Local Authors Share History, Inspiration

You are not too old (or too young) to become an activist, Ottesen said.

By PEGGY McEWAN
POTOMAC ALMANAC

Potomac residents had the opportunity to learn about local history last week when local author Judith Welles introduced her latest book, Potomac, at two meetings.

"First, an opening celebration was held Wednesday evening at Hunter's Inn on River Road, which drew many long time Potomac residents to share memories of their own Potomac history.

"A book about local history will bring a community together," Welles said.

Welles also visited with residents and sold books at Strosniders Hardware on Saturday and will be a featured speaker with the Potomac Library, the Friends of the Library Winter Author Series on Saturday, Jan. 25.

This month's speaker in that series was K.K. Ottesen who shared her book, "Activist: Portraits of Courage," on Saturday.

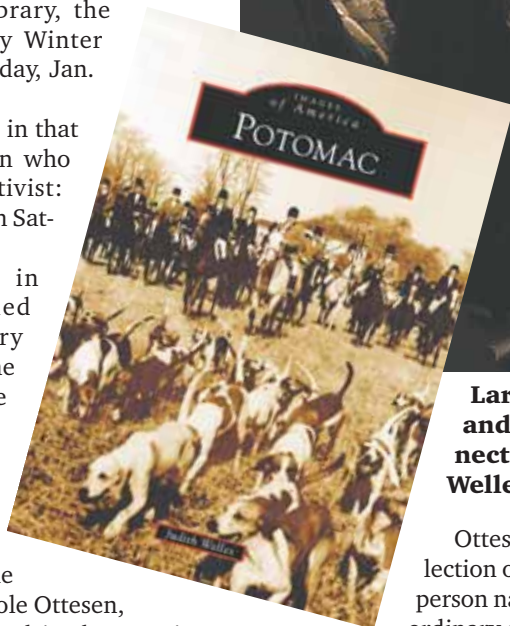

Ottesen grew up in Potomac and attended Potomac Elementary School from grades one to four. The library, she said, was a special place for her, recalling that when she was young it was located on the ground floor of the bank building across the street. Her mother, Carole Ottesen, still lives in Potomac and is also a writer and author.

"I think she wrote for the Potomac Almanac," K.K. Ottesen said. (She did.)

PHOTOS CONTRIBUTED

Larry and Margaret McBryde, Leonard Proctor, Mike Mitchell, Janelle Straszheim, Vicki and Skip Crawford and many more came to celebrate the new Potomac book and reconnect with friends from the past. Montgomery History hosted the event and author Judith Welles gave a short talk about Potomac highlights with vintage photos from the book.

Ottesen's book is a collection of photos and first-person narratives of mostly ordinary people who stood up to right a wrong and became leaders — activists.

She is both the photographer and interviewer for the book and traveled across the country to get her stories.

"I was frustrated by the division [in the country] and wondered what I could do to help bring people together," Ottesen said. "I wondered what compels someone to become an activist."

So, she set off to talk to people who are activists, some famous, others local, almost unknown, who are making a difference. She included 41 people in her book.

"Once we get to know someone it helps [smooth over] division," she said.

Starting with a photo of Congressman John Lewis, Democrat from Georgia, Ottesen shared the stories and photos of about a dozen subjects from the book.

Lewis is known for his work in the Civil Rights Movement and for voting rights, including being beaten by police and serving time in jail for protesting. Now, as a congressman serving his 17th term in the House of Representatives, he still uses his voice in activism.

Ottesen introduced the audience to less well-known activists too, including actress Nicole Maines who plays the first transgender superhero on TV.

"She grew up transgender in a small town in Maine," Ottesen said.

Sister Megan Rice, a Catholic nun and nuclear disarmament activist was arrested at age 82 when she broke into the Y-12 National Security Complex in Oak Ridge, Tennessee.

You are not too old (or too young) to become an activist, Ottesen said, introducing the audience to Jasilyn Charger a 23-year-old member of the Cheyenne River Sioux tribe in South Dakota.

Welles

Charger has been active in protests to protect her people's lands and environment since a teenager.

Ottesen's book, billed as a civil right book, a social justice book and an inspirational gift, is available on Amazon; as is Potomac by Judith Welles.

Welles book, a pictorial history of Potomac from its early days to current times, was written using many photographs from Montgomery History, formerly the Montgomery County Historical Association. Part of the proceeds from the book will go to that organization.

Welles will be speaking and selling books Saturday, Dec. 14 at Bethesda Co-Op, 6500 Seven Locks Road, Bethesda and at The Surrey Saddlery, 14120 Darnestown Road, Darnestown.

Lighting Up the Season

Holiday designs to benefit Children's National Hospital.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE ALMANAC

Holiday trees donned with a wide array of décor that ranges from musical instruments and fairies to dollhouses and mice will be on display to raise money for charity later this month. "Light Up the Season," the annual event that highlights creative collaborations between Children's National Hospital patients and notable area artists will be held on Sunday, Dec. 15, 2019 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the Four Seasons Hotel in Washington, D.C.

As part of the project, patient-designer teams created custom holiday trees, mantelpieces, menorahs and dollhouses — all available for purchase — with proceeds going to Children's National to support programs that improve the health and well-being of children across the Washington, D.C. region.

Inspired by the children's Christmas book, "If You Take a Mouse to the Movies," the tree created by Quintece Hill-Mattauszek of Studio Q Designs in Alexandria features mice decorating the holiday tree while under a whimsical snowfall.

"Through a child's eyes mice are symbols of youth and innocence with their resourceful courage, adorable curiosity, and their perspective of seeing the world from a different point of view, just like children," she said. "We have embraced them in children's literature for decades because of the lessons they teach, the values they instill, and playfulness they leave in our hearts."

Using a recording of "O Tannenbaum" and musical-themed ornaments, Potomac, Md. designer Sharon Kleinman of Transitions by Sharon Kleinman, assembled a melodious creation. "During our get-to-know-you session, I discovered that my partner is quite the musician," she said. "He plays several instruments and is passionate about music. We decided to make our tree a musical tree."

Taking inspiration from their patient-partner's love of animals, the design team at Pamela Harvey Interiors in Oak Hill, created a display that includes a dollhouse and a fully decorated 7.5 foot tree with a modern farmhouse vibe.

"Our team had a lot of fun decorating ... we added lighting, wallpaper, area carpets, wood furniture and soft furnishings," said Harvey. "We even decorated it with tiny wreaths and Christmas trees complete with tiny presents. Our tree includes a selection of hand-made clay ornaments. Each ornament is stamped with a different animal and attached with a simple satin ribbon."

Keeping the modern farmhouse theme continuous, the Harvey team combined green, plaid, white, silver and natural wood tones to complement the animal ornaments. "We are presenting our patient with a barnyard animal farm, which is decorated with the same theme, as our gift for inspiring us to create holiday decor that can be enjoyed for many years," said Harvey.

Fairies and folklore were the basis for the Christmas tree created Sandra Meyer of Ella Scott Design in Bethesda. The patient's predilection for all things mythical was brought to life in a tree filled with flowers, fantasy and mythical fairies in nature-themed setting. "Fairies have a long history [of] symbolizing kindness and a desire to help humans," said Meyer. "Light Up the Season" is a fairy-like event that exists to help others."

Light Up the Season will be held on Sunday, Dec. 15, 2019 from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Four Seasons Hotel in Washington, D.C. Tickets for the event are $50 per child (ages 16 and under), $85 per adult and $250 for a family of four (package includes two adults and two children 16 and under). Reflecting On All We Have To Be Thankful For Thanksgiving and holidays are a special time of year, when we reflect on all our blessings: our family, our friends, and this extraordinary community we share. But Thanksgiving isn't just about giving thanks, it's about giving back – to the least, the littlest, and the last among us.

This holiday season, I'm deeply grateful for this opportunity of a lifetime, to represent the only community I've ever called home, and to attempt to be worthy of a place with such enormous human talent and natural treasures.

This first year on the County Council has allowed me to truly appreciate all our community has to offer: the creativity, the ingenuity, the empathy in service to one another.

Just recently, I attended the dedication of Potomac Community Resources' James M. Sullivan Memorial House, a beautiful group home adjacent to Our Lady of Mercy providing inclusivity, dignity, and respect in a gorgeous new home where any of us would love to live.

I've made multiple visits this year to Glenstone Museum, a world-class modern art venue and natural and architectural marvel. Few if any places on earth have a gem like Glenstone in the heart of their community, and fewer still can appreciate it for free, including a partnership with the county for direct bus access.

The trails along the Canal are my personal happy place.

So it's been a particular pleasure this year to support the C&O Canal Trust in its work preserving and upgrading our irreplaceable recreational and historic asset. We were happy to support the successful effort for a $1.02 million state grant to continue repairs of the towpath.

I grew up right across the street from Potomac Community Center, and was there often to play basketball and baseball and attend Club Friday.

It's the place where I joined my mom to vote every election as a child, where we kicked off my campaign for County Council, and where my parents and I cast our ballots together with my name on it last year.

That's why it was such a personal thrill to join community leaders and some of my childhood coaches and mentors to celebrate the PCC's 30th Anniversary last month.

These are just a few examples of why I am so grateful for our amazing community and the humbling honor to represent you on the County Council. I'm working hard to fulfill the faith you've placed in me, and continue to feel blessed for every moment.

Thank you for the privilege and honor to serve, and best wishes to you and yours for a reflective, relaxing, fulfilling holiday season.

But for those who don't speak Russian, browsing through the records in old-style Russian handwriting can be daunting. This talk will focus on how to identify, within various types of Russian Empire records, records relating to a researcher's family, in spite of not having any Russian language background.

The talk will also cover various sources for online Russian Empire documents and discuss how to leverage these for one's own research. Cost is $5 for non-members. Visit the website: <https://jgsgw.org/>

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Off we go — or not — into the wild blue yonder. It seems that my most recent CT scan's results, described as "a little worse" by my oncologist are indeed cause for some reflection and change. (I'm not quite able to say "cause for concern," yet.) As such, to make the most effective change, per my oncologist's orders, I am scheduled for a needle biopsy on the Wednesday this column publishes. This procedure will determine, if there is a match, to the specific type of cancer tumor that I have. (Without boring you with too many details, the short version is that all cancer tumors are not alike. Biomarkers/genetic mutations such as ALK, BRAF, EGFR, NTRK, PD-L1 and ROS1 are the most common, and certain medicines work better against certain tumor types. Variation in the tumor types, such as the ones I've described, is a relatively recent discovery in lung cancer research.)

What this research has led to is another new kind of cancer treatment known as "targeted therapy." This means than rather than "flying blind," to use one of my brother, Richard's, favorite expressions, and employing a one-size-fits-all kind of approach to treatment, oncologists now have specific medicines to infuse when the tumor's genetic mutation is confirmed. Wednesday hopefully, will confirm something. However, researchers have not discovered all the tumor types so it's possible that this biopsy will reveal nothing useful for me and in effect, I'll be back to square one-ish.

As for what 'square-one-ish' means? It means that I'll likely be infusing medicines that previously worked for a time but whose infusions were stopped after they all ran their successful course years ago. As I've been told whenever this change became necessary, cancer cells eventually figure out what's happening to them and then the tumors begin growing. Once this growth is indicated on the CT scan, a new medicine is usually started, and on and on it goes until, apparently now, for me anyhow. "Targeted therapy" offers lots of new medicines. I just need a match. Unfortunately, there's no guarantee the biopsy will provide just such a match. There's only one way to find out. On Wednesday, we will begin to find out. To say I have a lot riding on this determination is the understatement of the year; at least for Team Lourie, it is. If I'm forced to repeat infusions from medicines that stopped working years ago, it'll be "Katie, bar the door," as we say in Boston which means, "Look out!"

I'm trying not to 'look out' though. I'm trying not to look anywhere, except straight ahead. Just because my life may be at stake, is no time to deviate from the norm that has been my modus operandi over the past 11 years. I'm not quite ready to consider that my stage IV lung cancer survival is coming to an end. Maybe it's just staggering and within a week or so, I'll get my bearings again. New medical information getting me new medical treatment is sure to put a bounce back in my step. For the first time in 11 years, to quote George Costanza from Seinfeld: "I'm back, baby." This could be the jolt my body needs to get me through to the next research level. The Team Lourie strategy has always been for me to try and live long enough to reach the next medical breakthrough. So far, I've benefited from a few: tarceva, avastin and alimta; all miracle drugs according to my oncologist, and here I am, living proof that it has all worked.

Until I hear, post procedure, from my oncologist, in the interim, I am re-experiencing many what-happens-if-and-when emotions that I've not wrestled with for years. Unfortunately, this hospital visit is taking me back to the visit/biopsy I had in Feb. 2009 which confirmed the malignancy in my lungs in the first place. And here I am, hopefully not in the last place, waiting for the results of a biopsy yet again. It didn't work out so good in 2009. I just hope I have better luck in 2019.
