rector researched and learned one guy was on a club baseball team in Boston,” said Ambrose. “The soldier I found was Albert Wentworth, who was 17, but lied about his age – you had to be 18 – to join the war.”

DNA testing was impossible due to lack of close relatives, so the remains stayed at the Smithsonian for nine years. But Rector plugged away, eventually identifying them.

USING FORENSIC EVIDENCE, genealogical records and extensive historical data, he determined the soldiers were from the Massachusetts unit. Some of the jacket buttons had an “I” on them, signifying infantry, and Massachusetts officers wore this type of button.

Companies G and H of the 1st Massachusetts Volunteer Regiment fought in the Battle of Blackburn's Ford, and Rector obtained a list of those soldiers' names and ages, learned how each man died and painstakingly concluded which ones were in the Centreville graves.

Company G's soldiers battled in their jackets. But during hand-to-hand combat, Company H joined as reinforcements, fighting without jackets. That's significant because the men in graves No. 1, 3 and 6 all had jackets, but the others did not. Besides Wentworth, the other soldiers were 1st Sgt. Gordon Forrest, 32, and Pvts. Thomas Roome, 31; James Silvey, 23; William Smart, 21 and George Bacon, 22.

Hearing the news, the Massachusetts Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War called the Park Authority to arrange for their return home. Johnson and Park Authority volunteer C.K. Gailey personally drove the remains there. And on June 10, 2006, the soldiers were buried with full military honors in the Massachusetts National Cemetery on Cape Cod.

It was an authentic re-enactment of a burial from the Civil War period. It included a horse-drawn hearse, a procession to the burial site led by a fife-and-drum corps, an 1879 prayer and a 21-gun salute with 1853 Enfield rifle muskets. The six soldiers were each buried inside the same type of pine caskets used when they were killed.

Covering each casket was a 35-star, American flag like those in 1861. The honor guard then folded the flags into triangles and presented them to particular people, including Johnson. He later gave it to Frey, who displayed it in the Sully District Governmental Center.

On Saturday, Lewis said the flag is still there. He, Frey and others then unveiled the marker to be placed on a grassy spot near the McDonald's parking lot. “It will enable all to enjoy this memory,” said Lewis. Then the Rev. Drew Pallo said, “Now we bring closure to those who brought this story to light.”

The Weak After

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

And now the fun begins. Not! For some reason, I can't get the Journey song, "Lovin', Touchin', Squeezin'" out of my head, except that my lyrics are "Waitin', Wonderin', Hopin'." I'll know the results of last week's diagnostic scans soon enough, on Tuesday in fact, the day before this column publishes, when we have our next usual and customary post-scan, face-to-face appointment with my oncologist.

As it is presently scheduled, what having a Tuesday appointment after the preceding Wednesday scan means is, we won't have received the results prior to our appointment. The interval of time is too short.

When the post-scan appointment had been on Friday, nine days out, as it has been on many occasions, my oncologist felt compelled (maybe because we 'compelled' him) to email the us scan's results rather than make us wait so long. But six days is not quite so long enough before he'll be seeing us, so I am humming a Journey song in the interim.

And let me tell you, going in cold (not knowing the results beforehand) "is all it's cracked up to be" -- to invoke a quote by "Hawkeye" from M*A*S*H when talking to Radar about his widowed mother being alone.

But I won't be alone on Tuesday; my wife, Dina, will be along for the ride. A ride she has made many times, especially during the early years of heavy-duty chemotherapy when infusion days, start to finish could last upwards of 10 hours, door to door.

The process for these post-scan appointments is somewhat different, 45 minutes or so.

It begins in an examining room with yours truly being examined/questioned by a nurse ("Are you in any pain?") followed by her checking my vitals: oxygen level, pulse and blood pressure ("Mr. Lourie, you're blood pressure is high." "You bet it is.")

After she enters the information on the computer, she'll excuse herself and as she exits the examining room she advises us that the doctor will be in shortly.

Typically, with 15 minutes or so, depending on his schedule, we'll hear a knock on the door and my oncologist's voice asking if it's OK for him to enter. "Yes, of course," we say.

The way the examining room is configured, the examining chair, where I'm sitting, is on his immediate left, partially blocked from his view as he opens the door. Dina is sitting in a chair directly ahead of him and in clear sight as he enters the room. This means she'll see his face before I do and instinctively she'll try to read his expression and body language for a hint of what's to be said.

Occasionally, he breaks the ice immediately and says something like "scans look good, very pleased," knowing that we as patients are hanging on his every word. Other times, he says very little as he sits at his computer and begins asking the standard questions with which we are all too familiar.

This exchange will last about five to 10 minutes, depending on my interruptions. Generally, within the context of this exchange, the subject of my scan results will be mentioned.

This is the moment of truth. I can't really say it's worth waiting for, good news or bad. It's more about enduring.

Unfortunately, we can't change much about this process. I have a "terminal" disease and scanning is the process by which the doctor can assess my health. Waiting for this assessment is the absolute bane of my existence.

And now with a more frequent scanning schedule, every two months, I am "bane-ing" more than ever before. I can't say it's a perfect set of circumstances, but it's my journey and I'm stuck with it.

Wine, Whiskers & Wags in Clifton

Paradise Spring Winery hosts 13th annual event for Friends of the Fairfax County Animal Shelter.

About 250 people came out to the 13th Annual Wine, Whiskers & Wags event held at the Paradise Spring Winery in Clifton on Sunday, May 19, 2019. Sitting outdoors in 90-degree temps, people brought their dogs and sipped wine while contributing to the Friends of the Fairfax County Animal Shelter. The event included a silent auction, dog training demos, and “Ask the Trainer Questions.” Last year, the Friends gave $275,000 to the municipal shelter — money from donors and from events like this.

According to Evelyn Grieve, President of the Friends: “For 13 years we’ve been working with the shelter and raising funds to help pets that come into the shelter for medical, dental, and parasite prevention.

The shelter takes in a number of pets and they can’t always pay for the medical, so our biggest thing that we started for was to pay for medical treatments. We branched out to the dental and parasite prevention so every pet that comes in – dogs, cats and rabbits – they all get inoculated for fleas, ticks and heartworms.”

She continued: “We give them collars, tags and leashes. We have behavioral programs. We also buy shelter support items like toys and food and cat scratching toys. What we’re hoping to accomplish is to have people know that there are great pets at the shelter. Our motto is ‘Adopt, Don’t Shop.’”

Lindsey Kellogg, Communications and Administration Specialist, added: “We have several programs from medical to parasite prevention to TNR (Trap, Neuter, Return Program). Our goal is to get all of the animals at the shelter adopted. But with the TNR program, we’re aiming to cut down on the population in the cat community. We try to encourage people to understand where pets come from.”

Grieve added: “Because we have to take in every pet, our live release rate is 95 percent and no pet gets euthanized for space. We’ve had pets in the shelter for up to 18-plus months. We either have them go out to fosters; we have sent them to rescue partners; or they’ve gone to other shelters. So, we make sure every pet who has the ability to be adopted is adopted. That’s the shelter’s biggest goal.”
