New TJ Policy Invalidated

Policy is discriminatory, writes judge in win for plaintiff, Coalition for TJ and Pacific Legal Foundation.

BY MERCIA HOBSON
THE CONNECTION

On Friday, Feb. 25, a federal judge for the Eastern District of Virginia, Alexandria Division ruled that the Fairfax County School Board's new admissions policy for Thomas Jefferson High School for Science and Technology, first implemented for the Class of 2025, is "discriminatory."

In his ruling, Claude M. Hilton, United States District Judge, wrote, "The proper remedy for a legal provision enacted with discriminatory intent is invalidation."

Hilton itemized within his 31-page Opinion the School Board's process and reasons for bringing about racial balance at TJ. He discussed how TJ's admission change was "infected with the talk of racial balancing from its inception."

According to Hilton, the purpose of the Board's admissions overhaul was to change the racial makeup of TJ to the detriment of Asian-Americans. "The Board's overhaul of TJ admissions has had, and will have, a substantial impact on Asian-American applicants to TJ," added Hilton in his Opinion.

"For the foregoing reasons, Plaintiff The Coalition for TJ is entitled to Summary Judgment, and the Defendant Fairfax County School Board's Motion for a Summary Judgment is denied."

According to Erin Wilcox, Pacific Legal Foundation attorney and lead attorney for the TJ case, the summary judgment is a final decision from the federal district court judge.

TJ is an elite, regional Fairfax County Public School and a Virginia state-chartered magnet school, often ranked as the top high school in the nation. The school is under the sole direction and control of the Fairfax County School Board. It admits students who meet the eligibility requirements not only from Fairfax and the City of Fairfax but four participating Northern Virginia school divisions — Arlington County, Falls Church City, Loudoun County, and Prince William County. TJ admits slightly more than 400 first-year students from over 3,000 who apply each year.

According to Hilton, the altered TJ admissions policy did away with the previous three merit-based standardized tests, a minimum core 3.0-grade point average, and that students have completed or be enrolled in Algebra I. The policy changed other minimum application requirements as well.

For students to be eligible for TJ under the new policy, they must maintain a 3.5 GPA, be enrolled in a full-year honors Algebra I or higher course, an honors science course, and at least one other honors course, or the Young Scholars program.

Additionally, the new policy, implemented in late fall 2020, moved away from the multi-stage evaluation process to a one-round holistic evaluation. It weighed GPA, a student portrait sheet, a problem solving essay, and "experience factors," attending a middle school deemed historically underrepresented at TJ, coming from an economically disadvantaged family, and statuses as an English language learner and a special education student, into admission considerations.

"The challenged policy renders their children (the Coalition's) unable to compete on a level playing field for a racial purpose," Hilton wrote. He ruled that the case presents substantial evidence of disparate impact. According to Hilton, for the Class of 2025, the proportion of admitted Asian-American students fell to about 54 percent. Whereas, "for the previous five years, Asian-American students never made up less than 65 percent of the admitted class," Hilton wrote.

"The undisputed evidence demonstrates precisely how the Board's actions caused and will continue to cause, a substantial racial impact. The Board instituted a system that does not treat all applicants to TJ equally," Hilton wrote.

While the new process allots seats equal to 1.5 percent of each school's eighth-grade class, applicants who do not attain a place at their school must compete for one of only approximately 100 unallocated seats throughout the area.

Great Falls Man Breaks Fundraising Records

Bryan Thomas raises more than $1 million, named Leukemia & Lymphoma Society's local Man of the Year.

Bryan Thomas of Great Falls is a source of hope and inspiration to families across the globe touched by blood cancer. In 2021, Thomas led a 10-week fundraising campaign that raised more than one million dollars for the Leukemia & Lymphoma Society. His grand total broke records and earned him the organization's title of Man of the Year for the Washington, DC area.

Thomas has lived in Great Falls for 7 years.

An executive with World Wide Technology, Thomas has a strong passion for using his professional talents to build relationships and drive results. He is known among his peers for advocating for a culture of service within WWT which includes positively improving the community. WWT and its partners have supported LLS for several years. Thomas also saw first-hand how one of his mentors was able to combat cancer and return to work.

But it was a conversation with one of his company's closest partners that ultimately led Thomas to launch this year's fundraising campaign.

"I was sharing the incredible experience my wife and I had participating in the LLS 'Team in Training' marathon over breakfast with Cisco Area Vice President Carl De Groote when it really clicked," Thomas said. He learned how children diagnosed with cancer fight. Discussing "those brave and inspirational children, further cemented my commitment in supporting the great work LLS is doing every day."

Personally, he was motivated by watching the fighting spirit of LLS's Boy and Girl of the Year, Karter and Ella. "Their energy and will to push on, despite everything they were going through, was an inspiration."

Founded in 1949, LLS's mission is to cure leukemia, lymphoma, Hodgkin's disease and myeloma, while improving the quality of life of patients and their families. Thomas' campaign was one of 80 annual fundraisers that took place across the U.S. and Canada.

Thomas was all in. While WWT's efforts with LLS in previous years were focused on broader corporate initiatives, in 2021 the company committed fully to supporting the Man of the Year Campaign.

His first task was to assemble a team from among his personal and professional connections to help him develop creative ideas and actively implement fundraising strategies.

With his significant network and relationships, the campaign achieved new levels of success despite much of the work being done virtually. "Understandably, fundraising during a pandemic raises considerable challenges," Thomas noted. "But being a technology company of our size – and with our partners and resources – we leveraged some of our digital capabilities to overcome these challenges."

"In addition, as people were spending more time at home, we had significant participation in the virtual events we conducted with staff, partners and others within our network. These included virtual happy hours, meetings and auctions that took place throughout the country," Thomas said.

"As things began reopening, we were able to safely and securely host a charity golf event that drew even more attention to the fundraiser. After being stuck inside for such a long time, being able to successfully hold the event on a beautiful summer day reenergized spirits and drove even more donations for the cause."

"I was humbled by the overwhelming response by my personal and professional community."

Thomas' 2021 fundraising campaign was one of two this year that topped the million-dollar mark for the first time in LLS history. He continues to be involved with LLS, currently serving on the organization's leadership team.

Thomas serves on the Board of Directors for the United Service Organizations (USO) of Metropolitan Washington-Baltimore. In January 2022, he joined the Advisory Board for the Children's Science Center in Northern Virginia. Previously, he served on the Board of Directors for the ALS Association St. Louis Regional Chapter, and participated in the chapter's annual Ice Bucket Bash.

George Mason University's president Dr. Gregory Washington, received a proclamation recognizing the university's 50th anniversary. Fairfax County Board of Supervisors Chairman Jeffrey McKay presented the proclamation to Washington on behalf of the board at its public meeting on Feb. 22, 2022.

"I know I speak on behalf of all our county residents in expressing our appreciation for the university and the partnership. The strong bond that we have in the county with George Mason University, we're so proud of," McKay said.

George Mason University is the Commonwealth's most diverse, fastest-growing, and largest, public, four-year institution, with 39,134 students, 10,895 staff and professors, and more than 215,900 alumni.

McKay said he wished the university 50 more years of tremendous success and growth. He noted how the institution rises above others. "I think it is fair to say that public universities and colleges throughout the country are looking at different ways to respond to an ever-changing population and needs that are out there," he said. Many are looking at GMU as a model to pivot their academic and professional opportunities.

Environmental Issues Take Back Seat

DEL. KENNETH R. "KEN" PLUM

Even with increasing evidence of climate change, there is a sparsity of bills in the current session of the General Assembly dealing with environmental and climate changes. Of greater concern is the fact that among the bills that could be classified as relating to the environment, most would turn back the clock on current laws, programs, and regulations in place to protect the environment. Virginia did not get its top ranking as a business-friendly state because of its tough environmental regulations, but its already minimal laws and programs are under attack by those who oppose government action on keeping our environment clean and on stopping climate change.

Evidence of the shift in environmental policy came earlier this year when the newly-elected Governor Glenn Youngkin announced his opposition to Virginia's participation in the Regional Greenhouse Gas Initiative (RGGI), an effort among 11 states to cap and reduce CO2 emissions from the power sector. CO2 is the major culprit in the warming of the earth that is leading to climate change and the bizarre shifts in weather and air quality. Most surprising about this shift in policy is the fact that RGGI is a co-operative, market-based approach supported by many in the industrial sector to cap and reduce

"Two bills have been making their way through the General Assembly that would strip citizen boards of their power and responsibilities in protecting air and water quality."

CO2 emissions across the north-east region of the country without the need for government regulations.

Another concerning piece of evidence of a shifting of policy came with the new governor appointing a former Trump administration official known for his opposition to environmental protection regulations as his Secretary of Natural and Historic Resources. A review of the credentials of the appointee raised such alarm among legislators that the Senate refused to confirm the appointment, only the second such refusal in the decades of history of the cabinet system in Virginia.

Most recently two bills have been making their way through the General Assembly that would strip citizen boards of their power and responsibilities in protecting air and water quality. The impetus for the bills came from businesses and industries that felt it takes too long and is too complex to get needed air or water permits to situate their industries in Virginia. Most recently there has been a great deal of controversy and court action about pipelines that proposed coming through Virginia. These affected industries placed the blame for the complexities of the regulation process on the need for scientific evidence and the public participation that raised questions about their plans on the State Water Control Board and the State Air Board. The bills making their way through the legislature and no doubt to be signed by the governor would strip the boards of their power.

I have taken a strong stand against the changes in the Air and Water Boards. My speech against the bills on the floor of the House of Delegates can be heard at https://youtu.be/UaAytHE-o_s, and an article I wrote with Del. Kathy Tran and an expert on the subject is available in the Washington Post at <http://www.washingtonpost.com/opinions/2022/02/23/efforts-silence-virginias-citizens-boards-commissions-are-wrong/>. The current policies that are being implemented in Virginia can do immeasurable harm to the already fragile environment of the Commonwealth.

Looking Ahead to Critical Budget Process

The grassroots "Invest in Fairfax" coalition of community members, local families, and essential workers call on the Board to engage the public in the budget process and to invest in vital county services. Fully two years into the pandemic, it's critical that our budget reflects the values, priorities and urgent needs of our diverse community.

"We are now marking the second year of a pandemic we have not seen in 100 years. Local public services are more important than ever," said David Edelman, Chair of the Invest in Fairfax coalition. "We need to invest in our schools to address interrupted learning. We need to invest in public health and mental health services to help residents deal with this health crisis; to name only a few priorities. Our investments and budget should reflect these needs."

"The Fairfax League of Women Voters understands that the emergence from the Covid pandemic and the economic changes that have resulted place multiple pressures on the county as the budget planning process goes forward.

The Highest priority is the adjustment of compensation to those county employees who have borne the brunt of our service needs during the pandemic including our schools, our public health department and other public servants," said Anu Sahai, Co-President of the Fairfax League of Women Voters. "As an organization committed to free and fair elections, we note that election reforms and increased public demands have placed a significant increase on the needs of the Board of Elections for staffing, maintenance, and capital management. The price of fair elections has gone up and we need to budget accordingly."

"Fairfax County deserves a budget which invests in good, safe jobs for all workers, and quality public services for all working families," said Tammie Wondong, SEIU Virginia 512 Fairfax President and a 30+ year county employee. "Frontline workers throughout our community need affordable health care, need to keep up with the cost of living, and need safe working conditions. That's why county employees are coming together in SEIU to work with county leadership on this year's budget and at the bargaining table for future budgets. Together we will ensure that every working family can thrive."

"The Fairfax Education Association stands with the Invest in Fairfax coalition in asking this board to ensure safety and prudence remain at the forefront of every action," said Kimberly Adams, President of the Fairfax Education Association. "This budget should continue to reflect our employees' hard work to keep everyone healthy as we maintain the world class services our community depends on, especially for our youngest as well as our most vulnerable residents. We expect this budget to carry the message that we are emerging

Fire investigators determined that improperly discarded ashes from an outdoor fire pit caused this house fire in the Wolf Trap neighborhood.

Wolf Trap Area House Fire Caused by Improperly Discarded Fire Pit Ashes

On Saturday, Feb. 26, at approximately 8:45 p.m., units were dispatched for a house fire in the 1500 block of Snughill Court in the Wolf Trap area of Fairfax County.

Units arrived on the scene of a two-story, split-level, single-family home with fire evident from the rear of the house. Crews worked quickly to bring the fire under control. There were no civilian or firefighter injuries reported.

Five occupants were home at the time of the fire. One of the occupants discovered the fire when he looked out a window and saw the back of the house on fire. He alerted the other occupants, and all self-evacuated before fire department arrival. Working smoke alarms were present and alerted after the fire was discovered.

Fire Investigators determined that the fire was accidental in nature and started on the rear deck of the house. The cause of the fire was improperly discarded ashes from an outdoor fire pit.

Five occupants were displaced because of the fire. Red Cross assistance was offered and declined. Damages as a result of the fire were approximately $187,500.

New TJ Policy Invalidated

In the decision, Hilton said that the set-aside disproportionately forces Asian-American students to compete against more eligible and interested applicants. When applicants outside the top 1.5 percent are placed in the unallocated pool of 100, they are also treated unequally.

FCPS declared that the “experience factors” would be used in their holistic review. “One of these factors is whether a student attends a middle school deemed ‘historically underrepresented’ at TJ. According to Hilton, none of the six primary FCPS TJ feeder schools qualify for that consideration, so students at these schools are at a disadvantage in the unallocated pool of 100 possible seated applicants compared to their peers from disadvantaged schools.

According to Hilton, the Board’s main problem is its concentration on the goal of having TJ match the demographics of the surrounding area, which is predominantly expressed in racial terms. “Far from a compelling interest, racial balancing for its own sake is ‘patently unconstitutional,” Hilton wrote. He added, “The Board cannot transform racial balancing into a compelling in-

The Fairfax County Fire and Rescue Department would like to remind all residents to be cautious and keep safety in mind when handling ashes from fireplace, wood stoves or fire pits.

Safety tips:

- ❖ Do not discard your ashes into any combustible container such as a paper or plastic bag, a cardboard box, or a plastic trash can.
- ❖ Do not place ash containers on decks, porches, or in garages.
- ❖ Put ashes into a non-combustible metal container with a lid.
- ❖ Pour water into the container to make sure the ashes are cool.
- ❖ Keep your can OUTSIDE the home, away from your fireplace or stove and anything combustible.
- ❖ Keep the can a safe distance from the home and ideally on a non-combustible surface.
- ❖ Teach all family members to be safe with ashes from your fireplace, fire pit or wood stove.
- ❖ Ashes can stay hot for several days. Follow these steps even when you wait several days to remove the ashes from the fireplace.

terest simply by relabeling it ‘racial diversity.’”

Finally, Hilton said that even if the Board could establish a compelling reason to justify racially discriminatory changes to the TJ admissions process, the Board must demonstrate that the revised policy is “necessary” to achieve that interest.

According to Hilton, the plan must be a “last resort” to accomplish the purportedly compelling interest. He suggested increasing the size of TJ and providing free test prep before defaulting to a system “that treats applicants unequally in hopes of engineering a particular racial outcome.”

“This is a monumental win for parents and students here in Fairfax County, but also for equal treatment in education across the country,” said Pacific Legal Foundation attorney Erin Wilcox. “We hope this ruling sends the message that government cannot choose who receives the opportunity to attend public schools based on race or ethnicity.”

As for the next steps, for the defendant and plaintiff, Wilcox said, “The defendant has 30 days to appeal the district court’s decision to the US Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit. Because they prevailed, the plaintiff has no next steps at this time.”

Survivors mark Iwo Jima 77th anniversary.

Roy Earle was just 18 years old when he enlisted in the Marines shortly after graduating from high school in 1942. For the next three years he would mark his birthday in the midst of some of the worst battles fought in the Pacific Theater of World War II, including his 21st birthday as the Battle of Iwo Jima raged around him.

“For several years, I never celebrated a birthday,” said Earle, who will turn 98 on March 5. “The best I can say is that I marked the occasion lucky to be alive.”

Earle was one of four survivors to gather in Arlington over President’s Day weekend to mark the 77th anniversary of the Battle of Iwo Jima, one of the bloodiest in U.S. history.

“Two years ago we had more than 50 Iwo Jima survivors gather for the 75th reunion,” said David Fields, a board member of the Iwo Jima Association of America that sponsored the gathering. “This year only four veterans were able to return.”

Fields, a Vienna resident who served six years as a Marine infantry officer, is the son of the late Col. Thomas Fields, a veteran of Iwo Jima who went on to serve in Korea and Vietnam.

“Dad felt he was an old man at age 26 when he served in WWII,” Fields said. “He did not talk much about his experience on Iwo Jima, but he always said that the credit goes to the 18-year-olds, who fought with immeasurable courage. In his Company D battalion of the 5th Marine Division, 250 men in his company walked in and only 19 walked out.”

The Battle of Iwo Jima began Feb. 19, 1945. It was the first day of an intense, 36-day battle that stepped on it you went down to your ankles. Mount Suribachi was an active volcano and the Japanese had fortified the island with 15 miles of tunnels so you never knew where or when you would be attacked.”

Recalled Fields, “Dad would say that the Japanese were not on the island, they were in the island.”

Approximately one-third of all Marines killed in action during World War II were killed on Iwo Jima. More than 100,000 Americans fought there and 6,821 died as a result — 5,931 of them Marines. An additional 19,000 troops were wounded in the battle that claimed more than 21,000 Japanese lives. Of the 23,000 Japanese troops defending Iwo, only 1,083 were taken prisoner.

In addition to Earle, Iwo Jima veterans attending the reunion at the Hilton Crystal City included Ivan

Hammond, John DeGennaro and Louis Bourgault.

Virginia Lt. Gov. Winsome Sears, a Marine Corps veteran, was the keynote speaker and the recipient of the first Iwo Jima Association of America’s Woody Williams Award. The award is named in honor of Herschel Woodrow “Woody” Williams, a Marine survivor of Iwo Jima and the last living Medal of Honor recipient from WWII. Williams virtually presented the award to Sears.

The raising of the American flag by five Marines and one Navy Corpsman on Feb. 23, 1945, was immortalized in a Pulitzer-Prize winning photograph by Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal.

“I was in the fourth wave to land on Iwo Jima,” Earle recalled. “Iwo was a very soft ash — when you sit in a room full of veterans and their families, including those who fought at Iwo Jima,” Sears said. “I heard stories and thoughts from veterans and Gold Star families, reminding us that freedom isn’t free.”

The four-day series of events included a veterans panel, a visit to the National Museum of the Marine Corps at Quantico and wreath-laying ceremonies at the WWII Memorial and the Marine Corps War Memorial.

Earle, who lives in Maine with his wife Linda, was in constant combat against the Japanese in the Marshall Islands, Saipan, Tinian and Iwo Jima. For his service he received the two Presidential Unit Citations awarded the 4th Marine Division, the Navy Unit Citation awarded JASCO, the American Campaign Medal, the Asiatic Pacific Campaign Medal with four bronze battle stars, and the World War Two Victory Medal.

“I walked off of every battlefield, I was that fortunate,” Earle said. “I was proud to be a Marine. More specifically I was proud to be a 4th Marine Division Marine. We fought four battles and won them all.”

County Executive Presents FY 2023 Advertised Budget

Increase in assessed values for real estate and vehicles drive higher tax payments.

BY MERCIA HOBSON
THE CONNECTION

Fairfax County Executive Bryan Hill is proposing a $4.85 billion spending plan while maintaining the current real estate tax rate of $1.14 per $100 of assessed value according to his presentation on the FY 2023 Advertised Budget plan at the Board of Supervisors meeting on Feb. 22, 2022, at Fairfax County Government Center.

Because of increased home assessments, the typical homeowner's tax payment would rise by $666, a 9.5 percent increase, according to Hill. "I did have to go back and recalculate that number, but I want you to know that is a true number," Hill said. "I expect mitigating this impact will be a priority."

In addition, used car prices are soaring. Updated information from JD Power for January 2022 suggests an increase of over 33 percent. Hence, with no changes to the Personal Property Tax rate, the average vehicle tax levy for the taxpayer will increase by about $181. Revenues will increase by $83 million beyond what is included in the Advertised Budget.

CHAIRMAN Jeffrey C. McKay (D) warned the Board and audience before the County Executive's presentation that Hill's proposal was not the final budget. It was the first stage in a protracted process and schedule that sought public input before board approval.

During the discussion, Supervisor James R. Walkinshaw (D-Braddock) said, "This one is going to shock the heck out of a lot of people. We're going to have to figure out how we can make an adjustment here."

Supervisor Pat Herrity (R-Springfield) said in a statement after the meeting, "The real estate tax increase is on top of the 45 percent increase in real estate taxes over the last decade and comes while residents are facing record inflation, rising gas prices, and continuing to recover from the pandemic. Instead of increasing the burden on our struggling residents, the Board needs to prioritize the critical service issues that are going unaddressed and work to reduce the cost of government."

The proposed budget prioritized compensation for county and Fairfax County Public

Fairfax County Board of Supervisors listen to the County Executive Bryan Hill's presentation of the FY 2023 Advertised Budget. It is a proposal and not the final adopted budget.

Schools employees. "The budget proposal includes a 4.01 percent market rate adjustment for all County employees and performance, merit, and longevity increases," Hill said.

In addition, the County's living wage increases to $15.90 an hour; Performance, Merit, and Longevity increases, including a new 25-year step proposed for uniformed pay plans, an average increase of 2.15 percent for non-uniformed; 3.85 percent for uniformed.

County compensation includes a 5 percent health insurance premium increase in Jan. 2023, and no changes in retirement employer contribution rates.

Because of increased home assessments, the typical homeowner's tax payment would rise by $666, a 9.5 percent increase

Tammie Wondong is the President of the Service Employees International Union (SEIU) Virginia 512 Fairfax and a 30-year county employee. "For two years, my co-workers and I have been working on the front lines of the pandemic, with just a 1 percent raise. The rising cost of living and our healthcare increases mean that our paychecks have actually gone down. That's why SEIU members called for fair pay, affordable care, and safe working conditions. Today's proposed budget is one step in that direction, but only collective bargaining can ensure the good jobs and quality public services our community needs."

A SUMMARY of the proposed FY 2023 Budget reports net county resources, revenues, and transfers increase by $330.17 million and of the increase: $127.84 million are for county priorities, $117.90 million for schools, $5.17 million for reserve requirements, and a $79.26 million balance for Board consideration.

The proposed budget also fully funds Fairfax County Public Schools' request of $2.285 billion. Schools are 52.4 percent of General Fund Distribution in FY 2023.

Highlighting investments in board priorities are affordable housing ($1.52 million/7 positions), Diversion First Initiative ($1.05 million/7 positions), Opioid Task Force $0.40 million/3 positions), baseline support for Health Department staff, one public health nurse in all Fairfax County Public Schools, and additional resources for Public Health Readiness ($12.92 million), Language Access Program, and One Fairfax Support ($1.54 million/5 positions).

The proposed budget supports residents facing vulnerability, providing $10.66 million and nine positions; including baseline funds for the Co-Responder Program, Behavioral Health, Equitable School Readiness and Emergency Rental Assistance Program support; and baseline funds for Public Assistance Eligibility Workers, Child Protective Services, and Family First In-Home Services added at Carryover.

"Lastly, we have begun to implement recommendations from the Joint County and Schools Capital Improvement Program Committee," Hill said. A net of 109 positions increases county positions.

Real estate taxes will be the primary source of funding for the County in the fiscal year 2023. Real estate taxes provide about 68 percent of general fund revenue, which is forecasted to increase by 8.1 percent over FY 2022. Taxes on personal property are likely to climb by 10.8 percent.

The proposed budget fully funds the

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors on Feb. 22, 2022, recognizing George Mason University's 50th anniversary. Dr. Gregory Washington, GMU's current president and eighth in the university's history, accepts the proclamation from Chairman Jeffrey C. McKay (D-At Large) recognizing the historic event.

It's Mason Time, GMU Celebrates 50 Years

Supervisor James R. Walkinshaw (D-Braddock District) said, "It is an incredible blessing for us to have George Mason University in the Braddock District."

According to Walkinshaw, sometimes having a university in a community also creates challenges. But what he appreciates most is Washington's commitment and his team's commitment to working collaboratively with the community. "[They] discuss those challenges and overcome them together so we can fully take advantage of the many opportunities that George Mason creates for our community," Walkinshaw said.

Supervisor Patrick Herrity (R-Springfield) called attention to GMU's Nobel Prize-winning instructors, NCAA Final Four appearances, new law school, and recognition as a top-tier research institution to help the region's innovation. "For decades, you've been an invaluable partner with our schools, our students, and athletes, mentoring and volunteering with our students, hosting our high school graduations, serving as a mass vaccination site, serving as a partner with the Osher Lifelong Learning Institute."

"As we look to the future, the best is yet to come... And as I've heard you say many times, it's Mason time," said Herrity.

Invest in Fairfax

with renewed strength and forged resilience for the anticipated path ahead."

"The Fairfax County Federation of Teachers is united with the Invest in Fairfax coalition in its request of the board to continue to keep safety and best practices as a priority," said Tina Williams, Fairfax County Federation of Teachers President. "We believe the FY23 budget should continue to support all county employees' unprecedented efforts to keep our community safe and healthy. We require a budget that allows us to provide the world class services which makes our county a great place to live, work and raise a family. We urge the Board of Supervisors to fully fund the FCPS budget request. The FCPS FY23 proposed budget includes a focus on compensation to attract and retain a premier workforce as well as funding to address critical staffing needs in special education and ESOL. The FCFT strongly encourages this partnership between the Board of Supervisors and the School Board to fully fund our school system so that we can provide the world-class education our students deserve and families expect."

Invest in Fairfax Coalition members will continue to mobilize to speak out during the budget process at Supervisors' town halls, at public budget hearings, and during Board meetings.

The county executive's budget proposal is the first of many steps in finalizing the county budget. Click here to see the full budget timeline <https://www.fairfax-county.gov/budget/budget-process-timeline>

Though the County Executive writes the first draft of the budget, the Board of Supervisors is responsible for changing and finalizing the county budget. On March 8, the Board of Supervisors will authorize the proposed real estate tax rate for FY 2023. Throughout March, the Board will hold budget committee meetings and town halls. The Board will hold public budget hearings April 12-14. On April 26, the budget committee will "mark up" or make changes to the proposed budget. The Board of Supervisors will adopt the budget on May 10, and the School Board will adopt their budget on May 26. The FY 2023 budget begins July 1, 2022.

WELLBEING

Managing Anxiety Triggered by News from Ukraine

Music and meditation among the ways to cope.

By MARILYN CAMPBELL
THE CONNECTION

Sitting on yoga mats with their eyes closed as meditation music fills the air, Stephanie Dowd's yoga and meditation students seek a sense of calm. For the past two weeks, the Arlington instructor offered a special class for those who are seeking solace in the midst of an abundance of disturbing news about the crisis in Ukraine.

"My students have come to class talking about the sadness and stress they're feeling," she said. "They're looking for ways to decompress from the upsetting headlines."

The onslaught of disturbing images and news headlines about the crisis in Ukraine can take a toll on one's mental health. While feelings of stress over negative events is normal, there is a point in which these feelings can become unmanageable.

"It's normal to feel some level of anxiety over negative national and international events," said Bethesda psychologist Michele Windsor. "The key is having enough self awareness to recognize those when feelings are interfering with your ability to carry out daily tasks."

"Deep breathing, meditation or just spending five minutes sitting quietly and without access to news, smart-phones and social media can help cultivate that self awareness," Windsor said.

When members of her prayer group began to express feelings of profound sadness over the crisis, Yves Jaffe said they discussed some of the ways in which they can find comfort in their faith. "I play the flute and I've started playing at the beginning and end of our gatherings. The sounds are peaceful and give us a sense of calm. There's another woman in our group who's a pianist and she plays, "Let there be Peace on Earth" while we sing it.

In fact, spending time with friends and setting limits on news consumption can reduce anxiety, says Windsor. "Because we're all attached to our smart-phones, get news alerts and spend time on social media, we can lose track of the amount of negative news we're getting," she said. "Make a conscious effort to unplug. Set aside a certain amount of time each day to stay off the internet and social media. There are very few reasons why most of us can't choose to stay away from these things for at least three hours each day. It can do wonders for our mental health."

"The key is having enough self awareness to recognize when those feelings are interfering with your ability to carry out daily tasks."

More Than a Virtue

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

As I sit and write this column on Sat., February 26, 2022, it is 13 years, almost to the day (it was a Thursday actually, Feb. 27, 2009) when Team Lourie (me, my wife, Dina and my brother, Richard) first met an oncologist who would become the center of my universe. This initial meeting WAS to review your recent diagnostic medical history and discuss treatment. Moreover, once this meeting occurs and a cancer diagnosis is confirmed, your oncologist is placed on speed-dial and his/her email is auto-selected every time you type the first few letters of their name. This oncologist becomes your lifeline, phone a friend and/or the person you ask about all thing's cancer related. And there's plenty to ask, especially if you're clueless to begin with, as was Team Lourie.

I wouldn't say I've learned my lessons well, but after so many years, one does accrue a working knowledge/familiarity with certain practices and procedures. And though I never mastered the pronunciation of some of the early-on/heavy-duty chemotherapy I infused, I always knew where to be and when. As a result, I was described as a "compliant" patient. Meaning I did what I was told and never missed any appointments. (You mean not all patients are compliant," I remember asking. The answer I received: "You'd be surprised." After a diagnosis of cancer, how does a diagnosee not show up for treatment, et cetera? Apparently, it happens, more than I can understand.)

But I never had to be told twice. And though text and emails were sent with regularity by my provider, I was always aware in advance and even though I was contacted multiple times on multiple devices, I never needed to be reminded. I was ready, willing, and able. As was the case with "Deets," (Danny Glover's character in "Lonesome Dove"). When he died, Capt. Woodrow Call (Tommy Lee Jones) carved the following sentiment on his headstone: "Never shirked a task. Cheerful in all weathers." He was dependable and reliable, as have I been during this cancer adventure.

Now whether my compliance and cheerful attitude has had any bearing on my survival, or whether a possible misdiagnosis - which led to my diagnosis being changed in 2020 to papillary thyroid cancer from the original non-small cell lung cancer after multiple biopsies confirmed the rediagnosis, Team Lourie can't know for sure - and of course, no one is admitting it. I've been told that papillary thyroid cancer, generally speaking, is a slow-moving (perhaps that's why I've survived so long), curable type of cancer. Quite a bit different than the "terminal" diagnosis/"13 month to two years" prognosis I initially received back in 2009.

Maybe that's why I am alive and reasonably well. When you're told that you have two years to live, maximum, it's hard to be mad if you're still alive 13 YEARS LATER. Over these many years, I have learned to roll with the punches and go with the flow because if being diagnosed with cancer has taught me anything, it has taught me how to be patient - and how to be one as well.
