Free Carseat Inspections

Certified technicians from the Sully District Police Station will perform free, child safety carseat inspections Thursday, May 11, from 5-8:30 p.m., at the station, 4900 Stonecroft Blvd. in Chantilly. No appointment is necessary. But residents should install the child safety seats themselves so technicians may properly inspect and adjust them, as needed.

Because of time constraints, only the first 35 vehicles arriving on each date will be inspected.

That way, inspectors may have enough time to properly instruct the caregiver on the correct use of the child seat. Call 703-814-7000, ext. 5140, to confirm dates and times.

Helping Immigrants Advice about DACA, green cards, work permits and more.

BY SHIRLEY RUHE

he Just Neighbors office on Columbia Pike in Falls Church is bustling. The phone rings with an immigrant inquiry on how to get a green card or apply for a work permit. Phone volunteers ask an initial set of questions. An initial triage of clients for the interview process determines if this is the kind of case Just Neighbors handles, do they have the capacity or does it need to be referred out. Erin McKenney, executive director of Just Neighbors, says they handled 650-700 clients last year and turned away 1,000 due to lack of capacity.

A Deferred Action for Childhood Arrival (DACA) client (sometimes referred to as dreamers) has come into the office to apply for citizenship for the first time.

"We have just started taking applications again," McKenney said. "We

REFUGEES were only processing twoyear renewals but stopped taking new applications right after the election because we thought there was a good possibility the Administration would vacate Obama's order on dreamers."

She says today they have five or six new DACA cases scheduled and will have five more later in the week, now a routine pattern.

Sarah Milad, one of the three staff immigration attorneys, has just interviewed a DACA renewal client. "It's a great story. He is on his third renewal and about to become married to a U.S. citizen. His mother was here with him today; she was so happy. It will be a normalized status soon."

Maria Maldonado, a volunteer attorney, is photocopying the thick stack of paperwork submitted by a DACA client. McKenney says in the initial screening meetings volunteers collect a wide variety of demographic information on ethnicity, source of income, family composition, plus copies of passports and other official documents and any information such as interactions with police.

Right now "we are taking only squeaky clean clients because anything, even a minor offense, adds an element of risk," McKenney said.

In the initial meeting Just Neighbors collects $100 as a legal fee to cover all future court costs. "For a domestic abuse victim it could be 13 court filings. These can be long, complicated cases. And if they don't have the money, we waive the fees.'

The next step is attorney review of all of the materials to determine if there is any legal pathway to citizenship for the immigrant. "We won't file unless we're pretty sure they they will get through because it just puts them at more risk since that information would be out there on their illegal status." she said. "We tell them don't give your money to anyone else who tells you that you do have a pathway because there are a lot of unscrupulous people out there who will just take your money. On the other hand Volunteer hours at Just Neighbors in 2016 were valued at $400,000, almost equaling the entire Just Neighbors budget. Just Neighbors provides services to immigrants with a legal pathway to citizenship. They have served over 10,000 clients from 130 countries over the last 20 years.

Erin McKenney, executive director of Just Neighbors, says in recent months the phones have been ringing off the hook with people volunteering time and money and wanting to sponsor families.

we just did a grant to do screening because it was estimated that 10 percent of undocumented probably had a pathway to citizenship but didn't have the knowledge or money to apply."

After any required medical check-ups, police reports or other documents have been submitted, the case is sent in to USCIS. "In a good it case it may take six to eight weeks," McKenney said, "it takes about two years to get provisional approval which allows you to get a work permit. Then it takes another two years or longer to get the U visa. Legal status takes four to six more

A DACA applicant on his second renewal says Just Neighbors made this a streamlined, smooth application process for him: "They told me what I needed to bring, helped fill out all of the forms and sent in all documents." He continued that the entire process would be very complicated and "I'd probably not do something correct. There are a lot of people out there who don't know." He says he has been in America since he was 7 years old. "I grew up here. I consider this my country. If the DACA order is repealed and I had to return to Peru, I don't know what I would do over there. I'm not familiar with the culture. I would be lost Sarah Milad, a staff immigration attorney at Just Neighbors, is working with a client on his third DACA renewal. She says he has a happy story, is about to be for a while."

McKenney said, "We have had a rush of volunteers recently, and the phones are ringing off the hook. I probably get five new volunteers a week." The organization's volunteer coordinator sits at a long table working on scheduling and organizing volunteer activities. Behind her a volunteer sits translating a client's story from Spanish into English to add to his stack of papers.

"We always try to have one Spanish-she started out interviewing clients but now "I'm not a typical volunteer anymore." Trangsrud serves as treasurer on the Just Neighbors Board of Directors. She says she first got interested because she had taught in a school with a large immigrant population "and I had an investment."

On the other side it's a bad time because of fear. "We have happy, sad and angry all kinds of stories." Trangsrud said.

McKenney adds that immigrants don't show up in their usual places because they are afraid, even if they are citizens, because they think ICE will arrest them. She explains there is also a fear of separation. Children are afraid they will come home and their parents will be gone. McKenney explains that the attorneys talk to the families about separation and preparation planning so if they are deported someone has the power of attorney for the children's future.

In addition, Just Neighbors holds education sessions titled "Know Your Rights." There has been much demand for these sessions, and they have trained 50 volunteers who can organize and present this information on what is required if a person is stopped by a law enforcement officer. "We've been giving these sessions all over the local area," she said.

Just Neighbors is a non-profit organization providing legal services to low-income immigrants in Northern Virginia focusing on humanitarian cases. The breakdown of services is 18 percent of the cases for DACA, 25 percent for victims of domestic violence, 6 percent employment authorization, 22 percent advice and counsel and 29 percent for refugees and asylees. Fifty-eight percent of their clients live in Fairfax with 16 percent in Arlington and others in Alexandria, Prince William and Loudoun.

Just Neighbors is funded by contributions from government grants and foundations, faith communities and businesses, individuals and client fees. "We are currently trying to raise $50,000

McKenney says there has been an outpouring of support from people who say, "I've got to do something. There is a gush of people donating money, time, things."

Allen Honored as Officer of Month

By Bonnie Hobbs

FC Keith Allen has been chosen as an Officer of the Month for the Sully District Police Station. He was recognized recently during a meeting of the station's Citizens Advisory Commit-

In his writeup nominating him for the award, his supervisor, Lt. Tim Burgess, said Allen continues to display "the same level of professionalism and dedication [he's had] since first being assigned to the Sully District Station. He has a sincere desire to do the best job he can and provide the best service possible to the citizens we serve."

Burgess said Allen often volunteers for cases that require extra time and effort, and he has "displayed a high level of conscientiousness to ensure quality service. He never complains about his work load and, in fact, seeks out extra assignments — even at the end of his shift - to help reduce the workload of others and be a team player."

As a Crisis Intervention Team-trained officer, Allen handles and assists with cases involving emotionally disturbed people whenever the need arises. Burgess said he's also "diligent" about completing his required paperwork, staying as late as necessary, until he finishes his portion of the cases for which he's often volunteered.

"Allen is a street-smart cop and will always take on extra work to help out his squad mates," wrote Burgess. "He has been credited with closing the gap on numerous cases, in recent months. For example, he resolved two domestic-violence cases where the initial contacts were made with the police department."

Furthermore, continued Burgess, "Allen took ownership of these cases when they might have otherwise fallen through the cracks due to victim reluctance. These victims needed an extra hand and en-reporting, and that is exactly what he provided. He took ownership of these cases and was able to provide fantastic victim assistance and closure.'

Burgess also noted that, recently, Allen resolved an incident involving a local school that had a lost child and was able to reunite that child with adult supervision.

"He has also remained highly proactive, creating citizen contacts and thereby successfully removing illegal drugs from the community," added Burgess. "Allen, like every other officer, is assigned a patrol area daily. But he handles anything that comes his way, regardless of where the case originates."

"His supervisors have peace of mind knowing that he will properly investigate and document all aspects of his daily encounters," continued Burgess. "He is extremely reliable and trustworthy and he possesses an impeccable work ethic combined with a great personality — with which he can instantly lower anyone's stress by providing a joke or soliciting a

"It is a pleasure to have PFC Allen serving in the Sully District. He is a valued individual who reflects the quality and integrity we rely on in order to maintain strong relationships within the community. He is respected by his peers, highly dedicated and is wellcouragement in order to follow through with proper deserving of recognition, as Officer of the Month."

Edwards Honored as Officer of Month

BY BONNIE HOBBS

FC Brandon A. Edwards has been selected as an Officer of the Month for the Sully District Police Station. He was honored at a recent meeting of the station's Citizens Advisory Commit-

He transferred to this station from the Mount Vernon District Station in July 2016 and became a part of the Evenings A squad. His supervisor, Sgt. Brad Metz, nominated him for Officer of the Month.

"PFC Edwards certainly doesn't let the grass grow under his feet, as he averages writing a book of summonses a shift," wrote Metz. "And he's able to maintain this level of productivity all while still handling calls for service in his patrol area."

In January alone, Edwards conducted more than 300 traffic stops. "Because of the large volume of traffic summonses he generates, he's part of a very small group of officers on the department who are assigned three traffic dates a month," wrote Metz. "This is a staggering number if you consider he only works 14 days a month. If you see a cruiser along Route 28, there's a high probability that it's him."

Describing Edwards as an extremely hard worker, contagious to the other officers. He routinely is the first officer to go in service after roll call and one of the last units to come to the station at the end of the shift. Out of the thousands of citizen contacts he encounters yearly, he does not generate any formal complaints, which is truly unique."

Metz also noted a routine traffic stop made by Edwards in January that proved to be anything but routine. "The vehicle's license plates turned out to be stolen from Warrenton," wrote Metz. "While doing his investigation, Edwards contacted the detective from Warrenton and learned the subject was involved in a larceny ring that was being investigated where the suspects were unknown. Because of the Metz said, "His professionalism both shows and is traffic stop, Edwards was able to provide the detective with pertinent information regarding the persons in the vehicle."

All in all, added Metz, "PFC Edwards is a dedicated employee and is very deserving of the recognition as Officer of the Month."

Preserving 'America's Best Idea'

BY BILL HAFKER
FAIRFAX COUNTY RESIDENT

s a National Parks enthusiast, I felt very privileged to be in Acadia National Park on Aug. 25, 2016 when the National Park Service (NPS) celebrated its centennial. I got my favorite National Park souvenir there; a picture of the iconic "Bubbles at Jordan Pond," signed by the entire Maine Congressional delegation. They were there to celebrate that event, and it was inspiring to hear their unanimous, bipartisan, and emotional support for Acadia and the entire National Park system. It made me hope that my Virginia Congressional delegation was as unambiguously supportive of the many National Park sites we are blessed to have just COMMENTARY minutes, or a few hours, from our doorsteps in Fairfax County.

NPS spent the past 100 years protecting many of America's most scenic landscapes, its diverse but often threatened wildlife, and key elements of our cultural history. As we celebrate 100 years of "America's Best Idea," and look forward to further additions to the system, we must not lose track of the critical work of properly caring for and maintaining the gems already in the system. Americans and visitors to the U.S. are visiting the parks in record numbers. However, in the face of this great show of support, the NPS is facing a serious challenge: a $12 billion backlog of necessary infrastructure repairs. These range from unmaintained trails, to crumbling roads, to visitor centers built over 50 years ago in desperate need of updating.

Some things can be replaced later at increased expense if left beyond repair, but many others, like historical buildings cannot. I've stood in line to use a Porta Potty next to a shuttered bathroom, whose continued use would leak raw sewage into the environment from old or damaged pipes. This decaying infrastructure jeopardizes both the future of these treasured pieces of America's heritage, and the local economies that they significantly support.

IN VIRGINIA, National Parks are not just places that protect important pieces of our environment and heritage, they are also major economic engines. According to NPS estimates, visitors to Virginia Parks in 2015 had direct spending of $982.9 million in local gateway regions. This supported over 15,000 jobs, and added an estimated $1.3 billion in secondary economic output to the Virginia economy.

Virginia Parks face a staggering $816 million in needed repairs. Rangers and other park staff do the best they can, but if left unfunded, these issues will negatively, and in some cases permanently, affect the condition of these treasured resources and the visitor experience, ultimately leading to fewer visitors to the park.

If the backlog continues, the future of these incredible assets, and the economic vitality of the businesses and gateway communities they support, remains threatened.

Thankfully, bipartisan legislation recently introduced by Senators Mark Warner (D-VA) and Rob Portman (R-OHIO) would provide the NPS more resources to begin to make a dent in the backlog. The National Park Service Legacy Act (NPSLA) would phase in the allocation of up to $500 million annually until 2047 from existing government revenues from oil and natural gas royalties.

This bill, if enacted, would help put our National Parks on the right track. By investing in our parks, we will not only start to tackle this backlog, but make our parks more resilient, and prepared to continue welcoming visitors eager to explore our nation's most meaningful and special places.

Congress created the Park Service a century ago to protect America's treasured natural, historical, and cultural sites, and ensure that Americans can enjoy them. There is no better way for Congress to help our parks as they begin their second century, than to support the maintenance funding needed to keep them the world class assets that they are. We need to address the backlog, and keep a new backlog from developing.

Whether you love the parks for what they contain and tell of our country and its values, or are concerned more with providing jobs and economic vitality to our state and country, the NPSLA, and the allocation of adequate funds in the normal budget process, is, if not "America's Best Budget/Funding Idea," at least an awfully good idea that we should all support.

OPINION

April Showers, and Immigrant Labor, Bring May Flowers

A group of researchers from George Mason University have carried out research at the Centreville Labor Resource Center. This article is based on their findings.

> By Louise M. Puck, Lucy Y. Twimasi, and Shannon N. Davis

pring is the season of flowers, some that grow naturally, some that are the result of our love and attention in our own yards, and some that are tended by contractors. Contractors, as well as homeowners, sometimes need an extra pair of hands to tend to those beautiful flowers, and often those extra hands belong to an immigrant.

Immigrant labor is a key contribution to the U.S. economy in all sectors. Research from the Institute for Immigration Research (IIR) at George Mason University has documented that in 2012, foreign-born households contributed approximately $106 billion to state and federal income tax. Subsequent research has noted that immigrants added $1.6 trillion to the gross domestic product in 2013. Immigrants make up 13 percent of the U.S. population but are, for example, 28 percent of physicians and surgeons, 40 percent of medical scientists in manufacturing research and development, 22 percent of nursing, psychiatric and home health aides, and 15 percent of registered nurses

While immigrants may be present across all economic sectors, we tend to notice them when in public spaces. There is no more public space in the spring than in flower beds and gardens. Many immigrants working in these public spaces are day laborers, individuals who are temporary workers for a specific job and contractor. A team of researchers from the IIR interviewed Guatemalan and Salvadoran day laborers at the Centreville Labor Resource Center (CLRC). The center is one out of many nationwide organizations supporting a fair market for day laborers. The initial planning of CLRC started in 2007 and was led by an outreach committee of the United Church of Christ, who also initiated a series of open community dialogues discussing the effects of immigration.

Today the center acts as an employment facilitator by providing a platform for employers and day laborers to connect. Small contractors come to hire temporary workers with skills needed from a safe location, while day laborers receive protection with employer-signed contracts guaranteeing fair working conditions and pay. The day laborers can be seen replacing roofs on humid Virginia days or sweating under the hot sun while mowing lawns or planting flowers. They undertake temporary or seasonal jobs with no real career advancement. These jobs often require great physical resilience, a feature the workers possess from starting work at an early age. Poor economic conditions, violent civil wars, coupled with military dictatorships and repression in Guatemala and El Salvador, destroyed economic opportunities and led to chronic underemployment.

Most day laborers immigrate to the U.S. as unskilled workers. There are two temporary visa types available to unskilled workers: H-2A and H-2B visas. The H-2B visa covers temporary unskilled labor for non-agricultural jobs. According to U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services, the top industries utilizing the H-2B visa are the retail, food service, construction, landscaping, and hospitality industries. Therefore, day laborers would benefit from having immigrated under this visa category. The U.S. government allocates only 66,000 H-2B visas per fiscal year for these high demand industries.

As a result, the H-2B visa category acknowledges a need for unskilled labor, but does not necessarily provide access to workers to fulfill the demand. Unskilled foreign workers who seek to immigrate to the U.S. permanently may apply for the EB-3 Immigrant Visa under the "Other Workers" subcategory. This visa is available to foreign nationals to immigrate and become employed through a country of origin quota system. The Immigrant Visa application must also show that there are no U.S. workers available to fill the specific position the applicant is seeking. The EB-3 "Other Workers" subcategory is known to experience significant backlog as compared to other employment-based immigrant visa categories, communicating a solid demand for unskilled workers in the U.S.

Rather than taking jobs away from local job seekers, day laborers fill specific labor market needs within a given community. Back at the CLRC, day laborers are land-scapers, painters, and cleaners, but also find additional opportunities in the restaurant, construction, and retail industries. These immigrants are visible, working long hours, contributing to the economic and social fabric of everyday life.

As you stop to smell the roses, view the cherry blossoms, or behold the irises and tiger lilies, you would be right to presume that immigrant labor made your spring olfactory experience more pleasant.

First day of the house regular season is now in the books with a win.

n what would have been an otherwise dismal day because of the rain, Southwest Youth Association Babe Ruth held its Opening Day on Saturday, April 22 at the LIV baseball diamond. Volunteers and players attended Opening Day ceremonies to the fanfare of the National Anthem, salutes to the American flag, and Krispy Kreme donut fundraising as part of the festivities.

As a stage setter for All Star play later this year, the House League teams began season play with the Red Sox outscoring the Northern Fairfax Babe Ruth Nationals opponent. This year' SYA Babe Ruth Opening Day begins another quest for teams eventually competing in All Star play. Prior years have seen three different SYA Babe Ruth age group teams winning post-season tournaments to qualify and win Virginia State Championships by one of the many All Star teams the league forms. Prior State Championships include: 13-15 year olds in 2016, 14 year olds in 2017, and 16-18 in 2017. In 2015, the 16-18 team also advanced to the Babe Ruth World Series in Oregon, placing third overall.

The day began early for Jenny Hughes who oversaw sales of Krispy Kreme donuts, distributing them to players and customers as part of fundraising activities. After presentation of the American Flag by the Chantilly Academy Air Force Junior ROTC Color Guard, Unit VA-20012, Yasmine Akl of Westfields High School sang the National Anthem. The Pledge of Allegiance followed, presented by the Boy Scouts' Jaidey Mehta. SYA President Brian Seeley made opening remarks, thanking the players, parents, umpires, volunteers and sponsors. Fifteen-year old Hunter Donati cited the Babe Ruth pledge, and SYA Vice President John Pyzdrowski read the League Mission State-

WELLBEING

Strategies for Maintaining Weight Loss

Study shows lifestyle changes are critical to keep off unwanted pounds.

BY MARILYN CAMPBELL

2016 study by the National Institutes of Health (NIH) shows that while most people who lose a significant amount of weight (10-percent or more of their original weight) tend to regain it, those who were successful in maintaining a weight loss were vigilant in maintaining lifestyle changes that led to the weight loss.

"One reason maintenance is so difficult is that your body isn't seeing that weight loss as a good thing," said Domenica M. Rubino, M.D., director, Washington Center for Weight Management. "It's not just will power, it's biology. It's your hormones telling your brain that your body is really not full. There are medications that target the parts of the brain that are involved in cravings and feelings of hunger."

The reasons that maintaining a significant weight loss can be challenging range from inactive lifestyles, unhealthy diets and the side effects of medication to mental health issues and metabolic disorders, says Colleen Sanders, assistant professor of Nursing at Marymount University.

"The best recommendation for maintaining weight loss is making lifestyle changes and sticking with them," said Sanders. "Surgery and weight loss medications will achieve weight loss, but if lifestyle choices are not made then weight is typically regained. Diet and exercise will foster weight loss, but once a healthy weight is achieved there has to be healthy eating and routine exercise to maintain that weight.'

Avoid fad diets and instead make lifestyle changes that can be maintained long-term, advises Nick Sborz, instructor of physical education at Northern Virginia Community

"Consistency is [necessary] and a better approach is going to include multiple strategies," he said. "One of those is to increase your physical activity. [Type], amount and intensity will vary from person to person, but for some it will include walking, riding a biking, walking hills or swimming. For others ... some form of strength training. Recommendations vary, but should be close to 150-minutes of moderate intensity activity or 75-minutes of high intensity activity each week."

A lifestyle overhaul is necessary to maintaining a desired weight.

The dietary changes needed for weight loss and maintenance can be daunting, continued Sborz. "This is probably the most difficult thing to change, he said. "... [F]or long-term success, try not to be perfect. I like the 90/10 rule. If 90 percent of the time I do my best to make a better, healthier choices then 10 percent of the time I can eat what I enjoy."

Keeping track of food intake, counting calories and fat grams and avoiding skipping meals are strategies those in the NIH study credited with weight loss maintenance. "... [W]e need to eat and drink less sugar," said Sborz. "Sugar is a big reason why people don't see the results they are looking for. Eat more real food and less [processed] food. Generally speaking, to be considered real, food is must contain five ingredients or less. Focus on good quality carbohydrates [like] whole grains, fruit, beans and vegetables, which can provide additional nutrients to help you maintain a healthy weight.

Exercise is one of the most important aspects of maintaining your weight, adds Rubino. "People have to understand that obesity is a chronic disease," she said. "You can't just take medicine and not exercise and eat whatever you want. The medicines help, but you're not going to be able to go back to living your life the way you did before you lost weight. The medicine works in conjunction with diet and exercise. There are no quick fixes, there's no magic."

Learn about Disaster Response

Free training in basic disaster response skills is being offered by the Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) through the county fire and rescue department. The training prepares residents to help themselves, their families and neighbors in the event of a disaster in their community. Through CERT, residents can learn about disaster preparedness and receive training in basic disaster response skills such as fire safety, light search and rescue, and disaster medical operations.

The next available CERT Class is scheduled to begin on Monday, May 22 at the Fairfax County Fire and Rescue Academy. There are two sessions each week on Mondays and Wednesdays that run until June 21. The class is 28 hours in length, plus a final practical exercise.

CERT training is free of charge and basic gear is provided. The minimum requirements to participate in CERT training at any level is that residents be 16 years of age or older, and either be a Fairfax County resident, or work in the county. To learn more about CERT, see www.fairfaxcounty.gov/fr/cert/cert.htm.

To sign up, go to https://volunteer.fairfaxcounty.gov/recruiter/ index.php?recruiterID=1380&class=OppDetails&oppGuid=7D82617D-1474-4D20-AD47-FA0306D2FD42.

Bunco Night with WFCWC

Bunco Night will help raise money for GFWC Western Fairfax County Woman's Club's (WFCWC) Chantilly High School scholarship fund. WFCWC has awarded $52,000 in scholarships to CHS senior girls since 1995. Enjoy an evening of merriment, prizes, refreshments, and a raffle for a $175 gift card to The Red Door spa and help to raise funds for our 2017 scholarship winners. Tickets are $20 per person. Bunco Night will be Tuesday, May 23 at 7:30 p.m. at the Cale Community Center, 4615 Stringfellow Road, Chantilly. Space is limited. Tickets must be purchased in advance. Call Barbara at 703-631-7830.

In affiliation with the General Federation of Women's Clubs and GFWC Virginia, WFCWC is dedicated to promoting the civic, cultural, domestic and educational betterment of the community through volunteer service. See www.wfcwc.org.

Hear Ye, Hear Ye

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

I can hear ye and I can see ye. And I don't need life insurance to pay for the cost of my funeral, and neither do I need supplemental insurance to co-pay my Medicare coverage. These are both solicitations/direct mail pieces I've received in my mailbox in the last week. I can't help but wonder why? Have I gotten older before my very eyes without regard to my actual age? Have I somehow become a qualified applicant without realizing the consequences of my living so many years beyond my original "13 month to two-year" prognosis? (I always place quotation marks around my prognosis as an indication of its having been said by my oncologist, and as a bit of a dig since here I sit and write eight years and two months post diagnosis.) Or do the people sending the direct mail pieces know something about me, my household and my neighborhood that I don't?

Not that I really want to think too deeply about why I've been bombarded with these presumptive age-sensitive solicitations but, the piling-on effect of the past two weeks has stoked my embers. It's not as if being targetmarketed burns me up or increases the temperature under my collar, but it does cause me to think and consider; always dangerous. As Moe Howard of The Three Stooges said to brother Curly in a typical two-reeler story line: "Every time you think you weaken the nation.

I wouldn't say the onslaught has been at all equivalent to the volume mailboxes see in the weeks leading up to an election, however. The materials I've received lately have felt more personal than the usual and customary ones that arrive before an election promoting a candidate, a cause or an amendment. Those political pieces merely wanted my vote. The pieces I've received of late wanted my life. Not literally of course. But they want me, not exactly a pound of flesh, but more than a piece of paper (computer entry, actually).

I haven't had the opportunity as yet to speak with any of my neighbors to find out if the entire neighborhood was similarly solicited or was it just yours truly, the cancer patient whose survival has raised a marketing flag? I mean, with all the hacking/unauthorized access to phone numbers, addresses, bank accounts, Social Security numbers and private medical information, I don't suppose it's beyond a hacker's reach to secure lists of "terminal" (I also put quotation marks around 'terminal' because again, it's how my oncologist described me in late February 2009, and as yet another dig because I've lived so long beyond 'terminal') patients who quite frankly might be more open to/in need of and sensitive about certain conditions/situations/circumstances not necessarily characteristic of the general population.

Or maybe these direct mail pieces had nothing to do with me (I'm not a narcissist, really; just sort of writing for semi bemusement), but are simply modern-day equivalents of the old town cryer - without the bell? But with a similar goal: to reach as many people as possible, hopefully under favorable circumstances, not in the square, but rather in the privacy of their own homes.

Naturally, I tossed all of it. I didn't take offense though, nor am I the least bit defensive about it having landed IN MY MAILBOX. It's simply sound marketing. Find a neighborhood/zip code with the demographics that match your product and voila, a connection is made, supposedly. No connection here however, merely fodder once again for a column. (Besides I have life insurance and I'm too young for a "med supp.").
