The Big Freeze

Arlington Ridge neighbors call for zoning freeze in neighborhood plan.

BY MICHAEL LEE POPE
THE CONNECTION

Development has become such a hot issue in the Arlington Ridge neighborhood that some neighbors are calling for a zoning freeze.

Last weekend, neighbors presented an update to their neighborhood conservation plan to members of the Arlington County Board that suggests county officials “freeze” zoning in the area. The idea is that calling halt to the massive population boom would allow government leaders and neighborhood residents “to conserve the peaceful single-family character of our neighborhood and protect our quality of life and the air we breathe.”

“Recent population increases have brought more crime,” said Natasha Pinol, chairwoman of the neighborhood conservation committee. “Residents have deep concerns about the cumulative impact of neighboring intense development.”

Neighbors say the last four decades of development have taken a major toll on their neighborhood. Major roads are overrun with traffic congestion. Secondary roads have become clogged with cut-through traffic. Meanwhile, assaults have become a rising concern and neighbors have had enough. Within the 22202 ZIP code, neighbors say, the population increased 38 percent between 2000 and 2010. For now, many say, it’s time to stop the massive construction projects.

“Our neighborhoods are marketed all across America as redevelopment opportunities to real-estate trusts and others,” said Jim Hurysz. “All too often the focus is on making a real estate trust happy with little consideration to the impact of development on adjacent residential neighborhoods.”

THE UPDATE is the first revision to the Arlington Ridge Neighborhood Conservation plan since 1973. In addition to suggesting the zoning freeze, the document identifies a series of improvements that neighbors say they would like to see including everything from expanding the library to improving sidewalks. County Board member Jay Fisette said Arlington officials agree with about 80 percent of what’s in the plan.

“We know at some point down the road we will be dealing with a project or a process and it will come back that what we are proposing is inconsistent with the N.C. plan,” said Fisette. “And that always provides some need to further explain that N.C. plan is your vision, and there is that element of it that until county policy gets in line it’s going to remain a difference of opinion.”

Fisette said that the population change concerning neighbors is mostly in adjoining neighborhoods rather than a population boom within the Arlington Ridge neighborhood. County staff responded to the request for a freeze with a note attached to the docket that rezoning requests are subject to established county processes, which include public participation as well as County Board approval. That means that while the county has recognized that neighbors want a freeze, the county policy is that requests for rezoning have an established process that has not changed.

“Community and neighborhood involvement in an integral component of the review process,” county staff concluded. “Depending on

A team of filmmakers prepares to bring “The Justice League Dark” characters to the silver screen

Fan fiction based on comic books is nothing new. But creating a movie based on comic book characters with a plotline that could easily be found in a long-standing series? That’s taking fandom to a new level.

In February, Falls Church resident Trevor Krainik and his co-worker and fellow comic book enthusiast Victor Omar decided it was time to build on their long chats about a series Krainik grew up reading and do something about it.

“Conceptually, we began in February,” he said. “We sat down to write a script and it took about a week and a half to get the first draft.”

Before they knew it, they had enrolled in classes at Arlington Independent Media, learning the basics of film and video production and were on track to shoot a movie based on their original script, “Justice League Dark: The Gathering,” starting at the end of this month.

They’ve spent nearly every night and bit of free time for the past several months working on the project, not wanting to lose any momentum and see their ideas fall into something that could’ve been done but wasn’t.

Krainik, a longtime fan of more “supernatural” comic titles, had no idea Omar, an Arlingtonian, read comics until it came up at work one day, he recalled. They were on different sides of the universe, so to speak — Omar read more properties from Marvel, titles like Silver Surfer and other “space” themed comics, whereas Krainik prefers DC’s “supernatural” work — but “we’d trade back and forth,” he said.

DC recently rebooted its entire collection of titles, ending some series that had been running for decades along with those that were newer in order to give them all a common world and timeframe, and that led to a revamp for the “Justice League Dark” characters as well, Krainik said.

When writing their script, they wanted to take some elements from the previous series of books and incorporate some of the newer books as well, he said. They’re building on one of the newer elements, teaming up previously disjointed characters, to tell the story of Madame Xanadu, portrayed by Bette Cassatt in the film, who calls on the AAUW Focuses on Sexual Assault Retired Navy commander cites need for more support for females in military.

BY JANEIL ELLISON

The members of Arlington's AAUW (American Association of University Women) gathered on Tuesday, Oct. 15, at the Langston Community Center to hear guest speaker Sandy Lawrence discuss sexual assaults in the military.

Lawrence, an AAUW northern district representative, led a discussion based on last year's Sundance Award-winning documentary "Invisible War" about the injustice done on women within the armed forces.

Identifying herself as a retired Navy commander and victim of sexual assault, Lawrence said wrongful sexual assaults against women of the armed forces dates back to WW II in every branch of the U.S. military, she said. According to the Department of Defense, approximately 20 percent of women reported to being sexually abused while 1 percent of men confess to be victim of sexual assaults themselves.

"It's more about power. If you seem weak they will get you," Lawrence said. The number of "survivors," as Lawrence prefers to say, increases with every year so there is still more justice that needs to be done.

Board Limits Dog Tethering

The County Board approved new rules on Oct. 19 that limit the amount of time dogs may be tethered, citing potential risks to the animals' health and well-being.

The board voted unanimously to adopt regulations that limit the amount of time a dog may be tethered to three hours within a 24-hour period, and limit the amount of time a dog can be affixed to a running cable or trolley system to 12 hours in a 24-hour period.

The regulations take effect immediately. Violations are misdemeanors and carry a fine of up to $100. To report a violation, call the Animal Welfare League of Arlington at 703-931-9241.

Bike Thief: 12-Year Sentence

A 42-year-old man has received a 12-year jail sentence for his involvement in multiple bicycle thefts in Arlington County. Michael Cullen, of no fixed address, pled guilty to eight counts of grand larceny with the intent to sell and one count of possession of burglarious tools. On Oct. 18, he was sentenced to 12 years in jail with four years suspended only if full restitution is paid to the victims.

Recent data compiled by the Arlington County Police Department shows bike thefts are at an all-time high.

The discovery of these statistics led the Burglary/Larceny Unit to spear-head a regional police cooperation to reduce the amount of bicycle thefts and identify suspects.

Saturation patrols and increased surveillance, along with countless hours spent by Arlington County police detectives, have seen positive results recently.

Neighborhood Projects Funded

The County Board Oct. 19 approved $1.5 million on Oct. 19 to fund three neighborhood street improvement and beautification projects that were identified by residents.

the (General Land Use Plan) amendment being requested, the scope of any review process could range from a few meetings organized under the auspices of the Planning Commission to review staff analysis, to a more extensive process where a plan with recommendation is developed.”

THE PROCESS to update the plan started in 2011, when the Arlington Ridge Neighborhood Association launched a opinion survey to gauge residents’ perceived community values and problems as well as their vision for the neighborhood. Using input from more than 400 survey participants, county officials worked with community volunteers to update the plan. The County Board unanimously approved the plan, although a press release announcing the vote noted that the board’s acceptance of the plan does not mean that the county approves of each recommendation.

“For half a century, our Neighborhood Conservation program has helped Arlingtonians keep their neighborhoods strong, safe and beautiful,” said Arlington County Board Chairman Walter Tejada in written statement. “The Arlington Ridge update accepted today by the board reflects the county’s belief that when it comes to planning great neighborhoods, no one knows better than the people who live in those neighborhoods what they need.”

Band Brings in Crowd at Four Courts

BY JENNIFER BENITZ
THE CONNECTION

Sports fans, music enthusiasts and pub-goers united at Ireland's Four Courts in Arlington on Saturday night, Oct. 19, as the local band Calder & Pugh rocked the stage — headlining its second show at the Irish restaurant.

Band mates Matt McIntyre, 23, and Antonio Parisi, 26, performed three sets of songs — the overwhelming majority of which were met with applause and signs of approval from the audience.

Four Courts Manager Tim Walsh said the energy the band brings to the restaurant is one of the factors that caught his attention originally. "They do a great job," said Walsh. "Not many people can play once a month and consistently bring in 50-60 people."

Walsh also said he looks for bands that will keep people at Four Courts and keep them excited on a Friday or Saturday night. With a bigger crowd than its first show, the cover band pleased those in attendance, performing a playlist of songs, including hits from the 1990s, 2000s and today.

"They know their audience," Arlington resident Kevin Cahalane, 26, said of the music they play. "They interact well with the crowd." Surrounded by people of all ages, Calder & Pugh set the bar high as a

"It was a fun crowd," said McIntyre. "[They] sang along, and when they're having fun, we're having fun."

AAUW Spotlights Sexual Assault

The members of the AAUW have marched up to Capitol Hill to lobby on the STOP (Sexual Assault Training Oversight and Prevention) Act that is trying to move the responsibility of these sexual assaults out of the hands of the military. The sexism makes it harder for women to advance within their own branch as well. Since the last century there was only a 30 to 40 percent chance for women to get promoted, according to Lawrence's presentation.

Though more attention has been brought to this issue, not enough has been done about the offenders and their actions, she said. Therefore, the members of all the AAUW organization are working to combat such assaults and support the survivors by sharing their stories.

On the third Tuesday of every month, AAUW Arlington has a meeting with a new guest speaker. AAUW is a nationwide organization mainly known for its research, women's empowerment, and funding to help further the education of students in financial struggles. Visit www.aauw.org.

Halloween Party Safety Net

Make plans for a safe celebration;
SoberRide safety net for those over 21.

Halloween is now a major holiday for adults, especially young adults, and also one of the major holidays each year that involve partying with alcohol and the risks of drinking and driving.

The Washington Regional Alcohol Project offers the SoberRide program for the holiday season from Christmas and holiday parties through New Years Day, Saint Patrick's Day, Independence Day and Halloween, providing a safety net of a free cab ride home (up to $30) to keep would-be drunk drivers off the roads.

Of course if you, or the young adults you know, plan to be out for Halloween celebrations that will almost certainly include alcohol, make a plan now to do that partying within walking distance, near public transportation or to have a reliable designated driver.

But if someone finds themselves without safe and sober way home, the 2013 Halloween

SoberRide program will be offered from 10 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 31 until 4 a.m., Friday, Nov. 1.

To receive a free cab ride home (up to a $30 fare), call 800-200-8294 (TAXI). AT&T customers may dial #WRAP from their wireless phones. To use the SoberRide service, you must be 21 or older.

EDITORIAL

Parents of teens who will be headed to parties on Halloween and the weekend after should know that it is likely those parties will include alcohol. Parents must be brave and talk to their teens about how they will get home safely since SoberRide is not available for anyone under-age.

Remember that there are other hazards to drinking too much besides the risks of drinking and driving.

George Strollo To Celebrate His 100th birthday

George Francis Strollo was born in New York City on Oct. 24, 1913. He has been an Arlington County resident for over 70 years and is celebrating his 100th birthday on Oct. 24, 2013, with a party at his home on Dinwiddie Street. George was one of seven children born to Rocco and Maria Strollo. Rocco and Maria separately emigrated from Italy in the late 1800s, Rocco from Buccino Italy (about 115km southeast of Naples), and met and married in New York City on Sept. 29, 1901.

Rocco was a butcher and owned and operated a butcher shop in New York City. The family started on the east side of Midtown, then moved to the Bronx when George was in grade school, then later to Queens. The family of nine lived above their butcher shop. George was the child chosen to go on to college, and received his undergraduate degree in engineering from New York University followed by a master's degree from Cornell University. He took his first job post graduation in New York City, not far from where his granddaughter later worked in Midtown Manhattan, but relocated a few years later to Washington, D.C. George relays some fun stories from this era, complete with a good-natured hitchhiking trip to get to a New Year's Eve party and Big Band dancing during college.

George began a career as a professor at George Washington University in Washington, D.C. It was there that he met Marian Whitaker, who eventually became his wife of over 70 years, until she died on Dec. 26, 2012. George and Marian moved to Buckingham Apartments in Arlington County in the early 1940s where they had their first child, Jacqueline Michele Strollo in 1944. They purchased and moved to their beloved home on Dinwiddie Street in 1949, back when Yorktown Boulevard remained unpaved past that street. George still lives in and maintains the home today. George and Marian had their second child, Laurie Strollo in 1958. Both Jackie and Laurie attended Yorktown High School and Jackie was part of the first graduating class that was given the honor of choosing the school colors.

George transitioned from his career as a professor to one in the Navy, both as a Reserve Officer and as a civilian. He rose through the ranks during his career at the Pentagon, and served during World War II. He received the Distinguished Civil Service Award from the Secretary of the Navy "For distinguished service and extraordinary contributions to the current readiness and future capability of the United States Navy and Marine Corps combat forces while serving as Special Assistant in the Office of Program Appraisal, Office of the Secretary of the Navy from January 1964 to May 1976. With exceptional knowledge and background experience, sure, clear judgment and outstanding devotion to duty he has provided penetrating analysis and invaluable counsel to the Secretary and Under Secretary of the Navy on the most critical issues of naval strategy, force balance and weapons system effectiveness.

Mr. Strollo's performance throughout this period and during his entire career with the Navy Department reflects exceptional credit upon himself and the naval service."

George is loved and cherished by his family, which includes his two daughters, five grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren, and his many friends. He shops at the Ft. Myer Commissary, played tennis into his 90s, and swam daily at the Yorktown High School swimming pool, where he cut the ribbon at the opening ceremony for the new pool. He is a role model to his family and friends for his family values, work ethic, healthy eating habits, and athleticism. They honor George and are most thankful on his 100th birthday.

PARENTS

Teenagers are taught that drugs and smoking harm the body. Unfortunately, they are being indoctrinated into a belief system about sodomy that is harmful. Therefore, it is beneficial for all teenagers to view Shocking 2010 CDC Update About Homosexuality on youtube. They should also be aware of some of the characteristics of sodomy:

1. Sodomy is a destructive act against nature. Consent does not change the fact that acts of sodomy are dangerous.
2. Sodomy is a want, not a need. Participating in sodomy is a choice.
3. No one has been born or will be born with a body designed for sodomy. The part most often used for sodomy is designed with a thin, fragile membrane that tears easily. A tiny tear can become infected and since this cavity does not heal quickly, a colostomy bag is often required. Sodomy can cause severe damage to the body which can result in death.
4. Sodomy spreads diseases rapidly because the cavity leads directly to the blood stream. Protection designed for normalcy is often ineffective when used for sodomy.

Compartmen- talization

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

It's not exactly everything in its place any more than it is, for me, a place for everything. It's more like mandatory evacuation – as in self-preservation; of thoughts, concerns, worries, anxieties, facts/feelings, all of which may be harmful to my health and/or my overall demeanor/well being (which anecdotally-speaking is all interrelated). Having stage IV non-small cell lung cancer will do that to you – among other things. If I don't take control of the internal and external complications caused by this insidious disease, then it wins. And the last thing any of us similarly diagnosed patients want is a victory by the other side.

My attempts at sustaining my status as quo are as much mental as they are physical. Physically, the tumors will react to chemotherapy – or not, and my body/internal organs will be "side-effected" how they will despite my wishfully-thought-of intentions. However, mentally (emotionally, psychologically, spiritually) is semi in my control. And control is key – or certainly perceived to be (rhyme not for any effect). As such, whether or not it matters to the cancer how I do what I do (live), it matters to me. And if it matters to me – and I take these matters into my own hands, and don't succumb to cancer's figurative punch, then I can feel as if maybe this battle is not so lopsided (what's more lopsided than a terminal diagnosis from an oncologist?). One where you're encouraged to take that vacation you've always dreamed of because, well, you know. But if I can feel – for even a minute, that my specific man vs. cancer existence is being waged on a level playing field, then I just might think this fight is fair. Realistically, that's all I can ask for. (Regardless of whether I'm ending this sentence with a preposition.)

But since there are no guarantees here, there's a bit of a leap of faith to be made (you'll note I didn't say expected). What I do know is, that if my focus on life is exclusively about yours truly being diagnosed with inoperable lung cancer; if my 24/7 consciousness is totally cancer-centric, and if any and all cancer thoughts are woe is me, then the battle is already lost. It's not about me not caring or giving up – hardly, it's about me not giving in. And the only way I know how to not give in to the pressure/terminal circumstances under which I continue to endure, is to not feel as if everything has to be dealt with all the time. There are just too many variables, and moving and unpredictable parts (euphemistically speaking) which have to be managed – for lack of a better word. Ergo: Coping and hoping. Every minute of every day. (Every second would be a bit of an exaggeration.)

And if and when I should receive any unpleasant news, I'll try to embrace those very appropriate words spoken by Scarlett O'Hara at the end of the Oscar-winning classic, "Gone With The Wind," when Rhett Butler walked away after having said he didn't "give a damn" about what Scarlett "will do" about bringing "him back:" "...I can't think about this now! I'll go crazy if I do! I'll think about it tomorrow..." Compartmentalization. A figurative solution to a set of real problems. It's not exactly pretending. It's more like pacifying. So far, so great.

others to help her rescue the “ghost adventurer” Deadman from the goddess Rama Kushna, who has imprisoned him. Madame Xanadu, a “powerful enchantress,” brings in demon detective John Constantine, Las Vegas magician Zatanna Zatara, and the seemingly detached Phantom Stranger, because despite being powerful on their own, it’s the special skills possessed by each that can help rescue Deadman, Krainik said.

While he’ll be trying his luck on-camera as Deadman, Omar will be behind the camera directing the film and working on creating special effects in post-production.

“This is a great chance to really experience characters I enjoy,” Omar said.

THE MOVIE IS A WAY for Omar and Krainik, as fans, to “take someone else’s baby and make it our own,” in a way that remains true to the books but isn’t a direct reimagining of a story already written, he said. “It’s general enough for someone who hasn’t read the books to follow along, but specific enough that it could apply” to the ongoing storylines for those who read the series, Omar said.

People who have a hand in the series are aware of the film and at least one is very supportive of their efforts, Krainik said.

They’ve had a fundraising effort through the crowd-sourcing website Indiegogo.com, trying to recoup some of the expenses already paid out for production of the movie, and shortly after the site went live, they received an email from Mikel Janin, one of the artists involved in drawing the series.

He was so impressed and happy with what Krainik and Omar were doing, based on the information and photos of the costumes they’d helped design as shown on their Indiegogo website, that he reached out and offered to help in any way, Krainik said. Testing his own luck, Krainik asked Janin if he’d consider donating something as a reward for donors, and within a little while, Janin agreed to contribute two original sketches of the donor’s choice to the effort.

“It’s so incredible. It’s the best thing that’s happened so far,” said Krainik. “Unsolicited, he liked the page and passed it around to some of his friends.”

They’re pretty excited about their cast as well, which includes at least one seasoned actress and one rocker looking to expand his horizons.

Cassatt said she’s done some independent film work before but this is her first foray into the comic book genre, and she’s eager to take on the role.

A performer since the third grade who still considers the stage her home, Cassatt said she’s got a basement full of things that could be used as set dressing in the film, and for her character in particular.

“My grandmother used to read tarot, so I’ve got some of her old cards and crystals and a crystal ball,” she said. “I’m trying to convince my father to let us use this portrait he painted of her reading cards too.”

Of her alter ego, Cassatt described Xanadu as someone who has “been around for a long time. She’s mystical about her, but she’s more transparent than the Phantom Stranger,” who also has some magic in him.

Madame Xanadu is less of a loner than the Phantom Stranger, who seems to express little emotion, but “she’s kind of the general in this story. She’s the one who gathers the troops, because she knows she needs help to save her friend.”

ative effort, and she’s gotten together with Krainik and Omar several times to discuss the character, the script, the sets and scenery, all of which has been enjoyable. There’s just one area where she needs a little more input, however.

“I don’t know if my costume will have sleeves,” she laughed. “My husband’s making jewelry for me. We have a basic dress, but we’re trying to figure out, sleeves or no sleeves, and if there are sleeves, what color.”

Unlike other super heroines, Xanadu doesn’t have one defining outfit, Cassatt said. “I still want her to be recognizable,” but that’s a little difficult without something like Wonder Woman’s golden wrist cuffs or lasso of truth.

She also embraces the fandom that comes with comic books, making an unusual but fitting comparison.

“Everyone’s got their geekdom,” she said. “Look at fantasy football. Tell me that’s not like a role playing game.”

Brian “Smitty” Smith is getting out from behind his usual role as a drummer in a rock band to try his hand at acting, picking up the part of John Constantine in the movie.

Krainik said he’d been looking for just the right person to play the paranormal PI, someone who can be gritty and grimy with the swagger of a rocker. Throughout the audition process, no one came close to fitting the part the way he’d envisioned it, so he tried a different route, calling up Smith and offering him the chance to read for the part.

“My younger brother is a huge fan of comics, especially ‘Hellblazer,’” so comics weren’t an unknown thing to him, Smith said. Once he got the part, his brother also provided plenty of research material from his own collection, he added.

He’s trying to make his Constantine kind of a “Clint Eastwood, ‘Man with No Name’ kind of guy,” Smith said. “Is he good? Is he bad? He seems like a bad dude but he does some good stuff too. He’s a loner with a mixed-up moral compass.”

Smith said he’s impressed with the script and the way Omar and Krainik are approaching the movie.

“It’s a fan film,” he said. “They’re not trying to sell DVDs. Everything they’re doing is out of their passion for the characters.”

Krainik and Omar said there are plenty of fan-driven movies and stories out there for more well-known superheroes, like Batman, Superman, Spiderman and the like. These characters in “Justice League Dark: The Gathering” might not be as ubiquitous, but they’re just as interesting and maybe even more complex.

“I absolutely love these characters,” Krainik said. “I want to make sure I put something out there that I’d appreciate. I don’t want to do anything I’d hate as a fan.”

W-L Volleyball Earns 'Statement' Win Over Madison

Generals come from behind to win five-set thriller.

Facing the mighty Madison volleyball team, winner of 21 of its first 22 matches, the Washington-Lee Generals on Monday night had the look of both a contender and a pretender.

W-L won the first set, only to lose the next two in lopsided fashion. After staying alive with a tightly-contested 27-25 fourth-set victory, the Generals fell behind in the deciding fifth set.

A W-L attack error gave Madison an 11-7 lead, forcing the Generals to decide if Monday's match would end as a valiant effort in defeat, or a statement victory against one of the top teams in the region.

"We just kept thinking of how big this game would be if we won," W-L junior Samantha Harris said, "and that helped motivate us."

W-L responded with four straight points and eventually captured the fifth set, 17-15, giving the Generals a come-from-behind 3-2 (25-22, 10-25, 14-25, 27-25, 17-15) victory at Washington-Lee High School. Harris, sophomore setter Meghan Fox and senior middle hitter Audrey Batcheller had key kills down the stretch as the Generals handed Madison its second loss of the season.

"This is incredible," Batcheller said. "I feel like this is a big statement win. No one was expecting us to win this game and ... it feels so good to get [the victory]."

Madison started the season 21-0 before losing to Langley in five sets on Oct. 16. As of Tuesday morning, the Warhawks were ranked No. 2 in the Washington Post's top 10. W-L entered the match with a 15-5 record and riding an eight-match winning streak. After W-L won the opening set, Madison gained control with convincing victories in sets two and three. The fourth set was tied at 25 before back-to-back kills by W-Ls Batcheller and senior outside hitter Sydney Bell forced a fifth set.

The Generals led 4-2 in the fifth but the Warhawks responded with seven straight points to seize momentum. Madison couldn't put W-L away, though, and the Generals pulled out the win.

"I don't think our program's ever really gotten a lot of credit for how good we've become," W-L head coach John Delaney said. "I think this is probably the one that everybody's going to recognize it and go, OK, now [the Generals are] a team that we have to watch out for."

"I don't think our program's ever really gotten a lot of credit for how good we've become. I think this is probably the one that everybody's going to recognize it and go, OK, now [the Generals are] a team that we have to watch out for."

— W-L volleyball coach John Delaney

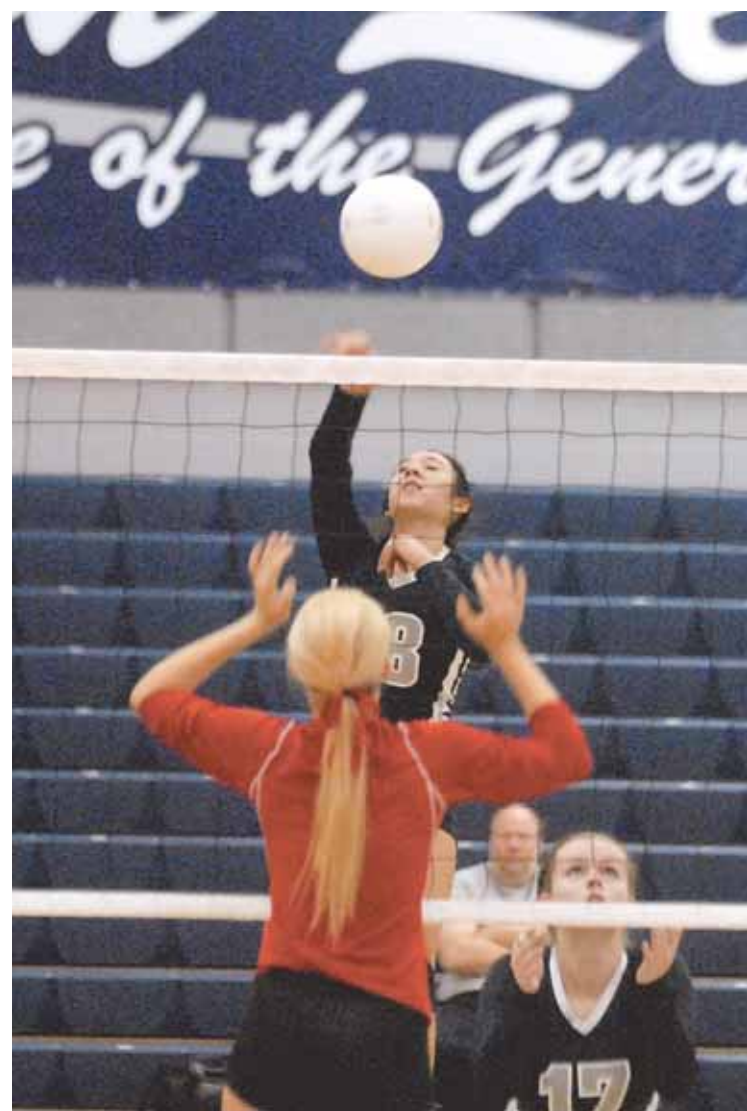

Bell led W-L with 13 kills. Batcheller finished with 12 kills and Harris tallied 10. Sophomore Emma Mobley had seven kills and sophomore Gabby Young had six. "It was definitely a little bit nerve-racking," Bell said, "but we came in as the underdogs, so it's really nice to pull out the win."

Senior right-side hitter Amy O'Connor led Madison with 16 kills. Junior outside hitter Marissa Roy had 12.

W-L will travel to face Langley at 7:15 p.m. on Wednesday, Oct. 23 in a battle of the top teams in Conference 6.

"Right now, I think our girls finally believe we're one of the best teams in the northern region," Delaney said. "... Now they have to realize they have to work harder because now everyone knows you. You made a name for yourself."

At least one General is pretty confident.

"We play another huge team on Wednesday — Langley," said Batcheller, a senior captain. "I think they're ranked first in our conference right now — but not for long. We're going to get the next one."
