Arlington Seeks to Enforce Physical Distancing, Limit Congregating on Posted Sidewalks, Streets

The Arlington County Board last week adopted an emergency ordinance prohibiting groups of more than three people from congregating on streets and sidewalks posted with the restrictions, and requiring pedestrians to maintain at least six feet of physical separation from others on the posted streets and sidewalks.

Violators could face a traffic fine of up to $100. In adopting the measure, the Board cited the difficulty of securing voluntary compliance with social distancing requirements as coronavirus cases surge nationwide.

"While most Arlingtonians are adhering to requirements to wear masks and maintain social distancing, unfortunately, some are not," Arlington County Board Chair Libby Garvey said. "They are putting themselves and our community at risk of serious illness or death during the COVID-19 pandemic. The Board hopes that this step will make it clear to our entire community that this pandemic is far from under control and that we are serious about maintaining social distance to slow its spread and save lives. We hope that through outreach and education, we will get voluntary compliance and will not have to issue a single ticket."

The Board voted unanimously to adopt the emergency amendment to the County Code, saying enforcement will begin after a period of outreach and education, and after signs are posted in the areas of enforcement. The Board acted under the state of emergency declared by Gov. Ralph Northam and the County in response to the spread of the coronavirus.

The Board noted that since the inception of Phase Three, of Arlington's and the Commonwealth's emergence from the Governor's Stay-at-Home order, "Arlington County has experienced significant crowding inside restaurants and on the public sidewalks, rights of way, and adjacent public spaces where patrons gather for oftentimes prolonged periods awaiting admission into the restaurants,"

Yes, Some Places Are Irreplaceable

Sam Torrey Shoe Service closes after 55 years.

BY SHIRLEY RUHE
ARLINGTON CONNECTION

The cubbies and shelves that normally would hold over 500 shoes, purses and other items are now mostly empty as Sam Torrey Shoe Services prepares to close on Friday, July 31. The finisher, cleaning brush and trimmer stand motionless.

Kevork Tchalekian, owner since 1965 says, "Most of the remaining items have been here for six months or so. I've been calling people for three weeks to come pick them up." He says anything left over when he closes will be donated to church.

Usually items were finished in a couple of weeks but when business was busy or an item was challenging he could have a backlog of six weeks. For instance, reconditioning of the World War II uniform hanging behind the desk, or the French backpack with the broken zipper. "They have different zippers over there. I don't know if I can find one that will work."

A buzz signals a customer has just entered the shop. Joann Perry, who has been a customer for five years has come to retrieve her high heels. "They've been here for some time, since March." Tchalekian removes the high heels from the brown paper bag for inspection. They've been cleaned and shined up. "Oh they look nice."

He explains he will be moving to Southern Shores where he'll be in semi retirement. "This was a long-term plan but there hasn't been much business for the last five months. I'm 56 and still a young man." So he is moving and will continue to do some business from N. Carolina by mail. Perry signs up to get information.

Tchalekian says he loves the water and fishing. He thinks there might be different business by the ocean. "I don't expect to be doing many shoes but I can do zippers on sailboats, for instance. I have the machine."

Joy Jacobson comes in with a large bottle of whiskey. "I'm glad for you but you'll be so missed." Jacobson says for 30 years she has been bringing her luggage, purses and shoes that she has become fond of and she doesn't want to throw away. "The magic is here."

Another frequent customer comes in with a knee high boot and a pair of shoes. Tchalekian says, "I know you come in a lot but I have to tell you I am closing on Friday and can't take any more shoes."

"Are you sure? My daughter is going to college and I need to get these repaired." Tchalekian explains that people aren't going to work anymore so they aren't wearing out their shoes. Things are changing." He says people still aren't going out. The woman stands rooted to her location. "I am stunned."

John Lawrence, a COVID contact tracer, hadn't gotten the word on closing of the shop. "It was dumb luck that I came in today." He still goes to work and wears business casual so he is wearing down his dress shoes. "And I have a dog who likes to take long walks so I'm still wearing down these," he says pointing to the shoes he is

The Path to Marijuana Legalization

BY SEN. ADAM EBBIN

The prohibition of marijuana in America has clearly failed. After six hard years of building support, educating colleagues, and workshopping legislation, I was able to pass SB2, my bill to eliminate the criminal penalty for personal possession of up to an ounce of marijuana and downgrade the offense to a $25 pre-payable fine processed much like a traffic ticket. House Majority Leader Charniele Herring (D-Alexandria) passed companion legislation. Our bills were a critical step to reform our criminal justice system and lay the groundwork for the equitable legalization of cannabis.

According to a July 2019 Gallup poll, 12% of adult Americans regularly consume marijuana. Eleven states have fully legalized responsible use by adults. However, until SB2 went into effect on July 1, 26,000 Virginians were being arrested for possessing marijuana every year. They were punished with devastating, life-long consequences for a victimless and arbitrary crime. Arrests for marijuana possession can hurt job prospects and negatively impact student financial aid, access to housing, and even child custody decisions. This issue was exacerbated by the harsh reality that Black and Brown Virginians are 340% more likely to be arrested for marijuana possession than white Virginians, even though white and Black Virginians use marijuana at the same rate -- according to a study by the ACLU.

Black Arlingtonians were eight times more likely than white Arlingtonians to be arrested for marijuana possession. When arrested, penalties were more harshly enforced against Black and Brown Virginians. Marijuana decriminalization was a moral and economic imperative during the 2020 legislative session, both because of the cost to minority communities and the ballooning cost of enforcement on our state's budget (we had been spending over $100 million a year on enforcement). With this important step taken care of, it is now time to move towards equitable legalization.

Decriminalization builds a short-term safety net to remove the overly-punitive enforcement of possession of marijuana, but long-term equitable reform requires bringing the benefits of legalization to the communities disparately impacted by the war on drugs.

Based on the study of the eleven states and the District of Columbia which have already legalized adult-use, the sale of marijuana through a regulated marketplace can both net millions in state revenue and create strong small, minority-owned businesses throughout the state. Washington, a state similar in size to Virginia, netted nearly $400 million in tax revenues from legal marijuana in 2019. In Illinois, which recently legalized, a large portion of the tax revenue is allotted to grants to reduce gun violence and poverty and provide social services. A state-regulated retail market ensures product testing and labeling, minimizes the illicit marketplace which contributes to violence in our communities, and reduces youth access to cannabis.

COVID-19 has undercut funds for key state services and hit minority communities disproportionately hard. Creating equitable marijuana reform can be an important tool in our policymaking toolbox to address these issues.

According to a Gallup Poll, 66% of Americans support the legalization of marijuana. In Virginia, those supporters consist of a broad and diverse coalition that I was glad to work with to pass decriminalization in this year's legislative session and look forward to working with to pass legalization in 2021. This list includes Attorney General Mark Herring, Sen. Jennifer McClellan (D-Richmond), Del. Charniele Herring (D-Alexandria), Del. Steve Heretick (D-Portsmouth), and Virginia NORML (National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws).

The Joint Legislative and Audit Review Commission (JLARC) is expediting a study on the potential implementation of legalization due to be received in November. This dovetails with an executive workgroup that will be composed of members of the Governor's cabinet to provide guidance on the best regulatory model for cannabis in Virginia so that when we introduce legislation in January, it is ready for primetime. While we are anxious to introduce this legislation, real leadership requires making the right choices for the long-term benefit of every Virginian. Equitable reform demands appropriate safety regulations, support for disparately-impacted communities, and a structure for taxation. Legal cannabis should support Virginia's small businesses, not simply pad the pockets of massive corporations. Small, Women-owned, and Minority-owned (SWaM) businesses can play a critical role in the entire supply chain including farming, processing, and brick and mortar sales.

The prohibition of marijuana has failed and the consequence of this failure has been felt overwhelmingly by Virginians of color, but it has not ended.

It will only end when it is replaced by a regulated adult-use market that emphasizes equity--making whole those who have been burdened most by making sure they have a seat at the table and share in the profits. I am looking forward to doing the hard work needed to get this right.

Arlington Embraces Vertical Prosecution Model

Commonwealth's Attorney Parisa Dehghani-Tafti announced a major initiative in restructuring the Office of the Commonwealth's Attorney in furtherance of its mission to ensure both public safety and justice. The office will implement the vertical prosecution model in every case it handles.

Vertical prosecution, considered a best practice, requires that one prosecutor be assigned to each case from start to finish; it permits the assigned attorney to work early and closely with law enforcement, victims, witnesses, and defense attorneys.

For decades, the Arlington Office of the Commonwealth's Attorney operated under a model in which many cases were not assigned until three weeks before a hearing, and, as in an assembly line, cases were passed along from one attorney to the next at different stages of proceedings. This resulted in a costly, wasteful, and inefficient system requiring one or multiple continuances; forcing victims, witnesses, and police to make repeated trips to the Courthouse only to tell their story to a new prosecutor each time; and providing each new prosecutor with only a few weeks to prepare for those hearings.

The vertical model allows attorneys to work with law enforcement sooner and more consistently, speak and meet with victims and witnesses sooner, obtain and provide discovery sooner, develop a deeper understanding and institutional memory for each case, and ultimately gather the necessary input to make educated prosecutorial decisions with greater speed, efficiency, and fairness. Put simply, the old horizontal model made everyone and, therefore, no one responsible for a case while the new Vertical model assigns accountability to specific individuals and their teams.

The vertical structure consists of four teams that reflect the needs of our community. Each team is headed by one of our Deputy Commonwealth's Attorneys in close collaboration with each other and our leadership team.

❖ The Circuit Court Team focuses on major offenses with an emphasis on violent crime such as homicide, robbery, burglary and other street crimes like felony assault, as well as drug distribution. This team also houses our treatment court assistants working on Drug Court and the Behavioral Health Docket so that they are well-positioned to screen our most high-risk/ high-needs individuals for the most robust services we can provide.

❖ The Juvenile & Domestic Relations Team focuses on all events involving juveniles, both as defendants and victims, or household member crimes, as well as intimate partner violence, which includes both misdemeanor and felony domestic violence cases.

❖ The General District Court Team focuses on all misdemeanor level offenses as well as all misdemeanor and felony vehicular matters with a high impact on public safety such as DWI/DUI and Critical Accident cases. They are also responsible for all misdemeanor and felony general district court cases that occur in the City of Falls Church.

❖ The Special Victims Team focuses exclusively on all cases involving sex offenses ranging from sexual assault to internet crimes such as child pornography.

Within these four teams, certain attorneys are cross designated to capitalize on the array of prosecu-torial and life experience possessed by our diverse team of attorneys.

"The change has been monumental -- like turning a battleship on a dime," said Dehghani-Tafti. "The commitment of our extraordinary staff, the help of the county's Department of Technology Services, and the collaboration with stakeholders to the transition to vertical prosecution has been instrumental to its early success.

"Even in its early days and during a pandemic we have been able to work quickly with victims to resolve cases, to ensure that our work is efficient, and to view our policies and practices through an equity impact.

The vertical model is not just administrative inside baseball: it's a key component of delivering both public safety and fair and equitable outcomes."

Help: Collecting Food On Aug. 11, and Everyday

The Arlington County Police Department's Community Resources Section is conducting a food drive in support of the Arlington Food Assistance Center (AFAC). AFAC provides 2,400 Arlington households with dignified access to nutritious, supplemental groceries, free of charge. Throughout the COVID-19 pandemic, AFAC has continued to support a growing number of Arlington households, increasing their need for food donations from the public. All donations will help fill the shelves at AFAC and ensure they are able to continue to meet the needs of their clients.

The Community Resources Section will be collecting donations at drive-thru donation stations on Tuesday, Aug. 11, 2020 from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. at three locations:

- ❖ Westover Baptist Church – 1125 Patrick Henry Drive
- ❖ Police Headquarters – 1425 N. Courthouse Road
- ❖ Giant Food – 2901 S. Glebe Road

Upon arrival, donors should stay in their car until they reach the unloading areas, where officers will be on hand to remove donations from their vehicle. A separate area will be available for those arriving by bike or foot. All donors are expected to observe proper social distancing guidelines and wear a face covering while dropping off donations.

AFAC accepts most unopened, unexpired, and unprepared foods, including perishable items. AFAC is most in need of the following low sodium, low fat and low sugar items:

- ❖ Low sodium tomato products (diced, paste, and sauce)
- ❖ Low sodium canned tuna
- ❖ Low sodium canned beans
- ❖ Low sodium canned soup
- ❖ Canned vegetables
- ❖ Peanut butter (in plastic jars)

Even though the start of the school year will mean distance learning at home this year, children are still required to be vaccinated to enroll.

Back-to-School Vaccinations Required, Even with Distance Learning

While there's a cloud of uncertainty over what the back-to-school season will look like this year, one thing is certain: children still need to be vaccinated. Pandemic-induced online learning might lead some parents to believe that vaccinations are not mandatory, however, the form in which academics are offered this school year won't alter immunization requirements.

"It is important for parents to know that school required immunizations are mandatory ... even if students attend school virtually in the fall," said Shauna Severo,

Director of Health Services with the Fairfax County Health Department.

"Vaccinations are required by the Department of Education, a requirement that applies to all school systems in the state, not just Arlington," added Cara O'Donnell, Acting Public Information Officer, Public Health Division, Arlington Department of Human Services. "This vaccinating is critical to preventing outbreaks of common vaccine-preventable illnesses when schools eventually reopen. We are offering appointments for kids who require catch up vaccinations to be in compliance with ... vaccination requirements for school entry."

without wearing face coverings and without practicing physical distancing, “thereby creating a significant potential for spread of COVID-19.”

In accordance with state law, the Board will hold a public hearing on the amendment at its September 2020 County Board Meeting, before voting on whether to make it permanent.

Northam declared a state of emergency in Virginia on March 12, 2020, in response to the spread of the novel coronavirus.

County Manager Mark Schwartz declared a local emergency on March 13, 2020, and the Board consented to his declaration on March 14, 2020.

Arlington entered Phase Three of reopening on July 1, 2020.

Back-to-School Vaccinations Required, Even with Distance Learning

This requirement also applies to students in the State of Maryland. “At a time when our healthcare system is already overwhelmed with COVID19, it is important that we avoid outbreaks of preventable deadly diseases,” said Cindy Edwards, Senior Administrator for Communicable Disease and Epidemiology. “That is why we encourage Montgomery County families to reach out to your doctor and make a plan for staying up to date with recommended vaccines.”

Concerns over the COVID-19 pandemic, however, have discouraged some parents from seeking vaccines for their children. “We are offering these community based vaccination clinics and Tdap (tetanus (T), diphtheria (D), and pertussis) clinics in our offices because we’ve seen a decrease in the number of vaccination appointments this year,” said Tina Dale, Communications Specialist, Fairfax County Health Department.

As in years past, Arlington, Alexandria, Fairfax and Montgomery counties are offering free vaccines to families who could not afford them, but this year, appointments are required and counties are taking necessary precautions to ease the minds of parents who fear exposure to COVID. “To minimize exposure risk, the health department will adhere to strict safety protocols, including limiting the number of appointments per site, requiring the wearing of face coverings, and ensuring appropriate social distancing measures are in place,” said Dale.

Pediatricians reported a 30-76 percent decrease in administering routine childhood immunizations earlier this spring, in part because well-child visits were being conducted virtually. To avoid compounding the coronavirus pandemic, the CDC emphasized the importance of routine immunizations, a cornerstone of public health.

It’s important to prevent outbreaks of communicable diseases like pertussis (also known as whooping cough), meningitis, rotavirus, measles, and others. Reach out to your pediatrician to find out what accommodations they are making, whether your children are up to date on their vaccinations, and to schedule their inoculations. Remember, vaccines are critical to protecting the health and welfare of our children and our community. We don’t want to precipitate a second public health crisis.

wearing. He has come in to pick up his shoes as well as some supplies. “Do you have black cream; it’s all sold out?”

He says he comes in about every 3 weeks to have a new heel plate hammered in place on his shoes.” He decides to buy 20 heel plates so he can do it himself when the shop closes. “I’m glad I came in today. I have no idea where to go.”

Tchalekian says, “Yeah not a lot of people do this stuff.” Tchalekian came over from Lebanon when he was a child and says the leather craft skill was in the family. “I guess it was instilled in my blood.”

He explains if he were to train someone from scratch it would take many years. Tchalekian has one employee who came with a little knowledge. It took five years to get him trained to do the basic work. But it took another five years to fine tune his skills. “He still can’t do the finishing. It is pretty complicated. You’ve got to be careful.”

Many of the customers come in and call him Sam. They just assume his name is the same as the shop. “I don’t bother to set them straight. It would take too long with all of the customers.” And he still has work to do. Tchalekian says he has been working 18 hours a day for 20 years. “And it’s hard to shut down when you’re rockin’ and rollin’.”

Joann Perry picks up her pair of high heels just in time. They had been at the shop since March.

Safeguarding My Future

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Whether or not I’m certain about my attitude toward being a dual cancer threat (non small cell lung and papillary thyroid, cancer), only my subconscious knows for sure. This was recently made clear to when I provided my supermarket shopping preferences to my wife, Dina, who for reasons she takes very seriously: my health, won’t let me go into stores to buy anything. Ergo, my list. And I may add, there is much adieu about those preferences. It’s like a negotiation. Though not exactly partisan, the debates rage on and I’m lucky, if I see more than a handful of requests honored from my list. In effect, Dina is my gatekeeper (you’ll note I didn’t say jailor).

There are some requests which are rarely obstructed: health and fitness, fruits and vegetables, meat and potatoes and any other non-desert/snack-type item. I’m not going to bore you readers by saying how long it’s been since I’ve had a Hostess cupcake or an Entenmann’s cake or a TastyKake anything; I wouldn’t want you to feel sorry for me. In spite of this food censorship, I’m hardly wasting away. Though I’ve lost some weight, mostly due to my low iodine diet a few months back (as part of my thyroid cancer treatment), it was weight I could certainly afford to lose.

Now that I’ve lost it, Dina doesn’t want me to gain it all back. Which I can understand and appreciate. Overweight often leads to any number of problems: hypertension, diabetes and even heart disease, to name a few possible complications. Still, I have my food requirements (OKAY, needs) and unless I get them, Kenny will become even more of a dull boy than he already is. So far, Dina is not budging. I wouldn’t quite say she’s the immovable object, but she definitely remains an obstacle to my caloric happiness.

And the ‘caloric happiness’ to which I refer are basically Kenny’s four food groups: cake, cookies, candy and ice cream, which also explains my presumptive epitaph: “He never met a carbohydrate he didn’t eat.” But when the conversation moves to other less controversial items, the conversation is much less problematic and maybe even indicative of who I am, what I’ve become and how I assess my future prospects (life expectancy).

When one receives a cancer diagnosis, your brain gets rewired (figuratively speaking) and your choices become sort of a window to your soul. Things you want/ don’t want become tells of what’s being debated in your brain. Initially, after hearing your cancer diagnosis, it’s unnatural almost to want what you used to want. It feels trivial. Your frame of reference - and context, narrow and shorten. When the future you anticipated is snatched away, it’s not only time which is taken. Hopes, dreams and normalcy are snatched away as well. And sometimes, without even realizing it, a request is made which inadvertently illuminates the route to the light at the end of the tunnel.

That moment occurred for me during last week’s supermarket list discussion. Aside from the usual stuff that likely would need to be re-ordered, I ordered something new, without it being considered in the context of cancer (basically an abbreviated timeline). I asked Dina to order me an eight-pack of soap bars, an amount of soap that would probably last a few months, at a minimum. A ‘minimum’ which you don’t necessarily anticipate. Not that a cancer diagnosis automatically shortens your life, but generally speaking, it is bad for business, if you know what I mean? A business which, apparently, I’m now willing to invest in. Maybe time is on my side after all.
