Saratoga Robbery Attempt 'Unsettling'

BY MIKE SALMON
THE CONNECTION

Last Wednesday night, Aug. 17, a robbery attempt at the Saratoga Shopping Center in Springfield brought out the Fairfax County Police Department in force, including the police helicopter.

According to the police, the attempted robbery took place about 8:48 p.m. in the 8000 block of Rolling Road, when three juvenile males approached the victim at an ATM, displayed a handgun and attempted to take the victim's money. No property was taken. No injuries were reported, the police said.

According to the crime announcement on the FCPD social media, the three teens approached the ATM and demanded the money, but the victim pushed one of the teenagers, who then pulled out a gun. The victim fell to their knees and started screaming, which may have activated a car alarm, and the suspects ran.

There were people around and it caused alarm with some, leading to some chatter on social media. "What is going on in this County? Everyday some violent crime is happening," one Springfield Forest resident said. "I live in Saratoga and while the news of what happened is unsettling and having a friend who personally knows the victim validating how unsettling it is," another added.

New Route 50 West, East, Exit off I-66

As of this week, drivers exiting I-66 East to Route 50 West will use a new, combined exit approximately one mile prior to (west of) Route 50. This new exit is immediately before the Monument Drive Bridge over I-66. It provides access to both Route 50 East (toward Fairfax City) and West (toward Fair Oaks). This change will be the permanent location of Exit 57 A/B as part of the Transform 66 Outside of the Beltway Project.

Audition for CFTC's Winter Musical

City of Fairfax Theatre Co.'s (CFTC) winter musical will be "Rudolph The Red-Nosed Reindeer." Sierra Hoffman is directing, and Luke Hemmingson is the music director. The show will be presented Dec. 8-11, but auditions for people ages 6-adult are coming up soon. They'll be held Sept. 12, 14 and 15 at the Green Acres Center, 4401 Sideburn Road in Fairfax.

CFTC believes in inclusive casting of actors of diverse ages, races, ethnicities, genders, body types and abilities. People are encouraged to audition, even if they've never been in a play or musical before. For more information and to sign up, go to <https://www.fairfaxcitytheatre.org/auditions-for-rudolph>.

Lake Accotink Celebrates 60 Years with a Birthday Party

BY MIKE SALMON

The community role Lake Accotink played throughout the years was a big topic at the 60th anniversary celebration on Saturday, Aug. 27, starting with Fairfax County Board of Supervisors Chairman Jeff McKay who was there with a few other county supervisors.

"It's hard to believe how long this park has been a staple in the community," McKay said, adding that "it looks pretty good for 60 years."

McKay was there with Braddock District Supervisor James Walkinshaw (D), Pat Herity (R-Springfield) and Del. Vivian Watts (D-39th). Lots of district lines come together at this park, and all seem to claim it as a significant part of their district. "The lake itself is entirely in the Braddock District," joked Walkinshaw.

Along with the speeches, there was food, face painting, bike riding and boating as a celebration for all.

The original 265-acre park being opened for public use by the Fairfax County Park Authority on Aug. 25, 1962 and more land was added with another purchase in 1968. Through the years, there have been many changes at the lake, including the formation of the Lake Accotink Yacht Club in the early 1970s by Springfield resident Ernest (Buddy) Belote and he had races in the lake from 1972-1982. Presently there is a fence around the dam as work continues on the trail segment past the spillway.

The rebuilt park now has attractions like wall-to-wall trampolines, Lunar Dodgeball, AirSlam Basketball, Battle Beam, a designated Kidz Zone for the junior pilots, and an EPIC arcade section.

To celebrate their grand re-opening, FLIGHT invited children from the local communities who are home-schooled to be the park's exclusive guests and will also be donating 20 percent of the opening weekend's proceeds to Horizon Day Camp, a local camp that is a part of the Sunrise Association, whose mission is to bring back the joys of childhood to children with cancer and their siblings worldwide, FLIGHT information said.

FLIGHT also has locations in California, South Carolina, Connecticut, New York and Florida.

Coming Together Around Love of Cars

Fairfax City hosts 23rd annual Labor Day Car Show.

By BONNIE HOBBS
THE CONNECTION

Summer may be drawing to a close, but area residents seeking one more fun event to enjoy will find it at the 23rd annual Labor Day Car Show in Fairfax City. It's slated for Monday, Sept. 5, from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m., rain or shine, and is jointly sponsored by the City and the Clifton Lions Club.

This free show features nearly every kind of vehicle imaginable, including trucks, antique cars from the 1920s and '30s, classic and custom cars, hot rods from the 1940s and '50s, muscle cars like Mustangs, Corvettes and Ford GTs, and foreign cars such as Jaguars, Mercedes and Porsches. Brand-new cars are also on display, so there'll be vehicles appealing to all ages.

Cars and trucks will line University Drive between Armstrong Street and Sager Avenue and will also be displayed in the Truist Bank parking lot at 4020 University Drive. Motorcycles will be in a parking lot close to Armstrong. From 6 a.m.-4 p.m., University Drive in that area will be closed to traffic.

Event Co-Chairmen are Lions Club President Bill Poole and former City Councilman Jeff Greenfield, with help from Mitzi Taylor of the Fairfax City Parks and Rec Department, plus the entire Clifton Lions membership. Their committee works year 'round planning the event.

"You see grandparents, parents and kids at the show, and it's fun hearing the grandfathers and their sons telling their children stories about, 'When I was young, I used to have this car,'" said Greenfield. "They all come together around their love of cars, and it's that love that makes it a successful show."

The fun includes food, deejay music by Bach 2 Rock, vendor booths and raffles. Most of all, though, the car show raises money for two worthy causes. Entry and parking are free, but tax-deductible donations are accepted – with proceeds mainly benefiting the Northern Virginia Therapeutic Riding Program (www.NVTRP.org) and Inova Hospital System's Life with Cancer (www.lifewithcancer.org).

People may register vehicles to participate at www.labordaycarshow.org or outside Fire Station 3 at 4081 University Drive, the day of the event, from 6 a.m.-noon. Information about the two main charities will also be available at the registration desk.

Some 6,000 spectators attended last year's event and, weather permitting, the same number is expected this year to enjoy the 350 or more vehicles on display. The festivities also include a special noontime ceremony at the fire station, featuring Fairfax City's American Legion Post 177 Color Guard, local dignitaries and the singing of the National Anthem by Fairfax High grad Anna Fee.

In that area, there will be food and beverages for sale. Lions Club members will be grilling and selling hot dogs, hamburgers and Italian sausage. Both Rita's Italian Ice and The Inside Scoop ice cream truck will offer refreshing treats, and Cub Scout Pack 1860 of Union Mill Elementary will be selling water as a fundraiser. In addition, many restaurants in Old Town Fairfax will also be open, and Capital Ale House will sell breakfast in its rear parking area.

Over the event's 22-year history, it's raised some $600,000 for charity. This year marks the seventh year the show has been held in Fairfax. And by the end of this one, said Greenfield, "We'll have raised about $200,000 in that seven years." All proceeds go directly to the recipient charities because this show has no administrative costs – everyone is a volunteer.

Greenfield said the car show should yield a minimum of $15,000 for each of the two primary charities. Proceeds will also benefit

American Legion Post 177, plus A Place to Eat, which supports the food pantries at all four Fairfax City schools. Greenfield hopes, as well, to donate $1,500 each to the City of Fairfax fire and police departments.

Even the proceeds from the Clifton Lions Club food sales that day go to the many charities the club supports, including The Lamb Center in Fairfax City. Volunteers will also collect donations at Sager Avenue and University Drive and at University Drive and Armstrong Street.

About 40 trophies will be awarded to the various vehicles, with most of the winners selected by the spectators viewing them. Participants will vote on the top cars, including Best of Show. There'll also be Mayor's, Kids', Ladies' and People's Choice trophies, one each for Best Motorcycle and Best Truck, and a Buddy Morrisette Memorial Trophy. Morrisette died in December 2016, but he helped put on this show for years.

"This year, all the voting will be done electronically," said Poole. "Every car will have a QR Code in its window, and people just have to scan it on their phones to vote online for their favorites. We also more than doubled the amount of money we're spending on trophies this year, so we can make as nice a presentation to the winners as we can."

The vehicle owners come from West Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Virginia and beyond to show their cars to an appreciative crowd. And Poole is pleased that admission for spectators is still free. "Some other car shows cost as much as $12/person, so ours is an exceptional event at no charge," he said. "I love to walk through, look at the cars, talk with the owners about their vehicles and just enjoy the show's ambience."

"We have a wide assortment of cars, from foreign to specialty and everything in between – even an antique fire truck," continued Poole. "It's a family atmosphere with paved parking and a great selection of food. And it's an overall wonderful way to spend a holiday afternoon in the City of Fairfax."

Greenfield said the event's important to him "because of the causes the show supports. We raised $40,000 last year and hope to raise $50,000 this year," he said. "I also like seeing all the people who come to the show, including old friends, plus all the great cars. And most of all, this show raises money for the charities that help support families in need in the City of Fairfax."

Those unable to attend the event, but wishing to make a charitable donation may do so either via PayPal at <https://www.labordaycarshow.org/make-a-donation> or by sending a check, payable to the Clifton Lions Club, to: Clifton Lions Club, P.O. Box 41, Clifton, VA 20124. For further information, go to www.labordaycarshow.org.

Macbeth 'Will Grip the Audience'

City of Fairfax Theatre Co. presents 'Macbeth' outdoors.

BY BONNIE HOBBS
THE CONNECTION

With a cast and crew of more than 30, Shakespeare in the City returns to Fairfax with City of Fairfax Theatre Co.'s (CFTC) production of "Macbeth." This chilling tale of witchcraft, power and bloodshed shows what can happen when good people are consumed by insatiable ambition that threatens to destroy a nation.

Performances are Thursday-Saturday, Sept. 8, 9, 10, and Sept. 15, 16, 17, at 7:30 p.m. (rain dates TBD) at Veterans Amphitheater, behind Fairfax City Hall at 10455 Armstrong St. Attendees are encouraged to bring blankets, lawn chairs and picnic dinners and enjoy a riveting evening of drama under the stars.

Tickets are adults, $25; and children, $15, at <https://www.fairfaxcitytheatre.org/productions/macbeth>. Discounts are available for groups of 12 or more; contact CFTCBoxOffice@gmail.com for details.

Portraying Macbeth is Jef Chi. "He starts out as a strong-willed, stoic man concerned with honor and loyalty and getting the job done," said Chi. "As Thane of Glamis, he's a lord serving the king. He follows rules but isn't aware of how he feels about them until a nudge from the witches exposes the huge hunger for power he has inside and has suppressed. He wants to be king of Scotland but didn't believe it was possible. He's hidden it even from himself; and when it all comes out, it gets messy."

Chi loves his role because he understands "Macbeth is not an evil person by nature. He just wants to get ahead and is like anyone else who has dreams and ambitions. And he teaches us that, if someone plants a seed in your mind, beware what could take root. The stakes are high for Macbeth, and I realized he's just a human being – and playing him makes me wonder how I'd react in his situation. It's an honor and a privilege to get to do that, and it's fun to inhabit his thoughts for a while."

Chi said audiences will like seeing Macbeth's human aspect and the struggles he's going through. And, he added, "Our directors incorporated a beautiful, abstract flow into this production in the way they use lights, ribbons and fabric to depict what happens in the battles. Their creativity is really unique."

Jaclyn Robertson plays Lady Macbeth. "She's one of the most famous – if not THE most famous – Shakespearean characters," said Robertson. "So there are lots of preconceived notions about her. For me, she's a mother, first and foremost – even though her children died – and that's shaped how I feel about her. That grief propels her to be more power hungry and evil. She wants to be in control of her own destiny; and as a woman in pre-Elizabethan Scotland, what can she do? She can try to control her husband and the world as best she can.

"So she props him up to do horrible deeds to make him king. And I believe – if she were a man and able to be king herself, she'd be a stronger ruler than him. As a couple, at the beginning, there's a partnership; he comes to her for advice and approval. But he later starts to cut her out of his plans. Her goal is for him to be king, but he wants even more power."

As a real-life mother, herself, Robertson said this role is a dream come true for her. "I know what it feels like to love and worry about a child," she said. "And how sane would someone be if they lost a baby – or multiple babies, like Lady Macbeth did? So, to me, that's what drives the fire in her."

She said audiences will appreciate that the cast is comprised of young, professional adults. "And they'll be obsessed with the technical elements and the fight choreography," said Robertson. "Being able to sit outside and enjoy a picnic and a play is great. This venue works very well for live theater, so Fairfax City allowing us to use it for community theater is great."

Amro Ibrahim plays several roles, including Murderer One. "He's a sleazeball who'll do anything for money," said Ibrahim. "He does questionable things that have earned him his descriptive name. He's interesting to play because I can get into the darkness of his character."

"In scenes where I can explore more of him through his conversations with others, I get to show more depth to him," continued Ibrahim. "And what's fun is that he's in two of the three fight scenes. I have martial arts experience, and that's helped me with the fight choreography. It allowed me to learn these fight sequences really well and execute them with the grace necessary to be technically safe."

As for the audience, he said people will like the actors' movements onstage and "all the gorgeously choreographed war scenes, which are just as spectacular as any dance. Also, the directors condensed the script so the story moves quickly and will grip the audience right away. This show is the culmination of community theater; the cast loves the process of putting on a play, and I'm enjoying being in the presence of the other actors."

Portraying one of six witches in this production is Maggie Shircliff, who also plays several characters. In CFTC's show, three older witches are controlling three younger witches like puppets. "I'm one of the older witches," said Shircliff. "They symbolize how little control we have over our own decisions."

"The younger witches are more fun, like Wednesday Addams, and what you picture as traditional witches. The older ones are more like demons, and you only see their eyes. They're shadowy figures and forces that influence everyone's actions. It's an ensemble feel; we have individual speeches and also really cool moments when we're all speaking together. There are a lot of slow, twisting movements as we control the other witches, plus interesting technical elements where we create a star as our witches' symbol."

Enjoying her role, Shircliff said CFTC's version of "Macbeth" offers "an interesting take on the witches, and it's been a fun challenge to explore how to act with my body when people can't see my face."

"This is definitely one of the best cuts of 'Macbeth' I've seen, highlighting the important parts," she added. "And through our movements and expressions, we bring the story to life and make it understandable and enjoyable for everyone. The audience will also like the battle scenes and the unique aspects the directors bring to our show."

Those directors are Stephen Shetler and Julia Tasheva, who are married in real life. He's a classically trained actor, and she was a mime, puppeteer and dancer, so their combined talents enable the actors to do more than just stand and speak. He's also the lighting director, and she's one of the costume designers and in charge of sound.

"LED lighting lets us change colors and show the time of day and mood of the scene," said Shetler. "It'll be like rock-and-roll and dance lighting, emphasizing the body and space to reinforce the movement. Many times, actors' faces won't be fully seen; the light will come at them from odd angles."

Regarding the music, Tasheva carefully chose each selection to support the mood of the action onstage. As for the costumes, she said, "All our soldiers have armor, and their uniforms are a synthesis of different colors symbolizing their characters' individual qualities."

A master of movement, she's taught the actors to express themselves with their bodies and gestures. And, she said, "We also use ropes, strings and sticks to show the audience things they don't expect." Even fabric is employed, with a large, red cloth descending over a battlefield to symbolize the bloodshed there.

Overall, said Shetler, "Macbeth was a fairly heroic, trusted man, loved by his friends. But his and his wife's ambition sends them both into a descending spiral of paranoia. When he hears the witches predict he'll become king, he initially thinks, 'OK, if it happens, it happens.' But then he realizes he can take action. So did the witches compel him, or did he do it of his own, free will?"

Rescue or Purebred?

Stories of the path to dog ownership.

BY SUSAN LAUME
THE CONNECTION

For many northern Virginians, having a family dog is an absolute must.

This, even though dogs have been relieved of their traditional jobs for watch, livestock guarding/herding, and hunting, performed in earlier decades and more rural settings. In today's suburbia, the only “job” most family dogs have is companion. Just as varied as the number of dog breeds, are the reasons why people still elect to have a dog, and so too, the reasons why they select a particular pooch to be part of their lives.

Some might seek a dog like one from their childhood, to remind them of a past favorite or carefree times, or one that has an attribute they find particularly appealing, such a long ears or a clown-like behavior. A breed may be popular through association with a movie; such as Dalmations and Cocker Spaniels in Disney movies, or Pugs in “Men in Black”. Or a breed may be known through connection with a famous person, such as Queen Elizabeth's Corgis, or President Lyndon B. Johnson's Beagles.

Sadly, there are more dogs available than can fill the homes of dog lovers. The American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (ASPCA) estimates that 390,000 dogs are euthanized every year. Recognizing that high number of unwanted healthy dogs, it's become a source of pride and “badge of honor” to rescue a pet from a community shelter or rescue organization. Adopting families often are quick to share that they have helped by adopting one of the approximately two million dogs that find a home each year after entering a shelter. A common response one hears when asking about a dog is: “He's a rescue,” or “We're not sure of her age/breed/background; she's a rescue.” These owners don't need to know the details. They are committed to giving the dog a home.

At the opposite end of the spectrum, other owners are keen to own a “pure-bred” dog; to contribute toward preservation of the variety of 199 dog breeds recognized in the United States by the American Kennel Club (AKC) and 360 breeds officially recognized world-wide by the World Canine Organization. From the tiny as a teacup Chihuahua to the giant Great Dane, full breed dogs are bred to exacting standards and requirements of the breed's intended use or job. National organizations and breed clubs seek to maintain the purity of breeds by maintaining registries and lineage records.

These days, few owners will admit to buying a dog from a puppy store, a “backyard breeder,” online seller, or along a roadside, as these sources have become notorious for high prices, unhealthy stock, sourcing from factory puppy mills with horrid conditions, and even making buyers into victims of selling scams where there is no actual dog provided. Unfortunately, too many potential dog owners are unaware of the options for finding a puppy, the buying hazards of the loosely regulated pet industry, and comparative purchase prices when looking for a new family member.

Meet two dogs; one a rescue with a nationally publicized back story, and one a pure breed not commonly found in the United States. Arguably, they are at the extremes of what a dog goes through to end up in the same place — a loving family home.

VERMONT IS A BEAGLE. He was recently adopted by Andy Crook and Donna Ann Winterling of Chantilly. At just four months old, he is already a celebrity wherever he goes. He is one of more than 4,000 beagles who started life at a medical research breeding facility in Cumberland Virginia. After federal citations for cruelty under the Animal Welfare Act, he was one of the 4,000 Beagles surrendered in a settlement overseen by the United States District Court. The story drew national media coverage as the facility closed. The Beagles were transported in small groups by the Humane Society of the United States (HSUS) to shelters and rescues throughout Virginia and around the country. Vermont is one of the first group of 16 beagles to come to the Fairfax County Animal Shelter. The shelter is working with HSUS to find family homes for several, facilitating final placements and much better lives for the rescued dogs.

Beagles, a small breed, are described as merry, amiable, even tempered, intelligent, gentle, determined and happy-go-lucky. Part of the Hound group, the Beagle breed was developed in Great Britain primarily for hunting rabbits in the 1830s. They became very popular in the United States, holding a position in the top ten most popular breeds in the AKC's registry for many years. Beagles, Uno and Miss P, won the large and prestigious Westminster Dog Show in 2008, and 2015, respectively.

Beagle fanciers, the Winterling-Crooks had heard the Envigo Beagles' story in national news coverage and on social media. They were determined to give one of the rescued beagles a home with them and their ten year old Beagle, Utah, and began watching for availability at local shelters. When Crook saw six would be available the next day at Fairfax County Animal Shelter while drinking his 6 a.m. morning coffee, he and his wife quickly hatched a plan. Winterling would camp at the Shelter door on Friday morning at 8 a.m. in preparation for the opening at noon. Neither the rain nor the wait deterred her, and she was first in line. She passed the time waiting by volunteering her help with shelter tasks: loading pet food into a van and making up kitty litter boxes. Other potential adopters started showing up after 9 a.m. and an adoption queue formed behind Winterling. Near opening time, Crook arrived with their beagle Utah, for the recommended existing family dog meet and greet. Their well executed plan worked. Winterling said, “We were done with the whole adoption process in under an hour. So we did officially adopt the very first Envigo beagle from FCAS.”

About two weeks have passed and Vermont, whose shelter name was Joe Pye, (all named for wildflowers) is busy learning new things, just as any young pup would be doing. (See The Connection, Springfield edition, August 11, page 8) Unlike most other pups, spending his first three months at the breeding facility, he knew only a concrete floor and caged kennel environment, and had limited human contact. with his new family, he learned to climb stairs in two days, to jump up on furniture in three days, to “escape” his designed level and explore the whole house during the day, and cuddle between his human parents in the evening. He is adapting to crating at night and house training, with only a few “accidents.” He enjoys bothering his older “brother” Utah for play bouts, and likes to watch dogs on television. It's unclear if he's glimpsed himself on TV in his celebrity persona. He does enjoy that bit of celebrity status when out and about as people ask “Is he one of those beagles?” given away by the tattoo on his ear that will be a lasting reminder of how close he came to a far different life than the one he is now enjoying to the fullest. It's clear that the rescued medical research beagles are winning hearts in the Commonwealth and beyond. The Crook-Winterling's, and even Utah, are heartily in that number.

NEXT MEET Ryder. He is a Hovawart. His breed, originating in Germany, is considered “rare” in the United States. So rare that Ryder's people, Ann Kisling, of Occoquan, and her husband Rick, brought Ryder to Virginia all the way from Slovenia. The Slovenia breeder's was the closest litter they could find after a prolonged internet search. In fact, the breeder found them after their previously unsuccessful inquires to the U.S. national Hovawart breed club.

As a former competitive cat fancier, Kisling knew more about the hazards of internet dog buying than the average person. After the contact, Kisling carefully researched the breeder and her site for evidence of responsible breeding. The breeder's site highlighted her adult dogs and their accomplishments and information on breeding, rather than including testimonials from puppy buyers, and selling and shipping information. The site showed the breeder concentrated on the single Hovawart breed with a limited number of dogs and breedings over the years, and showed strong participation in dog competitions where her dogs, champions, were judged. Beyond the championship titles there was evidence of testing for hereditary disorders prior to breeding for both her dams and the sires. All positive signs since puppy mills typically have multiple breeds, a large number of dogs, frequent litters, and no evidence of peer review, genetic information or testing.

Hovawarts, large dogs, are described as alert, faithful, kind, extremely intelligent, and with even dispositions and protective instincts. They are part of the Working Group, used for watch, guarding, tracking, and rescue; their name is derived from German words for “watch-yard”.

Kisling was attracted to breed's loyalty, companionable traits, and ability to bond to one person. She plans to enter Ryder in conformation competition early, when he is a few months older. Conformation refers to visible structure and appearance. Conformation shows are not beauty pageants but a measure of how well a particular dog compares to the “ideal” or agreed “standard” of the breed. It's where a dog “earns” the right to breed, since fanciers want only the best examples as sires and dams to continue the breed line. Though every dog owner may think their dog is “the best”, the sport and serious business of conformation dog shows provides an opportunity for impartial peer review and judgment.

Ryder may or may not go on to father future generations of Hovawarts in the United States.

But for now he is enjoying the puppy life and enrichment activities of exploring new territories, making new friends, and learning basic commands given by hand signals. He loves water and walks on park trails, already walking close by Kisling's side. He too is winning hearts and being a good ambassador for his less common breed.

Surely the debate will continue on solutions for the problem of overpopulation of dogs. Some owners will continue to favor rescue and others will favor strict adherence to limited responsible breeding. Those seeking a dog are urged to be wary consumers. To think carefully about the commitment they are making to a life-time of care for the dog so they don't add to the numbers filling shelters. Responsible ownership demands careful investigation of the source, or relying on area shelters and rescues to help make a connection with the right dog for the family situation that will last. As American writer Carolina Knapp put it, “Before you get a dog, you can't quite imagine what living with one might be like; afterward, you can't imagine living any other way.”

Ft. Belvoir Upper Elementary School Principal Jamey Chianetta and “Beau” (center) are ready for fall football season! Jamey’s husband, James (left), is also FCPS. “Beau is a ‘mutt’ that our son adopted while he was in the Army, while he was stationed at Fort Drum, NY. We don’t know what kind he is, but we suspect he has some Australian Cattle Dog. We’d love to do a doggie DNA kit. Beau LOVES to be outside to catch frisbees, go for long walks, and play in the snow. He loves his treats too, and according to his vet, he needs fewer of them because he’s in a family who loves to treat him. Beau is a snuggler and will kick you off the couch for his favorite spot. He’s the best pup in the world.”

Franconia Elementary Principal Andrew Smith and Lola Jane. “Lola Jane is a 20-month-old Pitbull-Terrier and Beagle mix. She loves finding the squeaker inside her toys, snuggling with family on the couch, and playing tag with her best friends Arlo and Murphy.”

McLean High School Principal Ellen Reilly and her dog Joy Ful, who passed away last year- Principal Reilly had Joy Ful, a mixed breed rescue, for 13.5 years. Joy Ful was the social butterfly of their cul-de-sac. Every afternoon she visited with neighbors to get treats, take a nap at their house, or just stop by for a visit. She sometimes got lucky and stayed for dinner.

Thank you to the hundreds of supporters who helped to keep all your Connection Newspapers alive throughout Alexandria, Fairfax County Arlington County and Potomac, Md. along with affiliated websites and digital media. Now we need help again in 2022.

Each local newspaper's mission aspires to provide greater community service, and we do know that our communities are better off if we continue to publish. Last year's financial support from readers and supporters like you bridged the shortfall before Federal PPP funding arrived, and both made our survival possible. We now await a decision for a grant from Rebuild Virginia in early February that we hope will help us in 2022 and beyond. But we need help to survive the first quarter, always a brutal time for cash flow in weekly newspapers. Thank you.

Please, help save these historical papers.

All gifts will be used to fund our printed newspapers and websites and to meet obligations to our loyal and patient employees, writers, contractors and suppliers.

The ongoing pandemic continues to crush many newspapers across the country, and our newspapers continue to be at risk. The Northern Virginia area's best read and most trusted source for community news includes the Alexandria Gazette Packet, Mount Vernon Gazette and all Connection Newspapers in the metropolitan region.

The pandemic has hit small businesses hard, which in turn has reduced advertising revenue that keeps these local newspapers alive to provide hyper local news to residents. It feels like no small miracle to be looking forward into 2022.

The pandemic has been a bear, financially and otherwise. Revenue plummeted at the beginning in 2020. Some beloved advertisers have stayed the course supporting us throughout, and many more have done what they can. In the fall of 2021 we saw the return of some advertising for events and Grand Openings, but now omicron clouds the horizon in so many ways. Revenue still remains short of expenses despite our greatly curtailed costs.

Connection Newspapers has been offering these local newspapers to residents for over 200 years. Countless residents have grown up with these papers covering significant moments in the lives of family and children, news, community events, school activities, and even pictures of your dogs and cats. Internet news and large national newspapers cannot provide the local connection or historical connection that local papers like Connection Newspapers and the Alexandria Gazette Packet provide. If your child, dog, mother, father, neighborhood, school has been featured, you understand the value of local community newspapers.

What a Difference Five Weeks Makes

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

The first call I received from my sister-in-law, Vanessa, from the hospital that Sunday, nearly six weeks ago, was to tell me that my brother, Richard (her husband) had been ambulated to the hospital earlier that day due to pain in his leg which prevented him from walking. The second call from Vanessa a few hours later was to say that the pain in his leg was so severe the doctors were considering amputating it. The third call, even later, was Vanessa crying and saying the doctors didn't think my brother was going to survive the night. With that news, my wife, Dina, and I were on our way to the hospital, Covid rules be damned. (Vanessa had suggested on an earlier call that we wait until further notice. This was officially 'further notice.')

What we saw when we arrived in SICU (Surgical Intensive Care) was my brother lying in a hospital bed, completely sedated in front of a phalanx of IV pumps (eight total) infusing him with everything necessary to sustain his organs, all of which had shut down because of the septic shock which ensued when an infection in his leg shot through him unabated. This occurred because his white blood cell count - after two chemotherapy infusions, was barely measurable, one of the attending physicians told us and left him vulnerable. In addition, he was hooked up to a 24-7 dialysis machine, a ventilator (with a tube inserted in his mouth), a heart monitor, electrodes, a blood pressure cup on his left upper arm, an EEG machine monitoring brain activity, a wound V.A.C. to vacuum out any miscellaneous debris/infected tissue still in-and-around his infected leg, all managed by a full-time nurse. Typically, in the SICU, a nurse covers two patients. However, my brother was so sick that his nurse was not assigned any other patients. Her entire focus was on my brother. As I wrote in a previous column, and it bears repeating, one of the attending critical care physicians characterized my brother as "the sickest patient in the hospital," a hospital whose number of beds exceeds 900. Unable to make any significant progress (get the patient to wake up/respond to instructions) with my brother's condition, he said he had one option left: "a hail Mary," as he called it. It was some sort of infused drug that he said could only be used once. He was out of ideas, otherwise. I certainly can't recall its name, but I believe its color was red.

Well, it worked. Not immediately mind you, but very slowly and occasionally surely; Richard got better. Three weeks later, he was finally transferred from SICU to a regular bed on the wards. Unfortunately, 12 hours or so later, a bleeding event got him transferred back to an ICU, this time it was Medical Intensive Care. After a few days of rest and recovery there, his doctors thought it safe to move him back to the ward, where has remained for the past 10 days or so. And it has been within this private room where his remarkable recovery has really sped up. To the point where there's discussion about transferring him to a rehabilitation facility because he no longer requires the type of hands-on care provided in a regular hospital ward, and it's now considered time/appropriate to rehab his entire body.

Disconnected from nearly every medicine and machine now, and with his trach tube replaced with a plug sort of a thing, he's still not able to walk, but he can sure talk, according to Vanessa who visited him yesterday, as she has every day - and some nights, too. I skipped my visit today because, according to Vanessa, as Richard has been weaned off the ventilator, breathing on his own has been exhausting so all he wants to do is sleep. And he doesn't want me sitting at his side just to hear him snore.

I'll see him tomorrow for sure. It will be the first conversation we'll have had in over a month. I can't wait. I will congratulate and encourage him on a recovery well done, and we'll have a few laughs, but unfortunately, we may not be through the worst of it, oddly enough. Surgery looms (as he's no longer a candidate for chemotherapy, he "failed it" they said), and it's risky, his surgeon said. But due to his amazing recovery, it is possible he is now a candidate for surgery. Who would have thought? A month ago: nobody.
