Blake Lane Park Should Not Be Used as a School Site

BY PHIL NIEDZIELSKI-EICHNER

Fairfax County is at an historic inflection point. Residents are demanding more open space for recreation and leisure enjoyment than ever before. At the same time, Fairfax County Public Schools (FCPS) is moving to build a new school on land that has been a public park for decades.

Blake Lane Park is the largest open space available for public use in the Oakton area and is home to the only off-leash dog park in Providence District.

If I am elected to become the Providence Supervisor, I will oppose conveying the property to FCPS for this purpose.

Forty years ago, when development was booming and land was plentiful, the prospect of maintaining in inventory a 10-acre parcel as a school site was appropriately viewed as good planning.

Fast forward to today and the Blake Lane "school site" is surrounded by high-density development, consisting of townhomes, condominiums, and single-family houses that are home to hundreds of families. This area has evolved into one of great ethnic and economic diversity. The area is also an enclave of affordable housing, another increasingly scarce community resource.

What was once for FCPS an easy business decision to build an elementary school on a site dedicated for school use is now a much more complicated one in which community values are in conflict.

Blake Lane Park represents a convergence of Fairfax commitments to (a) quality public education; (b) environmental quality — including protecting the wildlife and natural vegetation; and (c) equity, as espoused through the Board of Supervisors and School Board's joint commitments in their One Fairfax Policy.

In weighing these competing values, the scale tips in favor of maintaining scarce open space over building an elementary school.

❖ Once this "green field" is developed it will be lost forever.

❖ FCPS maintains an imbalance in the use of its school facilities. Simply put, FCPS has overcrowded schools and underutilized schools, often within geographic proximity. The School Board should institute a program to adjust boundaries so that all schools are in relative balance.

PHOTO CONTRIBUTED

Phil Niedzielski-Eichner

❖ Land scarcity and the community's expectation for keeping an inventory of open space and parks should drive a more vertical school design on a smaller footprint.

❖ Additionally, FCPS should consider repurposing empty or obsolete commercial or office buildings and/or reuse already developed "brown fields" to meet its facility needs.

Finally, I was surprised to learn that the decision to transform Blake Lane into a school site — a matter of great consequence to the area residents — was made before the community was informed of the project. The community mistrust and anger resulting from the lack of communication on this matter could and should have been avoided.

FCPS must pursue alternatives to building the new school at Blake Lane Park. The permanent loss of this park land and open space is not justified. Use of park land to meet another public need should only ever be considered as a very last resort and only then after early engagement — and in partnership — with the community.

Phil Niedzielski-Eichner Providence Planning Commissioner and Candidate for District Supervisor.

Free Cinco de Mayo Lyft Rides Offered to Prevent Drunk Driving

Free Cinco de Mayo Lyft rides will be offered to deter impaired driving throughout the Washington-metropolitan area beginning Sunday, May 5, 2019.

Offered by the nonprofit Washington Regional Alcohol Program (WRAP), the 2019 Cinco de Mayo SoberRide program will be in operation for 12 hours beginning at 4 pm on Sunday, May 5th (Cinco de Mayo) and continue until 4 am on Monday, May 6 as a way to keep local roads safe from impaired drivers during this traditionally high-risk holiday.

During this twelve-hour period, area residents age 21 and older celebrating with alcohol may download Lyft to their phones, then enter a SoberRide code in the app's "Promo" section to receive their no cost (up to $15) safe transportation home. WRAP's Cinco de Mayo SoberRide@promo code will be posted at 3 pm on Sunday, May 5 on www.SoberRide.com.

Last year, a record 897 persons in the Washington-metropolitan area used WRAP's Cinco de Mayo SoberRide program rather than possibly driving home impaired. The charity also offers its SoberRide program on St. Patrick's Day, Independence Day, Halloween and the winter holidays.

More information about WRAP's SoberRide@ initiative can be found at www.SoberRide.com.

As Luck Has Had It

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

Aside from the fatigue I experienced a few columns ago, this immunotherapy infusion is, and has been, quite manageable.

My biggest take away so far is that I've had no real quality of life issues, as had been the case with my previous chemotherapy/alimta infusions. With that drug, I had post-infusion eating challenges and for nearly a week after the fact, felt less than mediocre.

Moreover, I wouldn't say I felt like I had cancer, but I certainly was reminded of it — if that makes any sense.

And even though I do have some minor side effects from my current immunotherapy infusion, I am reminded nevertheless, that I have cancer. Not because of how I feel, as was the case previously, but because of how I look — and because of what I feel.

I am referring to my "Adam's apple" tumor. Not only can/do I 'look' it all the time but quite often, depending on how I move my head: forward/downward, I can feel it too.

I have to tell you, feeling it as I do, and looking at it as often as I do: every day, is unsettling.

My whole approach to this living-with-cancer life has been to compartmentalize it a la Jerry Seinfeld and "the vault." Out of sight has helped keep some things out of mind. And when things are out of mind, it's much easier to make believe.

And making believe has been one of my methods of "operandi" since Feb. 20, 2009. That's the date (you bet I remember) when my internal medicine doctor called me at work with the results of my previous week's biopsy: "malignant," he said.

Up until that call, the previous six weeks' diagnostic pursuit had been interesting in a curious kind of way wondering what all the goings on were about and when all these inconveniences would end. And not for a minute during this entire process did I ever think I'd be diagnosed with a "terminal" disease: non-small cell lung cancer, stage IV. I figured, to the extent I figured at all, that the process would result in much having been done about nothing.

Boy was I wrong!

I still remember — and laugh when I recall the phone conversation I had with my thoracic surgeon after he had received the results of my PET scan: "You lit that thing up like a Christmas tree," he said.

Presuming that wasn't good news, I replied: "I hear there are false positives all the time which is why these scans aren't used a lot." (A perfect example of a little knowledge in the wrong mouth.)

I can't recall if the doctor snickered before he said the following: "Well, then your scan was a world record false positive." I don't know if I grasped the obvious at that point but soon a surgical biopsy was ordered and the rest is Kenny-with-cancer history, a history with which many of you regular readers are all too familiar.

And that's a familiarity which I hope has not bred contempt. Because even though it's my life — and I'm stuck with it (as the old saying says), it need not be yours. I can well imagine and appreciate how living with and/or seeking out negativity is not likely to improve any one's lot in life. (I try to avoid it every day.)

To that end, I have always tried to tread lightly and write with a soft touch since I've been cancer-centric beginning June 10, 2009, when I published my first column on the subject: "Dying To Tell You, Sort Of." And in so doing, I've tried to see the light amid the darkness and be thankful for any in between.

I can't say it's been fun, but it's funny how things have turned out: alive and reasonably well, 10-plus years later.

Bards Alley Celebrates Independent Bookstore Day

Saturday, April 27, marked the fifth annual nationwide Independent Bookstore Day. According to the Indie Bookstore Day website, Independent Bookstore Day is a one-day national party that takes place at indie bookstores across the country on the last Saturday in April.

Vienna bookstore, Bards Alley, took part in this national celebration by hosting activities throughout the day such as talks with authors, children's performances, games, and an all day book scavenger hunt. Books wrapped up in brown paper were hidden in local shops where people could go and find them. "There are so many reasons why this bookstore is important for the community," said Jen Morrow, owner of Bards Alley. "It offers different things for different people. In a town like Vienna, it offers a place where we can celebrate what reading and literature does for the community. It is a place where people can gather, whether it's just for pure entertainment, because they're in a book club, or if they want to learn about something so that they're educating themselves."

Independent bookstores, such as Bards Alley, bring communities together, especially a town like Vienna where it is very community based. "I think it's about, not just the words on the page, but what it does for the sense of community as you connect through books," said Morrow. "I added the wine bar and cafe because I wanted to have event space where people could linger rather than just come to find books. A lot of our customers say they come in because they don't even know what book they're looking for but because we've curated the selection for this specific community, and we employ people who really know books, that's our speciality and that's what differentiates us from Amazon." Morrow says people ask her consistently why she opened Bards Alley in the age of the Barnes and Noble Nook or the Amazon Kindle. "I opened the store because Amazon ... doesn't participate in things that directly impact the community," said Morrow. "I employ people that live in Vienna and I pay taxes to the Town of Vienna, so it generates a lot of a 'shop local' attitude. It's all about our great customers who give back to the store as much as we give to them."

Vienna: International Food Scene

Restaurants Review: Plaka Grill and Istanbul Blue.

BY ALEXANDRA GREELEY
THE CONNECTION

The upscale town of Vienna has become an international food scene—restaurants from Thai, Mexican, American, Japanese, British, and Indian to Chinese, Middle Eastern and Italian—provide a global culinary tapestry. Add to the list the following international eats: the Greek Plaka Grill and the Mediterranean Turkish Istanbul Blue, and you can forget updating your passport. You can eat globally but stay local.

If Mediterranean flavors appeal, plan a lunch or dinner at Istanbul Blue, an upscale, sit-down eatery that proclaims the restaurant's national identity with a menu that features many native dishes—lahmacun, falafel, imam bayildi, and yaprak dolma—that your local American hangout likely won't offer. But that should not hinder taking chances on the unknown. And after all, their menu offerings are not only tempting but many are self-explanatory.

DINING

Take, for example, the appetizer, hummus, a gently seasoned purée of chickpeas that is such a popular offering that most supermarkets carry different brands and flavors. What is on offer here is a blend of fresh lemon juice, tahini (sesame seed paste), and garlic, and is served with pita bread slices. Less well-known appetizers can challenge the palate: baba ganoush (roasted eggplant puréed with tahini), falafel (fried balls of seasoned ground chickpeas), and cigari borek (cigar-shaped phyllo dough stuffed with cheese and fried.)

Entrées include salads, kebabs, seafood dishes, and lamb, beef, and chicken offerings. But patrons who stop by for lunch get to select from among six different sandwiches, all of which sound quite familiar. And for a pick that seems totally Turkish, try the adana sandwich, made of beef and ground lamb grilled on a skewer and topped with a scoop of their ezme salad (mix of chopped tomatoes, onions, and parsley).

And do not skip dessert: Six choices are listed, but the best of the best is the restaurant's baklava. A rectangle of phyllo pastry layered with sweetness and baked with pistachios, it is one of the best treats imaginable. Take two, just for the fun of it.

For a very different and much more casual destination, try the Greek Plaka Grill. It's eat-in or take-out, and if you arrive mid-day, chances are the place will be packed with take-outers, but finding seating may still be a challenge. However, its casual fare, especially the sandwich wraps, are worth the wait.

Dips and appetizers start the meal, and a good beginning are the zucchini fritters with feta and mint. Somewhat offbeat and Latino sounding is the tyrokafteria dip, made with feta cheese, jalapeño, and red pepper and served with pita bread.

For entrées, patrons can make up their own salad bowls, big a main course such as beef souvlaki, mixed grill, or lamb kapama (lamb stew). But skipping by one of their special wraps would be a mistake. Especially good for take-out, one of these sandwich wraps, served with a side of salad or fries, fit the bill. Their featured Plaka gyro with pork is obviously popular, but if a combo of lamb and beef appeals, do order their Chicago Gyro.

Their Greek desserts selection is limited to baklava, galaktoboureko (custard), rizogalo (rice with cream), and Greek yogurt. Craving a sweet? Go to the baklava!
