Large 'No Kings Day' Protests Capture Area Attention

Many messages, all support democracy over autocracy

Protests against Trump administration actions, expanding in number and participants, spread across the country, including throughout northern Virginia on Saturday, June 14. Local demonstrators brought their pro-democracy messages with signs and flags to multiple area overpasses and thoroughfares to join millions around the nation on "No Kings Day."

Following a quiet non-vehicular roadway near parkland normally frequented only by bikers and runners, led those who had heard where to look, from social media or word of mouth, to a scene electric with activity. Turning a corner took one from parkland quiet to sounding horns, and shoulder to shoulder protestors standing high above I-495 in Annandale, holding signs, waving American flags, and talking together loudly over traffic noise below. On exhibit, a strong sense of their resistance camaraderie, even as their signs called out many different messages. Drivers on the roadway below answered back in support with horn after horn of encouragement; sounds from sedan sopranos to the heavy blare of big rigs.

The traditionally designated holiday, Flag Day, drew demonstrators from dozens of local grassroots groups here in Virginia, and in hundreds of cities in every State, as counterpoint to the military parade held in Washington DC the same day. Part of Indivisible's strategy, nationally, is reclaiming use of the American flag in their messaging. One of the largest June 14 protest events was held in Philadelphia; birthplace of the US Constitution and the US flag. Leaders of the pro-democracy movement sought to draw attention to their large Philadelphia event and away from the military parade in Washington commemorating the US Army's 250th anniversary, which also fell on the president's 79th birthday. Indivisible, described their effort: "No Kings' is a national day of action and mass mobilization in response to increasing authoritarian excesses and corruption from Trump and his allies."

Fairfax Indivisible's lead and local event organizer, Marianna Burke, called the event here a success. She said, "One indicator is the number of minutes network media spent on this versus the D.C. military parade; much increased from past event coverage." She refers to prior protests "Hands Off" on April 5, and "May Day" on May 1, which she said helped Indivisible's national organization leaders to grow their resistance movement as numbers participating increased each time. Burke says the June 14 effort, "has shown we won't take it. A lot of people not paying attention or not willing to get out before, now are ready to get out.”

When asked about the decision to stage a nation-wide protest on the US Army’s 250th anniversary, Burke noted the participation of many veterans. “We were clear we also celebrate the Army anniversary. We had large signs ‘Go Army’ and tons of flags. Lots of our veterans came out with supportive messaging on their shirts. What we don’t support is autocratic governance, consolidating power and crushing resistance.”

ity events immediately following the administration’s decision to send National Guard and Marines to Los Angeles in support of ICE raids. Information to participants included no engagement and de-escalation strategies. Local Indivisible leaders report counting six middle fingers raised by passing drivers at one demonstration location, but were aware of no other local counter protests, violence or arrests.

Fairfax County police plans for proactive, protective presence at protest events were noted and appreciated according to event leaders. State and county police and officials added plans for enhanced police presence at the homes and neighborhoods of legislators and other elected officials following the shooting of Minnesotans, Representative Melissa Hortman, her husband, and Senator John Hoffman and his wife, in their homes in the early morning hours of June 14.

Elected in 2023, Virginia Del. Laura Jane Cohen (D-15th), is in her first term and running for re-election for her seat in 2026. She shared that she and other legislators received frequent communications from House Speaker Don Scott; head of the Virginia State Police Colonel Matthew Hanley; and Senate Majority Leader Sen. Scott Surovell, on June 14th morning following the attacks on Minnesota legislators. She shared that County police advised not to answer the door to police unless two officers were present, along with other safety pointers, prompted by investigation into the Minnesota event. A communication from Virginia Gov. Glen Youngkin advised legislators to “stay home from protests.”

Cohen and other legislators did attend local protest events without incident. Cohen said, “The irony or juxtaposition, that we have, on Flag Day, a President that makes protestors the enemy, and there are consequences to that when you make us the enemy, with the Fascist regime he seems to want to create; — a sad day.”

Fairfax Indivisible is a political action group created in 2017, affiliated with the national Indivisible organization which engages in legislative advocacy, calls for political action, volunteers in support of progressive candidates regardless of party affiliation and assists with election information and monitoring.

The Flag Day holiday commemorates the 1777 adoption of the United States flag. The US Army celebrates the 250th anniversary of its creation on June 14, 1775.

Full Snyder Trail Will Go Forward – Really

Fairfax City Council OKs project for second time.

To create a scenic trail in the woods, lots of trees must be cut down. Otherwise, people wanting to walk, run, bike or push strollers there wouldn't have a path to follow.

Understanding that fact, Fairfax City placed the nearly 2-mile-long George Snyder Trail on its Comprehensive Plan in 2012. Running along the southern side of Accotink Creek, it goes east-west between Chain Bridge Road and Fairfax Boulevard. (See sidebar).

After years of public hearings and work sessions, City Council approved this project in January 2024, and City staff and consultants worked toward making it a reality. Normally, they'd have done so without a hitch. But five new Councilmembers took office in January 2025. And after hearing from some residents angry about the plan, those siding with them threw up a roadblock.

By April, these Councilmembers proposed defying the wishes of past Councils and either just building half the trail or canceling it altogether. The project was still in jeopardy last Tuesday, June 10. But after hearing arguments from residents in support of it, Council finally approved constructing the entire trail.

For the past several months, a vocal group of residents spoke against it at every Council meeting and even had a petition with 3,000 signatures. And, again last week, they reiterated their opposition. They said the trail's paved path would cause more than 500 trees to be felled and would disrupt the birds and wildlife there.

However, they didn't speak for all 25,000 City residents – many of whom were unaware that the previously approved trail project was in danger or that they'd have to go to City Hall to fight for its retention. After all, in Fairfax, it's unprecedented for succeeding Councils to undo the work of their predecessors. And knowing that the entire project was funded by outside sources, it seemed unthinkable that the City would just return the money.

In fact, Fairfax has already been awarded $20.6 million for this $20 million trail – with more than $13.6 million of it from VDOT. That's because it'll also connect to VDOT's shared-use path along Route 123 as part of the I-66 Outside the Beltway improvements, enabling Snyder Trail users to also reach Washington, D.C. and Haymarket along the I-66 corridor.

But if the project was canceled, the money couldn't be shifted to a different City project. And Fairfax would also have to repay from its General Fund the $3.7 million it's already spent on design, environmental review and right-of-way acquisition.

So on June 10, besides the usual opponents addressing Council, those in favor of the trail also spoke up. For example, Art Hammerschlag, there on behalf of Fairfax City Citizens for Smarter Growth, said, "Building all of it honors the commitment Fairfax City has made to our local-government partners to complete this critical portion of the regional trail network. Building only half of it, with an estimated $1.7 million payback, is unacceptable."

Stressing that the full-build plan has been "developed by a wide array of City experts, groups and professionals," Mary McDaniel said it's had "extensive public hearings and input over the space of over 12 years. The halfway plan was thrown together quickly in the past month by a few people with limited time to review its consequences and no public opportunity for input until that night."

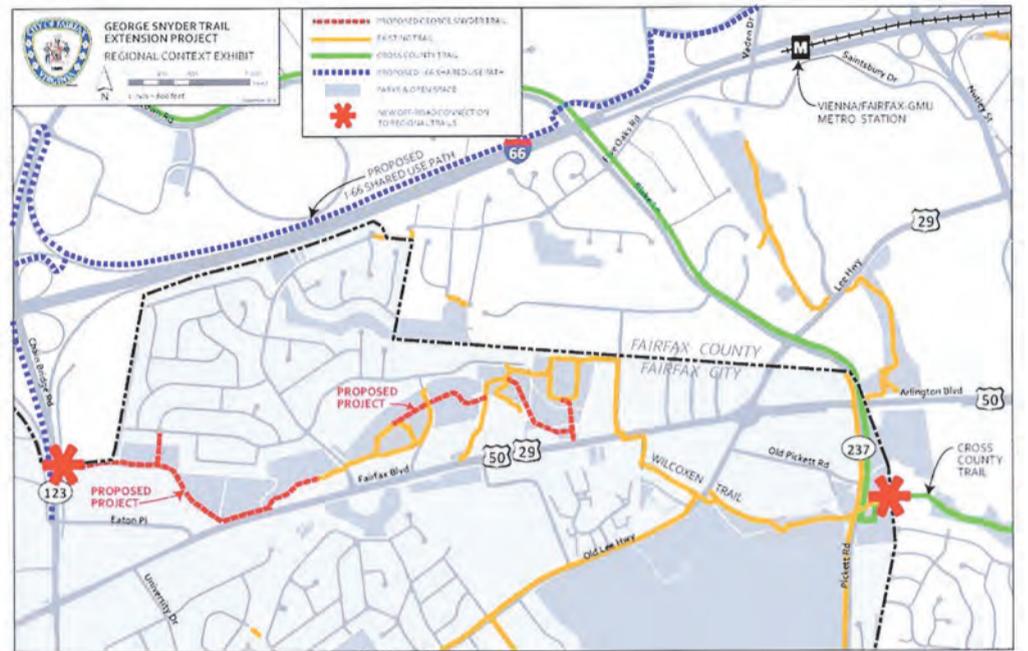

Furthermore, she said, "Not building it would result in a reputational disaster for the City. We made promises to the state and entire region. At the polls in November, the majority of the people showed support for the full build. If the voters wanted the trail cancelled or substantially changed – with all due respect – there would be a different mayor sitting at the dais tonight."

Leslie Cullen called the trail "an investment in a safer, more connected, more vibrant Fairfax. It would provide a safe route for walkers, runners, kids on bikes, and commuters. Right now, we lack a continuous path linking our neighborhoods with schools, parks and downtown. This trail fills that gap and makes Fairfax more livable for everyone. Now, with construction prices rising, we may never get this kind of funding again. This isn't just a trail – it's a statement about who we are."

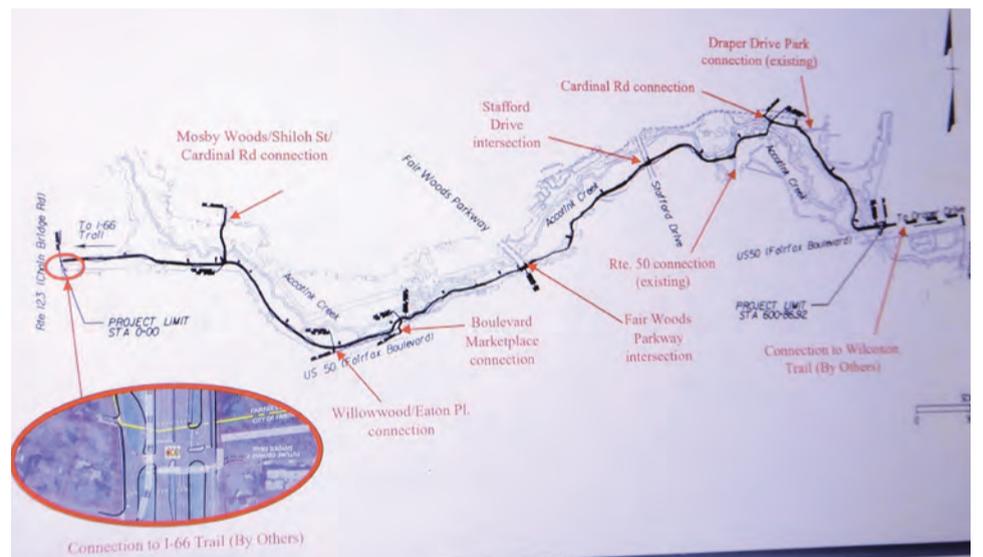

Mom and cyclist Marissa Perrone asked, "Why is this trail – that's been part of our City's public, posted plans on every sign, for years – now being second-guessed, when it offers such lasting value to the residents? Trails create a sense of place, support local businesses and help people fall in love with where they live."

"There have been Comp Plans, area plans, pedestrian and bike master plans, steering committees, design workshops, work sessions, public hearings [about this] over the years," added Beth Ianetta. "We've been telling you repeatedly, in many different formats, what our vision is for the City – and it includes this trail."

"Why would any resident give their time to contribute to a vision – which this body repeatedly asked us to do – if, at the end of years of implementation, your position is, "We don't value your input, at all. We'll either cancel it or cut it in half?"

The George Snyder Trail alignment is outlined in red.

The trail will connect residential, recreational, office and shopping areas.

In light of all the recent budget cuts Council has made, Megan James asked how it could even consider "walking away from the Snyder Trail and handing back to the state $3.7 million with nothing to show for it. VDOT believed in our vision for a connected community. This is also about equity and long-term value. It also helps seniors stay mobile and gives families an alternative to traffic."

Agreeing, John Russell noted that this trail was "specifically designed to be accessible to all City residents." Referring to its opponents, he said, "Being loud doesn't make it right to shut down a commercial and recreational opportunity to protect access for only a select few. [Nor] is it right for the City to break its word, burning its credibility with partners we may want to call upon in the future."

People walking in that forest today, said William Pitchford, will find "a patchwork of deep, rutted trails with most of the topsoil washed away. The larger trees are gradually dying and being replaced with scrub oak and other invasive species. Without the new trail, the erosion will continue."

Mike Fabio said the trees removed would be replanted at a 3-to-1 ratio, the trail grade would be suitable for all ages and abilities, and the route design would eliminate blind spots. He also said having many trail users would reduce crime, and he had some thoughts about the City's financial losses.

"This Council already cancelled $9 million for the Country Club Hills trail," said Fabio. "If you include the $9.5 million for the George Snyder Trail Extension that could be lost – plus the almost $21 million and $3.7 million for this project – added together, this Council could be responsible for the loss of $43.2 million in its first few months [in office]. That's outrageous and a dangerous precedent."

Lastly, former Mayor David Meyer said building the whole trail would "create a legacy for future generations and bring good to our residents, now and for decades to come."

Then it was Council's time to act. Councilmember Billy Bates said he favored a full build over canceling. "At the end of the day, it's a trail," he said. "It's not the end of the world if we all don't get exactly what we want."

Details of the George Snyder Trail Plan

Named after a former Fairfax City mayor, the George Snyder Trail will connect Chain Bridge Road to the Wilcoxon Trail at Draper Drive, south of Fairfax Boulevard. It'll be ADA-compliant, with some sections porous asphalt and others, concrete boardwalk.

The goal is to improve regional trail connectivity both within and outside the City, plus comfortable access for pedestrians and cyclists of all ages and abilities. Part will be constructed within Fairfax City parks. Five steel-truss bridges with concrete decks will span small tributaries and Accotink Creek.

The trail will be 10 feet wide, with 2-foot-wide shoulders on each side and no blind spots at bridge approaches. Locally, it'll link to existing trail segments at Marketplace Boulevard, Stafford Park, Cardinal Park and Draper Drive Park, connecting to neighborhoods, as well as to the City's commercial corridor.

Raised crosswalks and new signage will be added to neighborhood intersections, with dark-sky-compliant lighting at intersections and trail junctions. Boardwalk segments along bridge approaches will have retaining walls and railings, and the bicycle/pedestrian bridges will be 14 feet wide, with concrete decks keeping the trail above water.

Four retaining walls, ranging from 3-17 feet high, will be built between the trail and private properties and will also reduce grading impact to the forest. Also planned are viewing areas, educational markers and rain gardens.

Fairfax High’s 576 grads represent 62 countries.

BY BONNIE HOBBS
THE CONNECTION

This year’s graduating class of Fairfax High Lions is special for many reasons, including its students’ diversity, empathy and academic excellence. And at the outset of their June 5 commencement, Principal Georgina Aye spoke to the grads from her heart.

“What makes Fairfax High an amazing place are its 576 graduates representing 62 countries and 14 different languages,” she said. “As I stand here today before you, my Lion heart swells. For the past three years, it’s been my privilege to be your principal – and what a transformative journey it’s been.”

Not only have these students changed between their freshmen and senior years, said Aye, but they also transformed the school’s teachers and staff for the better. “When I look at this class, I don’t just see students – I see a pride of Lions,” she said. “And like the jungle’s royalty, the Class of 2025 embodies the characteristics necessary to conquer the hardest paths life will throw at them.”

Aye said this class has taken the most AP dual-enrollment and advanced-certificate classes in the school’s history. But equally important, she stressed, is that these students “have shown what it truly means to be a lion – not just in your individual strength – but in the power of your collective spirit.”

“The heart of the lion is grounded in empathy and accountability. A pride of lions functions as a unit and supports one another, and you’ve shown immense empathy throughout your time here. Many of you have faced challenges that your peers may not know, or you may have shared with them.”

Besides difficult classes and the “traditional growing pains” of the teenage years, said Aye, these challenges include “leaving behind the familiarity of a country to escape persecution, adapting to a new country’s culture and language, and enduring the profound loss of a loved one.

“Yet through these personal challenges, you leaned on one another, offering support, understanding and kindness. This deep well of empathy has made our school a more compassionate, inclusive and better place to be.”

Fairfax High Honors Four Outstanding Students

Awards are presented during graduation ceremony.

BY BONNIE HOBBS

During Fairfax High’s June 5 graduation, four students were honored with special awards. The first three were the Service, Faculty and Fairfax award, and the fourth was for the graduate deemed the Most Outstanding Senior. Fairfax City Mayor Catherine Read presented the first three, which included scholarships from the City.

SERVICE AWARD

This honor went to Zane Geadah. The Service Award is given to the senior who’s been outstanding in loyalty and service to the school. “This student can be described as curious, tenacious and outgoing,” said Read. “He possesses a maturity beyond his years, displaying empathy and understanding toward his peers and staff alike. He approaches his leadership role as an act of service to others.

in national invitationals and statewide competitions. He’s also been a student co-leader for the Global Leaders of Fairfax County and vice president of the Computer Science Honors Society. He’ll bring his passion for engineering smarter and simpler solutions to complex problems to Georgia Tech next year.”

FACULTY AWARD

Receiving this award was Kat Pascual. The Faculty Award goes to the senior who’s demonstrated outstanding loyalty, citizenship and service to Fairfax High. “This year’s winner brought infectious positivity and enthusiasm to every class they attended – a quality greatly appreciated by their teachers,” said Read. “They are resilient, creative and passionate about learning.

“Their greatest impact has been to the Theater Department, where they’ve served in several leadership roles, including president, marketing lead, Cappies critic, improv co-captain and social media head. They value relationships and lead with compassion, inclusivity and respect for all students and cultures. We’ll miss their smile and bright light when they go to the College of William & Mary in the fall.”

FAIRFAX AWARD

This honor went to Ainsley Buice. The Fairfax Award is given to the senior who’s been outstanding in scholarship, loyalty, service and leadership. “This young woman embodies all the qualities of a student leader – perseverance, discipline, intelligence and an unshakeable work ethic,” said Read. “Her positive and kind attitude inspires all those around her. She’s been respectful of her teachers, coaches and peers; and in return, she’s highly respected. She’s served as president of the Fairfax High Choir and has baked over 7,000 muffins to help the food insecure in our community.

“She’s also an accomplished athlete and holds the all-time, school record for the 2K on the rowing machine and is one of the top 200 U-19 women rowers in the nation. As a four-year crew captain, she fostered a supportive and competitive atmosphere which helped double the size of the varsity women’s team and led to remarkable finishes in state and national regattas. the best and brightest of Fairfax High.”

MOST OUTSTANDING SENIOR

Director of Student Services Ashley Anderson presented this award to Vy Tran. It’s presented to the senior who best represents the Senior Class as a whole, displays loyalty and dedication to the school and embodies the Fairfax spirit. The recipient is selected by the members of the graduating class and receives an American flag that’s been flown in front of the school during the 2024-25 school year.

“Vy Tran is not only a dedicated student with remarkable academic strengths but can also be described as compassionate and a beacon of positivity,” said Anderson. “She constantly works hard to be kinder and more understanding and embodies the heart of Fairfax High. Her leadership roles include varsity speech captain and president of the Spanish Honor Society and Student Equity Team.

“She’s increased school spirit by serving as the lead coordinator of the annual cultural celebration. Her kindness and caring personality will be missed at Fairfax, but we’re confident she’ll be a tremendous asset to her next school, Brown University.”

And, she said, “With empathy comes accountability. You’ve taken ownership of your learning, actions, impact and commitment to our community. You’ve learned that being accountable means not only taking responsibility for your mistakes, but also for your successes and for the wellbeing of those around you. This is the mark of leadership and a true Lion’s legacy.”

Aye said student success is grounded in hard work, self-advocacy and relentless drive. “This isn’t just about grades,” she said. “It’s about developing the discipline and perseverance that’ll serve you in all aspects of your life, moving forward. The average high-school student spends 4,758 hours in class. And if involved in a club, activity or sport, they’re estimated to be in school for over 10,000 hours. You’ve been here a long time.”

She said the grads have learned to speak up for themselves, ask for help when needed, pursue their goals with conviction and “roar the loudest in the room” when injustice or something unkind occurs. Calling these things “critical skills,” Aye told the students to “never lose your voice and never lose your roar.”

The ability to adapt has also defined this class, she said, from “navigating the aftermath of a global pandemic to [dealing with] new, school cellphone policies. You understood new boundaries and moved forward with grace. You showed change isn’t a barrier, but an opportunity to grow, learn and find new ways to thrive.

Students head back to their seats after receiving their diplomas from Principal Georgina Aye (center, in black gown with red stripes).

“The willingness to conquer new terrain is one of your greatest strengths. You’ll always be challenged with two paths – one, easy, and one, challenging. Take the challenging one because you’ll be better for it.” Aye then told the students to remember the Lion within them and let its attributes guide their next endeavors.

“Embrace the challenges that lie ahead with the same strengths you’ve [already] shown,” she said. “Face the unknown with the courage that brought you here, and continue to lead with empathy, accountability and hard work. And always advocate for yourselves in ways that’ll make the world a better place for all of us to live in.”

Snyder Trail Approved

Councilmember Stacey Hardy-Chandler said this project has both a history and a future they should consider. “This is a multigenerational decision,” she said. “We took the baton of the commitment from the Council and mayor that came before us, so I can’t support cancellation.”

“Based on my recent emails and what I heard tonight, I don’t think the community wants half a trail,” said Councilmember Anthony Amos. “They either want all or nothing. Councilmember Stacy Hall said she, too, could no longer support half a trail.

Still, Councilmember Tom Peterson wanted to cancel the whole thing and take money from the City’s already-approved Capital Improvement Projects to fund the $3.7 million repayment. A vote on his motion failed, 5-1. Council then considered a motion Hardy-Chandler had made to build the entire trail.

“I don’t like paying back millions of dollars during these trying budget times, knowing things will only get worse next year,” said Amos. Bates said he’d support Hardy-Chandler’s motion, and Council’s subsequent vote was 4-2 in favor, with Peterson and Hall voting no.

Blockchain Tech Offers Economic Diversity Opportunity for Fairfax

BY SUPERVISORS JAMES WALKINSHAW AND RODNEY LUSK

The Trump Administration's reckless actions to fire and force out dedicated federal workers, freeze or cancel federal contracts, and impose senseless tariffs that raise costs for American families, are already having a negative impact on our local and regional economy. The unemployment rate is rising and local families and businesses are tightening their belts, reducing economic activity. While we must continue to fight against federal job and budget cuts that harm our region, we must also accelerate our efforts to diversify our local economy.

One of the most promising areas of growth? Blockchain technology. Blockchain is, at its core, a secure, decentralized system for recording and verifying transactions that leverages tokens to compensate users and transmit value. Its applications range from supply chain management to digital identity to secure voting systems — technologies that can reshape entire industries and improve public services.

Blockchain startups offer Fairfax a unique opportunity to pivot toward a more resilient economic future. These startups can create high-wage jobs for software engineers, cybersecurity experts, data scientists, and project managers — many with skill sets transferable from federal or contracting roles.

The sector's dynamism continues to attract venture capital, drawing in new investment and fresh talent. In fact, global blockchain venture funding reached over $10 billion in 2023, with more than 1,000 blockchain startups launched that year alone. Large corporations headquartered here already rely on blockchain technology and can help foster an ecosystem of startups. Capital One, for example, has dozens of patents in blockchain and uses the technology in areas including authentication, data security, and claims management.

Michael Saylor's Microstrategy, recently renamed Strategy B, is the world's largest Bitcoin Treasury Company.

And the technology's applications in public service — like secure digital permitting, property records, or even elections — could bring more transparency and efficiency to local government. On the Board of Supervisors, we've been pushing to allow tax payments to be made via bitcoin and other cryptocurrencies.

Efforts like our Accelerate Breakfast Series are helping catalyze this transition. These gatherings bring together entrepreneurs, investors, and local leaders to share ideas, build relationships, and spotlight the county's innovation potential. A recent breakfast featured a pitch by a startup working to improve regulatory compliance and security for financial institutions utilizing blockchain technology.

The Fairfax Founders Fund, established by the Board of Supervisors, provides grants of up to $50,000 to promising, early stage companies poised to disrupt industries and create new jobs. Blockchain-focused founders who choose to locate in Fairfax County can take advantage of this opportunity to help grow their businesses.

Blockchain's potential extends beyond the local economy. Globally, it has been used to deliver humanitarian aid more efficiently and transparently, including during crises in Ukraine and elsewhere. That same spirit of solving real-world problems can drive local innovation too—particularly as we seek technologies that promote both economic opportunity and social impact.

Fairfax should build on this momentum. That means continued investment in incubators and accelerators for emerging technologies, stronger workforce development pipelines through universities and community colleges, and deeper partnerships between the public and private sectors to pilot blockchain use cases.

We can't control every twist in federal policy, but we can shape how we respond. By betting on innovation and backing our entrepreneurs, we can build a Fairfax County economy that is not only more resilient, but more inclusive and forward-looking. Blockchain isn't just a buzzword—it's a tool, and with the right support, it can play a role in ensuring our continued economic dynamism as a county and as a region.

Summer in Springfield

BY RODNEY LUSK
FRANCONIA DISTRICT SUPERVISOR

There are many great ways to celebrate summer this year in the Franconia District! One of the most exciting additions this year is two free children's concerts being held in Springfield, sponsored by my office. The "Kids' Concert on the Green" series is hosted at Springfield Overlook, the new community space located on the roof of the Springfield CBC Commuter Garage. It was wonderful to see so many folks join us at the first event, which was held Saturday, June 14 and featured "Munit & Z Love Bugs." The next concert is on June 21 from 10 a.m. to 10:45 a.m. and will feature "Rocknoceros," a local Fairfax County band that has released six children's albums since 2005 and won 10 Washington Area Music Awards. This exciting pilot demonstrates just one potential use of the green space atop the garage.

Don't Sweat It, Mount Vernon's Got Your Summer Covered!

By SUPERVISOR DAN STORCK

Summertime in the Mount Vernon District is one of my favorite times of the year. The days are long, laughter is in the air as kids are out of school and our community comes alive with music, history, art and outdoor adventures. Whether you're looking for fun family outings, ways to explore nature or just want to kick back and enjoy music under the stars, there's something for everyone right here in our backyard.

The Workhouse Arts Center has added an artist-designed art history 18-hole mini golf course. It's perfect for kids and adults alike, and a great way to support local artists. The Workhouse is also keeping the tradition of their annual FireWorks Festival on Saturday, June 28 from 4-9:30 p.m. It's one of the biggest FREE Independence Day celebrations in the County, with live music, food trucks, art exhibits, family-friendly activities, Bunyan Brewing and, of course, a dazzling fireworks finale that lights up the night sky.

Our un-beat-able Mount Vernon Nights Summer Concert Series is back. Every weekend this summer, enjoy FREE live performances at Grist Mill Park on Fridays and the Workhouse Arts Center on Saturdays at 7:30 p.m. Bring lawn chairs, a picnic and a few friends to enjoy one of our special summer traditions that will make you want to get up and dance.

After a little over two years, the newly renovated Mount Vernon Rec Center has reopened its doors. Enjoy two brand new sparkling ice rinks, a two-level fitness center and engaging summer camps. The reopening is being conducted in phases, and the climbing wall opens on June 23. While pool renovations are still underway due to unforeseen construction issues, beat the heat at the Martin Luther King Jr. pool, which is FREE to all County residents.

Enjoy the great outdoors and explore our incredible parks and trails. Take a hike, paddle or look to the sky for eagles flying overhead at Mason Neck State Park and Pohick Bay Park. Bring the whole family for a ride along the scenic Mount Vernon Trail and soak in the unbeatable views of the Potomac River.

Our area is home to some of the most scenic and historic spots in the region, from George Washington's Mount Vernon and Gunston Hall to River Farm and the National Museum of the U.S. Army celebrating 250 years. All our Potomac Banks: Explore Fairfax South tourism sites are excited to welcome you all year long. I hope to see you out and about.

Mobility Company Finds a Fit in Local Chamber

Wheelchairs and walkers are commonplace in this area.

BY MIKE SALMON
THE CONNECTION

With the senior population growing in recent years, mobility issues are popping up due to osteoporosis, cancer and other bone density causes, so wheelchairs and walkers are becoming commonplace.

Bennet Helfgot sees it all around and as owner of Mobility City of Northern Virginia, he's there to help with his wide selection of products that help people get around. He opened the franchise in 2019 and just celebrated his fifth anniversary.

"There's a growing need out there," Helfgot said, and many times it takes a bigger effort than just relying on Medicare. "I help people on a daily basis, the system fails people," he said. There are plenty of seniors in the Mount Vernon-Springfield area so Helfgot joined the Mount Vernon-Springfield Chamber of Commerce recently to increase the company's exposure.

Once Helfgot finds the right equipment and fits it to the customer's needs, he remains committed to that transaction. "I'll maintain and repair it," he said. Although his location is closer to Old Town Alexandria, he likes the Mount Vernon-Springfield Chamber of Commerce. "This chamber does a lot," he said.

Wheelchairs Needed

What Helfgot is seeing is a snapshot of a nationwide situation. According to the Social Security Administration, 12 percent of the total population is aged 65 or older this year, but by 2080, it will be 23 percent. This increase in the senior population is linked to the mobility issue so companies like Mobility City are getting more attention.

<https://alexandriava.mobilitycity.com/>

Vinny Baratta started Mobility City in Long Island, New York. He was raised in a family with several doctors and found himself fixing the wheelchairs in the family medical practice. His wife Diane got stuck in a summer downpour with a wheelchair patient and made an emergency call to Mobility City and they sent out a technician. "I understand what millions of people go through every day when their mobility equipment breaks down," she said. Now she is CEO of the company.

At this Alexandria store there are all kinds of mobility options.

FAIRFAX HIGH GRAD 2025

Returning to the idea of transformation, Aye left the grads with a lyric from the musical, “Wicked,” telling them, “‘Because I knew you, I have been changed for good.’ May it apply to your friendships, families and faculty. Because I’ve been able to know you, Class of 2025, I’ve also been changed for good. We’re immensely proud of each and every one of you.”

Speaking next was physics teacher Pete Peterson, who offered advice via two physics lessons. First, he said friction moves people forward, when used the right way. “When there’s friction between friends, use it to understand each other better, work together more effectively and, as a result, build a stronger relationship,” said Peterson. “And when learning something new, don’t let friction stall your progress.”

Second, he said, quantum mechanics enables people to consider two opposing ideas at the same time and still function. “As you’re about to graduate, you probably feel both optimistic and a little anxious about your future,” he told the students. “I hope you turn that anxious feeling into the friction that propels you forward.”

Then English teacher Cheryl Spevak introduced honor graduate Vy Tran. “Her unique spirit consistently reminds others to do and be good,” said Spevak. “Vy’s authentic goodness makes her a role model for this community, including its adults. She has a keen understanding of marginalized communities and wants to create a safe space for them. She’s a gregarious and loving senior who’s absolutely going to make this world a better place.”

“The fact that we can say we’re leaving Fairfax High with so much more than we came into it with is something worth celebrating,” said Tran. “As a 14-year-old intimidated by other teenagers, I was an entirely different person from who I am now. I was an introvert terrified of trying new things. But Fairfax transformed me. Each of us carved out our own space; [yet] there’s so much community to be found here.”

“We’ve learned to find each other between our heartwarming hellos in the hallways, in the 6 minutes between bio and lunch, when we huddle together with friends to talk about how our day has been,” she continued. “We’re a collective of humans who can exude kindness so freely. You can feel it with every teacher, staff member and fellow classmate.

Pete Peterson

“It’s a testament to how incredible each and every person here at Fairfax is. What defines Fairfax High isn’t our school colors or the Lions plastered [everywhere] – it’s the people. It’s you and me and all of us. Every experience we’ve had here made us who we are. The memories we made are always going to be with us and will allow us to spread our wings and take off. Thank you, Fairfax, for all you’ve done to help us grow and learn.”

Senior Class President Ivy Anyango presented the class gift to the school – an industrial ice cream machine. She then told her fellow grads to “Keep on showing up for yourselves with resilience and persistence. Continue to decorate your stories, just as you’ve decorated your caps – with pride, joy and meaning.”

Following Fairfax City's Memorial Day ceremony, May 26, American Legion Post 177 Commander Eric Parkhurst laid a wreath on Amos Chilcott's grave in the Fairfax Cemetery. First, though, he spoke to those attending, including Fairfax Mayor Catherine Read and City Councilmember Billy Bates.

"In 1944, a group of WWI veterans – Amos Chilcott being one of them – met and decided to start an American Legion post here in Fairfax," said Parkhurst. "Chilcott donated his land for it; and in 1945, it was chartered. They broke ground for its construction in 1951."

However, he said, "It took roughly five years to build the post we have today. Unfortunately, Amos Chilcott passed away in 1954 and did not get to see the completion of the building. He was unable to actually enjoy the post that was built on the property he donated."

"Although it was partially destroyed by fire once, it was rebuilt," continued Parkhurst. "The foundation and part of the original walls still exist. And Amos Chilcott's name still lives on, to this day. From that charter – 80 years ago, this year – until now, we remember him as our benefactor and a true legacy."

Parkhurst noted, as well, that nearby Chilcott Field – built in 1956 and named after Amos – is considered the home of the Fairfax Little League. So he's remembered for more than one reason.

But most of all, said Parkhurst, "Because of the things Chilcott did for those WWII veterans and the future generations returning from Korea, Vietnam, Operation Freedom – all the way through today – his legacy lives on. And it does so because of his dedication, commitment and love for veterans."

"My challenge to you is, what's your legacy? What are future generations – when you're long gone – going to remember about you? What did you do to make a difference, just like Amos Chilcott did, in support of veterans and honoring the memory of those who've passed? What's your legacy?"

A three-person, American Legion Color Guard then advanced toward Chilcott's grave. And together, Parkhurst and Legion member Al Doehring laid a wreath on it. Then, as Parkhurst saluted, VFW Post 8469 bugler, Hank Roeder, played "Taps."

More Than Just Art of the Swing

Workhouse offers art history with mini-golf

Until recently, the only art on a golf course may have been the ‘art of the swing.’ Now the Workhouse Arts Center offers the experience of an art history-themed golf course; perhaps the nation’s only Masterpiece Mini-Golf.

A ribbon-cutting ceremony on June 13 launched the 18-hole course with what the Workhouse describes as “18 unique hand-crafted holes designed by artists and builders from the Workhouse community.”

Whether your preference is for French Impressionism, Italian Renaissance, Guerrilla, or Pop Art, or just the mini-golf game, the course will be open through the summer and fall to entertain you.

The Workhouse Arts Center, located at 9518 Workhouse Way, Lorton, does not offer advance tee times. The mini-golf experience is $15 per person. While there is no club house at this course, Bunnyman Brewery is steps away for after-game refreshment. JUNETEENTH EVENTS ACROSS THE COUNTY

In Fairfax County, the Park Authority recognizes Juneteenth by sharing stories of the African American men, women and children who shaped the region's history through their labor, leadership, creativity and community.

Lastly, the Fairfax County FY 2026 Budget begins July 1. This budget eliminates the previously proposed 1.5-cent real estate tax rate increase and instead reduces the rate by a quarter-cent from the current $1.125 per $100 of assessed value, delivering targeted relief to homeowners while investing in key services and retaining popular programs like the Middle School After School Program.

Additionally, the Board adopted a 4% Food and Beverage Tax. It is important to note that 34% of the revenue is estimated to come from the 267,000 daily visitors to Fairfax County, and 87.5% of the expected funds generated were used to lower the real estate tax rate. The Food and Beverage Tax will be effective Jan. 1, 2026.

Looking forward to future years, I believe the Board must invest more in the growth of our commercial sector, which in certain areas is still recovering from the impact of the pandemic and now faces challenges from tariffs and economic uncertainty. The Board should take additional steps to attract businesses in high-growth industries, such as artificial intelligence, aerospace and space technologies, and quantum computing. At the same time, we must continue to expand and support our startup ecosystem for existing businesses. This will ensure the future success of our commercial sector, build economic resiliency by broadening and growing our non-residential tax base, and reduce our overreliance on residential property taxes.

As always, please feel free to contact my office at Franconia@fairfaxcounty.gov or (703) 971-6262 if we can help you in any way. It is both an honor and a privilege for me to serve as your representative on the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors. I wish you and your families a safe and enjoyable summer.

Out of Balance

By KENNETH B. LOURIE

When I finally - recently, received my berry-blend-variety of the health supplement I've been taking twice daily for 16+ years, after what seemed like months in arrears - due to a difficult rollout of the company's new computer system, they said, it reinforced my thinking as to why I've felt off lately. It had nothing to do with my thyroid cancer - which seems amazingly in control at present, my marriage which goes along as it mostly has - for nearly 48 years, my family - which consists of my father-in-law and his wife living in New York City and a nephew and spouse and their children all living on Topeka, Ks. our dog, Burton, presently lying under my desk with his jaw on the top of my right foot, and our four cats - all of whom generally speaking other than Andrew (who's in remission from lymphoma after a year of chemotherapy) are progressing "within normal perimeters" to quote Data from "Star Trek: Next Generation," and lastly our 275-year-old home standing up very well against the test of time. No. Why I'm feeling unsettled is I've not seen any Balance of Nature commercials on television lately. For a while there (a month or two or three), at least on the television channels I regularly watch, Balance of Nature was inundating these airways with testimonials from any number and variety of satisfied customers.

I think I must have seen upwards of a dozen or so of these first-person testimonials, in a fairly condensed timeline, saying all the right things about this product and the effect it has had on their lives: amazing, wish they had started sooner, feel like their old selves again, et. cetera. If I hadn't already been taking a competitor's identical product, I would have at the very least, made an inquiry as to cost, frequency and benefits. However, being fully "ensconced" not in crushed velvet (to invoke George Costanza from "Seinfeld") but in a parallel pill universe, I, despite this wave of overwhelming television repetition, have stood pat. I mean, for all I know, my brand's multi-vitamin-triumvirate might very well be the thing which has sustained me all these post-characterized-as-terminal years.

As such, my interest has been solely in noticing that something (the Balance of Nature television commercials) that had been so much a part of my life for the last two to three months, even though it had no direct bearing on my cancer health, was missing. And I felt it deeply enough that I thought I'd mention it. Again, as a 16-plus-year cancer survivor still undergoing treatment and still being seen by my oncologist and still PET-scanned every four months, and lab tested every four weeks, this kind of information interests me. The cancer news/stories of survival I hear, from whomever/whatever source, the better/more positive I feel about my circumstances. Not that any of what I hear has to mirror my health situation. It doesn't. Any example of people/patients overcoming their symptoms and/or returning to a "normal" life, gives me hope and encourages me to "Keep on keeping on." I gain strength hearing other survival stories. It's like we're all one big team and when a teammate does well, we all do well.

In this Balance of Nature experience, familiarity has not bred contempt. It has bred a type of consistency of expectations. And any chink in your consistency sort of affects your wherewithal. I didn't need to see the commercial to gain any knowledge, but not seeing their commercials made me feel as if something of substance in my life was missing. And for a cancer patient, you can't afford to be missing anything of substance. Who's to say what's really keeping you alive? Medicine certainly but one's attitude is huge. And I don't need anything to weaken my resolve. Internally or externally.

COMMUNITY NEWS AT A GLANCE

Six-foot Alligator Seeks Lodging at Fairfax County Motel

Fairfax County Police Department reported Monday, June 16, that an alligator was loose outside a local motel shortly after midnight, according to an officer's bodyworn camera footage released on social media. The officer can be heard saying, "Damn, that is an alligator. ... There is actually an alligator outside of the hotel." Asked by dispatch, "How big is it?" the officer responds, "If I lay down next to it, it's approximately six feet."

The incident occurred at the Budget Host Alexandria motel on Richmond Highway after a caller reported seeing the reptile outside their room. Reportedly, its owner was transporting the gator to a zoo in North Carolina. The outcome proved happy for all. Due to Virginia law prohibiting the possession of exotic animals, the alligator and its owner were escorted out of Fairfax County by police.
