Siege of the Capital

BY KENNETH R. "KEN" PLUM
STATE DELEGATE (D-36)

This column is being written as news stories continue to increase that thousands of persons opposed to gun legislation will be coming to the Capitol grounds to protest. Increased citizen participation is usually a good thing, but in this case it is seeming more like a siege than a peaceful protest. Already the FBI has arrested three individuals in right-wing hate groups who apparently were planning to come with guns that would be fired from various locations to start a race riot. Three other persons were arrested from the same hate group but whose plans for the day were less specific. Law enforcement authorities had gathered enough credible evidence of a threat that the Governor barred any guns on Capitol grounds on Monday except for the police. Security fencing was installed on the grounds. Streets were closed.

The General Assembly had made plans to conduct business as usual as much as that is possible. I am hopeful that the news you have been reading is that the day passed without serious incident. I can assure you that I will be going forward with my bill to close the many loopholes in the current background checks system to ensure that people who have shown themselves to be a threat to themselves or others will not be able to purchase firearms. Recent polls indicate that about 80 percent of people support the bill as a good public safety measure.

Only twice before am I aware that the capital experienced a serious physical siege. The first occurred in 1676-1677 while Virginia was still a royal colony with its capital in Jamestown. Nathaniel Bacon led an armed rebellion against royal Governor William Berkeley who he contended did not provide adequate protection against Indian attacks for settlers on the western frontier. The story gets more complicated as there was a desire by the settlers to seize more land from the Indians and for Bacon to gain more power in the governance of the colony. His attack led to the capital being burned. You can still view the foundation of the capital if you visit Jamestown Island today.

The second siege of the capital came near the end of the Civil War after Virginia had been out of the Union for four years. Richmond was the capital of the Confederate States, and many skirmishes and battles occurred around it during the war. The city was key to mobilizing, outfitting and feeding the Confederate army but did not fall to Union forces until April 1865. Confederate forces burned the city as they departed. Fortunately, the Capitol building was saved from the fire that otherwise destroyed the city. A week later the Confederates surrendered at Appomattox west of the city. The war was ended even though there are many who continue to debate who was to blame for the war and who won.

A well-regulated militia made up of state and local police will protect the Capitol building and its occupant legislators from those who would deny freedom to others through their misuse of firearms. We will not be bullied regardless of their siege.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Making Alzheimer's a National Priority

To the Editor:

One in three seniors dies from Alzheimer's Disease. It is the only leading cause of death in the United States that cannot be prevented, cured or even slowed down. It is imperative that we have elected officials who are working to make Alzheimer's a national priority!

As an Alzheimer's Association Advocacy Ambassador I am fortunate to be able to work with Sen. Mark Warner to discuss the staggering impact of Alzheimer's Disease in Virginia and the Nation. I am grateful for his willingness to listen and work with us toward solutions for helping families with a diagnosis of dementia. We are proud Virginia is represented by a champion in Congress to the 150,000 Virginians living with Alzheimer's.

My young family was impacted by Alzheimer's when my 53 year old husband was diagnosed with the disease. Although he died 17 years ago, I am passionate about advocating to find a cure for this dreadful disease. I believe research at the NIH is an important necessity towards a cure so we can live in a world without Alzheimer's!.

Please join the Alzheimer's Association and me in thanking Sen. Warner for his continued support in the fight to end Alzheimer's.

Dangerous Escalation

To the Editor:

Trump's blatantly illegal assassination of a military leader in a foreign country was a dangerous escalation of hostilities that will affect the whole Middle East region. Imagine if another country had done that to one of our generals? Fortunately, there is growing bipartisan support in the House and Senate to reassert Congress's constitutional war authority and prevent another disastrous and endless war. I encourage all citizens to take action by writing or calling their elected representatives and asking them to co-sponsor and vote for proposals that would prohibit the unauthorized use of military force in Iran or any other country. The President has the right to defend our country in a crisis, but we need to take away his ability to exercise arbitrary and unjust actions unilaterally.

Help Prevent War

To the Editor:

So often I hear people say, "There is nothing I can do to work for a safer, more just world."

In recent days we have witnessed the frightening deadly increase in hostilities between Iran and the United States.

There is something important you can do.

Over the last two years, I have heard from legislative staff that our legislators do not hear from many constituents weighing in on Foreign Policy.

Now you have an opportunity to do something to help prevent war with Iran.

Contact your US representative to support H.R. 5543, a bill to immediately defund military action in Iran. The Trump Administration can't make war without funding. Congress must retake its constitutional duty to decide when we go to war.

'It Takes a Long Time to Master this Job'

Behind the scenes with a police K9 officer.

BY BONNIE HOBBS
THE CONNECTION

Each month, members of the Sully District Police Station's Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) learn about a different aspect of police work. And recently, they received a presentation on the K9 unit from K9 Officer Brad Weeks.

Weeks – who's been a K9 officer for 10 years – works with two dogs, an 18-month-old, German Shepherd named Dozer and a bloodhound puppy named Juneau. And Dozer accompanied him to the CAC meeting and illustrated how he responds to Weeks's commands.

"Fairfax County police have 15 patrol/narcotic dogs, plus three bloodhounds," said Weeks. "The patrol dogs are trained to alert on narcotics and in searches. Their agility enables them to jump over obstacles, go through tunnels and climb up ladders."

He also said these dogs will go into places that were broken into and will bark if someone's there. And, he added, if necessary, they'll bite the suspect to apprehend him. "But what we do the most with them, is tracking," said Weeks.

scent-specific tracks and are usually used in searches for missing children and adults.

"For example, bloodhounds sniff the odor on a missing person's clothing and can do tracks that are 24 hours old," said Weeks. "And when they find them, they're trained to jump on, but not bite, the person. Patrol dogs are better following fresh tracks."

In Fairfax County, the Police Department's Explosive Ordnance Division has four or five dogs, and the Narcotics Unit has five or six. There are also therapy dogs, as well as one dog in Cyber Forensics, looking for thumb drives. Weeks said this dog is trained to smell a thumb drive's glue.

He said the K9 dogs usually cost $8,500-$9,000 each and come from overseas. "We get hounds as puppies and train them as we go along," said Weeks. "They're lazy, so we have to make them want to work. German Shepherds don't need constant rewards and praise like bloodhounds do."

Most K9 dogs live in their handlers' homes and have free run of the house. "Dozer is super-friendly but has

The Fairfax Academy presents 'A Chorus Line.'

BY BONNIE HOBBS
THE CONNECTION

Featuring a cast and crew of 65, plus a 10-piece orchestra, The Fairfax Academy presents the musical, "A Chorus Line." Set in 1970s New York City, it's about dancers auditioning for a musical-theater production, from beginning to casting.

"It's a very funny show, and you get to know each person's life," said senior Hannah Black. "It sheds light on what the dancers go through to get where they are, because it's harder and more stressful than most people realize. It takes people behind the scenes."

The curtain rises Friday-Saturday, Jan. 31 and Feb. 1, at 7:30 p.m.; Sunday, Feb. 2, at 3:30 p.m.; Friday, Feb. 7, at 7:30 p.m.; and Saturday, Feb. 8, at 2 and 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $15, adults; and $10, students, via etix.com. This show is for mature audiences only; students under age 13 must be accompanied by an adult.

Director Mike Replogle is thrilled with how this production's turning out. "I think we're going to have a hell of a show," he said. "The kids really get its spirit, and no other show is about auditioning. It tells it from the view of the people who give up everything to be in the chorus."

Dancers at the end of the "Montage Four" number in The Fairfax Academy's production of "A Chorus Line."

The show happens in real time and the audience becomes part of the audition. "And as exhausting as it is for the dancers, they often go through this, two or three times a day," said Replogle. "And this is as close as the audience may get to auditioning, themselves. I love this show because it focuses solely on the dancers. For one show, the chorus line gets to be in front – and it's all about them."

Academy Administrator Andrea Cook choreographed nine of the dances. "Our first dance rehearsal was in October, so the kids have been learning the steps since then," she said. She and Replogle always try to put their own, unique spin on their shows, such as adding extra dancers to a number or portraying it in a fresh way. And, added Cook, "Since we're doing the adult version of this show, we get to perform the full-length, musical numbers. And it's an intimate look at what many of our students are choosing for their profession."

Westfield High senior Keeley Rogers portrays Maggie, who's passionate about dancing. "She has issues with her father, who left when she was a child, so she expresses what it was like growing up without him through her dance," she said. "That's what drove her to become a dancer, because she has fantasies about dancing with her father."

Rogers describes Maggie as "the sweetest, goofiest and most lovable character. I've seen this show, and Maggie's story affects a lot of people. I'm the most emotionally invested in her character because it's so real – I feel like she's a genuine person. I love playing her because she has this truth to her. She's open but is closed off until she has the chance. She doesn't draw attention to herself but is just authentically her."

Her favorite song is the famous and iconic "One," because it's the final number and everyone's onstage dancing together. "It's a crowd-pleaser and a big spectacle," said Rogers, who hopes to become a professional dancer, herself, someday. "I feel like it's the perfect way to wrap up the show, and it's enjoyable for both the actors and the audience."

She said "A Chorus Line" is relatable and easy to enjoy because "the audience will feel so connected to every single character and their stories. There are so many ups and downs – sad stories immediately followed by big, happy, high-energy numbers. People will want to stand up and dance along with them."

The Junior Achievement students at Carl Sandburg Middle School in Mount Vernon are learning the concepts of savings, income, budgeting, investing and the pros and cons of debit and credit.

The ABCs of Kids and Money

Teaching children how to budget, save and manage finances.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

In an age when paying one's mortgage can be done from a smartphone, money smarts is an important part of navigating life. From saving to buy the latest video game to learning how to budget an allowance, financial literacy is one of the most important lessons for children, say financial experts.

"It's very important to teach tweens and teens about money," said Steve Pilloff, Ph.D., Associate Professor in the School of Business at George Mason University. "For many kids, this is the first time they are making independent financial decisions, such as whether to save a birthday gift or spend it on a video game."

In fact, Patti Senft, Manager of Program Engagement at Junior Achievement of Greater Washington in Fairfax, Virginia says that one of her organization's goals is to teach financial literacy to children. "Junior Achievement has determined that teaching the concepts of savings, income, budgeting, investing and the pros and cons of debit and credit should begin with middle school students in 7th and 8th grade," she said.

"The knowledge that the students learn through the Junior Achievement gives students the skills they need to manage their expenses and budget wisely for a successful future," she said.

Helping children set financial goals, delay gratification, earn money and save it toward achieving those goals is one of the first steps that parents can take to teach smart money practices, said Pilloff. "The habits, and even more critically, the decision-making process children develop early on will influence the way they approach financial matters throughout their lives," he said.

Students should be taught to make choices with the amount of money they have, suggests Senft. "It's important to teach children to distinguish between what you need versus what you want," she said. "It's important to teach children of all ages about money. It's never too soon to talk about the importance of savings."

"It's important because in any modern society, the one thing that people do almost every day is make money decisions, so knowing how to do it well is something that is going to be useful to every single one of us," added Laura Levine, president and CEO of the Jump$tart Coalition for Personal Financial Literacy. "Knowing how to manage money is something that all consumers need to do so it's important that we teach that to our kids."

In fact, learning to manage a budget is one of the basic skills that Levine encourages parents to teach.

"Years ago, finance was basic, but today there are so many options and financial decisions that have to be made," she said. "Money is more self-directed than ever before. Finances are more complicated than ever before, so we need skills to manage it."

When it comes to managing money, one of the best ways to teach is leading by example, says Levine. "Like with anything else, kids learn by what they see at home," she said. "Even parents who haven't made the best financial decisions in the past can resolve to do it now in the New Year."

While some parents might find starting a dialog daunting, it's vital that parents have those conversations with their children, said Levine.

"Talk to your kids about money," she said. "It's important to distinguish between talk and teach. Parents who don't know about money can freak out when they're asked to teach their children about money. Instead, talk to them and say, 'Let's learn about this together.'"

WFCM Chicken Nugget FUNraiser

Western Fairfax Christian Ministries (WFCM) is hosting a chicken nugget FUNraiser with four local Chick-fil-A restaurants. People pre-ordering a Chick-fil-A nugget tray for the Super Bowl by Jan. 29 may then enjoy these nuggets during the big game on Feb. 2. Each tray serves 8-10 people and may be heated about 15 minutes before serving. They may be picked up Saturday, Feb. 1, at WFCM's office, 4511 Daly Drive, Suite J, in Chantilly.

Cost per tray is $36 (plus 3-percent online-transaction fee), with a portion of each sale supporting WFCM's efforts to serve those at risk of hunger and homelessness in the local community. Participating Chick-fil-A restaurants are at Fair Lakes, Sully Plaza on Route 50, near the Dulles Expo Center off Willard Road, and near the Air & Space Museum off Route 28. Place orders by Jan. 29 at <https://donatenow.networkforgood.org/wfcmnuggets>.

Or for large orders, contact Mary Ellen D'Andrea at mdandrea@wfcmv.org.

Sock Drive for Local Students

The Sully District Police Station is hosting its annual Sock Drive for Fairfax County students in need. Last year, this station collected more than 3,500 pairs of socks that were given to students as a special, Valentine's Day surprise. Donations will be accepted until Feb. 10. Three years ago, a patrol officer was doing a school crossing at an elementary school. He noticed that, even though it was a very cold morning, many of the children weren't wearing any socks. He later learned that socks are luxury items that many families can't afford after paying their bills, so he started a sock drive at the Fair Oaks District Station. And now, the Sully District Station is participating, too.

New Entrance Road to E.C. Lawrence Park

Drivers must now use the new entrance road at 5000 Stonecroft Blvd. to access the E.C. Lawrence Park athletic fields. On the north side of the park, it's accessible from Westfields Boulevard. The old entrance from Route 28 closed in December.

The traffic signal on Route 28 will remain in place for use with upcoming detours and traffic-pattern changes necessary for construction of the new bridge that will connect Braddock and Walney roads.

Besides relocating the park entrance, 115 new parking spaces were added near the ballfields. A shared-use path for pedestrians and cyclists will open adjacent to the new access road this spring.

Dozer Meets Community

only been on the street for six weeks, so I'm still teaching him," said Weeks.

Basically, he explained, "I want a well-balanced dog that wants to work and is confident and won't run away and be scared. He must also be easily adaptable to every environment without shutting down. And he should be sociable and friendly with people. But when I tell him it's time to go to work, he can [quickly] turn it on and do his job. He should also be obedient, but not constantly challenging me."

Weeks said most suspects will submit to a dog faster than they will to a police officer – "and that's kind of why we have them." He said most K9s are male and that it generally takes three to four years for an officer to become a handler.

"The school is mainly about training the handler," said Weeks. "I train every night with Dozer because he's a new dog. And every two weeks, he has a scheduled, full day of training. He's still learning even being around people."

He said deciding whether to deploy the dog is done on a case-by-case scenario. For example, said Weeks, "During a pursuit in Loudoun [County], a man disappeared into the woods, and I let my dog go into the pond by the side of the highway. Then I saw a guy lying face down in the water. He didn't come out when I asked him to, so I sent my first dog, Cody, in to bite him – and he came out of the pond like a swamp monster."

When looking for someone, said Weeks, "We always take other officers with us – especially other K9 officers, if possible. Usually, there'll be a helicopter overhead, shining a beacon. And we also have night-vision equipment."

"It takes a long time to master this job, and you're constantly learning things," he added. "But we try to do it as safely as possible. I have a passion for dogs – and you need to have that passion to be a good K9 officer. You really get out what you put into it."

WEEKS then took the meeting attendees outside and demonstrated some of the things he's taught Dozer to do. They also met Juneau, who was inside the officer's vehicle.

"To become a K9 officer, you have to shoot expert on the range, run an obstacle course and take an oral test," said Weeks. "Then you're ranked against the other officers vying for the job. And the outcome also depends on how many openings there are when you're applying."

Treat One, Get Two.

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

I'm sure you regular readers are waiting with bated breath for the confirmation of my updated health status. Unfortunately, for the moment anyway, we'll all have to wait a bit longer. Though the needle biopsy of my "Adam's Apple" tumor did indeed confirm thyroid cancer, stage 2, no such confirmation or clarification as to its origin was made, or whether it's been thyroid cancer that I've been living with all these years, instead of non small cell lung cancer, stage 4 or not. However, there is a path forward. Surgery to remove my thyroid gland, along with my "Adam's Apple" tumor, and possibly a lymph node is in the planning stage. As such, scheduled for next Friday is an appointment with a head and neck surgeon to determine my fitness for surgery. All we've been told so far is that the surgery is usually outpatient, arrive in the morning and leave that afternoon (maybe I'll bring along my dry cleaning). Apparently, this is the next step "on the road to find out" (Cat Stevens).

If I am indeed home that same evening, I've been told by my endocrinologist that the recovery period is approximately two weeks. At present I don't have any details of what "recovery" exactly means/entails. If all goes according to the pre-surgical-actually-discussing-the-procedure-with-the-surgeon conversation, a month or so after the procedure, I will revisit my endocrinologist to have radioisotopes administered somehow. Once inside my body, I will be scanned by a machine looking exclusively for thyroid cancer. This will confirm, if I understand the process correctly, whether the tumors in my lungs are thyroid or lung cancer.

In the interim, I am to continue with my immunotherapy ("I. O.") and with any other appointments, scans, etc. I recall something that my oncologist said about my lung cancer tumors during his "exciting" phone call. He said that my tumors never really acted the way he anticipated, as if they weren't non small cell lung cancer at all. And sure enough, some of them, as confirmed by the first of my recent two biopsies were thyroid cancer. As I've been joking, this is what my oncologist gets excited about as opposed to what yours truly would get excited about: a World Series Championship. And also, as he said, thyroid tumors are more treatable, with more choices and better outcomes - which is exciting for me.

OKAY. So I have thyroid cancer and it's more treatable. Wonderful news. But do I still have lung cancer? If so, where's the future in that? Is it somehow no longer a "terminal" disease because I've outlived my original "13 month to two year" prognosis? Will I now be treated for thyroid cancer only to die of lung cancer? Moreover, am I now going to get treated twice, in two medical suites, one for each cancer? Have these multiple biopsies simply determined that the doctors were actually right - both times and I'm just the unfortunate patient to be so wronged?

For 10 or so years, until last January, I was treated for lung cancer - with chemotherapy. However, this past January, the Adam's Apple" tumor appeared and we switched to immunotherapy. The reason for the change: the lung cancer had spread, according to my oncologist. Now, a year later, the story/diagnosis has changed, thanks to my most recent biopsy. The tumor wasn't lung cancer that had spread, it was thyroid cancer that had spread. I didn't even know I had thyroid cancer. Now you're telling me it's spread? How lucky am I? Two cancers for the price of one. I guess this will make health insurance more affordable, sort of like buying in bulk at Costco.

The big question: did my lung cancer treatment inadvertently prevent my thyroid cancer from manifesting/metastasizing or did its non-diagnosis allow it to grow unimpeded and now present this quite unexpected/unanticipated complication? Explain though it may to my oncologist why I haven't succumbed to my original disease, it doesn't quite explain to me what the hell's been going on and why.
