Murder Charged after Chantilly Man's Death

Fairfax County police have charged a Manassas man with last week's fatal shooting of Miguel Angel Leiva Hernandez, 30, of Chantilly. The suspect is Steven A. Green, 51.

The tragedy occurred Friday, May 24, around 1:30 a.m. in a Chantilly shopping center in the 14500 block of Lee Jackson Memorial Hwy. According to police, officers called to the scene found Hernandez's body in the parking lot, where he'd been shot.

He was then taken to the hospital and pronounced dead. Two other victims, who were not shot, were transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries. Green – who waited for police to arrive – was charged with murder, malicious wounding and use of a firearm in the commission of a felony.

Police recovered a firearm when they arrested him. Green was then taken to the Adult Detention Center and held without bond. Meanwhile, detectives are continuing their investigation into the events leading up to the shooting. The Office of the Chief Medical Examiner planned to conduct an autopsy on the victim.

Meanwhile, police are asking anyone with information regarding the shooting to call the Major Crimes Bureau at 703-246-7800. They may also call police at 703-691-2131, or notify Crime Solvers at www.fairfaxcrimesolvers.org or by texting "TIP187" plus the message to CRIMES (274637).

‘I Could Get in a Lot of Trouble’

Former teacher convicted of soliciting a minor online.

BY BONNIE HOBBS
THE CONNECTION

Norman Achin

“I told him, ‘I could get in a lot of trouble; I’m taking a big risk.’”

—Norman Achin

“His statements [about] trying to help this boy were just a cover.”

—Elena Lowe, prosecutor, re Achin

For 30 years, Norman Achin was a respected teacher in Fairfax County high schools, including both Westfield and Chantilly. Now, though, he’s also a convicted felon.

After a two-day trial last week in Circuit Court, he was found guilty of using a communication device to solicit a minor. As a result, Achin, 51, of Woodbridge, will face as much as 10 years in prison when he returns in August for sentencing.

During a police interrogation following his July 23, 2018 arrest, he said he was only trying to help a troubled boy he’d met online and believed was just 14. He also claimed a pornographic photo he’d sent the teen reached him accidentally and was actually meant for someone else.

But neither the prosecutor nor the judge bought it. “The defendant’s testimony wasn’t particularly credible,” said Assistant Commonwealth’s Attorney Elena Lowe. “And when he sent the picture, he knew who he was talking with, consistent with their text messages.”

In 2017-2018, Achin taught Latin at both Westfield and West Springfield high schools. Before then, he did so at Chantilly and McLean high schools. He even tutored – often in students’ homes. But his own, extracurricular activities got him into trouble and, after his arrest last summer, FCPS suspended him without pay.

THE GRAND JURY indicted Achin in November 2018, and the details of his offense were revealed, last Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 20-21, during his nonjury trial in Circuit Court. Testifying against him was a male, police detective with the FCPD’s Child Exploitation Unit. When he and Achin made contact via the Grindr app, the detective was posing online as a teenager named Alex, hoping to catch predators preying on children. To protect his undercover status, this newspaper is not revealing his identity.

The detective told Achin his father was gone, his mother lived out of state, and his aunt – who worked nights – watched him. He also said he was in high school and would be “15 very soon. I used abbreviations, misspellings and emojis, like teens do, and was kind of emotional.” The court heard a phone call between them, saw transcripts of their text messages and Grindr exchanges and also saw a 2-1/2-hour video of the detective’s interrogation of Achin following his arrest.

Achin, himself, went by his middle name, Mike, during their online conversations, which ran from July 11-23, 2018. “I’m very concerned about your age,” Achin told “Alex.” Achin also asked if they could meet, “at a McDonald’s, or something,” during the day so they could talk in person.

“Just talk?” asked “Alex?” Replied Achin: “Well, maybe more.”

“I’ve never done this before, so I’m nervous,” said “Alex.” To which Achin answered: “Me, too. I could get in trouble, even for what we’ve done so far.”

They eventually arranged a meeting in an Annandale park where, instead, police arrested Achin. During his interrogation, Achin said, “I was not soliciting a minor. Alex answered my [Grindr] ad and, initially, I was interested, until I heard his age – 14.

“I’ve been a teacher a long time, and this boy said his mother and father left, so he lived with an aunt. And every school I’ve been at, with kids like this, they’ve committed suicide. I was looking for some kind of relationship, but not with a boy. I really did want to help him.”

Achin said he’d hoped to meet with Alex and tell him he was “too young to do this. I was also talking with other people [on Grindr and Tinder] and I got confused between the sites I was on. I didn’t want anything from him – 18 or 19 years old, fine – but not a kid.” He said he worried that Alex might kill himself, so he “wanted to talk to him, maybe as a father figure, because I thought this was a fragile, young man.”

However, Achin also sent two photos of himself to “Alex” – one showing his bare torso and abs, and the other, his penis. Saying he could only access Grindr on his phone, not his computer, he told the detective, “I couldn’t see the pictures I sent, at times, so sent the wrong pics to the wrong people at the wrong time.” He said he thought he’d sent the penis photo to a man, not “Alex.” (But in court, Lowe noted that Achin never apologized to “Alex” or said he’d sent it by mistake).

Achin said he worried that such a young teen was on Grindr. “I’m not proud of my judgment here, but I was really concerned,” said Achin. “I told him I was worried he might get taken advantage of...I know about sexual abuse – I’ve been abused, myself.”

Eventually, “Alex” said to him, “You want to be with me, or you don’t.”

The detective then asked Achin, “Why didn’t you say, Alex, you misunderstood me; I don’t want to be with you that way?”

“I thought I’d clear this up with a single phone call,” replied Achin. “I probably shouldn’t have contacted him again, [but] I thought, maybe he’d freak out.”

THE DETECTIVE also asked Achin if he was attracted to children or watched child porn, and Achin – who has an ex-wife and a daughter – said, “No, I would find that revolting. I like women; I’m just trying to experiment on the other side.”

Then, apparently still not realizing “Alex” wasn’t real – or, at least, trying to make it seem that way – he asked the detective, “Is this kid OK?” The detective answered affirmatively, and Achin said, “I wasn’t going to do anything physical [with him]. I was only interested in talking to him as someone vulnerable.”

“I don’t think he really wanted sex,” continued Achin. “Sometimes, if you talk to [teens] as an adult, you can say, ‘You [just] want someone to talk to and to care about you.’ I wanted to tell him this was inappropriate and couldn’t go anywhere. I told him, ‘I could get in a lot of trouble; I’m taking a big risk.’ I wanted to resolve this; I [was] in a position of trust with children.”

But, referring to the photo that the trim Achin sent to Alex showing his abs, the detective asked, “Is this an appropriate picture to send a 14-year-old boy?” Achin said he couldn’t see it when he sent it, but the detective stressed that Achin never corrected it or told “Alex” he’d sent the wrong photo.

Furthermore, he said Achin already acknowledged he knew it was “Alex’s” account, from his photo. “If you thought this kid was in trouble, you never contacted his aunt,” said the detective. “And he never made any reference to killing himself.”

Noting he didn’t say sexually explicit things to “Alex,” Achin said, “I’m not an evil person.” When he testified in court last Tuesday, his attorney, Stephen Sheehy, asked if Achin had requested to be alone with Alex. “No,” replied Achin. “If I were to meet him, I wanted a public place.”

During closing arguments before Judge Michael Devine, Lowe said, “You can clearly see how pictures are sent, and the name of the person [receiving them]. He never said how concerned he was to ‘Alex.’ I ask you to find him guilty.”

Sheehy said there was no solicitation and Achin “never wavered in maintaining his innocence. This was entrapment; we ask you find my client not guilty.”

But, added Lowe, “The detective was just doing his job. There’s salacious content; [Achin] sends a picture of his penis twice to someone he knows is a minor. His statements [about] trying to help this boy were just a cover.”

Ultimately, Devine agreed with her, found Achin guilty and set sentencing for Aug. 16. Until then, he’s free on bond, provided he has no contact with children.

Help the Class of 2019 Celebrate Graduation Safely

BY SUPERVISOR
JOHN C. COOK
BRADDOCK DISTRICT

The last month of Senior year in high school is an exciting time for students and their families. Our children are moving on to a new stage in life after four years of hard work and intensive studies. When one considers the caliber of our schools, graduation is an even more impressive milestone. Amidst these great achievements, I urge parents to talk to their teens about the dangers of alcohol and to prohibit teens drinking in their own homes.

The Fairfax County Police Department will arrest parents who knowingly host teen parties with alcohol.

This may seem harsh to some, but this is a public safety issue. Teens are not yet ready to make good choices about alcohol. When adults serve it to them they send the wrong message and encourage the wrong choices.

It is no secret that teen drinking is wrought with dangerous consequences. Since teens who drink are more likely to binge drink, they are also more likely to make poor choices, such as drunk driving. In fact, the National Highway Traffic and Safety Administration (NHTSA) reports that every year hundreds of young people get behind the wheel intoxicated and cause deadly accidents: 648 people aged 16-20 were involved in a fatal accident with a BAC higher than .08 in 2017. Furthermore, teen drinking can also lead to sexual assaults and other crimes.

I cannot remember one year without hearing of a tragic local teen death caused by drunk driving. It is up to us as parents to do everything we can to encourage smart choices and safe celebration. That starts with clearly setting the boundary with your children that no alcohol will be served at any parties your family is hosting.

This is a community wide problem and will require community support. If you suspect there is underage drinking happening in your neighborhood, you can call the West Springfield Police Station at 703-644-7377 (or your District station).

Graduation season should be a time of merry making, reveling, and kudos for all the hard work our children have done. It should not include jail cells, ambulances, or coffins. Please join me in promoting a safe environment in our community by keeping alcohol out of teen parties.

Mental Health Awareness Month

BY KENNETH
R. "KEN" PLUM
STATE DELEGATE (D-36)

Before we tear off the remaining couple of pages on the May calendar, I want to address the important recognition of May as Mental Health Awareness Month. While Virginia is credited with having the first mental health hospital, or asylum as they were called in the eighteenth century, the Commonwealth has had difficulty in recent times coming to grips with the enormity of the need and the provision of funds to respond to those needs. In fact Virginia is ranked 40th in the nation in mental health care according to the results of a national study of the issue. It took a state senator's mentally ill son attacking his father with a knife to shock the state to greater action. That father now chairs the Joint Subcommittee on Mental Health Services in the 21st Century, or the Deeds Commission, that includes Senator Janet Howell as a member and has made critically important recommendations on which the state has made significant progress.

A special thanks goes to the The Commonwealth Institute (thecommonwealthinstitute.org) for documenting recent progress and remaining opportunities in behavioral health in a recent edition of The Half Sheet. The Institute which is a nonprofit organization focusing mostly on human service needs used the term "behavioral health" to be more comprehensive than "mental health" to include mental health services and supports such as substance abuse treatment. The Institute recognized accomplishments this past year to include a 21 percent increase in Medicaid reimbursement to encourage more licensed mental health professionals to accept Medicaid thus increasing access to services for people with low income. Additional funding for emergency opioid kits will expand the access to and availability of Naloxone which is used to reverse the effects of an opioid overdose. The General Assembly also passed and the Governor signed my bill to expand the health care providers authorized to dispense Naloxone to make it more readily available.

Increased funding was provided to increase staffing at state mental health facilities that are struggling to keep up with demand. Funding was also approved to replace the aging mental health facility Central State Hospital. In addition, monies have been made available for transportation of persons needing mental health hospitalization from having to be transported by law enforcement.

The Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Services indicates that there is a need for 5,000 permanent housing units for those who need supportive housing in the state. This year's funding along with an increase last year will provide 1,300 units of supportive housing. Obviously, there is a severe need to do more in this area with a price tag of about $47 million.

Challenges remain to be addressed in providing greater access to programs and services for those who live in rural areas and to those who have experienced the trauma of having been exposed to the immigration and refugee system. A task force is looking at ways to increase the number of mental health professionals in the state.

Our awareness of mental health needs cannot end with the month of May. More needs to be done!

Health Insurance Tax: An Attack on Seniors?

To the Editor:
Regarding The Connection's recent article on health disparities in Virginia (March 25, 2019, "Report Shows Geographic Disparities in Health in Virginia,") I want to highlight another threat to care in our region: the Health Insurance Tax.

As a senior who depends on Medicare Advantage for affordable health care to help manage debilitating chronic migraines and back pain, I am appalled by the lack of congressional action on the Health Insurance Tax (HIT).

Medicare Advantage coverage has helped me get my life and my health back, but the HIT is nothing short of an attack on seniors. It would raise annual costs for more than 22 million Medicare Advantage beneficiaries by as much as $241 per person annually, imposing a huge burden for those living on fixed incomes. Seniors on Social Security often live on significantly less than the mean income in Appalachia.

Key legislation before Congress (H.R. 1398 and S. 172) would stop the HIT and protect seniors, but Senators Kaine and Warner and Congressman Connolly have refused to sign on as co-sponsors. It seems like Congress has forgotten we are here.

If Congress allows a tax on my healthcare premiums, I won't be able to afford coverage. If costs go up, I'm out of the game. Senior health isn't a game – and the HIT is a multi-billion-dollar tax on health insurance premiums that will go into effect in 2020 unless Congress acts soon.

It's time for congressional action to stop the HIT and protect our care.

BY BONNIE HOBBS
CENTRE VIEW

Cub Run Stream Valley Park is one of Centreville’s treasures – a place where local residents can relax and enjoy the beauty of nature. And members of the Cub Run Stream Valley Park Volunteer Team work hard to make sure it stays that way.

It’s under the umbrella of the Fairfax County Park Authority, and resident Anthony Consumano is the team leader. Partnering with homeowners’ associations surrounding the park, the team preserves the park’s natural, historic and cultural aspects.

“We get the community involved in watershed cleanups, nature walks and photography classes,” said Annie Shields, volunteer coordinator for the Cub Run Rec Center. She and Consumano started the team together.

“Our goal is to build a more resilient community focused around the Cub Run Stream Valley Park,” explained Consumano. “People who are physically and mentally fit are better able to handle life’s ups and downs. And studies say that green spaces reduce stress and anxiety.”

CUB RUN STREAM VALLEY PARK is the third-largest park in Fairfax County, comprising about 800 acres behind the Cub Run Rec Center. And during the team’s cleanups, 50-100 people participated at eight different locations around the park.

“The Rec Center supports us by providing trash bags and gloves for our cleanups,” said Consumano. “And we hope more of the adjacent homeowners’ associations will help us find volunteers in their communities to help ensure the team’s viability into the future. Our message to people is to just get into the park and use it. They can hike, run, bike, walk, etc.

“We’ve put the framework into place so individuals passionate about nature, the environment, the community, health and wellness can join our team,” he continued. “Our motto is to preserve the park’s natural and historic parts, share our knowledge and experience, and connect with our neighbors and the park.”

The communities bordering the park are London Towne West, London Towne, Second London Towne West, Virginia Run, Sully Station I and II, Country Club Manor, Challet Woods, Lee Overlook, Madison Ridge, Fairview, Pleasant Valley and Gate Post Estates I and II.

The team holds quarterly meetings and, at a recent one, two Centreville residents – Elarbi Taouil of Second London Towne West and Keith Freeburn of Rocky Run – shared the photos they took of the birds, butterflies, ducks and animals found in the park. “I love bird photography because it’s fun and a joy,” said Taouil. “Birds and animals live in their own world, and they’d help us, if we’d only stop and look at how they live their lives.”

He then discussed his photography techniques and showed slides of several of his photos taken in nearby Sully Woodlands, including an eagle, a red-shouldered hawk, an American robin, osprey and great blue heron. He’s done bird photography for more than 15 years.

Next, Freeburn – who also provides content for the team’s owl, red-shouldered hawk, white-throated sparrow, ruby crowned kinglet, a 10-point buck, great-crested flycatcher, indigo bunting, a great-blue heron dancing, butterflies and ducks.

“To me, there are no more beautiful butterflies than the ones in Cub Run Stream Valley Park,” he said.

After the meeting, Bobbi Longworth, executive director of the Fairfax County Park Foundation, said, “It’s really great to have this group. It’s a grassroots effort and it’s a joy.”

THE TEAM’S LONG-TERM GOAL is to create self-organizing teams in each neighborhood to fo-

‘I Knew I Could Make a Difference’

Meet Mountain View High Principal Joe Thompson.

BY BONNIE HOBBS
CENTRE VIEW

Born in Fairfax and raised in Springfield, Joe Thompson always wanted a career in education. Good thing – because he’s been an educator for 29 years and Mountain View High’s principal since November 2018.

However, for a short while, he considered becoming a sports writer, so he obtained a bachelor’s in English from Clarion University in Pennsylvania. But his dad was a P.E. teacher and coach in Fairfax County and, eventually, Thompson chose teaching, too, and got a master’s in special education from George Washington University.

In 1995, he began teaching special ed and coaching football at Woodson High, later doing the same thing at Oakton High and becoming its head football coach in 2002.

Being a leader, he obtained his endorsement in supervision and administration from GMU in 2010, and the next year, became assistant principal at Annandale High.

“There’s not a lot of difference between being a head coach of a program and a school administrator,” said Thompson. “You have to be able to articulate a vision, include parents and staff in it and connect with children. You also need to recognize that the educational experience will have some failures – and being able to help people work through loss and failure is an important part of being a school leader.”

Similar to a team losing a game or a basketball player missing an important shot, explained Thompson, “The resiliency that’s a natural part of coaching transfers really well to school leadership. No matter where you are in the moment, what happens next is what you can control. And the willingness to try and fail and try again – because you know you’re cared about – is what I bring to school.”

AS AN ASSISTANT PRINCIPAL, he liked impacting a large number of people by “helping different teams of teachers put great programs in place. That whole, collaborative spirit really motivates me to do a good job as both a student-and-teacher leader.” He was at Annandale three-and-a-half years; then came a three-year stint at Quander Road Alternative High in Alexandria, with one year as assistant principal and two as principal.

“I liked that you can really know the students by name and by the complexity of their needs because of the smaller setting” said Thompson. “You can determine the roots behind their behaviors and start to address them, which is too difficult in a huge school.”

Indeed, one of the reasons he wanted to become Mountain View’s leader was “to work with this particular population of students and this faculty that does a great job. Mountain View kids’ needs are different;

almost all are on their own or are carrying adult responsibilities of running a household.”

At Mountain View, said Thompson, “The teachers become the students’ biggest advocates – which doesn’t always happen elsewhere in other schools that have parents to do that. And growing up in Fairfax County, I have a drive to make sure that every student, regardless of their family-system background, has the same opportunities I did.”

He replaced the school’s former principal, Gary Morris, who became South County High’s leader. And since Mountain View is in Centreville, it’s also closer to Thompson’s home in Chantilly’s Poplar Tree Estates, where he lives with wife Donna (a Centreville High counselor), son Tyler, 18, and daughters Mackenzie, 17, Paige, 10,

The values of [the school motto], ‘Family, Love and Respect’ are embodied in the school – they’re not just a tagline.”

and Abigail, 8.

But there’s also another reason he wanted to come here. “When I was at Oakton, I had students in danger of not graduating, and they went to Mountain View and thrived,” Thompson said. “So I toured the school, 20 years ago, and was so impressed that I wanted to someday come here myself. I knew this was my niche in the community and that I could make a difference.”

And six months in, he says Mountain View is “everything I thought it would be; it’s been a great experience. There’s just a spirit in the students and faculty that you can’t capture anywhere else. You see it at graduation, and you see it when you walk the halls. The values of [the school motto], ‘Family, Love and Respect’ are embodied in the school – they’re not just a tagline.”

Thompson also learned how much community support Mountain View gets from its business partners, including Centreville Presbyterian Church, Passion4Community, The Life Church, Anne Grabowski, The Parent Community Connection, LaundryLove2Go, Chick-fil-A Chantilly, and Virginia Run Elementary’s staff HR Committee.

And, he added, “The Mountain View Foundation is amazing in the work it does finding scholarships for our students. And it’s also supporting our alumni still in college; we don’t want to let these kids fail. For example, one boy who eventually became a nurse at Inova Fairfax Hospital, got married and became a father of twins, said it all began with that $1,000 he got from the Foundation.

“It got him into college, where he met his wife and began working toward a great career. And it was all because somebody from the Mountain View Foundation believed in him enough to get him started. And when things got tough for him and he felt like giving up, he didn’t, because he remembered he had a responsibility because of that scholarship.”

So, stressed Thompson, “Mountain View students really get a chance to change their life’s trajectory. And it starts with that resilient, Mountain View spirit that lets them know they can overcome adversity and can be great parents and great students. The strength of the school is embodied in the students working to overcome obstacles and a teaching staff committed to meeting their needs. It’s also found in the community of support that helps lighten their load and really relates to our students.”

BESIDES THAT, he said, “There’s really great instruction happening here – talented teachers who know the curriculum and adjust it to meet the needs of our diverse population. We have students from 14 different schools, so everyone comes with different abilities and a different place in the program of studies.”

“So the challenge is finding a way to connect with each student and find a way to deliver that instruction in the most effective way,” continued Thompson. “And I think that’s what motivates and rewards our teachers, and that’s why they take such ownerships of their students’ education.”

He said the school counselors, clinical team and support staff are all dedicated to the mission, too. “I want to continue to help them recognize the value of that growth mindset,” said Thompson. “My job is finding how best to support the students and teachers to achieve their goals.”

Toughest, he said, is, “Being new, making sure I fit in and people can establish a level of trust. I want them to understand I’m part of the team here and I intend to stay.”

Most satisfying, said Thompson, is “Knowing we’re doing great work and making a difference in people’s lives. Students come to us because they haven’t seen a pattern of success in their educational career. And in a lot of ways, they have very little faith in education.”

So, he said, “Seeing that light bulb go off that ‘I am capable and am just like a learner anywhere else’ – and them realizing they can experience success in school – is one of the things that motivate me to come to work. We’re looking to maintain what’s great about Mountain View, and we see ourselves as a strong part of this community.”

McLean Rotary Provides Funding for Literacy Council of Northern Virginia

McLean Rotary President Gene Durman and member Jan Auerbach attended the Literacy Council of Northern Virginia Board Meeting on May 20 to present a check for $1250 which coupled with another check for $1250 earlier in the year was a grant to support a class which is conducted onsite in cooperation with Doubletree Hilton of Tysons to improve the English of the hotel's banquet and housekeeping employees.

Assistance League of Northern Virginia: Fundraising to Support Low-Income Children

Assistance League® of Northern Virginia, an all-volunteer nonprofit organization, held its annual Spring Fundraiser on April 26 at the Country Club of Fairfax to raise funds for its programs that serve the needs of low-income children in 11 Title I elementary schools in Fairfax and Prince William Counties and the City of Alexandria. During the pre-luncheon reception, the 145 guests in attendance had an opportunity to bid on an array of silent auction items donated by local businesses.

Kathryn Jackson, president of the Northern Virginia chapter of Assistance League, emceed the event and described the positive impact the organization's ongoing programs, including Weekend Food for Kids, New Clothing for Kids, Literacy for Kids and Hugs Pillows, have in the community. Attendees were treated to a slide show that provided a visual portrayal of the nonprofit's programs and activities.

During the current school year, Weekend Food for Kids will deliver 18,000 bags of nonperishable food items to students at risk of hunger to take home on weekends when school meals are not available. The New Clothing for Kids initiative provides essential clothing items, and personal grooming products to improve the well-being of students, and layettes to help new mothers in need. Literacy for Kids delivers individualized tutoring to first graders and supplies books to support summer school reading programs, in addition to providing books to allow individual students to build their home libraries. Hugs Pillows distributes hand-made pillows to comfort children undergoing treatment at a local clinic.

Key sponsors of the charity luncheon were recognized for their support: Quadrant, Inc., Panda Stone-wall, Bob's Discount Furniture Charitable Foundation, Marines Plumbing, and Spine Care of Manassas Chiropractic Center. Several partners that have pro-

The Weak That Was

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

All's well that ends well.
 The fortnight or so from you-know-where has finally ended and I am here to write that my warranty has been extended for another two months. The CT scan showed no tumor growth or movement. The "promise" of immunotherapy so far is keeping its 'promise' – keeping the tumors stable.
 Throughout my extremely fortunate cancer experience, I have felt reasonably well and manifested few symptoms/side effects; at least the kind of symptoms/side effects: shortness of breath, coughing, expectorating blood, mind-numbing neuropathy and headaches, among others, about which my oncologist regularly inquires.
 Generally speaking then, my health status has always been about the tale of the tape – to invoke a boxing reference – meaning the diagnostic scans: brain MRI, CT scan of the neck/lower abdomen, PET scan and the initial X-Ray which started the whole adventure, to determine my fitness for duty, so to speak.

It is not until my oncologist shares/summarizes the radiologist's findings – and occasionally shows us the actual computer images themselves, that yours truly/Team Lourie knows where we stand.
 And, where we stand typically is where we are sitting, in a cramped exam room, face to face with the man who holds my life in the palm of his hand – or more specifically, in the words that he chooses and the gesture/body language he exhibits. It's not exactly "Bath Fitter," but "the reveal" is imminent.
 It never gets easy, but it does get easier to endure this kind of potentially life-altering/life-ending moment. Though the familiarity of it hasn't dulled the pain, it has enabled us to balance the pros and cons, up and downs and all-arounds, as we anticipate the words we are about to hear.

During most of these post-scan visits, we've exhaled in relief, but we have had our share of disappointment.

On one occasion, back in late July 2013, I was hospitalized for a week when my lungs accumulated 4.5 liters of fluid, among more significant internal problems (lung collapsing).

Externally, I was unable to speak more than a few words before needing to regroup. As a matter of humorous fact, when my long-time oncology nurse, Ron, saw me that infusion day, he thought I "was a goner," since my oxygen level was so low.

Within a few hours, I was a 'goner' in an ambulance to Holy Cross Hospital in Silver Spring, Md. where I was eventually admitted. Two days later, a thoracic surgeon operated, and a day or two after that, my lung amazingly reinflated.

As a result, in my head and in my gut, (though I'm no Jethro Gibbs from NCIS), when I show up for my infusions and for my post-scan appointments, there's always a part of me that thinks I might not be spending that evening in my own bed.

When you're a cancer patient/survivor, and this kind of whisking off not to Buffalo but instead to the local hospital affiliated with your HMO has happened once, it's only a matter of time (it's impossible not to believe it's inevitable when you've been staged a IV) before it will happen again. I'm not being negative. I'm just saying.

As we sit and wait at home for my oncologist to email us the scan results, or whether we sit and wait in the on-site exam room, I wouldn't say our respective lives pass before us, but I will certainly admit to the total unpleasantness of it.

That being said, we're the lucky ones. There are nearly 160,000 lung cancer patients who succumb to this terrible disease every year who aren't nearly so lucky.

So when I hear the words "stable" from my oncologist, I am humbled as much as I am relieved, that I have lived to fight another eight weeks until my next scan is scheduled and my next fortnight is fought.

And that's how I live my life: in increments. Increments which I'm grateful to have. It may not be ideal, but it's a living, and it sure beats a dying.

Kenny Lourie is an Advertising Representative for The Potomac Almanac & The Connection Newspapers.

A Call For Peace

By Nick Soto

HWPL Volunteers outside of the U.S. Capitol Building in Washington, D.C.

Washington, D.C. - Hundreds gathered at U.S. Capitol on Saturday, May 25 to mark the 6th Annual Commemoration of the Declaration of World Peace. The anniversary was marked by a peace walk that began outside the U.S. Capitol, where participants urged heads of state from 193 countries, political leaders, and community leaders to support the Declaration of Peace and Cessation of War, or, the DPCW.

A diverse group of over 500 citizens from the D.C. metropolitan area and representing 21 countries walked for peace in conjunction with 52 other major cities including Boston and Atlanta. Volunteers from the D.C. Heavenly Culture, World Peace and Restoration of Light (HWPL) have also been working in various countries within the Caribbean such as Haiti, Belize, Guyana and Grenada to help host local peace walks in each respective country.

Peace Walks were held in major cities like Busan, South Korea

Many participants wore traditional clothing to display their cultural differences and to convey that many countries, cultures, and ideologies are actively working together to achieve peace through the DPCW. Individuals from countries such as Madagascar, Guatemala, and India held large, colorful peace signs and props, and chanted, "The people, united, will never be divided!"

Sara Fawn, an HWPL volunteer, said she attended the event to ensure she could be part of a movement that is bigger than herself. "That's why we have all come together today to urge our elected officials — the public servants that have been put in position by the people and for the people — to support the DPCW. We all want the same thing."

The DPCW serves as the solution for worldwide peace and conflict resolution, and is a legal framework for spreading the culture of peace on a local, national and international level.

Citizens outside of the U.S. Supreme Court urging the enactment of the DPCW

"I think our differences are what unite us - it's our strength. There is no religion, no nation that doesn't want peace" says local Woodbridge native, Michael Sarpong.

The DPCW has already been enacted as a National Declaration in various countries around the world including Antigua, eSwatini, and Seychelles. It is currently being presented to pass as law through the United Nations, and citizens around the world are urging their legislators to support the DPCW on a local and national level.

The group sponsoring the event is the "Heavenly Culture, World Peace and Restoration of Light (HWPL)". The organization was founded in 2013 to build a worldwide network of people dedicated to achieving global peace in communities around the world.

HWPL is a peace NGO associated with the United Nation's Economic and Social Council (UNESCO), as well as the UN Department of Global Communications. Amidst rising global tensions, HWPL is engaging political and community leaders, journalists, and young people draw attention to its cause.
