Great Falls Helps Fight Hunger

Stuff the Bus rolls into action.

BY MERCIA HOBSON
 THE CONNECTION

The Wheels on the Bus is a classic children's song that tells the story of a little bus going "All 'round the town." On Saturday, Jan. 30, Fairfax County's little Fastran buses, CEUs and school buses traveled all 'round the county, to 21 locations, in a fight against hunger. For its tenth year, Stuff the Bus was at it again to meet the critical need to help restock local food pantry shelves after the holidays.

The demand for food has never been greater than this year due to the economic disruption caused by the pandemic. The buses parked from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. outside county facilities, including public libraries, Board of Supervisors' offices and the Pennino building in Fairfax to allow donors to comply with social distancing recommendations and collect non-perishable food donations outside. The buses would return for second runs on Saturday, Feb. 6.

Cars arrived at the Dranesville District, Great Falls Library, 9830 Georgetown Pike, shortly after 10 a.m. Residents of the district had been generous with prior Stuff the Bus donations during the pandemic. Collections at this site would benefit LINK, Inc., a nonprofit that provides emergency food and fi-ancial assistance to qualified people in need.

"We can't let people go hungry in our affluent community," said Supervisor John Foust (D-Dranesville District). "The loss of jobs and small business failures caused by the COVID virus have greatly increased the need for food assistance. In the midst of this awful pandemic, it is awesome to see how Dranesville residents have stepped up to support Stuff the Bus with unprecedented levels of food contributions."

Melissa Morgan and her daughter, Hannah, 7, were among the first to place their items on the bus. "We know a lot of people are struggling to find food because they've lost their jobs. We wanted to help," said Melissa. Hannah said she liked the Cocoa Puffs cereal that was in her bag. Melissa said they also chose tea, coffee, rice and beans to donate.

According to the County website, for those who cannot donate in person, monetary donations can be made by visiting the partner nonprofits' websites or by visiting Volunteer Fairfax's Stuff the Bus Donation Page. Nonprofits can turn donated dollars into more meals with a monetary donation by purchasing food in bulk or through special discounts. Monetary donations also allow pantries to purchase culturally appropriate foods, fresh fruit and vegetables, low-fat dairy products, and lean proteins, which can't be collected through food drives.

Fairfax County Severs Cooperation with ICE

Board adopts Trust Policy barring voluntarily sharing residents' immigrant status.

BY MERCIA HOBSON
THE CONNECTION

Fairfax County's Board of Supervisors approved in a vote of 9-to-1, the Public Trust and Confidentiality Policy (Trust Policy) introduced as a Board Matter on Jan. 26 by Chairman Jeffrey C. McKay and co-sponsored by Supervisors Dalia A. Palchik (D-Providence District) and John W. Foust (D-Dranesville District). The Trust Policy prohibits County employees, government agencies and departments, including the police, from voluntarily sharing information or cooperating with Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) officials.

"Immigration enforcement is done by others, and unless required by law, we will not share immigration status for individuals. This is particularly important to our police department when we are trying to solve crimes in our community," McKay said.

The Trust Policy states: "It is not an appropriate use of Fairfax resources to facilitate enforcement of federal immigration law, which is the sole responsibility of the federal government. Cooperation with civil, administrative immigration enforcement is especially problematic because it lacks the constitutional protections of criminal law, and ICE civil detention requests are frequently issued in error."

The policy reasserted what McKay said was the role of local government and the community's desire to assist people by working with them, not against them.

"Having this policy in place is the humane and right thing to do to provide safeguards to those who need our services the most," Supervisor Walter Alcorn said.

THE TRUST POLICY addressed reports that some undocumented immigrants in the County avoided seeking help during the pandemic out of fear of being deported after information they shared with the County would be disclosed to federal immigration officials. Supervisor Rodney Lusk (D-Lee District) said it became clear to him from conversations with a number of nonprofit organizations that there were community members "who were fearful and not willing to come forward and ask for help because they thought they were going to put themselves in jeopardy."

According to a post by ACLU People Power Fairfax on Facebook, Jan. 26, the Trust Policy "provides privacy protection for residents' www.CONNECTIONNEWSPAPERS.COM personal information; it restricts information sharing with all outside entities. This helps all Fairfax residents, but especially immigrants because ICE is so adept at data-mining any information from any source."

A second post the next day by ACLU People Power Fairfax said that the Trust Policy does not just "codify" existing practice.

"Significant new guardrails were put in place to prevent direct AND indirect sharing of data with ICE. Immigrants can breathe easier. Their fear of government was not irrational even if county employees did not intentionally share their information; the risk was there. Now trust can be rebuilt," ACLU posted.

On Friday, Jan. 29, immigrant rights advocacy groups CASA and ACLU People Power Fairfax co-hosted a bilingual press conference. After four years of advocacy, they celebrated passage of the Trust Policy. Moderators Luis Aguilar of CASA, and Diane Alejandro, with ACLU People Power Fairfax, celebrated and spotlighted comments by McKay, Foust, Palchik, Steve Descano, Commonwealth's Attorney, and members of CASA and ACLU People Power Fairfax.

"It is without a doubt that Fairfax County is leading the way for CASA and our 100,000 regional members," said Aguilar.

McKay said the Trust Policy passage marked a new chapter for Fairfax County. "We will do everything we can to help people, protect them from association with ICE," said McKay.

Foust said the advocacy and education provided by the CASA and ACLU teams led to the adoption of the Trust Policy, and the timing couldn't be more critical to the Latino community.

"Covid is having a grossly disproportionate impact on the Latino community," Foust said. "Everyone can take advantage of the ongoing public health efforts. Whether it be testing or vaccinating, or assisting with contact tracing, it is critical. ... This can be a huge step, I believe, toward fighting the spread of Covid in the Latino community."

For Palchik, it was personal. "It's very close to my heart, not only as the first Latino Supervisor here in the history of Fairfax County but also as an immigrant."

Steve Descano, Commonwealth's Attorney, said that with the passage of the Trust Policy, "If you come to court, you will not be turned over to ICE. ... I'll continue to work with County leadership and get input from groups like those that are joining us today and, as always, bring the values of the community into the courthouse."

According to Alejandro, she and McKay agreed that non-law enforcement agencies already strive to protect immigration status. Still, other information that ICE has used to locate its targets remained vulnerable. "This is why the protections against sharing addresses and other private information are so important. The ones in the Trust Policy rival the best in the country. The board can be proud," Alejandro said.

DURING QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS, McKay said that the policy is for all Fairfax County agencies, but does not apply to those operated by towns and the City of Fairfax. "It's a little bit of a mixed bag for programs that those individual cities run. Our policy can't dictate what they do. ... For services that we run in those jurisdictions, this policy does apply to those. For example ... in some cases, we run the school system." McKay said that as for things that come up through the Northern Virginia Regional Gang Task Force, of which the County Police Department is a member, "our officers will not be participating in that. This policy doesn't set the policies of the Gang Task Force."

Other comments shared during the celebration of the passage of Trust Policy:

Melvin Mancia, a CASA member, resident of Fairfax County since 2004, said police pulled him over for a traffic violation. "I am one of those persons who have suffered the consequences of the previous law," Mancia said. Police took him, handed him over to ICE, and detained him in a facility for months. Unlike some of his friends, Mancia got out. He lost his home and his business. His friends lost more. When they were de-

Putting Just Into Justice

COMMENTARY

Under current Virginia law a person who steals something of value less than $1,000 can be punished by up to 12 months in jail with fines up to $2,500 along with any restitution that might be owed. As tough as that sentence may seem, if that same person commits another misdemeanor larceny of whatever amount less than a thousand dollars within any time frame in the future, that person under current law can be jailed for between 30 days and 12 months. A third or any subsequent offense at any time in the future results in a Class 6 felony with up to five years in prison.

Persons who practice law defending individuals facing such charges tell me that the accused are most likely to be poor, and the vast majority are homeless and/or mentally ill. Upping the penalties on such persons is neither just for the vulnerable persons involved nor does it make society any safer. With thanks to Justice Forward of Virginia (justiceforwardva.com) for bringing my attention to this injustice, I introduced HB2290 that is now making its way through the House to repeal the enhanced penalties.

This bill is but one example of laws that have been on the books for years but upon examination are clearly not just laws; they do not agree with what is considered morally right or good. For most of the years I have served in the House of Delegates, I was the lone vote against a series of bills that added to the list of capital crimes. Along the way conservative Republican Frank Hargrove of Hanover County joined me in my opposition to the death penalty. In more recent years, opposition to the death penalty has grown to the point where it appears likely that the death penalty will be abolished this year by a bill of which I am a co-patron.

Abolishing the death penalty would help put just into the justice system in the Commonwealth. Between 1901 and 1981, 258 Black people were executed in Virginia at a rate nearly six times the rate of white people. Not a single white person was executed for any crime other than murder while Black persons were executed for crimes that included armed robbery and attempted sexual assault. During its history stretching back to 1608, Virginia put to death 1,300 people including the most women and young children of any state in the Union.

This legislative session may be the most historic yet in reforming the criminal justice system. Bills pending before the current session include repealing mandatory minimum sentencing, ending felony possession for drugs, reforming the broken probation system, instituting automatic expungement of criminal records, establishing pay parity for public defenders, and ending presumption against bail.

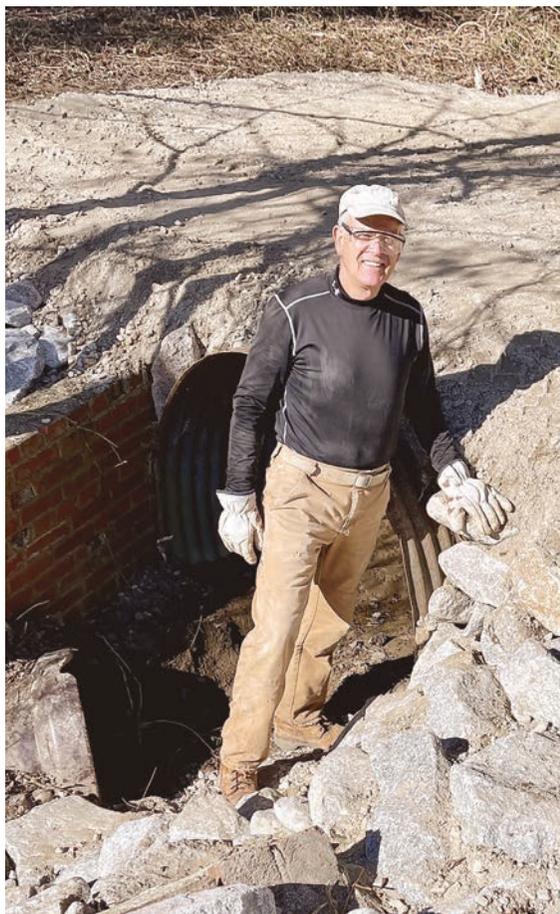

Virginians will be no less safe in their person or in their possessions when the laws become more just, fair and equally applied regardless of one's race. Laws that are just are more likely to be respected and certainly easier to defend.

Volunteering for Area Parks

BY SUSAN LAUME
THE CONNECTION

As many citizens take a renewed interest in community service as an energy outlet and to help others during the challenges of the pandemic, we note the on-going efforts of 2018 Ellie Doyle Park Service Award honoree Michael Applegate. Applegate, a familiar figure to users of Laurel Hill Park, has been logging a minimum of 30 hours weekly since 2016. Initially concentrating on mowing along walking and biking trails, of late he has been spending more time on drainage improvement and expanding trail verge areas into the thicker brush.

This week we found Applegate assisting the area's County Maintenance Operations crew in improving an old broken drain at the Park's Ashton-Snowden entrance. A small broken pipe and brickwork dating from the prison era, lining a portion of Giles Run, were improved with a larger volume pipe and added trail for access. Applegate hand dug rocks into the stream bank using a shovel and pick, framing the large water carrier pipe. County maintenance crew members then

McLean High Boundary Change Down to the Wire

After the last public hearing, the School Board votes on Feb. 4.

BY MERCIA HOBSON
THE CONNECTION

The McLean/Langley High School Boundary Study is at the end of its multi-year process for the School Board to take action by vote and provide capacity relief, or not. On Thursday, Jan. 28, the School Board welcomed final testimony. Students and parents weighed in, each citing different concerns from different perspectives. One parent asked who she was addressing. “There doesn’t seem to be a single school board member with their cameras on,” said Bonnie Arthur, a McLean parent.

Over the past 10 years, McLean HS has grown in student membership, increasing its capacity deficit to “substantial,” at 118 percent as reported in SY 2019-20.

FCPS implemented capacity solutions beginning in SY 2012-13 and continuing through SY 2020-21. FCPS installed twelve temporary classrooms, expanded the weight room; removed lockers from the hallways, converted two classrooms to Bio/Chem Labs, and installed a twelve classroom modular that replaced the twelve temporary classrooms. The solutions reportedly increased program capacity at McLean HS from 1,992 to 2,343, according to FCPS.

The School Board is scheduled to vote on the boundary adjustment at its Feb. 4 business meeting. Information will be provided to the Board before the meeting.

Following community feedback to include middle schools to address split feeders at all levels and in accord with School Board Regulation 8130.9, at the January 21 School Board meeting, FCPS recommended the School Board approve a boundary adjustment of a portion of the Spring Hill Elementary split feeder area to feed from Longfellow Middle and McLean High to Cooper Middle and Langley High.

The Connection reported on the January 21 School Board meeting, noting that the approved boundary adjustment would not affect the elementary school boundary.

Students, Parents Weigh In

On Thursday, Jan. 28, the School Board welcomed the testimony of thirty-one individuals allotted 3-minutes each. The following are highlights of the testimonies:

I’ve made a few casual virtual friends, but they are not very meaningful friendships. I would not miss them if I moved to Cooper Middle for eighth grade. If I were grandfathered and stayed at Longfellow for eighth grade, I would gather friends next year while in person but have to say goodbye to them when I went off to Langley... It makes sense to resume rising eighth-graders from Longfellow to Cooper next year. - Ava Carter, resident at Wolf Trap Woods, seventh grader at Longfellow MS

I am wondering why and how Option C was proposed to the Board... Looking at the map, Colvin Run neighborhoods are closer to Cooper and Langley than Spring Hill was in Option C. I’ve also heard diversity. I do not care about the race factor in making this decision - Connor Chun, Longfellow MS student

In my school, almost all kids go to Cooper and Langley. Where I live, I’m the exception. I’m supposed to go to Longfellow and then McLean... During all my years at Colvin, I have developed relationships with people at this school... I’m asking the Board to fix this.- Sara Powell, sixth grader, Colvin Run ES

We’ve heard from the students so far tonight. It comes down to the fact that if you eliminate feeders at the elementary school level and make any boundary changes starting with rising seventh graders, you would address all the issues that you just heard from those very articulate kids. - John Callanan

I’m not sure who I’m addressing here since there doesn’t seem to be a single school board member with their cameras on...Table this issue until the results of this disastrous year can be analyzed, and the resulting actual enrollment numbers can be used as a calculation for school boundaries.- Bonnie Arthur, McLean parent

I’m part of a small new neighborhood, Summer House Landing... We’re currently assigned to Herndon High, while all of our surrounding neighborhoods are assigned to Langley. Under the Fairfax County Public Schools policy, 8130.7, the Board can adjust the boundary for various reasons, and my neighborhood clearly falls under three of these... My intent is not to detract from tonight’s conversation. I just want to highlight that I think it’s important for every student to be given the same thoughtful consideration. - Hana Kong

The bottom line of my remarks can be summarized through one question. Why would we, as a community, proceed with the boundary adjustment during a pandemic? I cannot stress enough that this is an increase in the stress of many students and my family, who are potentially on the chopping block during this long deliberative process. - Michael Wautlet

Friends and Neighbors Supports Artemis House

Members of Great Falls Friends and Neighbors (GFFN) Philanthropy Committee presented a donation check for $5,500 on Jan. 26 to Joe Meyer, Executive Director & CEO of Shelter House, and Nurjan Ahmedova, Director of Development, to support the organization's 24-hour emergency shelter, Artemis House for domestic and sexual violence victims, stalking, and human trafficking.

June Kelly, Vice-President of GFFN Philanthropy, said the 14 women in the group raised funds for the donation through two programs they held in 2020, the Harvest Tea and sales of the Official 2020 White House Christmas Ornament. With income predicted to be reduced due to the coronavirus's impact, members expanded advertising and sale of the ornaments to GFFN's website and Facebook page, NextDoor, and businesses outside Great Falls.

"This will really help the women and children of Artemis House," said Meyer. "Thank you very much."

made tremendous impacts on how many lives we've been able to save," he said.

Meyer shared the story of a woman whose name he changed to protect her identity. He said that "Lisa," who lived in Fairfax County, called Artemis Hotline in the middle of the night after her husband left to work the night shift. She explained that her husband had put a gun to her head and threatened to kill her when he returned.

Meyer said, "This was not the first time he physically assaulted her. For the past year, he would mentally and physically abuse her until she had no choice but to give in. He had brainwashed her into believing that he would get custody of the children because he was the primary breadwinner. Artemis House immediately coordinated a safe exit for her and her children from the home. When she entered shelter, she was able to create a safety plan and press charges against her husband, who is now serving five years in prison for his assaults. 'Lisa' is now living independently with the support of Shelter House's Domestic Violence Supportive Housing program."

Shelter House is a community-based non-profit organization that provides crisis intervention, safe housing, and supportive services to homeless families and domestic violence victims serving all of Fairfax County. Tightening Criteria for Entering into Gang Database

Gang Task Force use of DataWalk under scrutiny.

Part two of a two-part series.

On Oct. 2, 2018, Northern Virginia Regional Gang Task Force selected DataWalk as their analytical platform to support its fight against gangs according to a headline on BUSINESS WIRE.

“The Northern Virginia Gang Task Force (NVGTF), a key agency in the front line of the fight against gangs such as the notorious MS-13, has selected DataWalk as their analytical platform to support their daily operations, collaboration, and investigative support ... NVGTF members from 14 Virginia law enforcement agencies will use DataWalk to provide a secure, shared, centralized platform for analyzing data to support gang investigations, and to empower detectives to significantly extend their capabilities for doing crime analysis.”

“DataWalk delivers the critical functionality needed for our operations,” said Jay Lanham, Executive Director of NVGTF. “DataWalk empowers our team with new capabilities for collaboration and analysis, to increase our effectiveness, efficiency, and ability to fulfill our mission of making our region inhospitable to gang activity.”

“DataWalk will enable NVGTF agents to instantly search across all their data to find people, locations, and events of interest; securely collaborate on investigations; and use advanced link charts and geospatial analysis to detect and uncover criminal patterns,” according to the BUSINESS WIRE.

“DataWalk is quickly establishing its position in the law enforcement marketplace for crime-fighting software by offering a centralized repository with sophisticated analytics,” said Gabe Gotthard, DataWalk C.E.O. in the 2018 BUSINESS WIRE release. “DataWalk uniquely enables organizations like the NVGTF to effectively leverage all their data to improve public safety.”

IN AN INTERVIEW on Jan. 7, Lanham discussed the prior use of GangNet by the Northern Virginia Regional Gang Task Force, their selection of DataWalk as an alternate database, and DataWalk’s current use status.

Lanham said that in 2018, 14 agencies were part of the task force, but since then, two have dropped out. FCPD remains one of the agencies. Lanham said while the Task Force was set up with different agencies; still, each detective only had access to their own agency’s record management system in GangNet.

“We were not able to cross-reference any cases ... That is because of each individual jurisdiction’s I.T. policies as far as being able to go through the firewall. ... Our detectives did not have that ability to do that,” Lanham said.

“Keep in mind, GangNet is a database where gang members were entered into, to add their picture, tattoos, address, those kinds of things. So basically, it was a criminal database where [detectives] could go in if they couldn’t identify who was a gang member.”

DataWalk, Lanham said is not a system where “we go in and enter individuals who might be associated with gangs or an admitted gang member ... DataWalk is where active criminal cases would go into the system. So, for instance, a Fairfax County detective who wrote up a report as part of his criminal investigation, it could be scanned and downloaded into that system along with any photographs and phone numbers... Then DataWalk will cross-reference cases... It negates the need for detectives and investigators to cross-reference phone numbers and spend a long, long time.”

According to Lanham, DataWalk is not a “system that is out of the box.” “They will come in and design a system the way you need it, in the way you want it to work with a lot of systems,” he said. The engineers at DataWalk sat down with detectives at the Task Force. “And our detectives told them what we needed,” Lanham said. “Only our detectives on the Task Force, no other police officer in Northern Virginia, have access to anything we have except the Task Force member,” said Lanham.

However, the Task Force does not have DataWalk up fully running and working because of the lack of funding. “It’s made it very difficult,” Lanham said. “We work with one hand tied behind our back most of the time because of our minimal funding.”

Lanham said in 2002, when the Task Force was formed; it received the support of the Honorable Frank R. Wolf of Virginia’s 10th Congressional District, funded with earmarked grants through the Byrne Memorial Justice Assistance Grant (J.A.G.) Program. “Suddenly, in 2013, all the funding went away. We had a $3 million budget... Now it’s just law enforcement. Each police agency contributes $25,000 to the budget... We get no money from the state government or the federal government.”

According to DataWalk: It is a link analysis software platform to connect numerous large data sets, both external and internal, into a single repository for fast visual analysis. DataWalk enables data-intensive organizations to blend all desired data from various internal and external sources into a unified view, such that they can instantly search, visualize, and collaboratively analyze all of their data through a comprehensive set of simple visual tools.

“We haven’t been able to get it to where we need it to be at this point because of funding. In essence, Task Force funding went from $3 million in 2013 to $300,000 in 2020,” Lanham said.

While 16 jurisdictions originally comprised the Northern Virginia Gang Task Force, Ray Lham said there are 12 as of Jan. 11, 2021. Most recently, the City of Alexandria and City of Falls Church withdrew because of “funding problems,” and the Town of Dumfries and Town of Warrenton, Lanham said, withdrew before he arrived at the Gang Task Force. He did not know why they withdrew.

for some time, learned Kofi Annan, president of The Activated People in early Jan. 2021. Concerned about the Department’s or the Task Force’s use of I/LEADS or other databases and their criteria for labeling area residents “gang members,” Annan said, “There is still a need for greater transparency and due process.”

ON JAN. 8, Lieutenant Colonel Thomas “Tom” Ryan, Deputy Chief of Police for Administration for the Fairfax County Police Department, said in an email to Annan, “The entry criteria have not been reviewed or updated in quite some time, and I agree there are aspects of it that can and should be changed. I have had discussions with our Gang Unit, and they fully support this effort. We will begin work on tightening up our entry criteria and will provide you a copy to review when this is completed.”

According to Fairfax County Internal Audit Office, I/LEADS (the Intergraph Law Enforcement Automated Data System), “Is a comprehensive records management software package from Intergraph, Inc., to provide integrated, comprehensive management and processing of the many types of data used by the Department, such as citation, accident, arrest, and incident data. It tracks FCPD’s compliance with the many federal and state requirements and regulations and interfaces with systems used by other divisions of the criminal justice system, such as the Fairfax County Sheriff, the Commonwealth of Virginia courts, and with National Capital Region Law Enforcement Information Exchange (N.C.R. LInX).”

When a Loved One Is Hospitalized with Covid-19

Coping with separation and uncertainty.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

For years, being able to talk with his mother, Carole Isaacs, nearly every day was a gift that Marc Stern treasured, so when he was unable to reach her for several days, he became concerned. After contacting the assisted living facility in which she resided, he learned that she had been found unconscious in her room and suffering from a high fever. Rushed to the emergency room, Isaacs tested positive COVID-19 and placed in the intensive care unit. While her life remained in limbo, Stern and the rest of his family could not see or visit her due to hospital safety policy. He was overcome with anguish and anger as he realized that he might never see her again. Having someone listen as he discussed those feelings provided relief in his period of helplessness. Now he is offering that service to others

"The pandemic is still new, still raging, still scary," said Marc Stern, who is a self-described professional listener and runs Need to be Heard, a service in which others – by telephone or video conferencing – can express their feelings freely as another person listens empathetically and without judgment. "Fear stalks us wherever we are. Compounding that with the potential of losing someone you love is enough to rock the foundation of your center and provoke extreme anxiety and sadness. The main coping strategy comes down to two simple yet powerful words; loving and listening."

When a loved one is hospitalized with COVID-19, the agony of being separated from them while they are battling a life-threatening and unpredictable illness can feel overwhelming. Often occurring without warning or time to prepare, the sudden life change can lead to a tidal wave of emotions.

Those feelings vary from person to person and are affected by the resources available to them, says Lisa Jackson-Cherry, Ph.D., Professor of Counseling at Marymount University's College of Health and Education. "Normal reactions for the majority of [people] may include feelings of anxiety, depression, helplessness, hopelessness ... and thoughts of abandoning their loved one," she said. "This may be exacerbated if the caretaker also has health issues, lack of support or a clinical mental health diagnosis or history."

A lack of control can exacerbate those feelings. "Gaining any control over the situation — even when limited — is helpful," said Jackson-Cherry. "This could mean gaining as much information as possible about the medical situation in order to make decisions [and] trying to build in some normalcy in the abnormality of the situation."

For those who might have a friend whose loved one is battling Covid-19, there are uncomplicated ways to offer comfort. "We can support friends and loved ones by expressing interest and concern," added Jerome Short, Ph.D., Associate Professor of Psychology, George Mason University.

After testing positive for COVID-19, Carole Isaacs was hospitalized and isolated from loved ones.

Drawing up one's support systems and creating a collection of soothing or supportive remedies or a 'mental health tool box', such as taking a walk with a friend or meditating, are useful when dealing with the stress and anxiety, advises Dr. Anton C. Bizzell, MD. "This is the time to shore up all the support you have," he said. "For some people, this could mean contacting close friends and family, clergy, or neighbors to ask for emotional support. Ask for help with child care, household tasks, or other needs that could be alleviated to allow you to focus on your loved one."

It is important not to be in solitude, added Jackson-Cherry. "Isolation is not helpful and can be harmful."

As she began to heal, Stern was able to have telephone conversations with his mother. "Use technology as possible," he said. "If they are able to converse, technology is your friend," Stern said.

There are cases, says Bizzell, when one needs more support and guidance than self-help strategies can provide. "For many others, this is a time to call a counselor or family physician for help with adding extra support services and care," he said. "This is a traumatic situation, no matter the outcome, and it's not only okay to ask for help, it's essential. There is no one right way to do this. Find what works for you."

For those who might have a friend whose loved one is battling Covid-19, there are uncomplicated ways to offer comfort. "We can support friends and loved ones by expressing interest and concern," added Jerome Short, Ph.D., Associate Professor of Psychology, George Mason University.

Obituary

Charles "Charlie" Slade Andrews, 81, of Reston, Virginia, passed away on 23 December, 2020 from end stage congestive heart failure due to nonischemic cardiomyopathy.

Charlie was born on July 19, 1939 in Middlebury, Vermont, son of the late John Thayer Andrews and Elizabeth Burditt Parker Andrews. He was born left-handed and was left side dominant for the duration of his natural life.

Charlie graduated from Middlebury Union High School in 1957 where he played on the varsity boys' basketball and baseball teams. While playing for the Middlebury Tigers he was deeply influenced by his coach Robert "Bob" M. D'Agostino, Sr. who not only mentored Charlie in how to play the games of baseball and basketball but also how to teach and coach young people. After high school he attended Amherst College to pursue his bachelor's degree. After two years at college Charlie decided to enlist in the U.S. Army where he served for more than two years in the Military Intelligence Corps while stationed in West Germany. At the end of his enlistment, he returned to Amherst College to complete his undergraduate education; he always attested that the time he spent in the Army had matured him and made him a better student. Charlie graduated from Amherst in 1964 though for the rest of his life he would celebrate reunions with the class of 1961 due to the close friendships he had forged with that class. Charlie completed his law degree in 1969 from the University of Maine Law School.

Charlie began his professional career working at Irving Trust Bank in New York City. After graduating law school in 1969, he worked for two years at Pine Tree Legal Aid in Skowhegan and Presque Isle, ME. In 1972 Charlie moved his family to Reston, VA where he worked for the American Automobile Association (AAA). After retiring from AAA in 1998 he started a second career as a bus driver for Fairfax County Public Schools, serving the Langley High School district. This would be Charlie's favorite job of all time. Known affectionately to his young bus riders as "Chuck", he was a safe driver able to navigate backwoods roads not designed for large vehicles and was often selected for difficult routes. Charlie loved working with children and he befriended generations of students as they progressed from elementary to middle to high school. His manner and discipline were calm, friendly, and he always treated children as intellectual equals with individual rights. Charlie retired from bus driving in 2019 after 21 years behind the wheel.

Charlie met the love of his life Constance Dwyer of Scituate MA in 1964 and they were married in 1966. Their son Patrick was born in 1972.

Charlie and his family were active members of Emmaus United Church of Christ congregational church in Vienna VA from 1973 until his death. For close to 20 years Charlie volunteered as a Sunday school teacher as well as an advisor for the Emmaus high school youth group; he also served on numerous church boards. He was particularly fond of working on student plays and was noted for encouraging youth to take on roles that reflected their abilities, not their gender or stereotypes. Charlie was also a long-term donor for the Emmaus chapter of the Inova Blood Donor Services program.

Charlie had many hobbies throughout his life. Math and statistics were his favorite academic subjects and he enjoyed puzzles and games. As a boy he loved spending summers at the family cottage his grandparents purchased in McKown Point, West Boothbay Harbor, Maine in 1944. The cottage is still owned and enjoyed by the extended Andrews family today. Charlie excelled at sailing. When, as young boys, he and his friend Pat Jackson grew tired of having to stay near shore, they taught themselves to sail backwards. As teens, they became competitive racers and Charlie gained the reputation of best "spinner man" in the harbor. Following his athletic career in school he continued to play team sports in several adult softball and basketball leagues in northern Virginia where he also coached a girls' basketball team known as "Charlie's Angels". Charlie was a devout fan of the Boston Celtics and Boston Red Sox and he attended many games at Fenway Park and the old Boston Garden. His sports knowledge was encyclopedic and he enjoyed discussing teams' fortunes with friends and family. His favorite athletes of all time were Bill Russell (Celtics, G.O.A.T) and Ted Williams (Red Sox). Over his lifetime Charlie visited almost all the major league baseball stadiums at least once, as well as those of many minor league teams. He subscribed to the Washington Post in order to read box scores for sporting events as well as to do the Word Jumble and sudoku. Charlie was an avid follower of politics as well as the Supreme Court and he would listen to radio broadcasts of their cases whenever possible. He was also a passionate and meticulous caretaker of automobiles and would embark on road trips as often as he could get away with it. He preferred used cars over new, buying only 2 new cars in 65 years of driving. His dream jobs that he did not pursue were working on a railroad, being a substitute math teacher, and being a truck driver.

Charlie was devoted to his family; he would make regular pilgrimages to Boothbay Harbor, Maine and to western Vermont to celebrate with beloved relatives from the Andrews, Bowditch, Cadwell, and Parker clans. In his later years a very good day for Charlie was sitting on the porch of the family cottage on a warm summer's evening discussing current events over supper and blueberry pie followed by watching the Red Sox on TV.

Survivors include his wife of 54 years Connie, his sisters Caroline Andrews (David Zuk), of Ellsworth, Maine, and Catharine "Kit" Andrews, of Burlington, Vermont, his son Patrick (Janet Brown) and grandchildren Paul, Magdalena, Claire, and Raymond of Fairfax Station, Virginia as well as many cousins, nieces and nephews.

Due to the Covid-19 pandemic a memorial service will be held at a later date. Donations in his memory may be made to the American Heart Association, Emmaus United Church of Christ, or the charity of your choice. Arrangements entrusted to Adams Green Funeral Home.

Reaching out to a friend and offering nonjudgmental presence cannot be underestimated. "Seems simple, but ... be there," said Jackson-Cherry. "Listen to their feelings and thoughts. If needed, assist in advocating for information. Offer to step in for day-to-day errands, meals and making sure they are taking care of themselves."

Understand that anger, anxiety and stress are a normal response to an abnormal situation, Bizzell says, "Don't try to tell them how to feel or think, instead, listen and support. ... Rather than waiting for them to tell you what they need, offer a list of things you could help with: for example, mow their lawn, send a grocery delivery, set up a meal train, help them with technology for video visits, or offer to give their child a ride home from school."

Though it might be awkward or fraught with discomfort, take care to observe when a friend might need professional mental health-care, cautions, Jackson-Cherry. "Look for signs of increased daily living disruptions such as not withdrawing, isolating or sleeping or eating, that are beyond what is normal in these situations," she said. "Listen for signs of increased hopelessness and statements of despair, especially with those who may have a history of suicidal ideation or behaviors."

Recognize that these are unprecedented times, advises Bizzell. "We are now nearly a year into a crisis of unimaginable proportions," he said. "People are suffering. We have never needed our support community more. You don't have to have all the answers; you just need to be there."

Progress, I Guess?

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

I received in the mail today what in the sales/marketing world, we'd call a "pre-approach" letter. It was a letter confirming that my health care provider is aware of me and my covid needs. Moreover, it offered up the tantalizing notion that one day (although they didn't specify) when it is my turn, I will indeed get contacted/scheduled for my inoculation. Unfortunately, they couldn't be any more specific because their allotment of vaccines barely scratches the surface of the actual need. Nevertheless, both my wife and I have been assured that we are on a list. I suppose that's something. As "Forrest, Forrest Gump" would say: "One less thing."

Not that I'm paranoid about catching the virus or ever do I throw caution to the wind by actually integrating into the outside/formerly normal world, especially considering the comorbidity I represent: cancer, but all things being equal, I'd sure like to receive my inoculation. I'd just as soon die of old age. And my wife is doing everything she can to make that happen. She has me on a very short leash. I'm barely able to heel. A pandemic will do that.

As we begin our second year of living dangerously, the vaccines certainly offer hope. Hope can't iron out the logistics, however. Apparently, at least according to the daily news coverage, inoculating so many people in so many places with or without the proper refrigeration is a nearly overwhelming task. Then add in the necessary ingredients: ppe, masks, syringes, swabs, trained inoculators, et cetera, and you've got a hurdle Edwin Moses couldn't overcome. To see that this virus has killed more Americans than died in World War II is a stunning reality to behold. Seeing the death tally rise every day is a jaw-dropping/head-shaking moment. Progress, so far, has been hard to come by. Though there are some alternative theories and explanations about the actual numbers, I tend to believe what the news organizations are telling us. I really don't see the motivation to do otherwise.

Ultimately, we're all responsible for our own actions - and inactions, and the consequences that follow (I only heard that a million times from my father while growing up). If I was to contract covid, I'd have no one to blame but myself. My wife might blame others as she's very impatient/indignant of people who are not adhering to public health advisories and who don't abide by the Vulcan philosophy, especially during a worldwide pandemic: "The good of the many outweigh the good of the few." And it doesn't seem a stretch to ask/expect that your fellow man - and woman, should respect the constriction of some of our freedoms as together, hopefully, we work to overcome this once-in-a-century health crisis. In an odd kind of karma, what goes around does indeed come around. And to prevent this virus from continually coming around, we must be mindful of the scientific facts as more and more is known about this virus.

Still for those of us who have survived this worst pandemic since the Spanish Flu, it's one year and counting. I don't view it as much of an accomplishment, more a series of random strokes that add up to luck. However, since luck doesn't last forever, and can't exactly be counted on, I was happy to receive today's letter acknowledging that the health care powers that be know who I am and where to find me and that I need a vaccination. Presuming otherwise, in the midst of an organizational challenge the likes of which haven't ever been experienced by the current generation in charge, or previous generations for that matter, would be illogical. Here's hoping we all "live long and prosper."
