Greek Cooking Served in a Classy Setting

Restaurant Review: Nostos Restaurant

BY ALEXANDRA GREELEY
THE CONNECTION

Although the Nostos Greek restaurant has operated in the Tysons Corner area for a while, it remains a steady go-to destination for every sort of patron, from ladies chatting over lunch to businessmen and couples. Patrons have learned that for outstanding Greek cooking served in a classy contemporary setting, Nostos is an ideal restaurant.

Because the menu offers a number of tempting dishes, your best bet is to enjoy a meal with several friends—that way you can sample several dishes so that you get a real idea of what the kitchen puts out. And with friends along, you can choose at least two appetizers: the tzatziki, Greek yogurt with garlic and cucumbers, and the melitzanosalata, roasted eggplant whipped with olive oil and garlic, both of which come with heated wedges of pita bread. Add to that an order of the tyrokafteri, a peppery hot spread of feta cheese and hot peppers... this is an ideal dipping treat for the wedges of pita bread, especially for those who like a spicy kick. For an extra treat as an appetizer, add on the entrée Taverna salad with a toss-up of romaine lettuce, tomatoes, peppers, feta cheese, and kalamata olives.

Do check the specials menu before you order the rest of the lunch (or dinner) items—recently the yummy lamb chops were on offer that day, a pared-down version of the standard menu offering that includes grilled asparagus and roasted potatoes. Regardless, the lamb is sensational, and although rather pricey on the regular menu, lamb lovers would likely head to that as their entrée selection.

Other lunch entrées include swordfish kabobs, which a fellow patron loved, plus other seafood kabobs (including grilled octopus); and meat kabobs, including chicken, meatballs, or a meat sampler with skewered chicken, beefsteak, and lamb. Vegetarian entrées of beans, or zucchini, or beets; of cheese choices that include grilled Cypriot sheep and goat cheese, or feta cheese with kalamata olives, plus more.

Scanning down the menu, patrons come across the section with fish entrées, including a whole Mediterranean bass or the kakavia, a seafood stew with tomatoes, potatoes, shrimp, and kalamaria with crusty bread. And traditional entrées include the renowned spanakopita, a favorite choice for Greek food lovers who relish the layered phyllo dough stuffed with spinach, feta, and scallion; and the equally renowned mousaka, layered eggplant slices that enclose potatoes and ground beef.

When it is time for dessert, scan through the dessert wines, brandies and cognac, and liqueurs choices...or just order a cup of coffee to pair with a selection of the famed baklava (three different options); the rice pudding; the airy galaktoboureko; or

VIENNA POLICE HIGHLIGHTS

The following summary contains various incidents of general interest as well as vehicular crashes handled by the Town of Vienna, Virginia Police Department from Jan. 24 – Jan. 30, 2020.

INCIDENTS

Suspicious Event — 200 Block Tapawingo Road, SW Jan. 24, 9 a.m. A resident reported a possible fraud after she inadvertently provided her bank account information over the phone to someone calling to collect payment on a loan. After providing her information to the caller, she began to fear that the call may have been a scam. The resident later discovered that the original creditor on a loan sold her debt to another creditor and the call she received was legitimate.

Animal Case – Quarantine — Hope Advanced Veterinary Center 140 Park Street, SE Jan. 24, 9:50 a.m. A technician was bitten by a dog during a medical procedure. Fairfax County Animal Control will follow up on the quarantine as the dog lives in their jurisdiction.

Suspicious Event — Wolftrap Hotel 430 Maple Avenue, West Jan. 25, 3:34 a.m. A guest staying at the hotel made allegations that men were fighting in one of the rooms, in addition to other complaints that were all unfounded by the hotel staff and the officers who responded. The staff offered her another room, which she declined. She also declined any police assistance. The woman was advised to either return to her room or call a friend to pick her up.

Animal Case — 100 Block Casmar Street, SE Jan. 25, 11:30 a.m. An officer responded to the report of an injured deer in the backyard of a residence. It was determined that the animal was in grave condition and the officer euthanized the deer.

Arrest - Narcotics Violation — Courthouse Road and Nutley Street, SW Jan. 25, 9:07 p.m. MPO Shaw observed a driver commit a traffic offense and initiated a traffic stop. Upon the officer's interaction with the driver, he detected the odor of marijuana. The driver, a juvenile, was found to be in possession of a measurable amount of marijuana, a scale with marijuana residue, an open can of alcohol, tobacco products, and an airsoft gun. The passenger, another juvenile, was also in possession of a measurable amount of marijuana.

The juveniles' parents were notified and responded. The juveniles were transported to the Vienna Police Station. The passenger was issued a summons charging Possession of Marijuana and was released to the custody of his parents. The driver was released to his parents. MPO Shaw later obtained petitions for the driver charging him with Possession with Intent to Distribute Marijuana, Underage Possession of Alcohol and Underage Possession of Tobacco Products.

Unlawful Entry — Yeonas Park 1319 Ross Drive, SW Between Jan. 26 at 4 p.m. and Jan. 28 at 12 p.m. An unknown person forced entry into a shed and caused damage to property belonging to the Vienna Little League.

THE CONNECTION

The First Baptist Church of Vienna hosted its 4th annual Justice and Legislative Sunday, Feb. 2, 2020. The congregation opened its doors and invited legislators and members of grassroots organizations to join them for worship services. Afterward, everyone convened in the church's fellowship hall for the "Justice & Legislative Fair," one of the church's signature social justice events. The forum provided the opportunity for the congregation and guests to engage in one-on-one dialogues.

Before the 10 a.m. service started, Frank Bowers of Chantilly and Jim Biggs of Manassas helped set up the fellowship hall and considered what they wanted to ask the legislators. Bower said he planned to ask, "What are you going to do differently in 2020, than the other year of service, 2016, when you dropped the ball, and America got a king to rule over them."

Biggs considered his question. "My beef is I want to know what they are going to do to curb the incarceration rate for minorities. The district attorneys are more interested in closing cases rather than giving individuals fair trails," he said.

Upstairs in the sanctuary, two deacons waited for the legislators to arrive. They, too, considered what they would ask. Deacon Thomas E Twyman, Sr. said, "Health care is the number one issue. And affordable housing."

"I'd like the political atmosphere to turn back as it was when we had Obama, when people tried to work together to solve problems. Now it seems the new president brings out the worst in some. We need to keep our democracy. That means everybody gives in some for the greater good," said Anthony Weaver of Oak Hill.

Shortly before the service began, the legislative guests arrived. They represented all levels of government. Among them, U.S. Senator Mike Warner (D), who provided remarks during the service.

Luther King, Jr. frequently said to remind listeners of the long road ahead of them when committed to progressive politics. "The arc of the moral universe is long, but it bends toward justice," Sen. Warner said. He told the congregation to take these words to heart when they thought about some things in the news. The senator noted that it had been fifty-two years since Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. was murdered. "So many things that Dr. King spoke about, we still need. There is still way too much of a racial wealth gap. There is still too much of a criminal justice system where my daughter is treated differently than your sons and daughters when they interact with the police," he said.

Sen. Warner added that Dr. King said he hoped there would be a day in America when his children and grandchildren would be judged by the content of their character and not the color of their skin. "And, if there is ever a time when in our nation, we need to be judging our leaders by the content of their character, it is now. The church teaches us to respect each other, to be truthful, to treat people, even if we disagree, with respect. I hope and pray that sometimes the individual who currently lives at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue might take those words to heart as well. These are challenging times in our nation. I want to thank our Lieutenant Governor and legislators. Even though we may be struggling in Washington, we are moving many things forward in Richmond," said Sen. Warner.

Lieutenant Governor of Virginia, Justin Fairfax (D), Delegate Mark Keam (D-35), Fairfax County Commonwealth Attorney Stephen Descano (D), Supervisor Walter Alcorn (D-Hunter Mill), Fairfax County School Board At-Large member Rachna Sizemore Heizer and many more attended Justice and Legislative Sunday with Sen. Warner. They listened to the senator and Pastor Dr. Vernon C. Walton, who said in his sermon that in a country that had so much, it was possible for so many to have so little.

"It's hard to believe in a nation where so much food is wasted daily, it would be possible particularly children to go to bed hungry at night and have

Legislators Reflect on Social Justice Initiatives

Supervisor Walter Alcorn (D-Hunter Mill), right:

Working on some economic development initiatives, not just to get economic development in places where we're getting a lot of economic development, but on an equity basis, to start bringing it to places in Fairfax County that have not seen it. So let's start bringing emerging technology companies, doing some of those more innovative, creative things in places where we haven't had economic development as we should in Fairfax County.

Virginia Senator Jennifer Boysko (D-33):

I've worked tirelessly for the past five years on expanding who can have a driver's license in Virginia as well as in-state tuition for our dreamers. I was a sponsor of the paid family medical leave bill that will allow people to deal with their crisis without losing their jobs. Tomorrow I will be presenting the Collective Bargaining for public employees, which will give all of them a seat at the table... I'm going to be working to make sure our judges look like the people in Virginia.

Stephen Descano, Fairfax County Commonwealth Attorney:

The question always comes back; how can we build a more just world... My mandate, as the leader of our criminal justice system is to do justice... That's why minute one of my administration I directed my prosecutors to no longer prosecute simple possession of marijuana, because we know that is way to disproportionately get young African American men and women through the front door of the criminal justice system. And that's not justice.

Supervisor John Foust (D-Dranesville):

There will be an additional 5,000 units to serve people earning 30 to 60 percent of the area median income, AMI. It's a 15-year plan. We are hoping to do more, but that is the base minimum promise to accomplish. To do that, we are adding $25 million more to the budget this year for affordable housing... I've read dozens of Economic Development Plans from across the country, and ours is the only one that I've ever read that has as one of its major goals to include Gaining Economic and Social Equity. In terms of social justice, I'm out there walking the picket lines and attending the rallies and speaking at the rallies for our bus transit workers. They deserve a better deal than they've been getting.

Predatory Student Lenders

Northern Virginia lawmakers hope to crack down on student-loan servicing companies.

BY MICHAEL LEE POPE
THE CONNECTION

As a high school student, Katlyn Weiser dreamed of attending George Mason University. She wanted to have a career in public service, being in the room where it happens on Capitol Hill. But instead she found herself under a mountain of debt, struggling to keep up with meeting minimum payments and ultimately being forced to make a difficult decision about her future. She says she'll never forget the day when an agent from loan-servicing company Navient told her that she should probably drop out of school to pay off her student debt. "I cried," says Weiser. "I cried a lot because I had come so far. I had become the first person in my family to go to college, one of the first people in my high school to go to college, and it was sad to hear that because I had come so far."

Weiser did not listen. She didn't drop out, and she's now a senior at George Mason University. She says she has determined that she can't afford a career in public service, so she plans on being a lobbyist instead. She's one of the student borrowers state Sen. Janet Howell (D-32) wants to help with a bill she calls the Borrowers Bill of Rights. It would use the power of the State Corporation Commission to crack down on what she calls the egregious practices of student loan servicing companies. "We can regulate these student loan servicers to ensure we're protecting our borrowers from shady practices," says Howell. "Every other type of debt is regulated in Virginia except student loans debt. This lack of regulation is egregious given one million borrowers are collectively carrying more than $41 billion worth of student debt."

DEMOCRATS HAVE WANTED to crack down on student-loan servicing companies for years, but the Republican-led House of Delegates has blocked the effort. Del. Marcus Simon (D-53) has introduced legislation to have the State Corporation Commission regulate student-loan servicing companies for years only to be blocked by the GOP majority over and over. Even when Howell was able to get similar legislation through the Senate, Simon found that the Republican-led House was not interested.

"It's interesting that a number of delegates who have been sympathetic but didn't think this was the right solution voted for the bill in committee this year," said Simon. "So I think we're on a glider path here, although there are a few people who continue to believe that we shouldn't be helping out students for whatever reason."

This year, Democrats are in control of the General Assembly. That's opened the flood-gates for a number of issues, and cracking down on student-loan servicing companies is one of them. Howell's bill cracking down on student loan servicing companies passed a Senate committee with a unanimous vote. And Simon has a similar bill that's already passed the House with an 84 to 15 vote.

"When student-loan servicers engage in deceptive and predatory practices, borrowers can face insurmountable barriers to financial security," says Anna Scholl, executive director of Progress Virginia. "When student loan servicers engage in deceptive and predatory practices, borrowers can face insurmountable barriers to financial security."

THE BILL requires student loan servicing companies get a license to operate in Virginia from the State Corporation Commission, which would crack down on egregious practices like misrepresenting the amount of money due, recklessly applying loan payments to outstanding balances and failing to report payment history to consumer credit bureaus. Violators would be hit with a $2,500 fee.

"This bill is not about free college," said Seth Frotman, executive director of the Student Borrower Protection Center. "This bill is about making sure borrowers in the commonwealth who took on debt to chase the American dream aren't ripped off in the process."

All of the egregious practices outlined in the bill are already illegal. But borrowers would have to hire a lawyer and file a federal lawsuit to take action, which is not a workable solution for people who are already under a mountain of debt.

Instead, this bill makes these actions a violation of state law and empowers the State Corporation Commission to go after bad actors. That way borrowers who feel they've been wronged could file a complaint with the Bureau of Financial Regulation.

"Why are Virginia borrowers having to resort to lawsuits for their consumer protections?" asked Del. Cia Price (D-95). "It is past time for student loan borrowers in Virginia — like me — to have common-sense protections."

Local teen takes to the stage at the Menuhin Competition Richmond 2020.

THE CONNECTION

Fifteen-year-old Kayleigh Kim of Oak Hill, a student at Oakton High School in Vienna started playing the violin when she was five, but quickly lost interest and began focusing on other activities like sports. "I played on and off for about three years until I quit completely. My mom asked me when I was ten if I wanted to play the violin again, and I said yes, not thinking about it very much. It was only after playing for a few months that I realized I really did enjoy it."

Since then, Kim has performed at Carnegie Hall, the Kennedy Center Millennium Stage, Merkin Concert Hall, and most recently with the Richmond Symphony Orchestra on Jan. 25. Kim always dreamed of participating in the prestigious Menuhin Competition, dubbed the "Olympics of the Violin." This year, Kim will be in there alongside forty-three of the world's greatest violinists, ages 8-21 representing eighteen different nationalities. Amidst the limelight and stimulating learning environment, Kim will take to the stage to compete in the Junior Section.

KIM'S TEACHER, Catherine Cho, Professor of Violin at The Juilliard School, said, "I am delighted to be working with Kayleigh who has been a wonderfully dedicated and compassionate member of my studio this year, and we are all excited about her participation in the Menuhin Competition this spring."

Held in the United States for only the second time since Menuhin Competition's inaugural event in 1983, Richmond, won the joint bid. They beat out London, England and Melbourne, Australia to host the 11-day event held May 14-24, 2020. A coalition headed by the Richmond Symphony with co-hosts Commonwealth Public Broadcasting (WCVE), Virginia Commonwealth University, and University of Richmond, with an endorsement from the City of Richmond, submitted the bid.

The Menuhin Competition Trust organized the event. It is a UK registered charity. The competition brings the most outstanding violin talents together in a festival of music, education and cultural exchange. Such is a nod to founder Yehudi Menuhin; the New York City-born violin prodigy opened a violin school for gifted musicians ages 8 to 19 in England in 1963. According to the Trust: "Menuhin's key to success was his excellent music education as a child and his ongoing dialogue and collaboration with fellow musicians."

Violinist Kayleigh Kim, 15, of Oak Hill practices for Menuhin Competition Richmond 2020 in anticipation of competing against the world's greatest young violinists in the 11-day event to be held May 14-24.

tant. Also, as part of the 2020 Menuhin Competition, Kim will take part in events held throughout Richmond, including the Modlin Center for the Arts-University of Richmond, W. E. Singleton Center for the Performing Arts- Virginia Commonwealth University and Carpenter Theatre@ Dominion Energy Center. "Kayleigh has always been very focused on her work, and I am so proud of her for always accepting challenges that come her way," said Kim's mother, Sylvia.

The Menuhin Competition Trust aims to support its laureates as they develop and grow to help them establish their careers. Beyond the cash prizes and loans of violins, such as 1st Prize, Senior Section- USD 20,000 plus a 2-year loan of a Golden Period Stradivari violin from the private collection of Jonathan Moulds CBE and a bow made by Christopher Landon, the Trust offers prizewinners performance concert opportunities, scholarships and courses.

Dazzling Pace of Change in Richmond

BY KENNETH R. "KEN" PLUM
STATE DELEGATE (D-36)

COMMENTARY

Dazzling is the only word I could think of to describe the amazing work that is going on in the Virginia General Assembly this legislative session. The annual meeting of the legislature is just approaching half-time of its annual session, but already significant policy changes are being debated and adopted. There is little new to the policies that are being adopted; many are in place in other states already. But in Richmond they seem revolutionary!

I have already written about the ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment in the early days of the session. The movement to ratify the ERA began in the early 1970s but was not successful in Virginia until nearly 50 years later! Since two ratification deadlines have already passed, the fate of the amendment with Virginia being the needed 38th state to ratify is uncertain. Virginia Attorney General Mark Herring is among the leaders seeking a judicial decision to validate the amendment's ratification.

Although the Nineteenth Amendment granting women the right to vote was ratified in 1920 and added to the Constitution, Virginia did not add its support to ratification until 1952!

While legislation must be passed by both houses of the legislature and signed by the governor to become law, here is a run-down on what has been approved so far by at least one house. By the time the legislature adjourns in early March this legislation is expected to be approved by both houses and sent to the governor. Numerous bills have been passed to ban discrimination against persons because of their sex; bills to protect LGBTQ+ persons would not have made it out of committee last year. Bills to ban discrimination in housing, public accommodations, employment and credit applications have passed as has a bill to ban conversion therapy.

Likewise, bills to protect public safety from the misuse of guns that would never have made it out of committee previously have passed in both houses of the Assembly. My bill to require universal background checks has passed as well as bills granting localities the right to ban guns in public spaces, increasing the penalties for leaving guns unsecured around children, and requiring people to report lost or stolen guns within 24 hours. A "red flag" law that allows authorities to remove guns from individuals who have shown themselves to be a danger to themselves and to others has passed.

This week action is expected on bills that will open up the state to more solar and wind power and that will establish standards for the increased use of renewables in generating electricity. Plastic bags may be eliminated or taxed to reduce plastic pollution. I am sponsoring the Governor's bill to advance the clean-up of the Chesapeake Bay that is getting some push-back from the farming community that would be affected by regulations to clean up stream runoff. Numerous bills have already passed to make it easier to register to vote and to vote on election day, including no-excuse absentee voting.

There is more to come. Tune in next week or follow the sessions on live-streaming at <https://viriniagenralassembly.gov/house/chamber/chamberstream.php> for more dazzling action!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Not a 'Siege'

To the Editor:

This letter is in response to Delegate Ken Plum's OpEd in the Jan. 22-28 issue of the Connection, titled "Siege of the Capital."

After reading this letter, all I can say is "Wow!" Delegate Plum certainly has very poor opinion of Virginia gun owners. Stating that a peaceful and lawful demonstration by a large number of Second Amendment supporters is a "Siege" is incredible. Clearly Delegate Plum knows nothing about the people he appears to fear. He should get out of his liberal bubble and learn about the people who feel strongly about having their constitutional rights oppressed. They are non-violent and are law abiding.

Delegate Plum should read Virginia's constitution. He states "A well regulated militia made up of state and local police will protect the Capitol building and its occupant legislators from those who would deny freedom to others through their misuse of firearms."

Article 1, Section 13 of Virginia's constitution states:

"That a well regulated militia, composed of the body of the people, trained to arms, is the proper, natural, and safe defense of a free state, therefore, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed; that standing armies, in time of peace, should be avoided as dangerous to liberty; and that in all cases the military should be under strict subordination to, and governed by, the civil power."

Note that our constitution specifically states that the "militia" is made up of the body of the people, meaning you and me. It is not made up of police officers. It sounds to me like Delegate Plum really wants to establish a standing army to protect him and his ilk from the people.

Our constitution cautions that such a thing is "dangerous to liberty".

Don't Abolish The Death Penalty

To the Editor:

It's become quite clear that the movement to abolish the death penalty has reached Virginia. Death penalty opponents have suggested replacing it with life without parole (LWOP). They advocate for it as a more humane alternative to execution. That it's "punishment enough." Except you shouldn't believe that death penalty opponents will keep LWOP.

Recent legislation in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and Vermont is seeking to end LWOP, using the exact same arguments that have been used against the death penalty. "Few civilized countries have LWOP, it's too harsh," et cetera. The movement to abolish the death penalty has become a moving of goalposts, as opponents (who have suggested LWOP) as an alternative, are using the very same arguments they used against the death penalty, to advocate for the removal of the very same alternative punishment that they suggested in the first place! Vox News and The Sentencing Project are now promoting the abolition of LWOP so you shouldn't think it's me fearmongering. The death penalty should stay in Virginia, not just because some crimes are just too heinous to be punished by life without parole, but because it also prevents the abolition of life without parole. If the death penalty is abolished on a Monday, the movement to abolish life without parole will begin the following day. And before you know it, murderers will be back on the streets.

Becoming a More Equal and Inclusive Community

To the Editor:

I am an American, but my origins lie in a country where you cannot exercise your rights as a human being, let alone as a woman. Women are forced into marriage at a young age, girls need permission from their fathers or brothers to leave their homes, and embracing your sexuality is unfathomable — and illegal at times.

It is for this reason that I write to you.

As a local newspaper serving the people of Northern Virginia, I ask that you write an article on the Jan. 15 ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment in Virginia. It is crucial that we shed light on this recent event in Virginia that, while long overdue, must be celebrated.

On Jan. 15, 2020, Virginia voted on a resolution to ratify the ERA, making it the 38th state to pass this resolution. For decades feminists have been fighting to add a simple yet monumental phrase to the U.S. Constitution: "equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex."

Shedding light on this century-long issue will give our daughters, mothers, and sisters not only the recognition they deserve, but it will pave the way for other states and even nations to recognize and embrace equal rights as well. If we—as residents of the state of Virginia—are one step closer to becoming a more equal and inclusive community, then we must hold a responsibility to report on these views and enlighten others along the way.

Reception Highlights Area Charities

Citizens meet County Board Chairman Jeff McKay.

BY SUSAN LAUME

New Fairfax County Board of Supervisors (BOS) Chairman Jeff McKay hosted a new year's reception for citizens at the Government Center, on Jan. 30, continuing a tradition observed by former Chairman, Sharon Bulova.

Receiving citizens for comments and photographs, the Chairman also collected donations for charity. Those attending were encouraged to bring items for the municipal animal shelter and for the county's neighborhood community service effort to fight hunger.

Some, like the "Save Blake Lane Park" grassroots group, came to remind the Chairman of their cause. Supported by the Northern Virginia Conservation Trust, and Friends of Accotink Creek, the group seeks to preserve what they describe as their "island of green space" in Oakton against construction of a needed new school. Says Jennifer Pradas, a teacher and resident of the area, "Every tree counts; other school alternatives need to be reviewed." Adds Dennis Allerton, "It's not too much to ask to have both," referring to needs for adequate schools and green space.

Chairman McKay seems to agree. While visiting the park during his campaign, he said, "Green spaces are limited... Where we have an opportunity like this to protect an environmental treasure in a community, we need to be able to do that."

Others, like Mary Jackson, of Reston, came "Just to see what's going on." Mary works to be sure young people understand the importance of voting and get registered.

Police Chief Ed Roessler was available to speak with citizens. He described his office's three primary functions: 1) prevent and fight crime, 2) preserve the sanctity of life, and 3) keep pace with urbanization in policing, a nod to the growth and challenges of policing in high rise buildings and with the growing urbanization of the county.

The County's "Stuff the Bus" program, highlighted for donation by Chairman McKay, is a food collection partnership to fight hunger in our neighborhoods. Weekly through February, the bus makes stops at local grocery stores to collect food and household items. A schedule of stops is available at the County's Neighborhood Community Services calendar, at <https://www.fairfaxcounty.gov/neighborhood-community.../calendars>.

The Fairfax County Animal Shelter is an open municipal shelter with an outstanding animal placement rate and vibrant volunteer program. More information and the Shelter's wish list for donations can be found at <https://www.fairfaxcounty.gov/animalshelter>.

Justice and Legislative Sunday

no food...(through) weekend because school is closed... It's hard to believe that we live amid such great wealth and in a county with such great housing stock, that there would be individuals who literally cannot afford to live among us, even after working 40 plus hours a week... It's hard to believe that we live in a nation where elementary and high school education is free and available to all, but the quality of that education and the quality of the physical building will largely be determined by the zip code of those facilities," Pastor Walton said.

He spoke about school-aged children and those who gather in places of worship but must consider the serious risk and potential of some disturbed individuals who do not respect the laws nor the lives of others. "They cause significant damage to families and even significant damage to entire communities." Before the Justice and Legislative Service began, security guards stood inside the entrance of his church.

PASTOR WALTON added that many individuals were only moved to action when it impacted their lives. However, doing so, they miss the meaning of justice; justice is for all, not for the individual. He said that some individuals were so blessed; so "comfortable" they lost their sensitivity to the persons and individuals who found themselves in the margins.

"If we are not careful enough, ...we can forget we are so blessed. We lose our sensitivity to the individuals that need us the most.... Today it is them. But there is the possibility it could be our day and our time tomorrow. Tomorrow, I would want someone to reach down and help pick me up... It's the poor, the marginalized, those that are struggling without health care, those that have no voice to speak for themselves.

After service, all gathered in the fellowship hall where members of the congregation and legislators mingled, asked questions and shared thoughts. As the event wound down, each legislator and school board member stepped to the microphone and gave a snapshot of proposed laws and actions in their purview.

— MERCIA HOBSON

Del. Marcus Simon (D-53): We are looking at words in our codes; code still matters a lot. We, just this year in 2020 on Friday, took the language out of a code that allowed buses to be segregated....Something I've been working on personally, what can we do about these racial covenants that still exist in our land records.

Del. Ibraheem Samirah (D- 86), right: I had a couple of bills I've been working on, (and others) we will be working on throughout this year... One is to allow accessory dwelling units in your home. What that means is, if you have a cottage, a basement or an attic, you should be able to utilize that to house a family or an individual for anywhere between $400 to $800 a month ...Another way is to allow you to use your home for two families as it is; what we call up-zoning for two family units... These are easy solutions for the affordable housing crisis. They cost $0 on the state; gives you more money for your pocket; allows your grandchildren, your children and anyone you want to live around you (to do so).

Vienna Town Council Member Pasha Majdi: I'm on the council in Vienna, which I don't talk a lot about here on Sundays. It's relevant this year because... I'm running for mayor. The election is May 5. It's a local, independent election. No Republicans,; no Democrats. It's just your neighbors running for office.

Del. Mark Keam (D-35): In a different time in Virginia, meaning before last November, the words "justice and legislative" didn't go together very often... Many times, your legislative agenda at the state level and sometimes at the county level, did not necessarily reflect the justice aspirations of that term...Thanks to the many of you who have worked so hard to bring us a few friends to put Delegates Simon and Samirah, Senator Jennifer Boysko and myself in the majority party in the Commonwealth of Virginia. What that means, is whether you're talking about Racial Justice, Gender Justice, Workplace Justice, Workers Rights, Environmental Justice, Social Justice, Medical Healthcare, and even Justice at the federal level, Impeachment Justice, we can now finally do the legislation because that's the way your views are expressed in the democratic process.

Off Topic, Way Off

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

From cancer to toilet paper. Is that 'off' enough? My reason for writing this column might be because I need a diversion (see last week's column), and because, as is so happened recently, I needed to replenish our toilet paper supply. (It had nothing to do with a winter advisory in the forecast.) As the consumer in the house, I am keen and motivated to spend our money wisely. I look for sales, I use paper coupons, I use digital coupons and of course, I peruse the advertising circulars, in print and online (if necessary) regularly. In addition, I have a number of plastic bonus cards hanging on my keychain. In short, I am prepared and ready for any retail or wholesale opportunity that might present itself.

With respect to toilet paper, I believe us regular users have been victimized by the toilet paper manufacturers. I refer specifically to the increase in the size of the actual roll itself; from single to double to triple to jumbo to mega and now super mega. Since the manufacturers can't exactly increase demand, they've devised a strategy to increase supply - in our homes. And though using myself as an example is hardly empirical evidence, I will nonetheless continue to do so in an effort to justify my accusation.

If you're like me, you probably like to have an ample supply of toilet paper in the house, just in case (it happened once in college; not good). And to that end, the toilet paper manufacturers have offered up multipacks equivalent to as high as 96 rolls, if I'm not mistaken, to address this potential shortage. However, my beef is not with the number of rolls in these multipacks, my beef, as I've said, is with the size of the rolls. In these cases, size does matter.

For years, we've been buying 4-, 6-, 9-, 12-, 24-, 36- and even 48-roll multipacks, some single and some double to stock the bathroom linen closets, so we're used to having a specific number of rolls on hand/in inventory. Now the rolls are double or even triple the size we had grown accustomed to having as back-ups. But we're still, in spite of the gargantuan size of the newer mega/super mega rolls, wanting to have the same number of rolls in the closet as we've always had (I do, anyway). Sort of a comfort level, you might say. The problem is that having the same number of super mega rolls in inventory as previously one had as single or double rolls gives one way more toilet paper in the house than you ever had. In effect, we have over-purchased. The toilet paper manufacturers have used our predispositions against us in order to take a greater share of our household budget previously allocated for toilet paper.

I don't need six super mega rolls in our bathroom. But I do want to see at least six rolls in reserve (aid and comfort you might say). If the six rolls in reserve were single or doubles, their size would be irrelevant. The number of rolls was more important - in my head. And now, because of the toilet paper manufacturer's insistence that size matters, I am forced to buy these spare-tire, donut-sized rolls that I can't possibly use no matter what "snowmageddon" might hit us. But I can't stock my shelves with reasonably-sized rolls because their unit cost is prohibitive compared to the big roll multipacks. As the consumer I am, I am loathe to overpay for such household necessities. So I buy in bulk, stuff my shelves with ply and go about my business. I just wish I had more than a hand in their decision-making.

'The Royale' Mesmerizes at 1st Stage

BY DAVID SIEGEL
THE CONNECTION

Adding to its luster, 1st Stage has produced a stunningly forceful drama, "The Royale." It is a heart-tugging production with a social justice theme; the journey of a trail-blazing black man who takes on society's hostility to do something unheard of in the segregated early 20th century America; fighting a white man for the heavy-weight boxing championship.

With a penetrating script by Marco Ramirez, stylishly directed and choreographed by Paige Hernandez, "The Royale" provides a fictionalized portrayal of real life black boxer, Jack Johnson (1878-1946) with an emotionally burning, persuasive performance by Jaysen Wright.

Surrounding Jay "The Sport" Jackson are his white promoter Max (played by Chris Genebach, as a hustler walking on a razor's edge) grudgingly taking on the powerful; Wynton often as a narrator as "The Sport's" full-of-wisdom, older mentor-trainer who as a black man has a horrific backstory (James J. Johnson who delivers a superlative verbally rich scene about his survival as a young black man fighting blind-folded for loose change).

The small ensemble also includes a compelling Clayton Pelham, Jr. as Fish, an impatient novice black boxer who becomes "The Sport's" sparring partner.

In the central character of Nina, "The Sport's" sister, Lolita Marie delivers sharp, intense questions with her deep worries about what winning a boxing championship can mean. Marie delivers potent dialogue that comes across as verbal body blows. The verbal assaults readily connecting to her brother as she demands a response to what likely will happen if he beats the white champion. Who will bear the expected destructive consequences of his winning?

Debra Kim Sivigny has a keen eye with her striking wooden boxing ring scenic design and period costumes. Kenny Neal's aural soundscape is full of sounds of boxing including body strikes. Projections by Kelly Colburn add visual layers along with the shadowy lighting by Sarah Tundermann.

Cliff Williams III's fight choreography is critical to "The Royale's" strength. The boxing is in abstraction with a percussive rhythm. No physical strikes are landed. Yet, powerful forces are heard as the boxers face the audience, reacting to one another jabs.

"The Royale" is concentrated fury. It will stick to an audience. It is a vigorous moving production that does not shy away from raw themes and real demons. Take in 1st Stages "The Royale;" see for yourself.
