Fairfax County Investing in Electric School Buses

Diesel school buses will be gone by 2035.

By MIKE SALMON
THE CONNECTION

Fairfax County is taking more steps into the electric vehicle world with a fleet of electric school buses to join the mix, taking another step away from the internal combustion engine.

Fairfax County Public Schools started with eight electric buses in 2019, which are already operational, and help transport more than 141,000 eligible bus riders to and from school each day, FCPS said. By 2035, FCPS hopes to have an all-electric fleet.

On the “Battle of the Buses,” promotional video on the Fairfax County website, the quiet electric buses are called “the strong silent type.”

According to the county, FCPS was chosen to receive the buses in a competitive process after applying for a grant from Dominion Energy in fall 2019. Dominion Energy covers the difference in cost so that school districts pay no more for electric buses than they would for diesel models.

The required charging infrastructure has been installed and is maintained by Dominion at the Stonecroft Transportation Center located in Chantilly.

FCPS applied for and received another grant from the Department of Environmental Quality for an additional 10 electric buses and received them in the summer 2022. Last summer, the county also launched a fleet of electric trash trucks as part of the all-electric effort.

In the big picture, the transportation sector accounts for nearly one-third of all greenhouse gas emissions.

The Environmental Protection Agency said that to address the growing climate crisis and to meet the goal of net-zero GHG emissions economy-wide, “we must eliminate nearly all greenhouse gas emissions from the sector by 2050 and implement a holistic strategy to achieve a future mobility system that is clean, safe, secure, accessible, affordable, and equitable, and provides sustainable transportation options for people and goods.” EPA’s Clean School Bus Program provides $5 billion over five years to replace existing school buses with zero-emission and low-emission models.

Election Day Voters Share Their Motivation

By SUSAN LAUME

PHOTOS BY SUSAN LAUME/THE CONNECTION

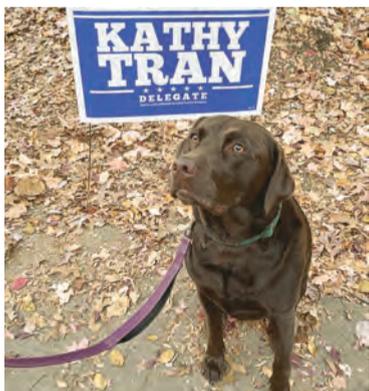

On Election Day morning, The Connection turned out at the polls at several precincts to talk to voters. We asked why they chose to come out on Nov. 7, Election Day itself rather than for early voting. Here's what they told us.

Zia Ullah who came to vote after his night shift, says "It's our duty to vote as a citizen, and it's easier to go to vote, and then go to sleep."

Eddie Patton, who moved to the area in August, says, "I try to vote on Election Day to see if anyone else shows up on an off election year."

Three year old Remy, a Chocolate Lab, is not eligible to vote, but enthusiastically greeted voters outside the polling place with a nose for the excitement of election day.

This year, moms Sarah Koeppel, Cynthia Yossef, and Katherine Kopeland, take their part in a 35-year tradition of offering an election day bake sale at the Hunt Valley School precinct to support a 6th grade class end of school party.

Sisters, Lucy Little, a sophomore at Edison High School and Abi Little, a senior at Thomas Jefferson, were at the polls to be involved in the democratic process and support their candidate for School Board, Kevin Pinkney

Educator Alison Wolfe, with her husband Bryce, and two year old son Asher, who has been to the polls four times though not yet eligible to vote, says it's important to her to show her son the voting process, just as her mother showed her.

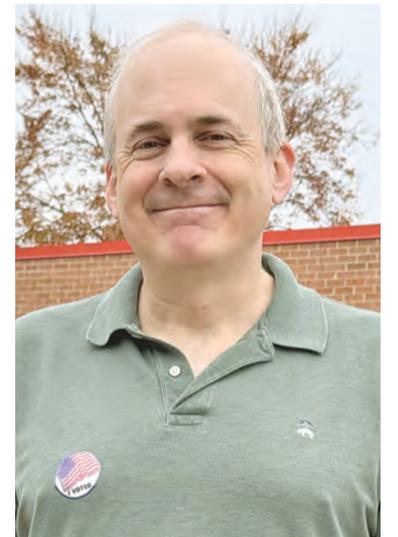

Diane Heckert, "didn't get around to voting early, but also like the tradition of voting on Election Day." She wants to maintain those in office that are better for the country, and says, "That starts at the local level."

Stacie Becker, a 24 year resident and educator, shares, "time" is the main reason she votes on Election Day, saying, "Easier when I'm not rushing to get to school, and I know where to go, and the poll is open all day."

Paul Hughs, a 20-year resident, likes this polling place to vote before work, noting, "This year there were a lot of negative ads, talking about what's wrong with the opponent rather than giving information about themselves; it seemed very partisan this year."

Riou Heaton, an 18-year resident, likes the location of his local polling place, calling it "super convenient." He said, "locally the county is very Democratic, but voting in State-wide races is very important to me."

Ed Callahan, a 43 year resident of the area, shared that he likes "the convenience of the location at the school for voting rather than the early voting locations."

Andrew MacKnight enjoys voting in person versus mailing in a ballot, saying "It feels different and I've never had to wait in 34 years of voting in northern Virginia." He adds, since his wife is a teacher he wants to see Democrats continue on the school board.

My Empanadas Offers Authentic Peruvian Food

PHOTOS BY BONNIE HOBBS/THE CONNECTION

New restaurant is open in Fairfax City's Courthouse Plaza.

BY BONNIE HOBBS
THE CONNECTION

Fairfax City continues to be a destination for worldwide cuisine, and one of its newest restaurants is My Empanadas. It's at 10394 Willard Way, in the Courthouse Plaza shopping center, and recently held its ribbon cutting – followed by samples of its tasty offerings.

"Who doesn't love an empanada?" asked Mayor Catherine Read. She then told owner Sherley Stuva, "Your Peruvian empanadas are a favorite at farmers markets, and we welcome unique businesses to the City. I have a feeling you'll also be popular with the college students living behind your restaurant [at The Flats on University]. You're bringing a varied, international and delicious cuisine to the City. Welcome to Fairfax and thank you for choosing us."

Councilmember Tom Ross said it's also a great location because it's near the popular Chubby Squirrel Brewing Co. and several residential neighborhoods. And Tess Rollins, Old Town Fairfax Business Assn. executive director, told Stuva how exciting it is that she opened her restaurant here.

"In Fairfax, we can eat food from all around the world," added Central Fairfax Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Jennifer Rose. "And now, we can carry your food down the street with us, as a handheld. So welcome and congratulations."

City Treasurer Tom Scibilia told Stuva, "On behalf of the Treasury Department, I hope you crush it. And it's nice that so many of your friends and family members are here to celebrate with you today."

"Small businesses are the backbone of the community," said Revenue Commissioner Page Johnson. "And we'll be a partner with you in your success."

A customer even spoke up from the crowd of well-wishers there for the ceremony. "As a Peruvian national, I'm proud of Sherley," said Yuri Agostini. "I hope you all enjoy the food."

Stuva previously had her restaurant in the Manassas Mall but closed it and reopened in Fairfax. Her business manager, Eric Moye Gordon, learned this space was a former bubble tea spot and the owner wanted to sell. And, said Stuva, "I knew this area would be a good place to bring empanadas."

She's originally from Peru but has been in the U.S. for 30 years. My Empanadas is open daily, 11 a.m.-7 p.m., except on Tuesdays. Stuva said business is growing and the menu items are well-known and enjoyed by both Peruvians and non-Peruvians.

"We've received a friendly reception here; people have been really nice," she said. "We offer quality food that's fresh out of the oven – nothing left over. Everything is made in the moment from scratch. And our empanada dough is very special and has a unique texture."

But that's not all this restaurant offers. One of the most popular main dishes there is Lomo Saltado – marinated slices of beef stir-fried with onions, yellow Peruvian chilis and tomatoes, served with French fries and rice. "We use real Peruvian ingredients, such as the yellow peppers, and the meat is very tender – and that's what makes the difference," explained Stuva.

She said customers also like the Peruvian Ceviche, made with fresh fish cooked in lime juice and served with toasted Peruvian corn, sweet potatoes and onions. And for breakfast, a popular dish is Pan con Chicharron – fried pork and crispy sweet potato with red-onion relish on a Portuguese roll (which has a light, golden crust and a soft, chewy texture).

Another customer favorite is the restaurant's Huancaína sauce made with aji amarillo peppers, which provide a cayenne-pepper-type heat and tropical-sweet undertones. One of the entrees it's used in is Tallarines a la Huancaína con Lomo Saltado – pasta with this sauce topped with strips of beef tenderloin sautéed with onions and tomatoes.

The large menu also includes chicken dishes, Peruvian tamales, a variety of beverages, and desserts such as tres leches cake, alfajores (powdered-sugar-coated cookies filled with dulce de leche), orange cake and chocolate cake.

Agostini especially likes the Ceviche. "It's the national dish of Peru and is good and fresh," he said. "And the Lomo Saltado is very tasty and is a typical Peruvian dish originally brought to Peru by Chinese immigrants."

Enjoying lunch together at a table outdoors were Marco Gonzales, his daughter Kai, 5, and his mother, Maribel Lecca. Kai had Salchipapas – French fries with sliced sausage, and both she and her dad liked it.

Gonzales ordered a Peruvian-style chicken-salad sandwich. "We came here for my birthday today, and my sandwich was really tasty," he said. "It had a good flavor, different than the typical chicken sandwich."

Lecca, who had the Pan con Chicharron, also said her sandwich was delicious. "This is good Peruvian food and it's not that expensive," she said. "We're from Peru, and we're happy this restaurant came here. I'd been looking for empanadas nearby."

Gonzales said he'd recommend My Empanadas to others because "There aren't that many restaurants in Fairfax City that offer traditional Peruvian food, except for Peruvian chicken."

Meanwhile, Julissa Siegel was having lunch inside the restaurant. Several dishes were offered buffet-style, after the ribbon cutting, and she chose several to sample. She had Papa Rellena, a mashed-potato ball stuffed with beef and deep-fried; Tallarin Saltado de Pollo, linguine with stir-fried chicken and vegetables; and both chicken and beef empanadas.

"It's all amazing," said Siegel. "The empanada dough isn't salty, but a little sweet, and the chicken and onions taste really good. I would 100-percent recommend this place to others. If you want something good to eat – and delicious, well-made empanadas – come here."

Plans Shared for Temporary Senior Center

Springfield District last to receive senior service space.

BY SUSAN LAUME
THE CONNECTION

Springfield District residents are finally seeing action on an active adult community center within their district; the only district now without a dedicated building for active adults. The current work is for a temporary location. A permanent center is likely still close to ten years away, and dependent on possible funding secured through a bond referendum in 2026.

For the temporary location, the Board of Supervisors approved a five-year lease, with multiple one year options, within the Huntsman Square Shopping Center; a site not far from the South Run Recreation Center.

Fairfax County's Department of Neighborhood and Community Services has conducted a series of information and listening sessions about the temporary site. Drawing about 40 people at each of the sessions, residents heard about the center draft layout and expected program offerings. Significant time also was reserved during the sessions to hear ideas from potential users for inclusion in the design and use plan. At the Oct. 20 afternoon session held at Pohick Library, suggestions included mirrored walls, ping pong tables, raised class instructor platforms, sound deadening partitions, increased ventilation for athletic classes; and, though acknowledged that the space was not likely right for it, the increasingly popular request for pickleball. County design staff declined to provide any cost estimates.

Senior programs in the Springfield District operate now "without walls," meaning there is no dedicated building space. Instead offerings are held in rooms within libraries, the West Springfield Government Center, and area churches. Community centers in other Districts, similar to the one envisioned for Burke/Springfield, operate from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., six days per week with a focus on senior programs, but include multi-generation use.

The Burke-Springfield draft center layout envisions a large open center space, amenable to many uses, five activity rooms, a computer bank, and rest rooms. The project pre-design phase began in July, with the mall store remodeling design continuing through January 2024, for an April 2024 construction start. The tentative completion of the build-out is anticipated for December 2024. The temporary location could continue under the lease agreement for up to ten years, awaiting a permanent center.

On a stunningly beautiful fall evening, SPARC participants arrived at their gala. Dressed in creative cocktail attire, they graced the red carpet leading into the grand ballroom of the Washington Dulles Airport Marriott. It was a dream come true for the young adults.

SPARC is the acronym for Specially Adapted Resources Clubs. It is a nonprofit organization that provides vital day programs for adult participants with severe and multiple disabilities, and the evening of Saturday, Nov. 4, was their 2023 Gratitude Gala. The young adults planned the event themselves because they believed in the mission of SPARC, "Nothing about us without us," and they had two goals for the gala.

"The event was created by our participants as an answer to the question, 'What can SPARC do to help you live the life of your dreams?' Overwhelmingly, they wanted a sparkling event, pun intended, at which they could showcase their talents, make new friends, socialize, laugh, have fun, and dance however they fancied," said Ellen Dyke, SPARC's board chair.

Another goal of the reception-style gala emerged: everyone deserves a chance to attend SPARC. The gala raised funds for SPARC's cost-effective program, which assists young adults who have outgrown the K-12 system's special education support and are ineligible for other community-based programs that help people with severe disabilities.

SPARC's public-private partnership with Fairfax County is an alternative to the Medicaid model. It provides a choice for many adults with severe disabilities who do not fit into traditional day support programs funded by Medicaid.

The reason SPARC participants called their event the "Gratitude Gala," Dyke said, was that they wanted to express their gratitude to all of the attendees, sponsors, elected officials, and others who helped them realize not only their dream for the evening but also their concern for others and their willingness to give of their time, energy, financial resources, and, above all, their humanity.

Mark Ingrao, interim CEO and president of the Dulles Regional Chamber and chair of the Reston Hospital board of directors, served as auctioneer for the evening's live auction while the silent auction continued in the hallway. Items in the silent auction included original wheelchair action art by SPARC participants. Jonah, one of the artists, said, "Everyone at SPARC can paint. Green represents the season, spring, when leaves begin to emerge." From choosing the bright paint colors, applying them with a paint roller extension pole, to using the tires of their wheelchairs to paint instead of brushes, the artists created original patterns across the painting papers that provided a canvaslike surface with no buckling. A completed work, matted and framed above shows the artist's wheelchair tracks and was one of many sold during the silent auction.

From the roast beef carving station to the crispy chicken sliders, black-eyed pea hummus with vegetable crudites, and the dessert display of miniature cupcakes, chocolate truffles, and petit fours, SPARC participants planned every aspect of the gala. Award-winning chefs at the hotel prepared all of those dishes and more. The hotel's wait staff came forward as volunteers to support the fundraiser, serving the guests and thereby helping to cover the organization's costs. Guests noticed the event venue's all-around inclusive layout — wheelchair accessibility, stage ramp, and deliberate lack of high-top tables.

As master of ceremonies and emcee, Jim Dyke oversaw the proceedings. "You have given your time, energy, and wherewithal to celebrate some of the most important, courageous, but often forgotten people in our community and, at the same time, make their dreams come true," Dyke said.

Reduction of Commercial Vacancies in Fairfax City

BY BONNIE HOBBS
THE CONNECTION

Bucking national and regional trends, Fairfax City is celebrating a reduction in commercial vacancies across the board for 2023. According to Nicole Toulouse, senior vice president of the City's Economic Development Authority, "In contrast with larger markets, Fairfax City – with lower, market-rate rent coupled with more right-sized opportunities – is seeing substantial, post-pandemic success."

General vacancy rates in Fairfax City have decreased from 6.6 percent at the beginning of the year to 6 percent in the third quarter. Office vacancies have seen a similar reduction from 9.8 percent to 9 percent, and retail vacancies have been reduced from 2.8 percent to 2.3 percent. As a result, this reduction in commercial vacancies is anticipated to improve Fairfax City's expected revenues.

Following the pandemic, Fairfax City Economic Development (FCED) launched several programs that are contributing to these improving numbers. The Lease Incentives for Fairfax Tenants (LIFFT) program began this spring and awards new or expanding City businesses grants if they sign a new lease in a high-vacancy office building, based on the square footage they'll occupy.

"This program and its promotion have done a great deal to both improve tenancy and commercial brokers' interest generally in Fairfax City," said Toulouse. "The FCED also administers a Technology Zone incentive program, in partnership with the City's Commissioner of the Revenue, to qualified technology businesses signing a five-year or more lease in Fairfax City. This incentive abates business-license taxes for qualified businesses on a decelerating basis, for five years."

"We've long felt that Fairfax City is optimally positioned for the relocation and growth of businesses, particularly those looking to locate in the geographic center of Northern Virginia's steady and innovative economy," added EDA Chair Beth Young. "FCED's programs create expanded opportunities for businesses who otherwise may look elsewhere."

Economic Development Director Chris Bruno said this new data shows that Fairfax City is competitive and in demand. "As a city, we provide our residents and businesses with excellent services, so they want to be here," he explained. "Northern Virginia and Fairfax City are the ideal locations to start, expand and develop new companies. I applaud the staff for developing smart programming that allows FCED to advance the goals of the Mayor and City Council in a meaningful way."

The bottom line, said Toulouse, is that "People are looking for value and resources. Fairfax City has attractive rental rates, business assistance resources like direct grants, and procurement or financing guidance from the half dozen SBDC [Small Business Development Center] partners headquartered here. We feel confident about our value proposition to those looking to relocate."

HISTORY CONFERENCE

Blessed with Diversity

BY GLENDA C. BOOTH
CONNECTION NEWSPAPERS

Five sequined-clad Bolivian dancers, San Simon Sucre, were an attention-grabbing, glittery climax for the Nov. 4 Fairfax County history conference, following five hours of inspiring presentations on the county's rich mix of 1.2 million people.

"Fairfax County recently became a majority minority community," Board of Supervisors Chairman Jeff McKay reported, calling it "a tapestry that celebrates all nations."

"Immigrants are who America is," concurred Lynne Garvey-Hodge, History Commission chair. "We must hold hands and do the best we can to care for and support one another."

Citing current "chaos in the Middle East," McKay said he issued a statement because, "We have families directly affected. Even on the international stage, there is so much diversity here, someone in the Fairfax County community is affected."

The conference, the third in a four-part series and titled "We Are Fairfax County," focused on Muslim, Asian and Latino residents. Across the county's 407 square miles, 57 percent of residents speak a language other than English at home, county statistics show. Fairfax City Mayor Catherine Read welcomed attendees.

Facing Some Challenges

Abrar Omeish, at-large county school board member, whose family came from Libya, urged all to "see beyond the tropes of bias." While her family has enjoyed the "blessings of this community," she has experienced "a lot of beautiful moments and difficult moments." The Sept. 11, 2001, al-Qaeda attack on the United States and some public statements have fed anti-immigrant sentiments. She seeks to "debunk misconceptions," especially associated with people who practice the Islamic faith. "We must see kinship in one another and have a sense of belonging in a community that saw us as people and enabled us to thrive," she said.

Keynote Tom Gjelten, author of "A Nation of Nations: A Great American Immigration Story," credited a 1965 immigration reform law with making "America the diverse country it is today." That law eliminated "blatantly discriminatory and racist quotas" that favored white European immigrants. In his 2015 book, he traces the Omeish and Keam families' journeys. As late as 1970, fewer than four percent of people in Fairfax County were born outside the U.S.; today it's about 33 percent, he said. "Few places in the United States reflect the changes in population like Fairfax County."

While Gjelten still believes the 1965 law made America's promise more of a reality, he now thinks he overstated that promise in 2015. With "voices suggesting it was wrong to open America's doors," he said. "What I thought was a settled debate turned out to be very much alive," citing a proposed ban on immigrants from some Muslim countries and Islamophobic and anti-Semitic public comments.

Erik Martinez said at first he felt "tiny," translated by Pablo Nunez

Catherine Read, Ean Eschenburg and Jeff McKay. Eschenburg and Mike Salmon received an award for their video on the county's small family cemeteries. "Family Cemeteries in Fairfax County," Catherine Read, Robert Beach and Jeff McKay. The commission gave Bob Beach an award for designing the Turning Point Suffragist Memorial at Lorton.

"Diversity leads to more tolerance," Gjelten said. "The more people are exposed to people from different backgrounds, the more their hostility decreases."

Former Congressman and Fairfax County Board of Supervisors Chairman Tom Davis described countering opposition to mosques. "Societies don't last if groups feel excluded. You don't have to demonize people." Applauding the ethnic mix of students in George Mason University and the public schools, Davis said, "We have a diverse community with a lot of talent. If you tap it, it's there. The county provides great promise, but challenges. Our society today is increasingly polarized and it's increasingly important that we talk to each other."

Daniel Altman, co-founder of NOVA Resettling Afghan Families Together (RAFT), reviewed Afghanistan's history starting with Alexander the Great and described the 2021 U.S. withdrawal that airlifted over 70,000 Afghans out in two weeks. Over 74,000 visa applications for Afghan people who supported the U.S. government are still pending, a "disgrace," he asserted; the documents are moving at a "glacial pace." Over 7,600 Afghan refugees have resettled in Virginia, including over 1,000 in Fairfax County and they are still arriving, he noted. RAFT has furnished 300 homes and offers support like job searches.

when she was two her family fled Vietnam and rebuilt their life. "The values of hope, opportunity and freedom are very American values that hold us together. We must build a stronger Fairfax regardless of where people are from, to achieve their own American dream," she said.

Former Del. Mark Keam, the first Asian-American elected to the Virginia legislature, whose family immigrated from Korea, said, "My success is because this country gave me opportunities very few places in the world would." He contended that Fairfax County is uniquely welcoming, partly because of the county's official "One Fairfax" policy and the federal government's draw. People come to the Washington area from all around the world which has "created a sense of synergy that does not exist in many places in the United States." Fairfax County is "willing to accept us and be part of Virginia's change, part of the system. History is not looking backwards. It's about looking forward and making history. We have to focus on the future and make sure we're teaching folks what can be."

Through translator Pablo Nunez, Erik Martinez told the group that he "felt tiny, really tiny in this new culture," when he came from Guatemala. He praised the Centreville Immigration Forum which helped him find a job. "My life is really great at this moment," he said.

Claudia Alvarez, a single mother also from Guatemala, said she too "was lost" until she found Centreville Immigration Forum, which helped her find work and English classes.

Lynette Sappe-Watkins, Executive Director of the non-profit Falls Church Culmore Clinic, told attendees that most of their patients are uninsured, come from other countries and two-thirds have chronic illnesses. The many languages and traditions they bring to the clinic "all add color and depth, a beautiful illustration of what America's supposed to be," she said.

Braddock District Supervisor James Walkinshaw told the conference-goers, "Fairfax

Help feed Fairfax County families in need without leaving the house. The Fairfax County Stuff the Bus campaign has gone virtual. From Nov. 1-30, 2023, individuals and community groups can make monetary donations directly to local non-profit organizations that provide food assistance in Fairfax County.

This is the 12th year that Fairfax County Government has partnered with local non-profits. In previous years, the campaign has centered around people placing physical donations of shelf-stable foods directly inside FasTran buses parked outside grocery stores or libraries – literally stuffing the bus with goods. While that will still be offered for the Winter 2024 Stuff the Bus campaign, the virtual food drive will help prepare Fairfax County's non-profit food access partners for the busy holiday season.

Information on the community partners and the virtual drive is available at Stuff the Bus Virtual Food Drive. <https://volunteerfairfax.org/home/stuff-the-bus-virtual-food-drive/>

The campaign coincides with Hunger and Homeless Awareness Week in Fairfax County. The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors designated Nov.11-18, 2023 (the week before Thanksgiving), as Hunger and Homeless Awareness Week to raise awareness about the pressing issues of hunger and homelessness in Fairfax County.

The Capital Area Food Bank's 2023 Hunger Report reveals multiple factors that have driven food insecurity to remain at staggeringly high levels. Inequitable economic recovery from the pandemic, inflation, and the end of many federal benefit programs make it difficult for families to put food on the table. According to the Capital Area Food Bank Survey, it's estimated that 24% of Fairfax County residents are food insecure.

The virtual Stuff the Bus campaign runs through Nov. 30. The in-person Stuff the Bus campaign returns to grocery stores and community locations in Jan. 2024. For more information, visit Stuff the Bus.

County is a welcoming place because we realize the ideals of our nation. Somebody like me, whose family has been here since the 18th century, has no more voice than someone who immigrated here from Guatemala yesterday. We are all equally Americans, Virginians and Fairfaxians."

"My own life has been enriched by so many immigrants," echoed Springfield history buff Judy Baldwin.

Chairman McKay encouraged the audience to heed his history teacher-mother's advice, "We must learn from our past and strive to do better."

County's Hypothermia Prevention Program Opens Dec. 1

2023 homelessness statistics show 10 percent increase in people experiencing homelessness at the Point in Time count.

BY MERCIA HOBSON
THE CONNECTION

Consistently cold weather will be on its way soon, with nighttime temperatures dipping into the low 30s and the 20s. Since 2005, the county's Hypothermia Prevention Program has prevented death and serious injuries among Fairfax County's most vulnerable residents since 2005 by ensuring that no one must sleep outside during the winter months.

According to Danien Johnson with the Office to Prevent and End Homelessness, the Fairfax County Hypothermia Prevention Program is an integral part of the county's effort to prevent and end homelessness. The program incorporates the collaborative work of area contracted providers, faith communities, civic organizations, businesses and individual volunteers.

"The protocols for hypothermia season are consistent across the county. During the hypothermia season, due to the added vulnerabilities presented by extremely low temperatures, persons experiencing homelessness can access services through overflow in the emergency shelters," Johnson said.

The 2023-24 Hypothermia Prevention Program in Fairfax County runs from Dec. 1, 2023, until March 31, 2024. There are sites around the county including in the following communities: Richmond Highway/Alexandria area; Reston/Herndon; Falls Church/Alexandria area; and Fairfax and Centreville.

Last year, the program served an average of 215 guests per night, according to the program's website. Any adult in need of immediate shelter can receive warm shelter, food and other supportive services to help connect guests to a variety of basic needs such as clothing, employment, housing, and more.

Some individuals experiencing homelessness choose not to go to shelters, and some nights before and after the program is available are very cold.

Johnson added that, as space is limited for overflow, sometimes contracted partner agencies must work more collaboratively. "For example, if an individual accesses overflow in the Centreville area but space is unavailable, the provider will contact partners in other regions to determine the availability of space and help the client with transportation to the respective shelter."

Not all individuals who are experiencing homelessness choose to access shelters, nor do they have access to warm, safe accommodations through friends, family, and other programs and services.

Fairfax County conducted its 2023 Point-In-Time Count of individuals and families experiencing homelessness on the night of Jan. 25, 2023. Results reported 1,310 total persons experiencing homelessness, a 10 percent increase from 2022, including 767 households, 847 adults, and 460 children.

A look at December 2022 temperatures in Fairfax reported for the first week in December 2022, Dec. 1 low of 28; Dec. 2 low of 21;

Dec. 3 low of 45; Dec. 4 low of 27.

Getting Family Help

Adults with children (ages 0-17) should contact Coordinated Services Planning at 703-222-0880 (TTY 711), Monday - Friday, from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., for referrals to family-oriented support and services. If you need assistance after hours, contact or visit one of the county's family shelters - locations and contact information are available

Nov. 7 General Election What's happening at polling places on Election Day.

BY MERCIA HOBSON
THE CONNECTION

Ten minutes before election officials opened the doors at 6 a.m. to the polling place for Fairfax County Dranesville Precinct 320 in Northern Virginia, Democratic and GOP volunteers scurried about in the parking lot of the community center to set up their tents and have their stacks of sample ballots ready to hand out to voters. A line had already formed inside the building as early-bird Election Day 2023 voters prepared to cast their ballots on Election Day, Tuesday, Nov. 7.

Stakes are high at the state level in Virginia during this year's midterm election and closely watched within the Commonwealth and nationally. Although Republican Gov.

Glenn Youngkin's four-year term runs another two years and the office is not on the ballot, voters will decide which party controls each chamber of the General Assembly with all 140 seats on the ballot.

Virginia is one of only four states where all seats in the General Assembly are on the ballot for the first time since 2019. The Virginia legislature could see more turnover than usual, resulting from this being the first election under the new set of district maps.

According to an Oct. 17, 2023 survey by The Wason Center, at Christopher Newport University, "Virginia likely voters are split on whether they intend to support the Democratic or Republican Party's candidate in their district for the General Assembly (42 percent to 41 percent)."

In Virginia, Democrats currently control the Senate, by a 22-17 margin. To check Youngkin's conservative GOP agenda, Democrats seek to maintain control of the Senate and hopefully flip the GOP-controlled House of Delegates, which Republicans won by a narrow margin in 2021, 52-48.

Youngkin is pushing to win full control of both the Virginia Senate and House. If Republicans manage to take control of both chambers, this would grant them a GOP trifecta, whereby the same party controls both chambers of the state legislature and the governorship. This would ensure that Governor Youngkin could move forward with his conservative agenda.

The Wason Center opined, "A strong showing for Republicans could provide a blueprint for the party nationally around how to discuss abortion and how to highlight K-12 education issues successfully. Some suggest that if Republicans have a particularly strong showing in the state's elections, Governor Youngkin may consider a late entry to the Republican presidential primary." The Wason Center reported the margin of error for the survey is +/-4.0 percent at the 95 percent level of confidence.

At 11:15, 333 voters from precinct 320 at Herndon Community Center had voted, according to Kristin O'Brien, chief election officer.

The Connection is going to press as voting is underway. Check our website at www.ConnectionNewspapers.com and our Facebook page at <https://www.facebook.com/ConnectionNewspapers/>

Affordable Housing to Accept Waitlist Applications from Older Adults Nov. 13-19, 2023

Older adults interested in applying to affordable housing waitlists will have the opportunity Nov. 13-19, 2023 for select properties in the county.

❖ The Fallstead: One-bedroom apartments for older adults (ages 62+) located at 1609 Great Falls Street, McLean, VA 22101

❖ One University Senior (The Belmont): One-bedroom apartments for older adults (ages 62+) to be located at 4518 University Drive, Fairfax, VA 22030. This property is currently under construction.

How to Apply: Interested individuals can apply via Rent Café, which is an online housing application portal. The link for applications will go live at 8 a.m. on Monday, Nov. 13, 2023 on the Fairfax County Housing and Community Development website, and will remain open until 11:59 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 19, 2023.

Instructions for using Rent Café can be found here https://www.fairfaxcounty.gov/housing/sites/housing/files/assets/documents/pbv/rent_cafe_guide_november_2023.pdf. Individuals who need assistance can call 703-246-5100 or come to the Fairfax County Redevelopment and Housing Authority (FCRHA) office at 3700

Pender Drive in Fairfax, VA.

Applicants will be randomly placed on a waiting list for these properties. All applications received have an equal opportunity to be selected. Once a unit becomes available, the waiting list applicants will be contacted, screened, and determined eligible based on income level, household size, and the size of the rental unit. Households cannot currently be receiving other federal rental housing assistance to qualify.

Federal Housing Funds Make a Local Impact in Fairfax

This affordable housing opportunity is made available through the "Project Based Voucher" program which provides rental assistance to eligible households to live in specific rental units. Through a contract with the owner of the unit, the FCRHA pays a portion of the monthly rent, while the household pays their portion of the monthly rent based upon 30% to 35% of adjusted gross income. The rental assistance is attached to the specific unit and remains at the property, even if the family moves. The FCRHA uses subsidies from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for the Project Based Voucher program.

VIENNA TOWN COUNCIL ADOPTS REVISED ZONING CODE

After an extensive, three-year process to update the Town of Vienna's zoning code, the Vienna Town Council adopted the revised plan at its regular meeting last week at Town Hall. The newly adopted ordinance will take effect on Jan. 1, 2024. The purpose of the project referred to as Code Create Vienna was to clarify, simplify, reorganize, and update key chapters of the Town code. Among other things, the update provides opportunities for residents to enhance outdoor living space to accommodate modern lifestyles, requires more green space in commercial areas and gives businesses greater flexibility to explore more commercial opportunities. To learn more about the recently adopted zoning and subdivision code, visit www.viennava.gov/codeupdates.

HOLIDAY DECORATING CONTEST APPLICATIONS NOW BEING ACCEPTED

Town of Vienna residents and businesses are encouraged to compete in this year's "Shine Bright, Vienna" holiday decorating contest sponsored by the Town

Business Liaison Committee (TBLC) and the Vienna Parks and Recreation Department and the Vienna Economic Development Department. Applications for the 2024 contest are now available online at www.viennava.gov/holiday or at the Vienna Community Center, 120 Cherry St., SE. To be considered for the contest, participants must submit a completed application and a photo of their display by Nov. 21, 2023. All decorations must be visible from the street.

Eleanor Mahin Thorp: Metopic Ridge. At Tephra ICA at Signature. Tephra Institute of Contemporary Art (Tephra ICA) presents Metopic Ridge, a solo exhibition by artist Eleanor Mahin Thorp. Thorp's paintings take us on an immersive site visit to examine the Blue Ridge Mountains exploring stability and change, the seen and the hidden within rocks. Through her discerning gaze rocks are more than geological entities; instead, they metamorphose into vessels of history and human connection. Drawing inspiration from the fascinating transformations depicted in Persian miniatures, Thorp traces the hidden figures and forms in the rocks. Her paintings reveal the duality of rocks' existence as both a firm witness to time and a medium for that which is intangible.

Shepherd’s Center Needs More Volunteers

Shepherd’s Center of McLean-Arlington-Falls Church (SCMAFC), an all-volunteer organization, is seeking additional volunteers to support its mission of providing free transportation to seniors for medical and dental appointments or run errands to grocery stores and pharmacies.

The Center is an all-volunteer non-profit organization [501(c)(3)] that has been operating since 2006.

Shepherd’s Center volunteers provided 2,362 rides in 2022 and 2,758 rides thus far this year. Of the rides provided this year, 57% were medically related, 17% grocery, and 21% for physical therapy. The Center has added 35 new drivers this year and 83 new riders, so there’s a continued need for additional volunteers.

There is no set quota; volunteers are free to choose when and how often they drive. They can choose rides that are one-way or round trip. The best part is not only do drivers help those in need, they also get to meet wonderful folks, often with very interesting backgrounds and stories to tell.

For detailed information or to apply, please visit the Center’s website <https://scmafrc.org/volunteer> or call (703) 506-2199 and leave a message

We Need Your Help Again
We are sincerely grateful and thankful to you for helping in 2021 to save one of America's oldest newspapers, the Alexandria Gazette Packet, publishing continuously since 1784

And affiliated newspapers:
THE CONNECTION Newspapers & Online
Mount Vernon Gazette
Potomac Almanac
Centre View

Thank you to the hundreds of supporters who helped to keep all your Connection Newspapers alive throughout Alexandria, Fairfax County, Arlington County and Potomac, Md. along with affiliated websites and digital media. Now we need help again in 2022.

Each local newspaper's mission aspires to provide greater community service, and we do know that our communities are better off if we continue to publish. Last year's financial support from readers and supporters like you bridged the shortfall before Federal PPP funding arrived, and both made our survival possible. We now await a decision for a grant from Rebuild Virginia in early February that we hope will help us in 2022 and beyond. But we need help to survive the first quarter, always a brutal time for cash flow in weekly newspapers. Thank you.

Please, help save these historical papers. All gifts will be used to fund our printed newspapers and websites and to meet obligations to our loyal and patient employees, writers, contractors and suppliers.

The ongoing pandemic continues to crush many newspapers across the country, and our newspapers continue to be at risk. The Northern Virginia area's best read and most trusted source for community news includes the Alexandria Gazette Packet, Mount Vernon Gazette and all Connection Newspapers in the metropolitan region.

The pandemic has hit small businesses hard, which in turn has reduced advertising revenue that keeps these local newspapers alive to provide hyper-local news to residents. It feels like no small miracle to be looking forward into 2022.

The pandemic has been a bear, financially and otherwise. Revenue plummeted at the beginning in 2020. Some beloved advertisers have stayed the course supporting us and many more have done what they can. In the fall of 2021 we saw the return of some advertising for events and Grand Openings, but now omicron clouds the horizon in so many ways. Revenue still remains short of expenses despite our greatly curtailed costs.

Connection Newspapers has been offering these local newspapers to residents for over 200 years. Countless residents have grown up with these papers covering significant moments in the lives of family and children, news, community events, school activities, and even pictures of our dogs and cats. Internet news and large national newspapers cannot provide the local connection or historical connection that local papers like Connection Newspapers and the Alexandria Gazette Packet provide. If your child, dog, mother, father, neighborhood, school has been featured, you understand the value of local community newspapers.

Bucket List-less

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

As you regular readers have no doubt read in a previous column (or 500) I have cancer. I was first diagnosed with non-small cell lung cancer, stage IV in late February 2009. When I didn't die within my "13 month to two years" prognosis, my oncologist was surprised; nevertheless, he didn't pursue any medical explanation. He just characterized me as his "third miracle" and my treatment continued relatively unabated. It wasn't for another seven years or so that my diagnosis changed to papillary thyroid cancer. Whether my oncologist made an error in my original diagnosis or was slow to change/update my diagnosis, we'll never know as my original tissue sample/slide has been lost (I won't say conveniently). Moreover, the statute of limitations has expired so any incentive to research/investigate was lost in the figurative rubble. No real worries though. I have learned to live with it (live being the operative word) and besides, my life would have changed little since the damage was long since done, and likely would have stressed me out more.

But I must confess, living with incurable cancer is all it's cracked up to be. Meaning it's not exactly a picnic. If you've read any my last umpteen columns on the matter, cancer does more than just invade your body, it affects you emotionally, almost subconsciously, as it re-wires your brain, sort of. And there's not a thing you can do about it. What you value, what you can tolerate, what motivates you; anything you want to say or do is filtered through this imaginary prism called cancer. And what goes in doesn't always come out as you expected, or have heard yourself saying, or seen yourself doing, or had expressed an interest in saying or doing like you had for the entirety of your previous life. This the new you, like it or not.

It is in this context that us cancer (or any other terminal-type situation) survivors are regularly asked what we want to do with the rest of our lives - or a reasonable facsimile thereof. Specifically, this awkward conversation inevitably veers into whether we have a "bucket list": a list of sorts of the things you want to do before you die, places you want to visit, people you want to see, et cetera; and maybe even the songs you want to hear: "Live Like You're Dying" by Tim McGraw comes to mind.

When the opportunity (more like misfortune) presents itself at your ground-zero-type meeting with an oncologist when you hear the words "You have cancer" for the first time, you are changed forever, and not just physically, but every which way - and some you never imagined as well. Invariably, what is asked and/or what you think about your new reality as a "terminal" cancer patient, your answer is the framework of the all-too-familiar bucket list: the things/choices/places you want to do/say/go; presuming/understanding that you no longer have as much time as you thought you did - before this appointment. There's no future "woeing" is me, there's only the present and accepting/assimilating your new circumstances into your routine. Fighting it is one thing, but embracing it is quite another. Unfortunately, the odds/statistics are against you, but so what? Cancer may be the big dog, but if I want to get on the porch, I'm going to do so. Because even though cancer and all its insidious ways likely has other plans for you, plans you probably need to agree and proceed to, as we say in the sales world, standing pat ain't gonna cut it anymore. And cancer is as big a hurdle as there is. All you can do is learn to roll with the punches and put one foot in front of the other. And more often than not, my bucket-list answer surprises.

I want to live life like I'm living, not live like I'm anticipating dying. I don't want to fill up this hypothetical bucket, I want to empty it. Furthermore, I'd rather enjoy and appreciate what I have - and had, not think about what I don't have/didn't do.

After hearing what I heard - out of the blue no less, at that initial meeting with the oncologist, about my abbreviated life expectancy; to say it knocks you for a loop is to minimize loops everywhere. This 'loop' is more like the roller coaster from hell. Up and down and all-around is just the beginning. And one ride is more than enough. But you're going to be on this ride for the rest of your life so hunker down and buckle up. Eventually, at least I did, you get it sorted in some way which enables you to live life forward. I felt that if I was doing something on my so-called "bucket list," the reason for doing that thing was because I was dying and I wanted to do it before I died. To me, that would be reinforcing a negative. That's not how I want to decide that whatever it is I'm doing. I want to decide based on the merits/intrinsic value of the thing. To me, the 'bucket list' concept is too negative. I want to do things because I want to do them, not because I have too not because of some theoretical list of do-or-die experiences/accomplishments. Reinforcing a negative didn't/doesn't feel like a very positive thing to do. And here I am, nearly 15 years post-diagnosis.

Dyke named the sponsors, including the Claude Moore Charitable Foundation, Dominion Energy, Google, Tullman Family Office, Washington Gas, and The Washington Group Special Care Planning Team. Dyke told how Sen. Janet D. Howell (D-Fairfax) received the first SPARC Hero Award this past June and set a high standard for other recipients. According to Dyke, Howell's leadership resulted in the 2023–2024 Virginia state budget including, for the first time, an annual $250,000 line item for SPARC, positioning it to become a pilot program for Virginia.

"SPARC has changed the long-term care blueprint for young adults with severe disabilities by providing a safe, caring environment where they learn and have fun together," said Rose Mario Risley, chair of Fairfax Area Long-Term Care Coordinating Council. "The SPARC model is designed to provide access to community services, individualized supports, and other forms of assistance that promote self-determination."

SPARC has five clubhouse locations: Fairfax, McLean, Reston, Vienna, and Arlington.

Katherine Montgomery, a SPARC participant and secretary of the SPARC board, took to the stage, joining Dyke, as did U.S. Sen. Tim Kaine, Sen. Richard L. Saslaw, Adam Toobin, Ellen Dyke, and Mark Ingrao auctioneer. Montgomery handed Kaine the award and said, "Thank you, Senator Kaine, for being a champion."

Montgomery commended Kaine for realizing the vital roles that family caregivers and direct care providers play in the lives of individuals with disabilities. She expressed her gratitude to him for his bill, the Supporting Our Direct Care Workforce and Family Caregivers Act, which directs the Department of Health and Human Services, through the Administration on Community Living (ACL), to develop a national care center for the direct care workforce and family caregivers. It affects not just SPARC members but also individuals with disabilities and chronic medical conditions.

The SPARC Hero Award is given to a person who has tirelessly worked to fill the huge hole in our social safety net that ignores and neglects far too many citizens and who works to remove barriers when others have declined to act. "It's very difficult to find direct care professionals because of the lack of compensation and the ability to provide a living wage," Montgomery said.

SPARC honored Saslaw with the Lifetime Achievement Award. Jim Dyke said that for this award, SPARC honors those talented, committed, and visionary individuals who have dedicated their careers and devoted their time and energy to improving the lives of others.

"Individuals who have had a major positive imprint on our community and whose actions and accomplishments have been transformative. If you put those guidelines into Google, no doubt up will pop Senator Dick Saslaw," said Dyke.

Toobin presented Saslaw with the award and told Saslaw what his support meant to him and his friends. It meant that when he had COVID, he could join his SPARC friends from home on his computer and was still able to participate in the activities.

Shawn Flaherty, a board member at large and communications chair, reported that as of Monday, Nov. 6, SPARC had raised $152,000 during the gala.

SPARC offers day programs five days a week. Programs include a curriculum based on daily living activities like continued education, skill building, exercise, outings, cooking, music, art, lectures, discussion groups, and more. The annual cost for each participant is $9,000, compared to an average of $39,000 per year in publicly funded costs for a program through Medicaid.
