Arlington Sets Ambitious Goals in Energy Plan

day adopted an update to the Community Energy Plan that sets ambitious targets for transforming the county's energy sector.

"This plan is bold, because nothing less than a bold response from every community across this nation and across the globe is essential to address the dire threat posed to our planet by climate change," said Arlington County Board Chair Christian Dorsey. "Arlington's updated Community Energy Plan is based on the latest climate science and views energy decisions through the lenses of energy security, economic competitiveness, environmental commitment and equity." The board voted unanimously to adopt the update.

The plan incorporates goals for buildings; resilience; renewable energy; transportation, county government actions, and education and human behavior. It envisions a carbon neutral Arlington by 2050 that will be more resilient, where all electricity will come from renewable sources, where more residents will drive electric vehicles and more will use transit, and where homes and buildings will be more energy-efficient.

With a goal of lowering total building

he Arlington County Board to energy use in Arlington by at least 38 percent from 2016 levels, despite the growth in the number of households and corresponding economic activity, the plan calls for numerous steps, including more stringent energy codes; expanding investment in energy efficiency programs and land use and transportation approaches that promote energy efficiency; and pursuing funding opportunities and partnerships for energy efficiency programs and projects that reflect local and regional needs.

With a goal of ensuring Arlington's energy resilience, the plan calls for seeking opportunities to develop or facilitate projects that enable Arlington's energy infrastructure to prepare for and adapt to changing conditions and more quickly recover from disruptions like storms and

The policy targets of 50 percent renewable electricity for government operations by 2022 and 100 percent by 2025, and a goal for the community achieving 100 percent renewable electricity by 2035. In addition, Arlington plans for the installation and use of 160 megawatts of on-site solar electricity.

Both organizations say they are committed to advancing education, strengthening communities and improving lives. Through its community initiatives, AT&T has a long history of investing in projects that create learning opportunities; promote academic and economic achievement; and address community needs.

In addition to safely recycling electronics that can be harmful to the environment, the money they raise through this collection will go towards the Arlington Rotary Educational Foundation (www.arlingtonrotaryclub.org).

The Arlington South Lions Club and the Lions Eyeglass Recycling Center of Northern Virginia (LERC NOVA) are new sponsors this year and will be collecting used eyeglasses and hearing aids at the event.

Arlington Resolves to Achieve Equity

he Arlington County Board committed to developing an equitable approach to decision-making, with the goal of eliminating disparities in outcomes. The Board unanimously adopted a resolution committing the County to establishing equity targets. The county will develope an equity scorecard as part of an Equity Action Plan. The County plans to collaborate with Arlington Public Schools, the Community Progress Network, the Arlington Community Foundation, Virginia Humanities and others on initiatives to address inequities and foster equity."Arlington is rightfully proud of our successes on many fronts," Arlington County Board Chair Christian Dorsey said. "Yet disparities exist. This resolution commits County government to partnering with individuals and entities to lead our highly educated, engaged community in eliminating disparities and ensuring that all Arlingtonians have access to opportunities and community conditions needed to reach their full potential and experience optimal well-being."The resolution kicks off County Government's participation this fall in a nine-month Metropolitan Washington Council of Government (COG) Racial Equity Cohort. Senior County and Arlington Public Schools staff will join a learning cohort that brings together representatives from jurisdictions beginning or expanding work on racial equity in their communities. The program will inform the County's development of its plan for addressing equity issues. COG has engaged the Government Alliance on Race and Equity, https:// www.racialequityalliance.org/ a national network of governments working to achieve racial equity and advance opportunities for all, to facilitate the program.Racial Equity ToolThe Board directed the County Manager to present a Racial Equity Tool to the Board in September 2020. The tool will be used in policy, practice, program and budget decisions as developed through the COG Racial Equity Learning Cohort. Through this tool, the County may identify pilot projects to demonstrate where to start achieving racial equity outcomes in Arlington; a capacity building plan and organizational structure to institutionalize equity within the County and a framework for a Racial Equity Action Plan for the County to implement. The Board also directed the Manager in operating budgets and Capital Improvement Plan to provide a supplementary analysis that considers and addresses: Who benefits? Who is burdened? Who is missing? How do we know?

ive women sit around a table at Goodwin House at Bailey's Crossroads on Thursday, Sept. 19 concentrating on their pile of white domino tiles. Four other competitors sit at a nearby table.

Eva Sorensen from Alexandria says, "I have been playing in Northern Virginia Senior Olympics (NVSO) since 2011. I've got a box this big of medals." At 96-years-old she is oldest competitor in this year's Mexican train dominoes competition. Sorenson has already competed this year in the 60-meter track event, bowling and cribbage.

Meredith Raine from Springfield says this is her first year competing. "I didn't even know it existed." But she plays with her old college friends a couple of times a year. "We didn't use these rules at all. We played that everyone could start a Mexican train."

"No," Ruth Krulfeld who lives at The Jefferson in Arlington, assures her. "Just one Mexican train." She says the rules really sound a little complicated at first but you get used to it. Sorenson asks to see a copy of the rules to refresh her memory.

Virginia Biafore, who also lives in Arlington at The Jefferson, says she plays in a weekly group there, "and I really enjoy it."

Riley Geary, the events coordinator, tells the group to draw 14 dominoes each instead of the usual 15 since there are five players at the table. "Otherwise there are not enough dominoes left for the bone pile. Who is going to be the scorekeeper?"

Julia Jeffries who also lives in Arlington says, "I guess I'll do it. I do it a lot." Jeffries is in her second year of competing at Mexican train dominoes. "It's fun. There's always someone better than you."

Raine replies, "That's what I'm afraid of." Each lady draws 14 dominoes and sets them up in a row so none of the other players can see them.

Ninety six-year-old Eva Sorensen from Alexandria is the oldest competitor in Mexican train dominos in this year's Northern Virginia Senior Olympics held at Goodwin House.

Krulfeld says, "it's partly a game of strategy but a lot is the luck of the draw. O.K. we go clockwise." She says she plays Mexican dominoes for fun. "I say it has to be fun or don't do it."

Each woman has drawn a double twelve and begins her own domino train in the center of the table. The game has begun.

he room is silent except for the crack of the pool balls at Lincolnia Senior Center on Monday, Sept. 16. It is the women's 8-ball pool competition, one of 60 events hosted in 25 venues by the Northern Virginia Senior Olympics (NVSO).

James "Rip" Westray, event coordinator, lays out the rules. "No coaching by husbands or friends or you are automatically disqualified although you may help your opponent if you choose." Also he explains to start the game you may choose flipping or lagging.

Kanchan Garg, from Arlington is paired against Britanya Rapp, also from Arlington, in the 60-69-age category. Garg says she has been playing off and on foreight years. "Somehow I had a fancy for it."

Diane Hill from Springfield is paired against Betty Roadcap from Ashburn in the 80s age category. Hill says she has been playing for more than ten years. "My husband took it up when he retired and I took it up, too, because I liked being with him." She adds, "At first I was afraid of it."

Roadcap says she has been playing pool for 35 years.

Strategy? Hill says, "I just feel lucky when I can hit the ball."

The game begins with the snap of 15 balls, seven striped balls and seven solid and one eight ball.

In between are the softball hit and throw, swimming and diving, tennis and horse-shoes, corn hole toss, bocce and the fastest growing sport, pickleball. If you'd rather sit and think, there is duplicate bridge, cribbage, Bunco, scrabble and jigsaw puzzle, a new game this year. Or you could challenge 96-year-old Eva Sorenson in Mexican train dominoes (if you dare.)

The senior games are for seniors 50 years or older in the cities of Alexandria, Falls Church, and the counties of Arlington, Fairfax, Loudoun, Fauquier and Prince William. NVSO began in 1982 with about 80 competitors. In 2019 the registrants broke the record with over 800 registrants.

Arlington Sets Ambitious Goals in Energy Plan

The energy plan has specific targets for reducing the amount of per capita carbon produced each decade through 2050. The County also will produce a plan that describes what it would take to transition away from internal combustion engines and increase the use of alternative and public transportation to reduce vehicle miles traveled.

County government operations will become carbon neutral by 2050 and energy security will be improved throughout county operations.

The County plans to engage individuals to reduce energy use; to increase the level of professional expertise and work force in the community related to energy; to recognize extraordinary efforts made to help the community reach the energy goals; to increase transparency about energy use, and to put in place programs that address energy equity issues, including seniors, the underserved, low-to-moderate income or disadvantaged communities and challenges in the rental market.

The goal is to provide have a proposed implementation plan by June 2020.

On Saturday, outside of the Arlington Government building where the County Board was discussing the energy plan, more than 50 supporters, organized by the Sierra Club Virginia Chapter, celebrated Arlington's historic commitment to 100 percent clean electricity.

Speakers gave context for why the CEP goals are so meaningful, sharing different perspectives on why a purposeful transition to clean energy is critical.

"You're trying to figure out why in the world is the NAACP talking about climate change," Karen Nightengale, executive director of the Arlington NAACP, said. She went on to explain the urgency of environmental and climate justice: "Our current fossil fuel energy system has long represented a form of hidden violence against brown and black communities. Historically, people of color have been disproportionately impacted by air and water pollution."

Dr. Neelu Tummala with the Virginia Clinicians for Climate Action told a story of one of her first patients, a 14 year-old boy who she described as "one of the many faces of the climate crisis." Due to worsening asthma, Michael had to give up his passion of playing soccer, and leave a team that was central to his identity and social belonging as a teenager.

Arlington is now the 145th locality in the U.S., and the first in Virginia, to make a 100 percent clean energy commitment.

""By making such an ambitious commitment, Arlington is making a strong statement to both our state government and Dominion Energy. Restrictive energy policies have long held Virginians back from reaping the benefits of the clean energy future we need," said Alice Redhead, Clean Energy Organizer for the Sierra Club Virginia Chapter.

Exploring Art in Retirement

t was in third grade when Barb Cram first discovered her artistic talent. Her teacher asked to use one of her drawings as an example to teach a technique to other students.

Though she was lauded for her artistic talent from elementary school through high school, upon graduation, she says she put that interest on hold and engaged in educational pursuits that she was told were practical.

"When my generation as growing up it was all about getting skills like typing, bookkeeping and stenography so that you could get a job after you graduate said Cram, now 72.

After a long career, which included a stint in the White House, Cram has reengaged with her creative side. Now as President of Falls Church Arts, she is helping other retirees live out their passion, discover their talent or simply learn to appreciate art.

"Art can do so much for seniors. It's like a vacation for the mind," she said. "Whether as an artist, a teacher, a docent or an art student, there's place for everyone."

Retired clinical psychologist Carolyn Jackson

Retired clinical psychologist, Carolyn Jackson Sahni, spent her career practicing in settings ranging from state universities to non-profit organizations. Retirement has offered her the opportunity to explore her creative interests.

"I have never been employed as an artist or in a specific art related field, [but] art has always been my first love, said Jackson Sahni, who lives in Vienna. "I see art as our ultimate means of personal expression. I have an overwhelming preference for beauty and nature. Art has been my way of indulging this preference."

Sahni says that art has given her the gift of living out her dedication to life-long learning. "I believe in ... growing, expressing and discovering, she said. "While I am not quite ready to accept the definition of senior that I am, I cherish every day of my seventy-one years."

Though she spent 32 years as a government employee working in a variety of agencies including the National Institutes of Health and The Department of Homeland Security, Cynthia Miller had always wanted to explore visual arts. A few discouraging childhood experiences left her afraid to try.

"I have been interested in art my whole life, but my hands were frozen until I found my courage" she said. "I decided at age 70 that it was my time to learn and explore my desires as an artist."

Not only is Miller an artist, but she volunteers her time as a docent, sharing her passion with others. "I often speak with others who are seniors with few outside interests," she said. "They think I am brave in approaching my art as another career. I have a love of life, and feel I have a gift yet to develop and offer to others."

McLean resident Sallie Evans once worked as a recreation therapist, in retirement she works as an art instructor at Falls Church Arts teaching. "I love

Teaching not only children, but she leads art projects for Fall Church Art's Memory Café, a social and recreational gathering of individuals with memory loss and their caregivers, friends, and family.

Deborah Conn, 70, retired from a career in marketing and began taking lessons in watercolor at the Art League in Alexandria. These days she's an active and prolific artist. Her medium is watercolor, frequently on textured paper that she makes by crinkling tissue paper and gluing it on the painting surface. Humans are the subjects of most of her work, but as one of the resident artists at Palette2 restaurant in Shirlington, she sketches dogs for patrons while they eat.

"I've been experimenting with making parts of my paintings less defined so viewers can fill in with their own mind," said Conn, who teaches art out of her home studio and works is an art curator. "In the last ten years or so, painting and art have become enmeshed in nearly every area of my life. Many of my closest friends are artists."

raft hard cider is taking the beverage world by storm. Sharing a pint of cider while hanging out with your furry Fido friends? Heaven.

That's just what the Animal Welfare League of Arlington has in mind with a new fundraiser, hosted by Alexandria's Lost Boy Cider. Taking place on Oct. 29 "Sit, Stay, Cider" is the first pairing between the shelter and the cidery and one of the shelter's newest ticket-limited events. Both dogs and humans are welcome at the cidery for a tasting, costume contest, tours and more.

"This is a new fundraiser for AWLA; we're trying to host some more medium-sized events in lots of different venues," said AWLA communications specialist Chelsea

And unlike some of AWLA's other more "free-for-all" events, the ticket quantity to this event is capped. Only 65 regular tickets and 16 VIP tickets are available for the event, ensuring a more intimate crowd (and more space for the pups). Regular tickets include a pass for a pint of Lost Boy's flagship cider; VIP tickets include a tour, early admission and a pint of one of the cidery's specialty drinks.

Signature Produces "Escaped Alone"

Story of amiable chitchat with a side of apocalyptic horror in a British garden, perfect for the season.

By Steve Hibbard
The Connection

alk about tea and calamity. Signature Theatre is presenting the Washington premiere of "Escaped Alone" from Sept. 24 – Nov. 3, 2019. In a serene British garden, three old friends are joined by a neighbor to engage in amiable chitchat — with a side of apocalyptic horror. The women's talk of grandchildren and TV shows breezily intersperses with tales of terror in a quietly teetering world where all is not what it seems.

Acclaimed D.C. actress Holly Twyford, who is directing the show, said she was flattered that Signature's Artistic Director Eric Schaeffer sent her the script and asked if she'd be interested in directing. "Not only am I a big (playwright) Caryl Churchill fan but I had just been reading about the Royal Court production of 'Escaped Alone' and was already intrigued. I knew I wanted to do it," she said.

She said the challenge was that it's a Caryl Churchill play. "No, seriously. It is essential when working on any Churchill play, whether as an actor or a director, to try to understand as many layers as possible. She is a dense playwright, and by that, I mean that even a play only 50 minutes long has layers and layers of ideas to it that need to be explored," she said.

She added: "It's exhausting and so gratifying. Technically, a lot of the challenges were quite literally 'You're saying this to her but who are you saying that line to?' and 'Is that line a question or a statement?' and 'This line is cut off ... so what are you about to say?' Caryl Churchill loves playing with language and her dialogue is rarely straightforward, especially in this play."

"People have said that Caryl Churchill is a playwright of ideas," said Twyford. "While many playwrights use their plays to make a point about something, I think Churchill says 'Here are a bunch of ideas that are relevant today and I'm thinking about them.' I hope that audience members walk away with these ideas swirling about in their heads and that it leads to something for which I think Caryl Churchill is an advocate: communication and the success of language."

Helen Hedman

Holly Twyford

Actress Helen Hedman plays the role of Sally, a retired doctor who practiced closer to London and now keeps busy with her friends and grandchildren. "The play takes place in my garden, where three friends have been getting together for tea since they reached retirement. We're joined by a fourth woman about the same age. Over a series of afternoons, we chat. But the whole lot is going on. Or sometimes not. And sometimes the fourth woman steps out beyond my garden and renders views of an apocalypse," she said.

Hedman added: "One of the biggest challenges was the structure itself. When you read the script, it's just fragments of sentences, one seemingly unrelated to the next. And Caryl Churchill gives us zero stage directions — which became a good thing, actually. Our director Holly Twyford and the cast could puzzle it out together. And let's talk about no punctuation! It's a good day when you get a period or a question mark!"

As far as audience takeaways, Hedman said: "I hope people will take away all kinds of different things. There's a quiet strength found here in the garden. Maybe it's this: it's not that everything is going to be completely all right, it's that they are given the assurance that THEY are going to be all right. And sometimes, that's all you need."

Signature Theatre is presenting "Escaped Alone" from Sept. 24 – Nov. 3, 2019. Show times are Tuesdays through Saturdays at 7:30 and 8 p.m.; Sundays at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. Tickets are $40 to $90. ### Engineering a Solution

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Though not exactly "The Continuing Story of Bungalow Bill," ("The Beatles," 1968) but for those of you regular readers still interested in the presumptive outcome - in my lifetime, of my 250 year-old home's "structural integrity" - as it relates to my pending refinance application, we may now have lift off, so to speak. (Hopefully Houston, we don't have a problem.) A structural engineer came by the house yesterday at my request and examined and measured the cracks in the concrete slab which "porches" the front of my house. After which he offered his professional opinion, a more detailed version of which will be emailed to me in a few days (copies of which I will forward to all the interested parties). According to this engineer, there is a concrete solution which, cost notwithstanding (or even known yet) will secure my home's structural foundation and assuage the appraiser.

The problem, as I understand it, concerns the possibility of my house falling down, from back to front. On my porch there are five wood pillars which stand floor to ceiling equidistant across the porch. They are not embedded in the concrete (nor are they cracked or rotting). They are supporting the weight of the house, but apparently are on shaky ground. What has happened is, due to the improper preparation of the soil onto which this concrete slab was originally poured (100 years ago - or whenever), the concrete has buckled under the pressure, and the house is tilting, sort of (and/or has the potential to slip further and fall). And if this happens, neither my wife nor I will be able to get up, whether we're owners of Life Alert medallions or not

There is a solution however, which doesn't require "a pick and shovel and 20 men" (to invoke a Three Stooges reference). Nor will it require any heavy equipment and/or cabling of my house in some way to lift it off the ground in order to break up all the length, width and depth of approximately 150 square feet of concrete (I don't know about the cubic exactly). The plan seems to be for the house to be temporarily supported by wood beams as it is raised up a bit and then one foot square sections of the concrete surrounding each of the pillars will be broken up. According to the engineer, not a major undertaking. Then piers, which are structural engineering jargon for whatever I need to have supporting the pillars, will be placed on the ground/ foundation beneath each pillar and then back-filled with concrete and Bob's your uncle: structural integrity. At least that's as much as I can understand/explain, anyway. Orthotics for the house you might say.

Now whether my description of the repair is at all accurate, the engineer was clear. Though the repair is delicate, he agreed, nobody is reinventing the wheel here, and the solution as proposed is not that complicated. (As for the 'structural integrity" of our 100 year-old stable, another concern of the appraiser, the engineer said "We don't certify the structural integrity of 100 year-old buildings." Now whether this out-building situation becomes a deal-breaker, I can only hope that reasonable minds prevail. Check back to this space for future updates.)

At present, I fear there will be fits (by me) and starts (by the various external parties lining up to solve my homes structural problems) to get me to the refinance finish line with some financial integrity still intact. I won't lie, there's a bit at stake here, and I can't afford (literally and figuratively) any slip ups. As I approach my 65th birthday, my goal is to simplify my life and secure my future, not complicate my life and "insecure" my future. I had hoped this refinance would accomplish the former. I had no idea that it would lead to the latter.
